Headin' East

(Columbia-Coronet)

Racketeer Story

According to Fame, Buck Jones is ranking western star. The reputed field of his activities is the wide open spaces in which horses, steers, westerners and tenderfeet are incidents in the scenic backgrounds. Yet if pink lemonade should suddenly begin tumbling over Niagrara Falls it probably would not occasion more surprise than may the story idea of "Headin' East," Buck's present vehicle.

The buckaroo who heretofore generally has devoted his efforts to embarrassing rustlers, bandits and kindred folk, now turns his attentions to making things hot for racketeers.

A dialogue line says they are all the same. Instead of waterholes and buttes and the standard accessories for backgrounds, settings in this instance feature bathing beauty adorned pools on Long Island, and the littered streets of New York's vegetable markets. No stolen steers galvanize Buck to action in "Headin' East." Innocent heads of lettuce, trucks and trainloads of it are the casus belli.

Suffice it to say that to the accompaniment of much heroics and a lot of comedy that is pleasing if not very relevant, Buck busts up the ring that threatens disaster to California growers and threatens to add another cent or two to the price which the consumer pays per head of lettuce.

However, such things as Niagara Falls, Plymouth Rock and Washington Monument have been around a long time without changing much. They attract and interest hordes of persons year after year. Buck Jones has been influencing hordes of persons similarly, although for not quite so long. They probably will appreciate the change.

Of course, Buck and producer L. G. Leonard undoubtedly gave a little consideration to the exploitation value of the departure. Smart showmen should give it consideration, also. Everybody knows that a continuance of the same diet is not healthy. So Buck, giving racketeers instead of rustlers a going over, may prove a surprise supplementary feature. Buck in New York rather than Arizona may not be such a bad idea after all.

Previewed in the Forum theatre, Hollywood. To say that consternation reigned in the theatre, when the audience became aware of what was going on, is putting it mildly. The shock was not applied immediately. In the beginning there were a few cows and calves roaming around to lull suspicion, but once Buck got in the Big City it seemed no one knew what to anticipate.—G. M.

Tim Tyler's Luck

(Universal)

Serial

Followers of the newspaper cartoon character, Tim Tyler, now will learn that the colorful adventures of their youthful hero have been transcribed into serial form with exciting and imaginative effect. The adventures portrayed are from a stock mold of thrills repeatedly tried and found successful box office attraction. The perils besetting the youthful titlist are plentifully supplied by jungle beasts, savage natives and the wild veldt country of darkest Africa. Each chapter is concluded with a serious predicament for the leading characters that will provide sufficient interest and wonder to carry the fan's curiosity over to the following weekly installment. The fact that the chief part is played by a young lad, Frankie Thomas, together with the undoubtedly wide following which this popular newspaper strip has developed, makes the exploitation of this chapter story a "natural."

Frankie Thomas, one of Broadway's youngest and most capable child actors, seen on the screen in "Wednesday's Child" and "A Dog of Flanders," plays the role of Tim. Frances Robinson has the part of "Lora," while the veteran player, Jack Mulhall, is the virile head of the patrol. The direction is by Ford Beebe and Wyndham Gittens.—Running time, 21 minutes, each chapter. 12 chapters in all. Release date, Dec. 27, 1937.

Decathlon Champion

(MGM)

Sport Reel

To merit the title of this Pete Smith Specialty short, an athlete would have to excel, according to the modern Olympian games regulations, in a composite contest consisting of 10 events which include the 100, the 400 and the 1,500 meter runs; the 100 meter hurdle race; the shotput; running high and broad jumps; discus and javelin throws and pole vaulting. Such a super-sportsman is Glenn Morris, young Colorado farm lad, soon to be the screen's newest Tarzan actor. Under the breezily informative commentary of Mr. Smith, athletic Morris traces his rise from a novice track star to his brilliant sport performance as America's foremost athlete last year in Berlin. With greatest appeal for the fan, this sports success story is given clever and quick paced reportorial treatment.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Dog and the Bone

Frustration

Puddy the Pup in a search for a better bone than the one he has safely in his mouth endures the buffets of a cruel world but emerges victorious and with a full stomach. Fleeing a fierce bull dog he enters a restaurant from which tempting smells emanate. Chased by the proprietor with a meat cleaver and other handy weapons he very nearly wrecks the establishment but manages, between dashes, to consume quantities of frankfurters, roast chicken and other delicacies, finally acquiring a bone the equal for size and succulence of the one he lost in the beginning.—Running time, 6½ minutes.

Laughing at Fate

(20th Century-Fox)

Thrills

Newsreel clips of death defying stunts staged for entertainment, thrills or publicity are combined in a series guaranteed to provoke chills and shudders. Tightrope walkers perform over high buildings, trapeze artists swing from fast moving airplanes to automobiles and motorboats, pilots purposely crack up their planes in a variety of ways, parachute jumpers fall from a hot air balloon and motorcycle riders jump through blazing hoops. The final sequence shows the "Bat-Man" who learned to glide on home made wings falling to his death when his parachute failed to open.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Timberland Revels

(Columbia)

Poor

Despite the entertaining promise of the title, the results are generally unpromising. Localed in a backwood setting, the short subject presents the radio engineer, Sid Gary, in several musical turns. None too well photographed, Gary sings as well as possible rather colorless music. Val Irving is none too comic as the camp clown. Meta Carlyle as a cute French miss from the lumber belt goes Broadway in tap dance tradition. Finally in unexplained transition of scene and mood, the entire company drop their timber tactics and travel in costume and song below the Mason and Dixon line.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Pigskin Palooka

(MGM)

Our Gang in Sports

Attuned to the times of fall and football is this newest adventure from the Gang. There is great fun and excitement as the kids kick the pigskin around the back lot. How the group defeat their bragging rivals and "Alfalfa" Switzer becomes a gridiron hero is sprightly detailed in a series of amusing situations. Even the more mature spectator used to adult collegiate skirmishes will find himself chuckling over the cute antics of the youngsters.—Running time, 11 minutes.

The Little Match Girl

(Columbia)

Excellent

Timed for the holiday season is this chromo of the tiny youngster of the title. After vainly trying to sell her wares amid the bustling and festive crowds, she creeps off to warm herself by the fire of her own matches. She dreams of a happy home, Christmas presents and angelic and loving companions. The urchin dies and is transported by a heavenly messenger to become a new and bright star in the firmament. Delicately done in pleasing shades of color, the fairy tale is narrated in imaginative fashion, with a splendid background of choral and instrumental accompaniment.—Running time, 8½ minutes.

The Sitter Downers

(Columbia)

Merry Mayhem

In this latest episode, the Stoogian madcap trio are portrayed as a socio-minded group who conduct their courtship of three maids along lines of the current campaign maneuvers of a labor union. When their suits have been forestalled by a protesting parent, the boys pull a sitdown strike, fully equipped with picket lines and placards. The father, more bewildered than convinced, finally consents. Then the lads discover that their spouses are equally aware of the sitdown strike technique, for the girls insist that the boys build them a home before the honeymoon is begun.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Wilcox and America

First film to be made by Herbert Wilcox for current British Lion release, and a production of different caliber from "Victoria the Great," "Blondes for Danger" has gone on the floor at the Beaconsfield Studios under the care of Mr. Wilcox's own director, Jack Raymond.

Gordon Harker, Cockney comedian, and near veteran of Edgar Wallace films and plays, heads the cast of the film which, though primarily of British appeal, also is aimed at U. S. consumption.

"Blondes for Danger" is one of two to be made under the Wilcox banner for release by British Lion, which also handles Republic product in the United Kingdom.

Second off the mark will be "Nippy," screen adaptation of West End musical of a few years back. Ralph Reader is starred.

Discovery

Production has been concluded on Warner-First National's "Thistledown," in which Irving Asher's Swedish discovery, Aina Bergo, plays the lead. As soon as a cut and synchronized copy is available it will be rushed to New York to arrange for release on the Warner circuit.

By the Unemployed

Gaumont British technicians and a film recording van enabled a group of unemployed film players to produce a five-reel feature, "Derelict," which is to be shown soon in the West End of London.

Except for one or two small part artistes, the entire film was cast and directed by out-of-work film employees.

Victor Gover, preview theatre proprietor; Joseph Rosenthal, cameraman; Harold Simpson, Malcolm Morley and Jane Griffiths are the names of the venturers.

"Derelict" was produced for less than £10,000 ($50,000).

Oxford on Screen

From 600 tons of plaster, 164 workmen have been reconstructing Oxford for MGM's production at Denham, "A Yank at Oxford," starring Robert Taylor.

From their labors has evolved a college which Oxford never has seen before—Cardinal College—embodying characteristics of many of Oxford's world-known buildings.

Lawrence P. Williams and four associates studied Oxford with camera and sketch book, and on their drawing boards at Denham, Oxford rose again. With modern instruments they redrew the plans that eleventh century Norman craftsmen conceived when Oxford first rose at the rim of the Cotswolds.

Hulbert Again

Jack Hulbert, at one time with Gaumont British and recently associated for one picture with Alexander Korda, has now gone under the banner of Richard Wainwright, independent producer making pictures for release by C. M. Woolf's General Film Distributors.

First will be an Edgar Wallace story, "Kate Plus Ten," to go into production at Sound City later this month. Hulbert will forsake grotesque comedy for a straight detective role, and will have as his leading lady Genevieve Tobin. Noel Madison also will play in the film.

Responsible for production will be Reginald Denham.

India Film in Color

For many months London Film units have worked on the Northwest Frontier of India, on locations in the Welsh mountains and at the Denham Studios to complete Zoltan Korda's "The Drum."

"The Drum," which has been made in color from a story by A. E. W. Mason, is designed as an answer to a complaint that British Studios fail to portray the Empire on the screen.

Valerie Hobson, who plays lead opposite Roger Livesey, makes her first appearance in a London Film.

Colonel Henslowe and Brigadier General H. Campbell were present during the shooting and helped Zoltan Korda in technical problems.

Philip Gough has designed some of the Indian chieftain costumes in "The Drum." Designs were brought back from India by a unit which made part of the film there.

Reaction in S. A.

South America doesn't like British films. The themes are too heavy and the development of the plots too slow and sober for the South American temperament, which demands rapidly moving and high spirited action, tense scenes and spectacular effects and humor springing from the situations and action rather than the dialogue.

This view is expressed in a report on economic and commercial conditions in the Argentine Republic, issued by the Department of Overseas Trade.

"Too much talking" and inaccurate translation in superimposed captions are other criticisms.

"Prosperity, whatever its duration may prove to be," says the report, "has materialized at long last."

United Kingdom imports from Argentine in 1936 totaled £45,105,799 and domestic exports to Argentine were £15,270,689.

MP's at Screening

Members of Parliament and prominent Anglo-Americans were present one evening recently in a private theatre in the West End of London when five Gaumont-British Instructional short films were screened by arrangement with the English Speaking Union.

The program consisted of "Medieval Village," "Farm Factory," "Downlands," "Changes in the Franchise" and "The Face of Britain," all chosen because "they presented something of the English scene, past and present."

In a short introductory address H. Bruce Woolfe, G.B.I. chief, said: "I feel this program may be exemplary of the type of film which, if provided by those countries which have a common bond, may lead to better understanding of their tradition, history and problems."

National Newsreel

National News, the newsreel sponsored by Sound City, and on the directorial board on which sits a son of press Baron Beaverbrook, has been giving unannounced pre-views of its remodeled reel.

But one issue of National was publicly shown, and so drastic was the chorus of press criticism that it was decided to suspend further publication until a reorganization plan had been carried through.

The conclusion was that it had improved considerably and even made a news scoop or two.

Victor Creer announces that it will be in circulation shortly, but does not announce where.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS STRIKE BACK AT SEPARATE QUOTA PROVISIONS

Oliver Stanley Proposes Expected Amendment for Film Commission in New Bill; Quality Test Indicated

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

British exhibitors have launched a vigorous attack against inclusion in the Films Bill of a provision for separate quotas. The protest is taking the form of the circularizing of all members of the Films Bill Committee of the House of Commons, which now is studying the bill.

It is understood the Government also is opposed to such provision, and diplomatically is advising that it would welcome the backing of the exhibitors in opposition to the proposal.

Despite vigorous opposition by labor, the reciprocity clause, as proposed by the Board of Trade, was passed this week by the Commons committee.

The clause provides that, subject to certain conditions, a distributor acquiring a film for distribution abroad costing a minimum of £20,000, may count the film for one under the quota. Labor interests, in opposition, claimed American interests are not interested in the distribution of British films, but Oliver Stanley held that the clause will induce American collaboration.

A revision of the short subject quota is forecast in informed circles, as well as an amendment from Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, approving booking combines.

The Committee of the House last Thursday began consideration of the new measure, passing the first three clauses. Deploring the tendency of the distributors to acquire an undue proportion of the quota during the last quarter of each year, Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade and Government spokesman, accepted an amendment, which was carried, providing the acquisition of the quota in half-year periods.

An amendment opposing the provision that films costing double a specified amount be counted for double in quota reckoning was objected to by the Government on the ground that the original provision was a means of encouraging quality in product. The amendment was withdrawn. Proposals that the Board of Trade consult the advisory committee before giving concessions on films rented abroad, were defeated.

Proposes Film Commission

As was expected, Mr. Stanley offered an amendment to provide for a film commission.

Another important change as proposed by Mr. Stanley was a clause empowering the Government to reject a quota film passing the cost test after appeal by a trade body.

Mr. Stanley asked the formation of a council, to be known as the Cinematograph Films Council, consisting of 21 members to be appointed by the Board of Trade. Eleven would have no financial interest in the industry, there would be two producers, two distributors and four exhibitors, two representatives of labor, a chairman and one woman representative.

Its functions will be to review the progress of the industry, with particular reference to production, and report to the Board of Trade when advisable. It will also be available to the Board of Trade when its advice is sought, whether at the request of persons interested in the trade or others. It will make an annual report to the Board, which in turn will be presented to Parliament. The Board, on the other hand, will supply the council with needed information. Ten members will constitute a council quorum and the council will be empowered to regulate its own procedure. Members will hold office in accordance with the terms of their appointment, will be eligible for reappointment, but will not be eligible to serve more than three years.

The powers and function of the advisory committee were defined in another proposal. It will include representative members of the council, and five other members, including one woman. The chairman of the council also will be chairman of the advisory committee.

The commission amendments are almost certain to be accepted, resulting in the discard of other commission proposals. The idea caused general satisfaction among producers and exhibitors, but grave concern among distributors, the latter believing that it sets a dangerous precedent.

Other Stanley amendments propose blind booking restrictions and empowers the advisory committee to alter the quota percentages. Other amendments, already indicated, will be studied by the Commons committee. Action also is expected regarding separate quotas.

Woolf and Ostrer Protest

Further criticism of the quota act was voiced by Charles M. Woolf, head of General Film Distributors, and Maurice Ostrer of Gaumont-British. Mr. Woolf expressed the belief that the legislation would not be satisfactory, and scored the lack of trade unity. It is essential that reciprocity be based on the good will of both sides, he said. The trade is unable to force the public to see pictures, he declared.

Mr. Ostrer expressed opposition to the separate quota for producers and said reciprocity is the only solution. It is impossible to make a profit without the American market, he said. The Government is studying the Ostrer proposal for reciprocity. On the basis of a 20 per cent quota and 500 films imported annually, Mr. Ostrer foresaw British producers getting £800,000 to £1,000,000 from the American market.

Labor union representatives, of the Film Industries Employes Council, embracing all unions, addressed members of the House of Commons, asking for separate quotas, fair wages clause and other matters and opposed reciprocity.

A distributor group which saw Mr. Stanley is engaged in furious lobbying on the bill in Commons.

The producer-labor group attacked the Ostrer reciprocity plan in The Times.

Americans Fight Quality Test

American interests here are reported seriously concerned over the amendment to the Films Bill offered by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, which would virtually institute a quality test for quota films.

It is understood the American interests will address the Government tactfully exposing what they consider the lack of logic of the move, claiming it an immediate obstacle to the financing of British production.

It is understood also that diplomatic approaches have been made protesting the suggestion of exhibitor grading.

Labor Conditions

Increasing concern with the Government's inquiry into cinema labor conditions probably is responsible for the growing readiness of certain exhibitor sections to discuss a national wages and hours agreement instead of the present sporadic and local situation.

The success following the setting up in the London district of a wages and hours agreement with an Arbitration Board has inspired other districts to go into the matter and the intensive campaign carried on by the labor unions is assisting the process.

It is known that the General Council of the CEA has been discussing the matter and the feeling is intensifying that it would be far better for the trade to clear up its own problem than to have the Government do so with its attendant unsavory publicity.

London Licenses

Whatever may be the building situation in other districts, London does not yet seem to have reached a state of surplus. Reginald Stamp, the progressive and enlightened chairman of the London County Council's Entertainments Committee, dealing direct with exhibitor licensees, said at the recent licensing session that the increase in license applications had only touched four per cent in the last year.

He none the less warned the trade that unless certain recalcitrants did what they were ordered in regard to theatre improvements and safety precautions they would find themselves in trouble.

Imports and Exports

Britain's trade revival continues, and the October Board of Trade returns just issued show that the film industry is taking its share.

Exports of exposed positive films for the month of October for the last three years are:

| 1937 | 1936 | 1935 |
| 1,987,623 feet | 1,812,655 feet | 2,505,169 feet |

The value of the exports were £12,448, £9,460 and £12,663, respectively.

For the ten months' period of this year exports were 18,732,990 feet.

This compared with 18,571,726 feet for a similar period in 1936 and 23,852,568 in 1935.

RECIPROCITY AND AUSTRALIAN ISSUE

British members of Parliament are alive to the Empire principal of quid pro quo and consider that Australian films having been given a fair deal in Britain, British films should be given a fair deal in Australia.

In the House of Commons, Mr. Mander asked Mr. Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, whether he intended to do anything about this in the Films Bill.

Mr. Stanley, however, giving little away, pointed out, that for this legislation was needed, not in Britain but in Australia. But opportunity would be given for discussing this when the Films Bill came before Parliament.

Film Institute Wants More

The British Film Institute, academic body blessed with tepid trade support, and financed with monies supplied by a tax on the Sunday opening of cinemas, is asking that these monies be increased.

The Privy Council grant is not enough, says Sir Charles Cleland, the Institute's chairman. Strangely enough, Mr. Cleland apologizes for this need with the statement that it is because support is increasing, and industrial, university, and residential centres are taking to the BFI idea. They aim to have a branch in every university center, and already have active units on Merseyside, and in the manufacturing areas of Salford, Manchester, Bradford, York, Cardiff and elsewhere.

Activities of the Institute for the most part have been educational, in propagating the idea of classroom films, compiling a library list, staging uplift film shows and so forth.

National Decency Legion Classifies 15 Productions

Of 15 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week seven were approved for general patronage, seven were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The new pictures and their classification follow:

Bureau of Mines Films Shown 100,342 Times

Motion pictures produced by the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior, Washington, were shown on 100,342 occasions last year to an attendance of over 9,000,000, of which 85 per cent were students, M. F. Leopold, safety engineer of the bureau, said this week. Mr. Leopold said there are 5,000 reels in circulation and "the demand is so great the prints are booked a year ahead."

The latest addition to the film library of the bureau is "Modern Metalworking with the Oxy-Acetylene Flame," a two-reel silent film, both 16 mm. and 35 mm., that depicts the construction and operation of the oxy-acetylene torch and the oxy-acetylene process for joining and severing metals.

Gould Says "Rancho Grande" Leads All in Latin America

Figures from Latin American key spots give "Alla en el Rancho Grande," Mexican made Spanish language musical romance picture starring Tito Guizar, "an all-time first place for any picture, Hollywood or European, in those situations where it has played," according to Walter Gould, United Artists divisional sales manager for Latin America. United Artists is distributing the picture, exclusive of Mexico. The picture has been shown in Venezuela, Colombia, Chile and Argentina in Latin America and Guatemala and Panama in Central America.

Concord Making Eight Westerns for Monogram

Concord Productions, recently formed by Maurice Conn, will produce eight westerns for the current season for Monogram, it was announced last week. The deal will not affect Mr. Conn's Ambassador plans which calls for a number of pictures for independent distribution.

The Monogram productions will be a part of the announced schedule of that company, and will feature players supplied by Monogram.

Perkins in New York

J. E. Perkins, Paramount manager in China, arrived in New York Monday after three weeks on the coast. Mr. Perkins said the Shanghai and Hong Kong offices of Paramount are still operating.

"Sears Drive" Meetings Held

Warner Brothers nationwide sales drive, known as the "Sears Drive," got under way last week with meetings in Dallas, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, Toronto, Chicago and New York attended by district and branch managers of the company. Competition will be conducted by districts rather than branches, with each district manager acting as a captain.

The campaign, the second of its kind, named for Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, will run from December 26, 1937, to April 16, 1938. "Tovarich" and "Hollywood Hotel" will start the drive.

Fred Jack held a meeting last Thursday in his Dallas office attended by the following branch managers of the southern district: J. C. Vergesslich, Atlanta; R. L. McCoy, Charlotte; Doak Roberts, Dallas; W. Warner, Kansas City; W. O. Williamson, Jr., Memphis; Luke Connor, New Orleans, and J. O. Rohde, Oklahoma City.

Monday, Robert Smeltzer held a central district meeting in Pittsburgh, with A. Shmitken, Cincinnati; M. A. Mooney, Cleveland; F. E. North, Detroit; W. G. Mansell, Philadelphia; Harry Seed, Pittsburgh, and F. Beiersdorf, Washington, attending.

Also on Monday, W. E. Callaway held a West Coast district meeting in Los Angeles with E. A. Bell, Denver; N. H. Brower, Los Angeles; V. Stewart, Portland; Wm. F. Gordon, Salt Lake City; Charles Muehlman, San Francisco, and Al Oxtoby, Seattle, present.

Wolfe Cohen, Canadian district manager, held a meet with his men in Toronto on Monday. They are L. Geller, Calgary; M. J. Isman, Montreal; L. McKenzie, Saint John; H. O. Paynter, Toronto; Joseph Plottel, Vancouver, and G. A. Simmons, Winnipeg.

Midwestern district manager Leo Blank, Chicago, on Saturday met with the following branch managers: T. R. Gilliam, Chicago; A. W. Anderson, Des Moines; Fred Greenberg, Indianapolis; R. T. Smith, Milwaukee; Rud Lohrenz, Minneapolis; C. K. Olson, Omaha, and Hall Walsh, St. Louis.

Eastern district manager Ben Kalmenson will hold his meeting at the New York Branch in the Film Center Building, Friday, with Charles Rich, Metropolitan branch manager; Harry Decker, New York and Brooklyn; Harry Hummell, New Jersey; Norman Ayres, Albany; Nat Furst, Boston, and R. S. Smith, Buffalo, attending.

Warners this week appropriated $125,000 for a national advertising publicity campaign on "Submarine D-1," to be directed by S. Charles Einfeld. The program calls for use of 24-sheets on an elaborate scale and enlarged advertising budgets for national publications and newspapers.

Celebrate 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Martin H. Rogers, who operate the Casino Theatre, Baltimore, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary on Thanksgiving Day. The couple, who reside at 1401 Covington Street, Baltimore, were married November 25th, 1912.

West Coast Sound Studios, Inc., New York, producers of industrial pictures, and Ted Eshbaugh Studios, New York, producers of animated cartoons and drawings in color have become affiliated. The Eshbaugh company acquires the use of the West Coast equipment while West Coast assumes exclusive sales representation for Eshbaugh.

FRENCH BILL FOR FILM CONTROL CALLED THREAT TO U.S. PRODUCT

State Would Collect for Producers, Authors, Directors; Double Bills Would Be Barred; Special Tax on Dubbing

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

Will the French Government in the near future pass a bill regulating the cinema industry in France? This is the new menace which has been causing much agitation in cinema circles these last weeks.

The uncertainty arose when it became known, about a month ago, that Jean Zay, French Minister for National Education, had presented to the French Cabinet a regulatory bill which is to be submitted for a vote at the next session of Parliament, in two or three weeks. The stipulations were kept secret.

The bill proposed by Mr. Zay is said to resemble closely the bills suggested two years ago by Mr. Mario Roustan, at that time Minister for National Education, and by Mr. Grunebaum-Ballin, a French M. P.

The main points of the new regulations are supposed to be as follows:

(1) Definition of what is to be regarded as a "French film."

(2) Establishment of conditions to govern production.

(3) Creation of an organization controlled by the State to collect directly in the motion picture theatres at one and the same time the percentages due to producers, authors, and film directors.

(4) Institution of a tri-partite board which would include a representative of the Government, and one each from the trade-unions and employers, which would establish standards for the industry.

(5) Elimination of double-bill programs.

A tax on dubbing also is to be considered, but was not included in this statute.

As soon as this project became known, it occasioned loud protests from members of the industry, who said they had not been consulted.

In L'Ecran, official organ of the French Cinema Exhibitors Association, there was an article vehemently protesting against the proposed suppression of the double bill program, which is said to have been agreed upon by French producers and directors as well as by players and studio workers' associations. Exhibitors feel a heavy threat hanging over their head.

Would Aid Domestic Industry

The Government fears that the French exhibitors and producers will not agreed upon the bill. On the other hand, it is conceded that the intention of Mr. Zay is to help develop the French industry. In an interview in the Paris evening newspaper L'Intransigeant, Mr. Zay said:

"The main aim of this bill is to throw out of the cinema business all people who have been bankrupt or who have been previously convicted of anything. There are too many persons working around and in the cinema world whose honesty is to be doubted. It is those who will be hit by our bill.

"The 'renaissance' which has been noticed lately in the quality of French films had to fight against many material difficulties which had accumulated. . . .

"If the new statute specifies that authors' percentages are to be collected directly in the motion picture theatres as well as in legitimate theatres, it will be reform of a very great importance.

"I offered the plan for examination and approval to the next to last Council.

"People express regret that certain professional groups have not been called upon to give their opinion. But those who today grumble at what they call undue haste are those who previously had grumbled continually because the State had taken no part in regulation of the cinema.

"I have simply asked the Ministerial Council for the necessary authorization to deposit, at an opportune moment, a text before Parliament. If I have not published this text, it is because, as yet, it has taken no definite form. I have every intention of taking into consideration the opinions of qualified organizations.

"No problem has been more thoroughly studied. On the official plan, there is the decree proposed by the Minister for National Education in 1935, Mr. Mario Roustan, which he finally gave up trying to pass; there is the investigation and lengthy report of the National Economic Council; and finally, the works of the joint Ministerial Council, which I composed.

"My sole desire is to endow the cinema with a statute assuring its material and moral cleanliness.

"I am not in favor of state operation but a cleaning up of the profession has become necessary, and calls for severe measures. You may be sure they will be taken.

"In any case, however, the industry will have an opportunity to give its opinion before the bill is voted."

Aims Expressed Earlier

On the other hand, Mr. Zay's ideas about the cinema can be found in his declarations before the members of the Cinema Section in the Parliament on Feb. 3, 1937. This committee includes about 350 M. P.'s. Many important personalities of the industries were consulted, among them Mr. Harold L. Smith, representative of France of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Here are the highlights of Mr. Zay's speech on that occasion:

"The situation of the French cinema is such that it presents at the same time the dreadful inconveniences of a quasi-general bankruptcy and that paradoxical chance of salvation, that, with the crisis and the financial miscalculations cleared, the Board of the French cinema market, Parliament and the Government are in the position to consider joint measures on smooth ground.

Reasons Cited

"As for the reasons why this industry was in such a regrettable state: . . .

"The scientific, artistic, commercial and financial elements are all mixed up. The progress of technique has been absolutely amazing. In spite of the merits of companies or actors, the cinema developed in a certain incoherence with more or less total indifference of the public powers. By reason of the dispersion of efforts, a certain number of persons have been led—and I do not blame them—above all, to look for immediate benefits, and the taste of the public has often been badly interpreted, so that productions often are questionable. The industry has had to put up with a certain number of persons who are absolutely incompetent and inexperienced. With the exception of a certain school of operators, which is of little importance, there is not the slightest sort of organization. Access is open to all, to the best as well as to the worst persons.

"There are no longer in France any big film companies, since the disappearance of Gaumont - Franco Film - Aubert (GFFA) and Pathé as producing and distributing companies. There are now only two big societies (both foreign companies) making French films, and their French-speaking films are for the most part made in foreign studios—(Ace [Ufa] and Tobis).

"Most of the French films are produced by small companies generally organized for the production of one film.

"The French market needs 400 feature films per year (the figures for 1935). In 1935 the French Cinema Industry produced 120 feature films, which means that three-fourths of the films shown in France were of foreign origin.

"In 1935, 158 new companies, representing a capital of 17 million francs (about $1,100,000) were formed; in 1936 there were 175 new companies, capital 12 million francs, i.e., five million less, although 17 more new companies. This shows the multiplication of small companies and their very limited objective.

Reduction of Capital

"The average capital of each cinema company has fallen from 109,000 francs in 1935 ($7,000 at that time), to 67,000 francs in 1936 ($4,100). Two years ago 52 companies went bankrupt, representing a loss of 10 million francs ($600,000); last year, 65, a loss of 22 million francs.

BELGIUM TO NAME FILM COMMITTEE

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

A committee composed of members of the Belgian motion picture industry, representatives of the government ministries and individuals familiar with the industry's activities, will be created in Belgium as the first step toward a legislative regulatory program for the film industry.

The committee will study the possibilities of the development of a trade organization, designed to foster the best interests of the industry from the economic and cultural standpoints; it will consider the advisabiltiy of centralizing all public services connected with the screen, and it will prepare for the establishment of a trade publication which will be the general organ of the industry.

The board of the National Union of the Belgian Cinema, which is the federal unit of all Belgian film associations, has consented to the creation of such a commission.

AIM TO AID DOMESTIC PICTURES

($1,500,000). The important difference in the figures for 1935 and 1936 was occasioned by the losses incurred through the bankruptcy of Pathé Natan.

"I think that, under these circumstances, total liberalism should no longer be applied to the cinema industry and the State should not remain indifferent and should acknowledge its responsibilities.

"However, notably for artistic reasons, the State must grant the industry the necessary freedom and independence, and that measures of guardianship, which no one desires, are to be feared.

Would Centralize Activities

"The first necessity is to centralize, in one Ministry, all cinema matters.

"There is one Ministry which seems to be naturally qualified to be the Ministry for the cinema. That is the Ministry for National Education.

"Today no definition of a French film has ever been made. The National Economic Council has proposed one:

"'A French film is a picture spoken in French; produced by a person of French nationality; by a company, of which the chairman and the majority of the board of directors are French; the shooting to take place in a French studio, and, except when the nature of the story does not allow for it, location scenes to be shot on French territory. The story, the adaptation, dialogue, screen play, and music will be written, adapted and composed by persons of French nationality, with the exception of literary, musical or dramatic works published earlier. Conforming to these rules, the directors, assistants and players will also be French.'

"This definition of a French film is necessary.

Associations Proposed

"The National Economic Council has suggested creating one organization consisting solely of employers, also an association of workers, also what it calls a 'Central Committee of the Cinema.'

"The reports of the Sub-Committee of the Chamber of Finances and the Petsche report suggest creation of a National Committee of the Cinema, which would include as many sections as there are branches of the industry: Production, Distribution, Technical Industries and Exhibition.

(N. B. This National Committee of the Cinema now exists, as the Confederation of the French Cinema, which includes these four sections and represents the whole of the French Industry.)

"Important powers should be given to this Committee, which would work in close conjunction with the Government for important and fundamental matters.

"Other kinds of organizations have been suggested, especially by the 'Group Mai 1936' (N. B. a political group of young persons of the extreme left), which wishes to create an Institute of the Cinema, with courses for technical research, and so on.

"All these initiatives have a common purpose: to organize the cinema profession.

"It is indispensable that some guarantee of morality be demanded. There is also the question of the opening of new theatres. Establishment of a license system for opening cinemas has been proposed.

Protection of French Films

"The second problem to be studied is the protection of French films against foreign pictures. If foreign films are dangerous competition for French films in France, it is not only because of the slight importance of French production but mainly because of the privileges granted foreign films.

"Foreign Films arriving in France are completely amortized. They already have benefited by wide publicity and have much easier access to the international public than French films. The custom duties—20 per cent ad valorem—are practically without effect, as the admitted value of the films as goods is much too inferior to their real value. Also the French Cinema market has been the victim of international trade dispositions.

"For instance, take the case of the U. S. A. The commercial agreements concerning our exports had as counterpart the importation of American films in France. In future agreements, the cinema interests of France ought to be taken into consideration.

"The quota on foreign films may ask for more rigorous and effective measures. It has been suggested that special taxes be levied, differing according to whether the foreign films are of international value, dubbed in French, or shown in original version.

Financing French Films

"Another important problem is the financing of French film production. One reason why the problem is so difficult to resolve is the practical impossibility of finding money and credit.

"Everybody in the industry agrees there should be an organization which, under conditions of security and control, would place money at the disposal of enterprises which deserve it.

"The National Economic Committee council has suggested creation of a central treasury of the industry. Others prefer creation of a Bank of the Cinema which could, just as in the German system, advance up to 70 per cent of the budget for a picture and demanding guarantees from the producers for the remaining 30 per cent.

"A special committee of Members of Parliament thinks that test would be a Board of the Cinema which would play a double role: on one hand as a fiduciary society having in charge the collection of receipts in theatres, on the other hand financing a film and superintending its making.

"The question of taxes is another problem which the French industry has to face.

"Motion picture theatres in France have to stand a triple taxation: the State taxes, with percentage varying according to receipts; the "pauper tax" of 10 per cent, and the optional municipal entertainment taxes which are generally applied.

"In entertainment taxes it is the cinema which is the most heavily charged, as the motion picture theatres give about 21 per cent of their receipts for taxes, while legitimate theatres pay no more than 10 per cent.

"Taxes on motion picture theatres ought to be reduced, but only under certain circumstances, that is to say, for pictures of quality.

Other Problems

"Some French producers have asked for a higher taxation on French talkers made in foreign countries.

"There is also the problem of collecting money in the theatres. On 1,000 million francs received, which is the average total of cinema receipts in France for one year, the returns to the producers are very small, and especially for short films.

Censorship

"I would like also to mention the problem of censorship which depends directly on the Ministry for National Education.

"Some modifications and improvements can be arranged. For instance, for French pictures it would be preferable that the censorship should examine the screenplay before the picture is made. Then, if the producer does not heed the warnings given by the censorship the film should be forbidden.

"I desire also to mention the problem of exportation of French films, for which a control should be established so that pictures contrary to the prestige of France could be kept back.

"Other problems I should like to mention are the matter of raw film, generally made in foreign countries; the necessity of correction of abpse of dubbing; the use of double bill programs, which has caused the disappearance of short subjects, educational and documentary pictures. The educational cinema is not at all what it could and should be."

Threat to U. S. Companies

If the French cinema is alarmed over the bill planned by Mr. Zay, as no one knows exactly what will be in it, the American companies are the most threatened.

The stipulation which would bar double bill programs has been taken as a direct attack against the American industry in France, as generally speaking, all double bill programs include an American dubbed film as the supporting picture.

The main points against which American companies in France have protested are:

(1) It is not true that the introduction of American films in France is a sort of "luxury," a "superprofit," for the American companies, and that these films arrive in France already amortized. An average American film costs from 15 to 20 million francs and needs all American and world territories to be amortized.

(2) The Franco-American Treaty has been vigorously attacked on the pretext that it favored American companies at the expense of the French industry. However, this treaty did not create any new situation, but merely confirmed a state of affairs which already existed, maintaining the quota system, the custom duties, the obligation of dubbing films in France, and restriction of the number of halls where foreign speaking films could be shown in their original versions.

The only advantage to American companies in this treaty was that it did not add further difficulties or restrictions to importation of American films into France.

MEXICANS DEMAND SILENT VENDORS

Mexico City has devised a method of enabling theatre patrons to buy candy and refreshments without being annoyed by vendors shouting their wares.

Under a recently enacted law, peddlers can operate in the first class theatres only during intermission. In the other houses peddling is permitted during performances but the hawkers must keep moving and remain silent.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 93

Bluebook School Question No. 93 was: (A) What is a crystal speaker? In what manner does it differ from other types of speakers and in what manner do they operate? (B) Why are flexible arrangements necessary in transmission line to loudspeakers? (C) Does a magnetic speaker have a field coil?

The following made acceptable answers: C. Rau and S. Evans; C. Ohlham; L. Cimikoski; H. Edwards; J. R. Prater; W. Limmroth; R. and K. Wells; L. F. Hayes; E. M. and M. Wentworth; H. B. Smith; R. E. Maxwell and S. U. Lamont; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkler; F. B. Shilshome; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; R. S. Welch; W. L. Brandon and S. H. Billings; D. Dennis and W. Leeds.

Aside from the very complete answer supplied by Leo Cimikoski, Norwich, Conn., that unfortunately is too lengthy for use here, the reply of a new "student," D. M. Stinson, suits the needs of publication best. He says:

"A crystal speaker is one in which a block of Rochelle salts is employed to operate the diaphragm. Rochelle Salts crystals have the property of twisting when an electrical voltage is impressed across them. When used in a suitably constructed speaker connected to an amplifier, the movement of a crystal follows the audio-frequency voltage variation of the amplifier output exactly. The resulting electrical action moves the speaker diaphragm in such a manner that it is converted into sound waves in the air, and thus sound is reproduced.

"The crystal speaker differs from the more commonly used speakers of either magnetic or dynamic type in that it employs no magnet or coils of any sort; also in that it has a very much higher impedance.."

(B) J. R. Prater replies, "There must be flexibility in the transmission line to loudspeakers because different theatres require different numbers and sometimes different types of speakers. Different speakers offer different impedances to the transmission line, and unless the amplifier output impedance can be so adjusted that it will match the particular combination employed, both volume and quality of sound will be impaired.

"Then, too, it sometimes is necessary that different speakers in the same installation be set at different column levels in order to accomplish the best possible sound distribution. In such case the total impedance offered by the complete speaker hook-up must match the impedance of the amplifier output transformer, some types of which latter have several taps on their secondary, thus providing a wide range of output impedances. Other systems provide separate dial switches for each speaker. By setting such switches in proper combinations, both distribution and impedance match may be accomplished."

(C) L. F. Hayes says: "Magnetic speakers do not have a field coil. The voice coil is reinforced by a permanent magnet."

J. R. Prater supplies a somewhat more complete reply, as follows:

"Magnetic speakers have no field coil. They have coils wound upon the permanent field magnet, but these coils are voice coils powered by the amplifier output. They do not move with the speaker diaphragm as do the voice coils of dynamic speakers but cause the diaphragm to move by altering the strength or intensity of the permanent magnet, the latter operating the metal bar attached to the cone or diaphragm."

R. and K. Wells discuss the matter somewhat more at length: "Magnetic loudspeakers, the general wiring set-up of which is illustrated on page 554 of our Bluebook, usually have two coils of wire, thorugh some have as many as three. These coils, however, are not field, but voice (speech) coils. There is no necessity for a field coil in such speakers for the reason that a primary field is provided by means of a permanent magnet. The voice coil serves only to reinforce or to oppose the primary field."

I was very much interested in the following preamble to one "student's" reply to Section B, as follows:

"Since I make it my unvarying rule not to look at any book except possibly one on physics, a dictionary for terminology or a suitable one if I need figures, until the answer to each question has arrived, I may rate a nice little zero on this one." Which, incidentally, he did not. This man has the right idea. He is willing to work and dig out the required knowledge. He has the patience to wait until the correct answer is at hand.

Recently I received an interesting letter along this line from Leo Cimikoski, projectionist of Norwich, Conn., a faithful Bluebook School "student." He said:

"Expert knowledge combined with cool-headedness is a very valuable asset to the projectionist. The cool-headed man does not easily get excited when trouble comes, as come it inevitably will, in some form, in theatre projection rooms. And the excited man is more likely to do the wrong than the right thing. When trouble bobs up as a show runs, the time element is of high importance. 'The show must go on' is a maxim we are expected to live up to.

"Perhaps some of us who take reproduction seriously believe in Santa Claus. We believe that in the end reward, at least in some measure, comes to those who take their work seriously, striving to educate ourselves thoroughly in all its branches. Personally I try to combine experience with careful work and thus be able to render as excellent service as is humanly possible under the conditions.

"Unfortunately those conditions too often are such as render perfection in results impossible. Oily, dirty film offer a glaring example. Inability to listen to the sound we are projecting is a heavy handicap which, it is hoped, will one day be overcome by the engineers.

"Year by year audiences become more critical and quicker to protest against faults in either visual or sound results. This is particularly true of sound, because the ear is more critical than the eye. No man can understand his equipment perfectly or handle it well without deep study of the basic principles upon which those equipments are planned and upon which they operate. These include physics, mathematics, optics, acoustics, electrical and magnetic action and lubrication of moving parts, which latter, incidentally, does not include lubrication of the films.

"Producers, who are the backbone of the great industry, up to this time, have done very little to qualify men in the handling of the intricate, delicately adjusted equipments with which their often magnificent productions must be presented to the public. That highly important job still remains in the hands of writers and editors of publications dealing more or less with projection affairs.

"That man who does not believe in improving his knowledge of theory as well as practice, insisting instead on relying wholly upon practical experience, invites trouble, but too often is compelled to more or less step to one side when it arrives.

"Let us be honest and ask ourselves just how much real practical experience we get in the ordinary course of our work? We follow almost exactly the same routine day in and day out, working with the same equipments in much the same way. Is it not true the 'practical experience' man dubs along, learns the exact routine operation of that particular set of equipments, on that particular hook-up, and that is that?

"That may sound far-fetched, but it really is not. For without very real study, fantastic as it may seem to the 'practical experience' advocates, it is impossible to pass authoritative judgment upon what is and what is not excellence.

With all of which I most heartily agree. Say what you will, it is the man who combines practical experience with intensive study who invariably supplies the best results at least cost.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 99

Should or should not carbons be subjected to a drying process before using them, and what, in your opinion and experience, is the result of using carbons that have been stored in a damp place for some while?

(Note: Remember this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended November 20, 1937, from 64 theatres in 13 major cities of the country was $938,274, an increase of $51,239 over the total for the preceding week ended November 13, 1937, when 63 theatres in 13 large cities aggregated $887,035.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

IT'S ALL YOURS: Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll—Amusing but not outstanding. Played October 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—With Pat O'Brien you always have a good show, but with the addition of Joan Blondell this picture is a knockout. Warners should put these two together more. She is really an actress. Do not forget "King and the Chorus Girl" and now this one. Good any day in the week. The audience ate it up. Running time, 75 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DANCE, CHARLIE, DANCE: Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir—One can hardly rate this as much more than mediocre. Box office value not over 20 per cent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR: Kenny Baker, Jane Wyman—A some-liked-and-some-didn't picture. Played October 23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Gaumont British

SILENT BARRIERS: Richard Arlen, Lilli Palmer—Very good and interesting.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Grand National

TRAILIN' TROUBLE: Ken Maynard—A very nice little Western with plenty of action for the fans. The story was very good and well edited as there are no breaks in the sequence. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD GUY: Bruce Cabot, Virginia Grey—A good picture to average results. Played October 20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor—We played this one to fair crowd and were surprised. We fail to see where Metro gets the idea this is a special. They advertise their own stars in their own picture. Played Nov. 7-8.—E. M. Jackson, Orpheum Theatre, Plentywood, Mont. Rural patronage.

DAY AT THE RACES, A: Marx Brothers, Allan Jones—Personally I think the Marx Brothers a severe pain in the neck and it seems to me this is their worst picture. However, it kept the patrons in a roar of laughter and brought out some who very seldom go to a show, so going on the theory that the customer is always right this must be an excellent production. The water carnival sequence is beautiful, the curtain of water being especially novel, while the music and dancing is a highlight of the show. I still do not like the Marx Brothers, but hope they make another picture soon. Running time, 111 minutes. Played Nov. 5-6-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebannon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LONDON BY NIGHT: George Murphy, Rita Johnson—Average programmer. Played October 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THEY GAVE HIM A GUN: Spencer Tracy, Gladys George, Franchot Tone—Something entirely different in fanfare and was well received, but made us little more than film rental. Should be in program category to make us money.—Harland Ranklin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

THIRTEENTH CHAIR, THE: Madge Evans, Henry Daniell—Booked this one for Halloween and it certainly has enough thrills and chills to make one afraid to go home in the dark. Dame May Whitty deserves top billing in this one. She is very good. The entire cast gives a creditable performance. An old story but will please the masses. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Oct. 30-31.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronge.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Cary Grant—An excellent show with plenty of laughs. It's different from anything we have ever played and was enjoyed by all who saw it but they were not many. Constance Bennett and Cary Grant were in their element in this picture and should be played as a team more often. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BULLDOG DRUMMOND COMES BACK: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell—A nice little mystery drama that gave top billing to Barrymore wherein an extra could have taken the part he played. The action was very draggy and the scene being laid in England with the supposed English accent did not do this picture any good. It could have had an American locale just as well and then it would have made more of an impression on the audience. All right on a double billing only. Running time, 60 minutes—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: Buster Crabbe, June Martel—A very good western. Not the draw that Hopalong Cassidy's are, or in the class with Buck Jones, but was well produced and well received. Business good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

ON SUCH A NIGHT: Karen Morely, Grant Richards—Had they speeded this up a bit it would have been okay action fare. As is, gets by. Played October 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft—A good picture that grossed nothing to brag about.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WILD MONEY: Edward Everett Horton—Fine for a double bill. A nice little story with a lot of comedy. Played it on a weekend and with "Forlorn River." Business fine. Thanks for your letter, Mr. Musselman.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

Republic

RANGE DEFENDERS: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan—This is a top western, action, fun, surprise twists and a clever script. I wouldn't be surprised if this series of Westerns became real popular. Max Terhune with his ventriloquism is capable of producing the comedy relief in a variety of ways. The three together make a fine team. Give these boys a proper build-up and they will go places. This was doubled with "Wee Willie Winkle," which did not need a double, but you must double in this town.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SEA RACKETEERS: Weldon Heyburn, Jeanne Madden—This action picture received the heartiest patron approval of any Republic production we have played, the Gene Autry films excepted. Several of our patrons who are alert to the technical side of the business commented upon the good sets, photography and sound, and noted that the picture was apparently budgeted at a higher figure than usual. The cast, while not exceptional, is more than adequate and manages to make some of the obvious situations seem less so. We consider ourselves fortunate in having played this film.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty & Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt—This well constructed, refreshing programmer ought to draw if properly handled, and will certainly make friends with those who see it. Many favorable comments.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town patronage.

FORTY NAUGHTY GIRLS: James Gleason, Zasu Pitts—Judging by the audience response, I would say that this is one of the very best of Detective Piper's screen career. Unique, exciting and funny.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard—We like Harriet Hilliard. Our folks enjoyed this wholesome hodge-podge; and, with a press book to help, it ought not to miss fire in any situation. Joe Penner helped draw, and was an asset to the picture.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town patronage.

MUSIC FOR MADAME: Nino Martini, Joan Fontaine—In spite of commendable efforts on the part of all concerned to make Nino Martini popular with the masses, his superb voice and some good comedy relief failed to put the picture over with our audience. The problem with Martini is different than with Pons and Breen. If, besides a vocal prodigy, they could make him out a real he-man, knocking out six or eight men in a fight to protect some child, he would likely win the sympathy of any audience. Even so, in some situations this picture will probably get by all right.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town patronage.

ON AGAIN—OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—A regular Wheeler and Woolsey picture. Many comments on when is the next one? Running time, 68 minutes. Played Oct. 29-30.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—Here is one of those light, nonsensical comedies that will keep your customers bouncing around in their seats. The men here thoroughly enjoyed it and their gusts of laughter were a tonic to hear. There isn't much to the plot, but Joe Brown carries it along and establishes himself as one of the best comedians on the screen. Florence Rice is a capable foil and the rest of the cast is okay. Show it, your customers will thank you. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Nov. 13.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SATURDAY'S HEROES: Van Heflin, Marian Marsh—Drew well and clicked. Youngsters talked about it for several days afterwards.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town patronage.

SUPER SLEUTH: Jack Oakie, Ann Sothern—Oakie comes up to par as usual. Good comedy and pleased everyone who saw it. Running time, 4 reels. Played Nov. 5-6.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash Small town patronage.

THERE GOES THE GROOM: Burgess Meredith, Ann Sothern—Light but satisfying. Ann Sothern at her best. We heartily endorse this trend of RKO's toward light comedy. This sort of stuff makes our patrons forget about cheap cotton for a while, and that is quite something.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CAFE METROPOLE: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—No box office strength here. Just an everyday picture at best. Played October 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CAN THIS BE DIXIE?: Jane Withers, Slim Summerville—Picked this up late and while it drew reasonably well it was pretty weak on entertainment Played October 23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAVID HARUM (Reissue): Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—I consider this one of the best Will Rogers pictures. They do not draw as well as they did, but a lot of the Rogers' admirers still come. This has a splendid story, together with an exciting horse race, and pleased. Running time, 85 minutes. Played Nov. 3-4.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DR. BULL (Reissue): Will Rogers, Marian Nixon—The reissues will do as much business as any program pictures, and they still please the older crowd.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SECRET VALLEY: Richard Arlen, Virginia Grey—Very good Western with some beautiful scenery and plenty of action. Running time, 57 minutes. Played Oct. 27-28.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SHE HAD TO EAT: Jack Haley, Rochelle Hudson—Not worth the rental. Played October 12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SLAVE SHIP: Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery—An excellent story makes this worthwhile entertainment. The title, however, repelled many of the ladies. They couldn't see such suggestion of romance in slave shipping, and consequently didn't give it the break it deserved. Played October 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THIS IS MY AFFAIR: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Taylor, Victor McLaglen—Very good entertainment. A little disappointing at box office, nevertheless. Played October 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple, Victor McLaglen—Who said that Shirley Temple is slipping. In this working class district, "Wee Willie Winkie" drew as well as any Shirley Temple picture shown to date. The picture fully deserved the patronage it received at this theatre. They did not leave it all to Shirley, they gave this a swell production and a fine supporting cast. Cesar Romero as "Khoda Khan" deserves special mention for a swell performance. Of course, there is only one C. Aubrey Smith. Everyone in the cast is deserving of praise, as well as everyone who had any part in preparing this masterpiece, and to you, Shirley, many thanks. Your pictures are a great help in paying the new taxes and also leaving a little something over for butcher, the baker, etc.—J. E. Stoker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

DREAMING LIPS: Elisabeth Bergner, Raymond Massey—We had more walkouts on this feature and more dissatisfied customers than on any picture we have played in our theatre for twenty years. Keep away from it as from smallpox. British-made pictures are nothing to brag about, but "Dreaming Lips" beats them all. It is just terrible. United Artists should not expect any exhibitor to show this picture, if they value their good will. Bergner no actress. Story too suggestive. Sex picture. We wonder where the censors were, that they let this pass through.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

TOP OF THE TOWN: George Murphy, Doris Nolan—Good musical comedy. Hugh (Ho Ho) Herbert steals the show as usual. Business average for Sunday, opposition "Thin Ice." Running time, 86 minutes. Played Oct. 24-25-26.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

WEST BOUND LIMITED: Lyle Talbot, Polly Rowles—The railroad stars again in a program thriller. Running time, 3½ reels. Played Nov. 5-6.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

WINGS OVER HONOLULU: Wendy Barrie, Ray Milland—Swell airplane picture. Pleased all who saw it. Running time, 81 minutes. Played Oct. 31-Nov. 1-2.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

FLY AWAY BABY: Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane—Double-billed this one with the "Thirteenth Chair" for Halloween. Just a program picture that is hardly good enough for a single bill, but is okay on a double. Quite a lot of comedy, and that is what they want. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Oct. 30-31.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

KID GALAHAD: Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis—A good prize-fight story that barely did average business, and with the special attention this was given we did not break even. But my principal complaint is the killing of Edward G. Robinson at the end of the picture. The author may have killed the promoter at the end of the story, but makers of pictures have been known to make changes in stories. The killing of Edward G. Robinson served no special purpose, all it gave us was a death scene at the end, which is a swell dish to serve those who pay for entertainment. People can see death a-plenty at the morgue, but you don't see a waiting line of visitors at the morgue even where there is no admission charge. Death in a picture should only be used where it is absolutely necessary to further the story, or as an act of self-sacrifice in showing the lives of others, or to pave the way to unite lovers. Wherever possible an important likeable character should be allowed to live; only the real villains should meet their doom. This may not be true life, but the customers pay to get away from real life. They pay for romance, for fun, for fairy tales, for Cinderella stories; they pay for entertainment, not to be depressed by death scenes, when they can be avoided.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

THREE MORE JOIN CONTRIBUTORS

New contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week hail from three states. They are:

R. W. Cruckmore, Rainbow Theaatre, Newport, Wash.

E. M. Jackson, Orpheum Theatre, Plentywood, Mont.

H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Duback, La.

Short Features

Columbia

STUCK IN THE STICKS: Andy Clyde—We played this Broadway Brevity on a weekend, and what a reception. I thought some would never get stopped laughing. Received more comment than the feature. Columbia has the answers when it comes to comedies and are very fair and easy to get along with; they don't hold it over you just because they got the comedies. Play this one, you'll not be sorry if you do. It's a comedy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

SUPER SNOOPER, THE: El Brandel—A fair comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Educational

DENTAL FOLLIES: Song and Comedy Hits—Lukewarm vodvil presentation disguised in a dental atmosphere.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ORNAMENTAL SWIMMING: Treasure Chest—Just fair. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan.

PINK ELEPHANTS: Terry-Toons—Fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RING GOES 'ROUND, THE: Song and Comedy Hits—Fair short but nothing to write home about. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOSS DIDN'T SAY GOOD MORNING, THE: MGM Miniatures—A psychological short that was a trifle over the heads of this country audience that we play to. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

GIRL'S BEST YEARS, A: Musical Comedies—A very poor attempt at making a musical comedy. Didn't click. Grew pathetic with our audience. It seems Warners have the edge on the companies when it comes to making two-reel musicals.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

PACIFIC PARADISE: MGM Miniatures—A fine musical and one of the best this company has put out this season. Very well produced with a lot of talent in the band and the chorus. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

SERVANT OF THE PEOPLE: Special—Only the class trade really appreciated this. The others were bored.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SERVANT OF THE PEOPLE: Special—The story of the Consitution is a worthwhile short, especially at this time. The story, acting and historical scenes are very interesting. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan.

SONG OF REVOLT, THE: Tabloid Musicals—Fair, but these shorts do not take the place of comedies. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SOAK THE POOR: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—A fine counterbalance with "Perfect Specimen." This story of relief shakedown is well done and interesting. —John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

SUNDAY NIGHT AT TROCADERO: Musical Comedies—A fine two-reel musical in black and white. These are the class of the two-reel musicals. Excellent talent, sound and production.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Paramount

AVIATOR SHORTY: Paragraphics—A monkey getting into everything he could at the airport, keeping the adults as well as the kiddies in good humor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

MORNING, NOON AND NIGHT CLUB: Popeye the Sailor—Average for the series.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NIGHT IN MANHATTAN: Headliners—Satisfactory musical reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ORGAN GRINDER'S SWING: Popeye the Sailor—This is a good Popeye episode.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PEEPING PENGUINS: Color Classics—A very slow, draggy cartoon that did not click. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

PUDGY TAKES A BOW-WOW: Betty Boop Cartoons—Satisfactory cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RHYTHM OF THE GAME: Grantland Rice Sportlights—An entertaining sound memory test conducted by Ted Husing, sports commentator.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SONG HITS ON PARADE: Headliner—A very good orchestra number put over in class.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

STAR REPORTER, NO. 2: Ted Husing—Okay—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WRESTLING (IT'S A LAUGH): Grantland Rice Sportlights—A little ridiculous, and not appreciated to the best extent.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

RKO Radio

FOREST GANGSTERS: Struggle-to-Live Series—Best so far of Struggle-to-Live Series. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 13—Who says 13 is an unlucky number? We thought ourselves lucky to compete this series. We can't help it if our folks turn thumbs down on it.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MELODY IN MAY: Ruth Etting—Here is one of the best two-reel musicals I have ever shown. Ruth Etting is very popular here. She sings two numbers and is supported by a capable cast of youngsters who go to town. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MISSISSIPPI MOODS: Radio Musical Comedies—An all-colored cast in a good two-reeler. The Hall-Johnson choir sing several numbers in their inimitable style and there is enough comedy to keep everyone in a pleasant mood. Running time, 17 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SARATOGA SUMMERS: Sports with Bill Corum—While this is listed as a sport short, it is more of a scenic tour of Saratoga. Very interesting, has a good horse-race in it and a bevy of beautiful girls to pep it up at the end. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

IRISH PASTORAL: Magic Carpet Series—Usual travelogue material.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LAND OF GENGHIS KHAN: Magic Carpet Series—Okay travelogue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Out of genuine appreciation for invaluable help received from comments of fellow exhibitors in your column, I contribute reports herewith in the hope that someone may, in turn, find them of value.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La.

United Artists

MOOSE HUNTERS: Mickey Mouse—Folks rolled in the aisle as they usually do when we show Mickey. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

Universal

BIRTHDAY PARTY, THE: Oswald Cartoon—One of the best of Oswald yet. Grownups as well as kiddies will get a kick out of these comics. Running time, 7 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

STEVEDORES, THE: Meany - Miny - Moe—Good comedy. Running time, 9 minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash.

Vitaphone

GHOST TO GHOST HOOKUP, A: Radio Ramblers—We were glad when this was over, as it is one of the poorest ever put out by Vitaphone. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

LONG BRIGHT LAND: Colortour Adventure—This is the first of the new series and still they are not as good as MGM's by a long shot. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

MILT BRITTON AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This is a good Melody Band Master with plenty of novelty to carry it to a successful end. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

MOVIE MANIA: Dave Apollon—Fair Broadway Brevity. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

NECKIN' PARTY, A: Edgar Bergen—This is all that can be expected from this famous radio star, and no one was disappointed. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

PORKY AND GABBY: Looneytune—This series of cartoons is getting better and better. The grownups enjoyed it immensely. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

Republic's "Merry-Go-Round"

Jay Blaufox, advertising and publicity director for Herbert Yates' Republic Pictures, said on Monday that the National Legion of Decency's "Class B" rating of a picture entitled "Merry-Go-Round" has inaccurately been confused with his company's "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," whereas the Legion was referring to Universal's "Merry-Go-Round of 1938."

UA Names Peru Manager

United Artists has appointed Victor J. Schochet as manager of its new office at Lima, Peru. Major Charles Tebay has been named special representative for United Artists in Port-Of-Spain. His headquarters will be at Trinidad.

Yacht Club Boys Signed

Paramount this week awarded a new contract to the Yacht Club Boys under which they are to appear in three more pictures.

Pete Wood's ITO Ready For Fifth Convention

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio will meet in fifth annual convention from December 6th to 8th, at the Neil House, in Columbus, Ohio, where P. J. Wood, secretary, will present a program and lineup of subjects pertinent to showmen.

In conjunction with the meeting of the ITO, of which Martin G. Smith, Toledo, is chairman, the national Allied States Association will hold its central regional conference.

UA Releasing Mier Films

United Artists this week signed a contract with Felipe Mier, Mexican producer and general manager of Cinematografia Internacional, S. A., for world releasing rights, except the United States and Mexico, for "Asi Es Mi Tierra," "Aguila O Sol" and "Perjura." The first is finished and has been turned over to UA. The other two will be ready for release in February and April, 1938, respectively.

Weissmuller in New Role

Deserting his Tarzan characterization for the first time in a feature length role, Johnny Weissmuller will have the leading part in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Hell on Wheels." Zion Myers will produce.

GN Forms Singing School

Ambassador Files To Reorganize

Maurice Conn's Ambassador Pictures, Inc., and its subsidiary, Conn Productions, Inc., Monday filed a petition for reorganization under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act in United States district court in Los Angeles. Assets were listed at $450,000 and liabilities at $230,000.

The petition was filed by Naomi Conn, secretary, who said there were 150,000 shares of common stock at $1 par value outstanding. Listed among the debts was $71,155 due to Marks and Malcolm Trading Corporation, and Mercury Film Laboratories, New York, to which the negatives of 22 pictures were pledged. The petition stated that the income obtainable from the negatives would amount to $300,000 next year.

Mr. Conn said last week that pressure by creditors who hold notes amounting to $25,-00 was forcing him to file under 77B. He said that there had been many reports circulated about him and his company which he wanted to clarify for the benefit of his creditors. He said the bankruptcy plea was suggested by William Fitelson, attorney.

The arrangement with Monogram whereby Mr. Conn will produce eight or nine westerns will be financed by Monogram, he said. Withdrawal of registration papers from the Securities and Exchange Commission was due to a drop in the market, according to Mr. Conn, and not because of any particular trouble with the SEC. Mr. Conn said that several members of his family have been working for no salary, or very little, and studio members four weeks ago agreed to go along without salary.

Mr. Conn said he started with $30 back in October, 1934, and now hasn't that much to his name.

Ask Pacent Suit Dismissal

American Telephone and Telegraph, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., filed amended answers in United States district court in New York this week in response to the $6,000,000 triple damage anti-trust suit brought against them by Stanley K. Oldden as assignee for the benefit of the creditor of the Pacent Electrical Company, Inc. The defendants denied the alleged conspiracy to violate the anti-trust laws and asserted that Pacent had infringed on patents owned by them and should account for the profits. They also stated that the action was barred by the six-year statute of limitations. A dismissal of the complaint with costs was asked.

Phillips Lord To Appeal

Phillips Lord will appeal from dismissal of his complaint against Pathe News, Inc., charging that Pathe violated contract, made in 1934, in which the producer agreed to take pictures on a world cruise of the schooner Seth Parker, it was said Saturday. The suit was dismissed by Federal Judge John W. Clancy in New York last week for lack of evidence.

Charge Columbia With Patent Infringement

Mrs. Annie R. Owen of Washington, describing herself as the widow of William O. Owen, inventor, last week filed suit against Columbia Pictures Corporation, Harry Cohn, Frank Capra and Viola Lawrence, charging infringement of patents willed to her by her late husband and which govern mechanisms for insets, fadeouts and dissolves.

She asked the court to enjoin the defendants from using the patented devices and copies thereof, and to award her damages after an accounting of the profits of eight pictures in which, she alleges, the devices were used. The films are "Lost Horizon," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "The King Steps Out," "Love Me Forever," "Unknown Woman," "The Black Room," "Atlantic Adventure" and "After the Dance."

Order Sentry to File Bill

Sentry Safety Control Corporation was ordered to file a bill of particulars in its $312,500 breach of contract suit against International Projector Corporation by Justice Isidore Wasservogel in the New York supreme court last week. Sentry alleges that it licensed International to manufacture and sell home sound film projection machines. The defendants allegedly agreed to pay a $5 royalty on each machine with a minimum guarantee of $62,500 and to establish film libraries for home use. Sentry's suit demands the minimum guarantee with $250,-000 damages for alleged failure to supply the film library. International denies the minimum guarantee and sets forth in its answer that its liability under the contract was limited to a $5 royalty on 184 machines sold.

Withdraw William Fox Warrant

A warrant for the arrest of William Fox was returned to the United States district court in New York last week by Marshal John J. Kelly at the request of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood, attorneys for the Capitol Company of California, a judgment creditor of Mr. Fox. The warrant was issued by Federal Judge William Bondy for a contempt of court allegedly committed by Mr. Fox in failing to appear for an examination in supplementary proceedings.

Seattle Orpheum Receivership

The Seattle Orpheum Company filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court in New York last week. No schedules of assets and liabilities was presented with the petition. Twenty-two creditors were listed. Among them are Stadium Theatres Corporation, RCA Victor, National Theatre Supply, Electrical Products Corporation and the Bank of California, N. A.

Fights for "Lost Horizon"

The Brainerd Theatre Company, Minneapolis, filed a petition in district court there last week for an order enjoining Columbia Pictures from delivering "Lost Horizon" to any other Brainerd theatre in advance of showing at its two houses, Paramount and Palace in Brainerd. The theatre company claims to have entered into a contract with Columbia for 30 pictures including "Lost Horizon" and one other Frank Capra production on which delivery has not been made.

OBITUARIES

D. F. Hennessy Of AVM Dies

Daniel F. Hennessy, founder of the Association of Vaudeville Managers, who gave the late Will Rogers his first job in vaudeville, died of a heart ailment at his New York City apartment last Saturday.

Mr. Hennessy retired 12 years ago after serving 25 years as executive business manager of the New York office of the B. F. Keith-Albee circuit.

It was in 1906 that Mr. Hennessy gave Mr. Rogers his first theatre job. Mr. Rogers had been playing with a wild west show and had left the company at Madison Square Garden when Mr. Hennessy employed him to appear in a silent lariat-twirling act at the Union Square Theatre.

Robert M. Cuming

Robert M. Cuming, 43, a film salesman, died at his home in Brooklyn Saturday. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mabel Connors Cuming; a son, Robert, and a daughter, Jeanne.

Scout Younger

Scout Younger, 64, wild west actor in silent pictures, died in Tulsa, Okla., from a brain ailment last Friday.

Walter Brink

Walter Brink, vice-president of the Engineering Specialties Corporation, died in Detroit. He was 37 years old and had suffered from pneumonia for six weeks.

International Cinema Defers Registration of Stock Issue

Joining the steadily increasing group of corporations which, because of the unsatisfactory financial situation and other reasons, have suspended proposed new security issues, International Cinema, Inc., on November 22 asked the Securities and Exchange Commission to defer the effective date of registration of a planned issue to December 1.

The registration statement was filed with the commission originally on September 17, to cover the issuance of 50,000 shares of Class A common and 100,000 shares of common stock, part of an authorized issue of 250,000 shares of the former and 1,000,000 shares of the latter. It was said at the time that 500,000 shares of the common already is outstanding, 40 per cent in the hands of Regan-Day, Inc.

The proposed issue, the commission had been informed, would raise $200,000, of which the company planned to spend $50,000 for new equipment, $100,000 for reduction of indebtedness and $50,000 for working capital.

Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, a subsidiary of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been dissolved in Delaware. A certificate of voluntary dissolution by the consent of all stockholders has been issued by the secretary of state.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

What with the high percentage of automobile accidents, it's natural that civic officials, newspapers, motor groups and other community organizations will jump at any reasonable plan to spotlight dangers of incautious motoring. Especially is such action inspired when a feature picture having to do with wild driving appears on the scene for the tiein with widely publicized picture stars and stories giving the local campaign something sweet to hang on. Your theatreman seeking tieups and guided by comprehensive pressbook suggestions, is in a position to supply that "something". With the entire community at his beck, he hesitates not a moment to tap these tempting publicity sources, often denied him otherwise.

All well and good, but in his eagerness to hook in to every possible tiein, is your theatreman going overboard in stressing the safety slants to the neglect of other boxoffice angles?

Some answer, "Yes"; and among the most positive is Round Tabler Louie Charninsky, of Dallas, who speaks up:

"I am writing you in regard to such pictures as 'The Devil Is Driving' and other pictures used with safety tieups. I believe that managers put too much stress on the safety angles in such attractions, as the public might become confused and think of them as commercial or propaganda pictures. Pictures should be made only for entertainment value and managers should get away from playing up the safety angle above everything else.

"I would also like to hear what the ideas of other Round Tablers are on pictures that are to be sold by women's clubs, parent-teachers' organizations, etc., endorsing same and advising the public to attend."

Charninsky sets out a fact worthy of warning when he points to the possibility of confusion in the mind of the ticket-buyer. That emphasis on safety in advertising may lead patrons to believe the attraction essentially propaganda or commercially sponsored, is an argument not to be dusted off exactly with a wave of the hand.

The Dallas member also seeks expression regarding campaigns that lean upon club or organizational endorsement for their boxoffice reason-for-being. Here, too, is another point for discussion which perhaps will be taken up by other readers who have investigated the worth of these and similar co-operations.

Obviously, the purpose of pictures is to entertain. But always there will be differences in opinion on the value of various publicity and exploitation devices used to sell that entertainment at the boxoffice.

TOOLS PLUS POWER

One thing in common no-foolin' theatremen do have. The tougher the going, the harder they fight. Sure enough, your busy manager may have little occasion to coast at any time during the average day, but just let something come up that needs fixin' right now and the lad's a ball of fire. For instance, December up to Christmas Day. That needs plenty of fixin' and on following pages is set down what various members have in work now and what they did last Yuletide to stop leaks during the pre-Christmas weeks.

It's a fine assortment of boxoffice tools plus a world of power the boys in the field have ready to hold up the grosses. Possibly, the tools may not plug up every hole everywhere, but skillfully and vigorously handled, can be depended upon to do a praiseworthy job where it counts the most.

IT STILL WORKS WELL

" . . . they are all live young showmen who have been identified with a great deal of outside promotion and activity and who secured their opportunity purely through the demonstration method, i.e., by showing what they can do in the nature of real activity while still in their minor capacities."

That's quoted from a letter written by Ralph Crabill, Warner Theatres' Jamestown district manager, referring to recent promotions he has made possible for Wally Folkins, Jimmy Macris and Holly Hollister.

" . . . all these men who were promoted are young men and have shown by their work that they deserve the advancement that has been given them. . . "

And that's from a letter written by Max Melincoff, Warner Boston Theatres district manager, having to do with the stepping-up of James O'Loughlin, Guido Luminello, James Tobin, C. McHale, J. Liss and Alec Davis to bigger jobs.

Starting from the bottom may not mean as much to some folks as it did once upon a time. The old-fashioned idea, however, continues to work out satisfactorily as a means of determining manpower value in the field of exhibition.

Round Table in Pictures

To signalize Ray O'Connell's winning of the September Bronze Plaque for his entry on United Artists' "Stella Dallas" at the Capitol Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., Mayor James H. Ross recently honored the theatreman by a presentation of Plaque with ceremonies held at the City Hall. Adjoining picture shows Hizzoner, left, complimenting O'Connell as District Manager Ed. Moore looks on.

For his date on "Stand-In" at Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa., Sam Gilman adapted the famed Hollywood footprint gag as depicted to right. Those whose tootsies fitted the concrete prints were guests of the Round Tabler. . . . . Tieing "Stella Dallas" to the current municipal elections, the London United Artist publicity staff under supervision of headman Murray Silverstone, to plug the date at the Regal Theatre blanketed the city with posters simulating those used in the election.

Quigley Plaque Winners for October

First-time Plaque winner is Jules Seltzer, Warner Philadelphia Theatres publicity executive, voted the October Silver on "Zola" at the Boyd Theatre. Awarded a Silver Citation Certificate for his work on the same entry, Manager Maurice K. Gable is pictured to right with famed sculptor Donato in front of lobby display, highlight of campaign detailed elsewhere in this section.

As a second-time Plaque winner, George Limerick again takes a bow, this time for his entry on "Artists and Models" at the Yale, Cleburne, Tex., voted the October Bronze and proudly announced in a column-long story on front page of leading local daily. What Limerick did and how is fully set down on a following page of this section.

Since Belleville, Ill., is in the coal mining country, Manager Albert Spargur was able to tiein with state and county mine inspectors for buildup on "Draegerman Courage." Lobby attractor proved to be exhibit of equipment in mine rescue work which Spargur obtained from local rescue station.

Particularly skilled in the planning and execution of lobbies that attract, Limerick created a front for "Artists and Models" that received further attention by the use of besmocked house artist who actually worked on the display for the edification of the folks stopping by to see.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Contest

What is reported to be a first time in over a year was the contest planted in local paper to find the best dressed woman in Syracuse, stunt arranged by City Manager Gus Lampe, Schine's Theatres, for "Vogues of 1938" at the Keith. Leading department store cooperated, donating dress as first prize, second prize hosiery and third a radio. Stories and photos were run daily during life of contest, and store devoted windows to display of gowns worn in the picture plus scene stills.

Radio formed a large part of Lampe's campaign with electrical transcription and announcements daily. Hotel bands were also supplied with orchestrations and plugged hit tunes.

Confessions Tiein

Exhibitors playing Paramount's "True Confession" will receive full cooperation from the distributor of True Confessions Magazine through tieup embracing a comprehensive national exploitation campaign. Publishers of the magazine are exploiting the picture with four-months advance publicity, the February issue out in December will devote its cover to a photo of Carole Lombard with full credit. The magazines will receive wide distribution in approximately 900 chain stores, all of which will participate in the tieup locally in addition to thousands of newsstand outlets. In each city delivery trucks will be bannered with special posters and all copies of the books will be slip-sheeted with special heralds.

Song Pluggers

To get girls behind music counters of Milwaukee stores enthusiastic over melodies in "100 Men and a Girl," Manager H. C. MacDonald of Warner's invited them to a preview week ahead. A second preview was held two days in advance of opening for all Milwaukee critics.

MacDonald secured three huge co-op ads from Gimbel's, the Boston Store and Zenith Radio. Stores giving window and counter displays on the film together with play dates.

For full week in advance of showing, 15-minute "Man-On-The-Street" broadcasts were staged in theatre lobby. Thousands of special letters plugging the music angle of the film were sent to a special list of music lovers and vendors in a local baseball park carried plugs for the picture on their baskets.

BINSTOCK WINS OCTOBER DRIVE

First prize in the recently completed Randforce Circuit October drive is taken down by Paul Binstock of the Marboro Theatre, Brooklyn, with Harry Kreigsman of the Oasis finishing second. Next five to finish were: Morris Brown, Culver; Sam Fried, Walker; Jules Pincus, Lefferts; Louis Schnitzer, Carroll, and Manny Solomon, Glenwood.

Election

With election excitement running high Milt Harris, Loew's publicist, Cleveland, for "High, Wide and Handsome," distributed teaser heralds at the polls, permission granted by local election board officials. Heralds bore streamers "The Loewdown on the candidates"; below were listed the Republican and Democratic choices for mayor and the "people's choice for entertainment," followed by picture title. Box urged all not to stay at home election night but to attend the theatre, where they could see the show and get the returns.

Spelling Bee

Bill Brown, RKO Albee Theatre, Providence, R. I., for "Vogues of 1938" held a spelling bee on the stage, promoted prizes going to winners. Leading department store devoted four windows to the picture and used five column ad day ahead.

On "Something to Sing About" Bill secured cooperation of various merchants who devoted windows to displays plugging the picture, restaurants played up special title luncheons and leading hotels featured hit tunes and made regular announcements including playdates, etc.

Opening

Highlight of the opening of the new Fulton Theatre, Fulton, Ky., as reported by Manager Burgess Waltmon, was beauty pageant held on stage to determine who would receive the title "Miss South." First prize winner was awarded round trip air ticket to the Dallas Centennial, second winner a trip to Chicago and third to New Orleans. In addition to daily publicity stories with photos on construction as it proceeded, opening night tickets sold for a dollar each with proceeds going to the local community chest fund.

Guessing Contest

What he termed a "Jim Fisk Blower" was planted in the lobby of the Fox Theatre, Atlanta, by L. & G. City Manager E. E. Whitaker to sell "Toast of New York." Money was planted in glass enclosed case and blown about by electric fan underneath. Entry blanks were distributed by attractive girl dressed as Josie Mansfield in the picture and passes went to those correctly guessing how much money was in the container.

Girl was later used in street bally, driving through city in bannered old model T. On second day of showing the car preceded the first race at nearby track. Cooperating department store featured window display of gown worn by Frances Farmer in the picture and imprinted bookmarks were distributed in all libraries.

"Deanna" Baby

Acting on pressbook suggestion in "100 Men and a Girl," Guy W. Martin, Colfax Theatre, South Bend, Ind., planted newspaper contest for first baby born during the engagement to be named "Deanna." 14 local stores co-operated and donated prizes for the baby in addition to taking space in the co-op ad. Editorial columns took up the idea and played it strong for several days. Martin plugged the stunt in his lobby and arranged for a wire to be sent to the winner from Deanna Durbin.

Football

Reported as highly successful by Kroger Babb, Chakeres Theatres ad head, was Bill Nasses' recent newspaper contest in connection with "Life Begins in College" at the Murphy Theatre, Wilmington, Ohio. Paper offered cash prizes and theatre ducats to those readers who submitted the best accounts of the most sensational football finish they had ever witnessed. Over 3,000 entries were said to have been received with local football coaches and officials acting as judges.

Awards

In a recent M-G-M territorial contest for best campaigns submitted, Col. George N. Hunt, Jr., manager of Loew's U. A. Theatre, Louisville, Ky. won the award of $50 for the best "Topper" campaign. Second winner was W. R. McCormick of the Roxy Theatre, Frankfort, Ind. who won $25 offered for the best campaign on "Captains Courageous."

MEMBERS REPORT DECEMBER PLANS TO BUILD HOLIDAY SEASON GROSSES

Civic Cooperation, Benefit Shows, Added Attractions and Contests Slated to Aid Pre-Yuletide Grosses

Plans are now being completed by Russ Hardwick, Lyceum, Mesa and Plains Theatres, Clovis, New Mexico for a community day celebration conducted as follows. Approximately 40 merchants participate at a cost of five dollars, each having as an entry a local girl. Parade led by three school bands is staged in the afternoon with the girls in evening dress riding atop rumble seats of cars. Girls appear at theatre on same night and through votes distributed by merchants and at theatre week in advance, "Miss Spirit of Christmas" is selected and awarded $25 in cash as a Christmas gift. Entry fee of merchants also pays for the free show to be given by Limerick one morning during holiday week for rural customers.

Toys received at a special kid matinee will be repaired by the manual training department of local high school and distributed by the Boy Scouts. Food show will be held 10 days before Christmas, admission for which will be a can of fruit, vegetables, etc., etc., all to be turned over to the Salvation Army for distribution. On the morning of December 24th, with the cooperation of the Clovis Lions Club Hardwick will hold the theatre's 26th Annual Free Kiddie Show. Club members impersonating Santa Claus will distribute candy, nuts and fruit to each child attending.

During December, two pictures will be locally sponsored by ticket selling campaigns. One will be sponsored by the largest and most active women's club and the other by three girls' organizations in the high school. Stage wedding with two couples will be held one night on the stage, theatre giving $25 in cash in addition to large number of promoted gifts and front, foyers, lobby and auditorium will be dressed in gala Holiday attire.

Broadcast from Theatre Planned by Saxton

Begun on November 22nd and continuing for four consecutive Mondays thereafter, William Saxton, Loew's, Baltimore, has secured a sponsor for a series of broadcasts from theatre stage. Manufacturer is supplying 15-piece orchestra and vocalists, who will broadcast over station WCAO. In return for use of the stage, sponsor is giving 1,000 half-sheet window cards weekly plugging current theatre attraction and spot announcements over air during the week, plugging both the broadcast and coming picture.

Second tieup is with the Baltimore News-Post for a monster underprivileged kiddie show. Merchants contribute toys, etc., various civic organizations cooperate and street car company supplies free transportation. Saxton reports that last year he took care of over 5,000 youngsters and of course newspaper publicity is planted three weeks prior.

DISNEY DECORATIONS PLANNED FOR EXHIBIT

Elaborate papier-mache figures, set pieces and animations based on "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs", the Disney full-length feature, are being used by prominent stores for Christmas decorations. Displays manufactured by Kay Kamen will be stressed in toy departments and windows.

Wally Caldwell Ties Paper To Elks Christmas Distribution

One of the big pre-holiday ideas used by Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo, Ohio, is an eight-day tieup with the Toledo Blade whereby they are gathering all kinds of wearing apparel for the needy of the city to be distributed by the Elks Christmas Poor Relief Committee. Paper will run two and three column stories with full picture credits plus art in main news section starting about December 10th. For street bally Wally expects to use a new truck with mounted 24-sheets on both sides plus six-sheet in red. Engine bell on body of truck will be used to attract attention and will cover downtown shopping centers, where staff will distribute heralds.

Stars To Send Greetings From Hollywood for Matt

Up in Bridgeport, Round Tabler Matt Saunders at Poli's plans to contact the studios, securing wires of greetings from the stars appearing in his then current attractions. It is also to be expected that these shall be planted in the local dailies. Matt, too, has made arrangements to tie up with the Times-Star to sponsor a special morning show for children. This performance is given to collect toys for the needy; each child attending must bring a toy in good condition. Firemen and policemen of course stand ready to recondition any battered toys.

Siegal Promotes Merchants For Weekly December Gifts

Various promotions have been effected by Ed Siegal, Maspeth Theatre, Maspeth, L. I., including car giveaway. Cooperating merchants distribute lucky number coupons with every purchase and Ed reports the car, printing, etc., is completely paid by the stores. Market has been promoted for turkeys and a deal has also been made whereby local furniture manufacturer provides suite for each week in December.

For the kids, Siegal has made a tieup with the Pillsbury Farina Company to give away the Three Stooges movie cameras and on Christmas Day each child attending show will receive gift. The usual Christmas decorations will be hung with tree atop marquee, in lobby and Santa will be on tap to greet the guests.

Limerick Sponsors Exterior Home Decoration Week

Due to the tremendous response and page one publicity received last year, George Limerick, Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Texas, is repeating this season idea he originated and calls his "exterior best decorated home contest" put on in cooperation with the Cleburne Times Review. Divided into three classifications, two story homes; apartment and duplexes, and one story homes and cottages, prizes are given for each division to those decorating their homes in the most attractive holiday attire. Coupons are run in paper and on receipt of entries, George visits the home, presenting theatre ticket.

Deadline for entrants is December 15th at which time rounds are again made to determine best dressed homes. Judging will take place on the 22nd and winners announced in special edition which comes out Christmas Eve. Promoted prizes include silver loving cups, three, two and monthly passes going to runnersup. The goodwill buildup has proved highly gratifying and in addition to the newspaper cooperation, a sizeable tiein advertising campaign is put on by the local power and light company.

Special matinee will be held to which all children bringing a piece of fruit will be admitted. Baskets are then made up and turned over to local charity. Arrangements have also been made by Limerick to enter bannered theatre float in local "Santa Day Parade," December 11, sponsored by business men, and professional Santa will tour streets with back banner reading "I am staying over in Cleburne tonight to see the Big Christmas preview at the Yale Theatre."

City Officials Tie In On Special Kid Show

Week before Christmas tieup will be effected with the City Administration by F. M. Westfall, Warners' Haven Theatre, Olean, N. Y., who will hold a free show for kiddies. The manager reports his most effective activity last year being a solid week of either giveaways or stage attractions, terminating in a car promotion.

Tieup has also been made with Chamber of Commerce for a Christmas parade on December 3 with the theatre properly represented; the usual turkey giveaways will be held and Westfall has promoted watches for gifts, one each week during December.

MANAGERS REPORT YULETIDE IDEAS

Crabtree Reports Arrangements Of Danville Theatremen

City Manager E. E. Crabtree, Publix Great States Theatres, Danville, Ill., reports various activities from his theatres one of which is Don Knapp's at the Lincoln to run Saturday morning shows for children. Using old western features, cartoons and comedies he also plants an amateur contest on the stage with small cash prizes for winners.

Vernon Everroad of the Palace will be winding up his red head contest sponsored by the newspaper and theatre. This runs over an eight-week period, offering prizes for every sort of redhead including, fattest, thinnest, prettiest, prettiest twins, from farthest distance, prettiest red hair, etc. On the last week before Christmas winners of the seven previous weeks will be on stage to receive promoted gifts.

At the Fischer Theatre Crabtree is working on a Thursday Bargain Matinee tieup with a wholesale grocer whereby each adult attending receives a substantial gift. Another device planned is a questions-and-answers contest. A number of questions are placed in envelopes, 10 to 12 people invited on stage and each draws an envelope. Master of ceremonies opens the envelopes, asks the questions and participants have 30 seconds in which to answer. Each question, dependent on how difficult it is has a previously determined cash award in case of correct answer. Local merchant sponsors the slant in exchange for advertising.

Murphy Will Entertain Aged During Christmas

During Christmas week, Frank Murphy, Loew's Theatre, Wilmington, Del., will entertain at his theatre residents of homes for the aged. Women's clubs have been approached and they will cooperate by providing transportation to and from the theatre. Special performance will also be held one morning during Christmas week for children of orphanges, civic clubs providing transportation for that, too, and promoted candy gifts will be distributed.

Theatre front and marquee will be decorated in the festive spirit with laurel roping, wreaths, bells and an electric star. For lobby Murphy plans on using a giant Christmas tree surrounded with large wrapped packages on which will be lettered the names of his January and February attractions.

Merchants Cooperate On Car Giveaway

Joe Rosenfield, Modjeska Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., reports the big event this year to boost holiday business is a Packard giveaway in cooperation with 10 other local Warner-Saxe theatres. Tiein won't cost the theatres a cent, since enough merchants have been contacted to pay entire cost of car and all other expenses involved. Tickets are being given away by merchants and the theatres six weeks before Christmas. All stores have special Santa window cards advertising the giveaway and Joe promoted a new streamlined truck on which the bannered car will be driven about town.

Through cooperation of American Legion, Rosenthal is repeating his free show for orphans, in addition to contacting various industrial concerns to put on morning shows for the children of their employees, which Joe says nets him a substantial rental.

WHITE XMAS TREE IS HOLDEN IDEA

Suggested last year by Earle Holden, is a white Christmas tree, created by spraying a green tree with white kalsomine and put up after paint dries. Red and green balls and silver icicles add further atmosphere. For best results, care must be taken in spraying to cover every inch of the tree, says Holden.

Christmas Gift Tickets Suggested by Davis

Walter Davis, Capitol, Regina, Sask., Canada is putting on a ticket-book selling campaign to push his "Cap Gift Ticket," advertised as "a most appreciated and inexpensive gift, that brings the talent of the world to your eyes and ears." Walt further finds that the books are suitable for bridge prizes, merit awards, anniversaries and recognition of any favors. Gift tickets contain names of recipient and donor. Davis is also selling the idea to local merchants stressing that the tickets would make inexpensive gifts for their employees.

During the week of the 27th to the 31st inclusive, Walt has effected a tieup with local dancing teacher to present her pupils in a stage revue for the matinees. On New Year's Eve there will be a midnight frolic for which he has promoted favors for distribution to all patrons.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Charninsky Promotes Giveaways For December Attractions

To imbue the Christmas spirit generally, Louis Charninsky, Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Tex., plans to dress his entire staff in uniforms with "Merry Christmas" banners. Large decorated tree will be placed in lobby and victrola will play Christmas carols. Dresses, shoes, turkeys, etc., have been promoted from merchants for adult giveaways and for the kiddies Louie has secured gifts also garnered from the various stores.

Sponsored by local cold drink company, Louie will put on Saturday morning children's show at which bicycles will be awarded those collecting most bottle tops of cooperating distributors' product. All of this showman's advertising will carry the line "December will bring the finest of film entertainment to the Capitol Theatre. In keeping with the holiday spirit, we give you the best Hollywood has to give."

Barcroft Promotes Store For Holiday Decoration

Johnny Barcroft, Director of Publicity, RKO Columbus Theatres has secured cooperation of leading department store which will place a huge toy display around Christmas tree in lobby of the RKO Palace. In exchange for credit card plugging the store's toy shop, merchant has agreed to decorate entire theatre with small trees, holly wreaths completely surrounding top of the marquee, etc., etc.

Tieup has also been arranged with largest department store on "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," theme of the toy department's decoration will be dominated by the Disney characters featured in the picture.

Slant used effectively by Barcroft is that pictures having radio stars currently featured on network programs are tied up with radio stations locally. For instance during the playing of "Life of the Party" starring Penner, trailer was used on theatre screen reading "Hear Joe Penner every Sunday night on Station WBNS at 6 p.m." In return, station gives theatre daily spot announcements on the picture.

Johnny has worked out a service with nearby garage which charges his patrons only ten cents for parking their cars during the show. Patron has his garage stub stamped by theatre cashier and trailer on screen announces this special service. Signs throughout the garage also plug the tieup.

Rosenthal Starts Quizz Contests at Theatre

As a business builder, Morris Rosenthal, Majestic, Bridgeport, Conn., is starting a series of broadcasts direct from his stage, utilizing a combination of Professor Quizz and local talent for the entertainment part. Young boys and girls from the high schools will be enrolled to compete against each other for cash prizes. The audience will be invited to submit their questions to be used the following week with cash prizes to the person in audience whose questions are used, provided they are present night of the quizz.

Idea that Morris reports as effective is the serving of promoted tea and cookies to tired afternoon shoppers in the lobby. Saturday before Christmas the Round Tabler expects to repeat use of clown in lobby distributing free candy to all kids attending.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Evans Offers Cash Prizes In Christmas Theatre Gag

Starting a month ahead, Fred Evans, Rose Valley Theatre, Rose Valley, Sask. has distributed heralds on which he listed all of his forthcoming attractions. Patrons are asked to mark opposite each feature their estimate of merit, i.e. for their choice of the best picture the number one is marked, the next best, two, etc. The winner will be determined by the ballot closest to the popular vote as shown by the ballots. Heralds are also lucky numbered, so that patrons in addition to cash award may receive theatre passes.

VARIED MERCHANT TIEINS STRESSED

Civic Clubs Aid Smith for Holiday

Citywide tieup in which the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Civitans, etc., will cooperate is being sponsored by W. Clyde Smith at the Paramount, Hot Springs, Ark., to secure food and toys for underprivileged children and their families to be distributed at a free show Christmas morning. Santa Claus in person will distribute the baskets from the theatre stage following the show. Special kiddie club matinee will be held just before Christmas with toys as admission.

Santa will be stationed in lobby week ahead to greet all children, who will be invited to leave letters for Santa in huge box in lobby, these later to be published in theatre's newspaper. Christmas shoppers may check bundles and newspaper photo of Santa delivering print of current picture to Smith in front of theatre has been arranged.

For decorations, Clyde will use a huge decorated tree in center of lobby surrounded by packages lettered with titles of holiday attractions. In rear of lobby will be large fireplace and stockings filled with candy, nuts and fruits hanging from mantel. Decorated trees will be placed on either side of stage and entire theatre decorated with live holly, cedar, mistletoe, along with regular Christmas rope, bells and garlands.

With "Fit for a King" booked in for Christmas, Clyde will hold a contest to select six boys who can best imitate Joe E. Brown, winners will then act as hosts opening day of picture extending greetings and handing out souvenir programs.

Wright Reports Cleveland Zone Warner Activities

Dick Wright, district manager Cleveland Warner Theatres Zone, suggests a "Christmas Auction Night" with local store cooperating. Merchant and theatre distribute slips of paper each representing "ten shekels," on reverse side is listed the name or names of participating merchants. Each "shekel" entitles patron opportunity of bidding at the auction, the more they have the more they bid; holder of most "shekels" naturally can outbid anyone else.

Night preceding Christmas is designated as "Christmas Auction Night" by the theatre and merchandise to be auctioned off, given gratis by the store or stores is displayed in advance in lobby. Store takes cooperative advertising to herald the auction. Wright reports the slant as a decided box-office stimulant at no cost to the theatres.

Another angle which the theatreman is working on is local movies of Santa. Department store will cooperate, standing all expense of a toy department promotion. First, pictures of Santa arriving by plane at municipal airport are taken and after Santa circles city, pictures are taken showing him being taken in car or sleigh to the store where he meets the kiddies, and then on to theatre for the old clothes or toy matinee. Later pictures are taken of the kiddies in the store looking at the toy displays. After completion of film, the store in its ads announces that the pictures are to be shown at the theatre. Film runs five to six minutes.

CHRISTMAS PARTIES SUGGESTED BY MARTIN

In industrial communities, such as South Bend, Ind., there is much activity by the manufacturers in taking over theatres for special shows to employees and families. Guy Martin reports receiving flat rental last year, furnishing program, services of house staff in exchange. Sponsor contributes toys, candy, etc.

Other activities that Dick is planning will have Santa in front of theatres jotting down children's requests. These are to be included in mimeographed letters mailed to parents telling of the child's requests. It is also suggested making up a small Christmas magazine telling folks about the holiday attractions with stores tying in by taking advertising space for their Christmas specials. Party can be held in lobby combined with a dance, proceeds going to charity. Theatre might also be dressed for the occasion with giant card reading "Merry Christmas to the patrons of this theatre from the cast of (current picture title)." Tieup also could be arranged with telegraph company to give away blanks on which greetings are signed by members of cast.

Wright also recommends successful tieup made last year, and to be repeated, wherein local papers will trade theatre advertising on classified pages for a number of courtesy tickets to be awarded as prizes for the five best answers daily to the questions concerning the merchandise or merchants advertising on that page.

Nightly Activities Planned By Booth Christmas Week

Activities for every night of the pre-Christmas Week are planned by Ralph Booth, New Family Theatre, Batavia, N. Y., this year. For Sunday, Monday and Tuesday there will be a special presentation of local talent in addition to local orchestra. Wednesday there will be the giveaway of a complete bedroom suit promoted from cooperating merchant which will be on display at theatre week ahead; Thursday night will be the presentation of a diamond ring, also promoted, and Friday and Saturday nights devoted to cash giveaways, advertised by the theatre as special Christmas gifts.

Booth reports that last year he designated the entire week as Christmas Fair Week, having tied up five separate merchants, each having one of the nights as his night in the theatre to display material in the lobby. Each merchant donating an article valued at not less than $50. The theatre in turn furnished special service consisting of parcel checking, sale of stamps, and mailing of letters and packages.

In addition to the campaigns reported in these pages, further Yuletide ideas from men in the field will be printed in next week's issue.

Merchants' Night Boosts Business for Moss

To bolster his last year's pre-holiday grosses Dick Moss, Fox Belmont Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal. put over a "Merchants' Night," a slant which he intends repeating. Various neighborhood merchants have been approached to donate expensive gifts for giveaway on certain designated nights over a period of five weeks, with coupons announcing the events given to all patrons entering the theatre. Merchants' ads and newspaper stories publicize the events.

The usual turkey giveaway will be made, huge Christmas kiddie party is planned week before Holiday with plans embracing a kiddie stage show, prizes, special features, games, etc. Idea will be plugged from stage, screen and lobby weeks in advance. In addition to these special efforts, Moss will also exert pressure on individual picture exploitation wherever possible, tying in with the stores, thereby getting the benefit of the holiday crowds.

Gilman Invites Patrons To Check Packages

"Make Loew's Your Headquarters" is Sam Gilman's slogan for Christmas week in Harrisburg, Penna. Therefore, centering his attention along those lines, Sam is arranging for gratis checking facilities advertising the fact in all ads, in addition inviting the shopping public to meet friends at the theatre, discuss shopping troubles, etc., etc. Tieup has also been effected with one of the newspapers whereby broken toys are deposited in huge box in the lobby and then turned over to local mission for distribution.

Repeater from last year is tieup with department store to have Santa Claus arrive from the North Pole at the theatre. Before regular shows, Santa will distribute promoted gifts from store and do a magic act for the children. Advance stories call attention to Santa's arrival and also plug current attractions, in addition to newspaper space, store gives theatre mention in all ads.

During Christmas season theatre distributes paper shopping bags on which recipients are urged to rest up at the theatre before continuing their shopping and Sam also manages to plant in local dailies some art with one or two of the movie stars in a Christmas pose.

Store Pays Cost Of Kiddie Show

Cooperating with Fred Reeths, Jr., Sheboygan Theatre, Sheboygan, Wis., local department store is sponsoring and footing entire cost of free kiddie matinee. This is the fourth annual affair of its kind with Santa on hand to distribute candy, fruit and gifts to all children attending. Store plugs event in its ads, theatre giving screen, program and newspaper mention.

Twelve merchants are also cooperating on a car giveaway between the circuit's two local theatres, merchants running co-op ads publicizing the event and also plugging it throughout the stores.

OCTOBER PLAQUE CAMPAIGNS

With full coverage reported on every practical angle of approach, the first popular-price engagement of "Life of Emile Zola" at the Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia, was preceded by an intensive campaign that was reported to have touched new "highs" in local theatre publicity. Conducted by Jules Seltzer, Warner Philadelphia publicity executive, with the assistance of Manager Maurice K. Gable, the advance drive that earned the Quigley October Silver Plaque is reported as follows:

According to the winners, the picture received unprecedented free publicity in measured lineage, two leading dailies deviating from policy to plug the date to the extent that the Inquirer contributed a full page roto layout carrying some 16 different pictures. The Ledger followed with another full page, in black and white. Distinctly out of the ordinary also was said to be the cooperation received from women's clubs, fraternal and other organization groups.

Wide school coverage is indicated in the fact that over 10,000 children attended showings during the run. Intensive radio time on all stations was another highlight, as was the widespread coverage in suburban and neighborhood publications. In addition, a separate and distinct campaign directed to the Jewish section of the community was carried on simultaneously.

Plants Human Interest Stories

The newspaper campaign was started some 41 days ahead and included such generous spreads as half-page layouts which were listed along with the full-page breaks described above. Human interest articles covered two-column photo and three-column story on Stephen DeBalta, French newspaperman who covered the Dreyfus trial and now resident in this country. Mr. De Balta was also interviewed over the radio. The papers made much, too, of the famed Muni sculpture lobby display, carrying shots of the sculptor at work. Photo of the lobby was carried in the Round Table, issue Oct. 16th.

An inspiring editorial in the Record was another highlight that attracted widespread notice. All in all, the publicity was very thorough, continuing well into the engagement run of the picture.

Important Clubs Cooperate

Organizational contacts started with the Federated Women's Clubs when bulletins were distributed at a meeting attended by officers of all women's clubs in the city. Endorsement from the Women's International League of Peace and Freedom allowed a direct mail approach to every member in the area. As a result of screening for presidents of Motion Picture Forum and Federated Clubs, a strong endorsement to members of both organizations was sent out on a combined letterhead of both groups—a "first time" this has happened, says Seltzer. Telegrams were dispatched to the presidents of the 14 local Hadassah societies to be read before their meetings and further wires forwarded to presidents of local organizations comprising the Conference of Local Women.

Permission for direct contact with schools was obtained through a screening for the officials of the Board of Education and Director of Visual Education. Another screening was arranged for high school principals which allowed the placing of exhibits of special art work and displays. To encourage class room discussion of the picture, a prize pupil and teacher from each of the 20 high schools were guests at a third screening. At all these showings copies of Scholastic, carrying article on the picture, were distributed.

MANAGER VOTED SILVER CITATION

In addition to the Quigley Silver for October won by Jules Seltzer on "Zola," the campaign also brought Manager Maurice Gable of the Boyd, Philadelphia, a Silver Citation Certificate for his cooperation. Photos of both the Silver and Bronze entries are reproduced in the Round Table photo section.

All-Stations Broadcast

Special layouts, size 16 by 20, were displayed in classrooms, on bulletin boards and in school libraries. Personal contacts were made with each school for group attendance, universities, colleges and principal preparatory schools in the entire area visited for further buildup. In each of the local public library branches, additional displays were planted including recommended reading lists by chief librarian.

Every station in town covered the date with spot announcements and Hollywood Reporter commentaries. In addition special broadcasts were promoted featured by two radiofilm programs over WCAU, direct from the sound track of the film. Program is said to be the only one of its kind employing special sound head that picks up track from film.

Artist Creates Lobby

The widely-publicized lobby display reported to be a consistent attention-stopper, is credited to Manager Gable. Sculptured heads of Muni in his characterizations were created especially for the date by Donato, celebrated Philadelphia artist, and arranged as a Hall of Fame in the spacious Boyd lobby. To be noted is that the display was so effective that it was moved intact to the New York Strand for an advance plug on the coming run of the picture.

The individual Jewish campaign included special screening for rabbis, which resulted in sermons and open forum discussions. Jewish newspapermen brought together at a screening to meet Mr. DeBalta planted stories and photos in all the local language papers. Special one-sheets, contacts with all Jewish organizations, schools and community heads were also profitable.

In addition to the rest, specially-printed copper board window cards were placed in the better locations, heralds flooded the city, airplane banner was flown at top football games and a comprehensive lighting and decorative scheme arranged for the theatre front on opening night.

Contests were the order of the day in Cleburne, Texas, when Manager George Limerick went to work on his campaign for "Artists and Models" at the Yale Theatre which earned for him the October Bronze plaque. Ingenious gag was used by cutting scene stills into five sections, each piece being mailed to five different people with explanatory letters. Recipients were instructed to call other persons in their vicinity whose last names started with the same initials to see if they had pieces to match their own. To those presenting completed still at boxoffice, guest tickets were awarded.

Second contest was planted in local daily, tickets also going to those correctly assembling cuts of arms, legs, head, etc., which when completed formed photo of Sandra Storme, model in the picture. Daily announcements of winners were run.

Limerick, who is a firm believer in doing his art work where people can see it, had his artist dressed in smock and beret, week ahead painting cartoon figures and copy on specially constructed front. Since majority of art work was of beautiful girls, it is reported that quite a crowd gathered to watch the proceedings. Directly at the corner next to theatre, George planted a 20-foot cutout figure of girl holding pallette on which was lettered title, playdates.

Outside Angles Prevail

On all four highways approaching Cleburne the showman planted sequence of seven pallette signs at a distance of approximately 50 feet apart, reading "Jack Benny—In — Artists— and —Models — Yale —Sunday." Directional arrows were also spotted in the residential sections and parks were covered with cards in preferred nooks reading "Why Park? For a thrill see," etc., etc., a gag which Limerick says caused more than the usual comment. Three-foot cutout letters of various hues were sewn on net banner stretched across street in front of theatre, two-feet cutout letters were placed along wall of leading department store, and also on side of building near high school, where it could be readily seen from the campus. Other street stunts included different type cutout model forms with pallette at base carrying title, playdates, etc., which were planted at filling stations, court house, etc.

Newspapers Red-Inked

Local boys' band with back banners visited leading restaurants and drug stores wending their way around tables and out again, ending at theatre. Day ahead of opening newsies distributed papers with red overprint on front page, entire staff wore smocks, berets, etc., and various windows were promoted from leading merchants.

Art department constructed miniature of studio set consisting of figures of Jack Benny, models, etc., with dressing room at one side with crepe paper curtain, through which could be seen figures of models. Cutout model was placed on pedestal with Jack Benny as the artist painting on easel. Studio was set with miniature furniture even to fringed rug on floor and "Mr. Esquire" was seated in armchair oggling figure in foreground.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Omaha, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

We often hear it said that the world is getting better and better all the while. We wonder if it is. This town of Omaha is in Douglas county and Douglas county is in Nebraska and Nebraska is in the United States, and, according to the Omaha papers, something would seem to be wrong with the management of financial affairs of Douglas county and Omaha, and these papers are demanding that the county officers resign because of inefficiency in the management of the county and city offices. It is reported that many of the public school teachers have resigned for non-payment of their salaries and many nurses of the city hospital have done likewise.

It is true that politics make strange bedfellows, and if the reports are true, some of 'em are pretty damlousy. The time was when a public office was considered a public trust, but today it is considered a private snap. Politics is politics regardless under what banner it marches.

We only mention the matter because these conditions make theatre conditions all the more bad.

We don't wish to assume the position of a pessimist, for a pessimist is next to the seven year itch, but we were talking with the state fire marshal the other day and he said he had found in his travels in the state that three families out of four had abandoned their homes and gone to other parts. We don't wish to take issue with this gentleman, but our observation in traveling the same territory convinces us that his percentage of evacuation is rather too high. Yet drouth conditions and grasshoppers have laid waste to considerable sections of Nebraska, resulting in a very drastic effect on financial conditions, especially of the theatres. This condition is true of middlewest North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma. Back east we understand they don't feel the effect, but out in this section it is very acute. It is argued that it costs the producers more to serve the independent exhibitors than they get out of it. Horseradish. If the revenue from these exhibitors should be cut off for 60 days we could all go fishing, and some of the stars could get a job digging worms for the boys. But maybe this is enough, and maybe it is like the Dutchman said that, "Too much visky is too much, but too much peer is yust enough."

Ted Mendenhall, branch manager for Paramount, is reported to be sojourning in the Methodist hospital and has become intimately acquainted with "Professor Sawbones," and it is also reported that Ted is doing nicely. We hope so, for Ted is not only a good friend of ours, but a mighty swell chap. We hoped to go out and see him, but we are not feeling 100 per cent ourself and besides that we have a chance to ride home with Mr. McQuistan of the Bloomfield theatre.

Jack McCarty of the Louisville theatre at Louisville, Neb., is the same old Jack wherever we meet him. Jack said to us, "Say, Colonel, I can't operate my theatre without the HERALD. 'Spose you have it sent to me for three years; s'pose you can?" We "s'posed" we could.

But then, Jack is only one out of several hundred fine showmen in Nebraska. Joe Swoboda of the Avalon theatre at Schuyler, Neb., is another one. We always like to meet Joe because we can always get some reliable information about the flight of geese and ducks on the Platte river. Joe said to us, "I want the HERALD for three years."

Neligh, Nebraska

Last night the Moon theatre was playing "Wife, Doctor and Nurse," with Warner Baxter, Loretta Young and Virginia Bruce. The reviewers reported this an excellent picture, and so we went and saw it.

From the title you may think it is another of those "triangle" things, but, while it has a slight symptom of the "triangle" flavor, yet it is done in a very pleasing manner. Warner Baxter as the doctor, in our judgment, never did better in his life. Loretta Young, as the doctor's wife, was superb, and Virginia Bruce, as the nurse, evidently smothered her love for the doctor in onions. It has lots of comedy situations and everything worked out nicely.

We know some people in this town who have paid their taxes every year right up to the minute, and we are pretty well acquainted with one of 'em. Then we know some other people who haven't paid any tax for 10 or 12 years. The officer will go out with a distress warrant to collect the tax, and for fear he will lose a vote, makes his return, "No property found." Then the board hikes the levy on those who pay the tax. Some more political horseradish. This county doesn't seem to be any different from some other counties in that respect. A lot of political candidates should be de-loused.

When we were a boy back in Indiana we had a wart on the side of our nose and we were very much exorcised about it until Grandma Hawkins told us how to rid rid of it. She said to take a Lima bean and split in half and rub one-half of it on the wart and then walk three times around the square and then bury it at the northwest corner of the house in the dark of the moon and it would disappear. We were just at the right age to have confidence in grandma's judgment. We tried it, but that wart must have been a politician, for it stuck to us like a candidate. That was the same time our teacher told the pupils to write a verse of poetry for the "school exhibition," but to choose our own subject, so we chose the subject of "warts" and we wrote—

You may catch cold and cough and sneeze,
And you may have ague in the fall,
Or you might have mumps and ticks and fleas,
But warts will beat 'em all.

Boy, we thought that literary gem would knock 'em in the creek, but they voted us the booby prize.

We might continue this for some little time yet, but our doctor says "Colonel, take it easy." Doggone these doggone doctors, anyway.

WITHERING LAURELS

WITH movements a-foot for the control of all of the media of expression by bureaucracies of ever more and more centralized governments—meaning dictators, near and real—a particular interest for this world of motion picture attaches to aspects of the newspaper scene.

The newspapers are, in general, not doing so well and the laurels of the august Fourth Estate are showing touches of blackspot and withering at the edges.

The newspaper situation gets little public discussion because the newspapers are the public discussers.

But the other day Mr. Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Columbia School of Journalism, made his annual report to Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Columbia president, including some of the most candid remarking on the subject that has been had. And while considering what Mr. Ackerman has to say it is well to remember that he would probably be classed as a conservative. He was a prominent practising journalist of the excellent tradition of a slightly earlier day and is perchance somewhat classified by the fact that he was elected to be the author of an authorized biography of the late George Eastman, who was, one remembers, no leftist.

Mr. Ackerman urged that journalism must emerge from industrial control, that newspaper owners must confine themselves to their business and give their editors supervision over public policies and editorial personnel. He deplored the use of the formulae of "freedom of the press" for protecting practices not consonant with publishing as publishing. He pointed to the growing distinction between the "business of publishing" and "the profession of editing."

"TODAY one of the chief complaints against the press is directed toward headlines and reporting. Newspaper publishers should read these signs of the times. Unless their professional staffs are strengthened and improved, unless salaries are commensurate with the responsibilities of the press to report public affairs accurately and fairly, unless the fundamental economic reasons for the existence of the Newspaper Guild are corrected, the internal conditions of the press will bring on external measures designed to discipline private ownership. . . ."

Mr. Ackerman was apparently too genteel to come down to the pointed fact that American journalism has been contaminated by the influences of conspicuous profit taking by racketeering in journalism and that the largest contribution in that direction came from nowhere in journalistic tradition but direct from gangster land by way of the circulation departments and presently to higher places. When smart young lynxes from the half-world rose to posts where they could suggest, then tell, editors what headlines would sell more papers the process of which Mr. Ackerman disapproves began. The new methods succeeded because players who pay no heed to the rules can often prevail. The invading spirit of newspaper circulation selling, which presently colored the whole institution, was handicapped by none of the evolved traditions of American journalism or the mores of America. Civilization often makes suckers for the uncivilized. The world is littered with bleaching bones and broken stone to prove it.

Chain operation of papers, syndication and all of the processes by which journalism became big business, rather than individually responsible one man enterprise, put participants in the convenient position of adopting any tempting procedure on the well worn plea "competition forces us to do it."

There can be observed a certain parallelism between the problems of the motion picture industry leading up to its self-regulation through the Production Code and the newspaper problems, yet but sporadically recognized and subject only remotely and slightly to the self-regulative process which Dean Ackerman seems to advise lest "internal conditions of the press will bring on external measures."

Meanwhile the motion picture industry must be aware that it has more community of interest and practical cooperative concerns with the newspaper press than any other medium of communication with the public.

CODE PUBLICITY

WITH a charming and churchly, medieval, illumined initial in red and black "the Brewers' Code of Practise" for the beer industry of the United States has been issued to the press by the United Brewers Industrial Foundation.

"We believe this is the first time that an industry has developed a code of practise after a scientific quantitative and qualitative analysis of what the public expected of the industry," says an accompanying letter from Mr. Hugh Harley of the Foundation.

The brewers code is really pretty in its missal type and rubric bedecked implications of high devotion, but after all we must rise up to suggest that when it comes to code the motion picture industry with its Production Code, and Production Code Administration, and its Code Seal, defers to no set of maltsters. The motion picture code was first, by some years.

Maybe Mr. Harley's saving clause is "after a scientific quantitative and qualitative analysis of what the public expected." But, the motion picture got an analysis, too, maybe not so scientific, but assuredly considerably quantitative and amply qualitative, on what the public did not want, and lots of it. Incidentally, the undisciplined fringes of the screen industry are now asking for some more, too.

The brewers' brave new code, by the way, in eight clauses, says in effect, "We'll try to be decent and on the level."

TAINTED DRAMA

SOMEBODY got backstage at "Victoria Regina" in Pittsburgh and recorded Miss Helen Hayes in complaint about audiences, which she thinks ought to be educated.

"They have forgotten how to respond. They don't applaud as they used to. They don't laugh. They talk."

Miss Hayes forgets that in the days of "used to" plays were addressed at the emotions, whereas more recently some of them have been tainted with attempts at processes of thought. That sometimes causes talk. Motion picture showmen know better and serve a bigger public.

This Week

Earmarking of Taxes

The proposal of Martin Davey, Ohio governor, to earmark the state's three per cent admission tax receipts for relief purposes met with opposition this week when Pete J. Wood, secretary of the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners, urged exhibitors to protest personally to legislators against the plan. Mr. Wood suggested that theatre owners speak to senators and representatives while attending the ITO convention in Columbus next week. Another important topic which will be discussed at the meeting, Mr. Wood announced, will be the matter of formulating plans to have Ohio adopt legislation similar to that enacted in Nebraska against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Financial Reports

Columbia Pictures Corporation this week announced its net profit for the quarter ended September 25, 1937, was $147,311 as compared to $129,258 for the similar quarter in 1936. At the same time, Twentieth Century-Fox claimed a new one week's revenue record for its distribution department. Despite these and other recent favorable reports, the Wall Street Journal stated "some concern is felt over reports of a 10 per cent to 20 per cent drop in box office receipts in October."

The week's financial news is incorporated in a story on page 17.

Standard Nomenclature

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences issued a bulletin to 17,000 theatres this week, in U. S., Canada and Alaska, listing the newly adopted standard names for the various types of release print sound tracks. The standard nomenclature was adopted, the council announced, to prevent confusion and misunderstanding in the handling of the various types of sound tracks. The bulletin also includes a paper on "Procedure for Projecting 'Hi-Range' Prints in the Theatre" and contains "Standard Fader Setting Instructions."

Additional details on the bulletin are included in an article on page 50.

Dinner for Blank

More than 300 notables of production, distribution, exhibition and of the political world will gather on December 9th at the Hotel Fort Des Moines, Des Moines, to honor the 25th anniversary of A. H. Blank, midwest circuit operator. Elaborate plans are being made for the fete.

Censors Reversed

The Pennsylvania state board of censors has lost two consecutive decisions banning films favorable to the Spanish loyalist cause. Condemnation of "The Spanish Earth" was removed reluctantly by Governor George Earle last month and now a state court has reversed the board's decision against "Spain in Flames" on the ground that to suppress this picture of "current events" would be equivalent to suppressing the right of free speech.

The censors' contention that the film is propaganda to encourage enlistment in the loyalist army was held immaterial.

Paint Peels off

The atmosphere of unity of British film interests regarding the Film Bill has been riddled by differences over several issues. Producers are split over the separate quota proposal, and the John Maxwell-Ostrer interests have disowned it publicly. Nor has the reciprocity proposal pleased these interests. Labor groups favor it within the Empire, but not for foreign territories.

These and other developments in the United Kingdom are discussed on page 56.

Legislation

It was indicated by reports from Washington that the federal admissions tax will be retained and that it and other so called nuisance levies will be made permanent. Elsewhere, Georgia faces new admission taxes, Governor Davey of Ohio proposed the Ohio admission tax receipts be ear-marked for unemployment relief. Governor Allred of Texas pushed his special tax bills and the new sales tax payment became effective in Kansas. Sunday shows received setbacks in communities of Vermont, Tennessee and Georgia and gained one in Iowa.

Tax legislation and Sunday "blue laws" recapitulation is on page 16.

Tax Obstacle

Tax liabilities entailed by the Samuel Goldwyn-Alexander Korda agreement for the exercise of options to purchase the outstanding three fifths of United Artists capital stock may necessitate changes in the agreement before its final acceptance. Experts are studying that part of the contract which specifies that no dividend be paid on the common stock until the $6,000,000 obligation accruing from the exercise of the option has been liquidated.

Financial details are explained on page 46.

Reforms in Canada

Machinery for establishing a "fair trade practice" conciliation group was placed in motion in Canada this week after 65 independent Quebec exhibitors submitted a petition to the government, urging an investigation into film trade practices. During the week in United States, there were several developments in legal actions involving trade practices. They included the dismissal of the Gary Theatre Company's clearance complaint against Balaban & Katz of Chicago, and the instituting of a test case in New York to determine whether Paramount should have delivered the picture, "Artists and Models," during the 1936-37 season.

Details of these and other trade practice developments are part of a story on page 15.

German Exhibition

A sharp trend toward concentration of theatre ownership and operation is becoming noticeable in Germany, says Joachim K. Rutenberg, writing from Berlin. The 5,302 cinemas, one-half of which operate daily, are in the hands of 3,496 operators, companies or individuals. The largest single holder, Ufa, has 110 houses. At the same time a definite increase in attendance and income is noted.

The article is on page 45.

Erpi Moves

Western Electric-American Telephone Company's sale of their Electrical Research Products theatre sound reproducing installation, servicing and accessories divisions to a Wall Street group headed by Roswell C. Tripp and Howard P. Engels is being concluded this week in New York.

Whitford Drake, Erpi president, recently returned from Europe, now is sitting in on the consummation for his company. He will retain his Erpi post, with the Telephone interests, which will continue to maintain the Erpi company to hold theatre reproducing and sound recording rights now leased under franchise.

C. W. Bunn, Erpi general sales manager, is no longer with the company, reportedly having in mind a possible new national string of theatre supply stores.

L. W. Conrow, Bert Sanford, Jr., and George Carrington will manage the new Tripp-Engels servicing company, setting up eight main divisions throughout the country, operating smaller branches in each division. Mr. Conrow will be the president.

Red Kann Scooped

Maurice (Red) Kann, indefatigable reporter and editor of Motion Picture Daily, was so preoccupied this week in pursuit of his craft that he was scooped by the Hollywood Reporter, which presented an announcement that he was to join Box Office, regional publications, January 1st. Mr. Kann, who began his journalistic career with Film Daily under the editorship of the late Joseph Dannenberg, has for six years been the editor of Motion Picture Daily under the supervision of Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS, including MOTION PICTURE HERALD, Motion Picture Almanac, Fame and Teatro Al Dia.

Lottery Films Hit

Governor Huxman of Kansas asked Mae Clausen, chairman of State Board of Review, on Wednesday to delete newsreel pictures of Irish lottery winners, saying such pictures tend to promote a racket of selling sweepstakes tickets. The action followed many complaints, said the Governor, who qualified his request by adding: "If your board feels you have the authority to bar these newsreel pictures." The Kansas censor law specifically denies the board jurisdiction over newsreels, a fact which Miss Clausen will include in her answer to the Governor. Film men object to this typical concentration of criticism on motion pictures to the exclusion of other agencies, in this case newspapers and radios devoting much more attention to the sweepstakes.

"Gossipers" Warned

Further flaunting of the tenets of decency by "film gossipers" will be met with "swift and stern action," Darryl Zanuck, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, warned the air columnists this week. The association is keeping a sharp vigilance over the remarks of the commentators, Mr. Zanuck declared.

Magnificent Complaint

John T. McCutcheon, celebrated page one cartoonist of the Chicago Tribune these many, many years, last week got full of the indignation of the Chicago spirit and civic pride and made a drawing concerning "the super film" "Hurricane" in which he had the motion picture industry, personified as a doorman, saying to Chicago, "Sorry, Mr. Hick, but you'll have to wait six weeks to see this film—Christmas day is your first showing."

United Artists Corporation, and probably Mr. Goldwyn, were pleased with the inferential accolade. What Mr. McCutcheon had in mind seems more likely a thrust at the B. & K. theatre management which, having bought the pictures, plays them when ready. In any event "Hurricane" has achieved the best motion picture publicity break of many years in Chicago.

Meanwhile it is to be observed that with about equal logic New York's press might crusade because many pictures play Stamford up in Connecticut before they reach Broadway.

Sherman Cleared

Echoes of old New York projectionist politics were heard Wednesday when Harry Sherman, a former president of Local 306, Motion Picture Machine Operators Union, was cleared of charges of theft of $150,961 of union funds. An indictment, handed up in May, 1936, was dismissed by James G. Wallace, general sessions judge, with the consent of Frederic A. Sperling.

Kent Drive Record

Exciting figures emerge for the fifteenth week of the "Kent Drive" of the 20th Century-Fox sales organization, as of November 27, when the adding machines in the New York home office clicked off a total of approximately $1,800,000. This is reputed, among the statistically minded experts of the industry, as something in the region of an all time high in such activities. The previous record, held by another company, is remembered as about $1,530,000.

The Mayer Contract

Hollywood heard this week that Louis B. Mayer will receive a new long-term contract as studio head at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The pact it was said will assure him augmented authority over MGM production. Although official announcement of the new contract has not been forthcoming it is understood that details have been worked out to the entire satisfaction of both Mr. Mayer and Nicholas M. Schenck, president. Mr. Mayer's present contract expires next year.

This Week

ON New Year's day Nate J. Blumberg (above) will succeed Robert H. Cochrane as president of Universal Pictures. He is at present general manager of RKO theatre operations. Under him in the new regime will be William A. Scully, right, as general sales manager and Lou Weinberg, left, as divisional sales manager. Mr. Scully, who will succeed James R. Grainger, is now eastern district manager for MGM. Announcement of the changes is on page 13.

HOLLYWOOD WARNS "AIR GOSSIPERS" ON FLAUNTING TENETS OF DECENCY

Zanuck Declares Fox Prepared to Employ "Swift and Stern" ActionAgainstCommentators; Identification Cards Issued

The motion picture industry's first open attack against the radio "news gossipers," who, of late, have been plaguing Hollywood pictures and personalities, came this week when Darryl Zanuck, production chief of Twentieth Century-Fox and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, warned that his company and most producers are prepared to take "swift and stern action" should commentators "further flaunt the tenets of decency."

The Producers Association, Hollywood affiliate of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, also began the issuance of credential cards to 30 air columnists and their assistants after a discussion, some time ago, on possible means of regulating activities of the air columnists.

Although it was generally believed Mr. Zanuck was speaking for the Producers Association, H. M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, issued a statement on Tuesday declaring that the Twentieth Century-Fox head was not speaking for the Association nor the Warner organization.

"If it is ever necessary for this company to issue any opinions, we will do so on our own behalf and under our own name," Mr. Warner said.

When informed of the Warner statement, Mr. Zanuck retaliated with a challenge to the Warner executive:

"I am the executive Warner must have referred to in his statement about my criticism of air commentators who make unwarranted attacks on the screen industry and its people. I voiced my personal opinion and that of the company with which I am associated I venture also to suggest that I spoke the sentiments of most producers and of constructive thinking people both within the industry and outside. I now ask Warner if he favors those people antagonistic to our industry. Let him say what he thinks of those unwarranted attacks on Hollywood and its individuals."

Cecil B. De Mille, Paramount producer, later said radio gossips "are preying on defenseless people and poisoning the public mind."

Although the Columbia Broadcasting System announced the furor over "gossipers" was not involved, Lloyd Pantages, air columnist, was dropped from the network after broadcasting under the sponsorship of Raymonds, Inc., since October 17th.

Meanwhile, organized exhibitor complaints continued to pile up against wholesale star broadcasts and producer-sponsored radio shows.

In his original statement, believed, at the time, to be the stand of the Hays Producers Association, Mr. Zanuck declared:

"We are keeping a sharp vigilance over the remarks of Hollywood air 'gossipers' and will immediately move should they further flaunt the tenets of decency. Hollywood today is the most interesting news center in the whole world. The public makes the stars by its personal interest in them and it follows, therefore, that the public prefers to hear good things about them."

He continued by pointing out that there are more interesting and constructive facts and stories about stars than of any other kind. He added that thoughtlessness is probably responsible for the current trouble with commentators.

"The motion picture producers have every confidence in the radio commentators and their sponsors," Mr. Zanuck said. "They both are prompted by a desire to promote the sale of their products—but we are sure they do not want to accomplish this at the expense of an industry which brings entertainment and happiness to countless of millions throughout the world.

"With this viewpoint we expect the situation to be remedied."

Resemble Newspaper Cards

The cards issued by the MPPA will serve as a means of identification, and are similar to those issued to accredited newspaper correspondents, Tom S. Pettery, press contact man for the association, announced. The cards were accompanied by letters pointing out that the credentials would in no way admit bearers to previews.

Removal of Mr. Pantages' program, CBS announced, was caused by differences between the sponsor and the agency handling the account, the Weiberg Advertising Company of California.

Warren Stokes, radio commentator on KEHE, took issue this week with George Jessel, who claimed credit recently for launching a drive against radio columnists who attack film personalities. Mr. Stokes, who presents four programs a week, declared over the air Sunday that he had started the campaign 40 weeks ago.

Two Hearst papers in Los Angeles, the Examiner and the Herald-Express, are engaged in an editorial campaign against radio columnists.

In the exhibitors' field, the opposition to producer-sponsored radio programs is led by the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors. In a letter to Motion Picture Daily, Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied, pointed out:

"Recent developments in radio are so menacing to the motion picture business that I am surprised they received so little attention. Consider the facts in the form of a problem in first year economics:

"The producers are engaged in making motion pictures which cost a lot of money. They hope to get back this money and more from admissions paid in at theatre box offices. To insure the success of the enterprise, the producers lend their support to a rival form of entertainment which encourages the public to remain away from the theatre. Point out the fallacy.

"That is one aspect of the problem. Our second problem is directed to a class in psychiatry:

"Motion pictures are visual entertainment and the industry has spent hundreds of millions in developing pictures to their present perfection. The stars who have been developed in the process are the industry's chief asset. They retain their popularity because they appear only a few times a year and always to the best advantage. To perpetuate their popularity and value the industry encourages them to perform in a different medium in which their main talents cannot be utilized and with poorly written scripts of badly chosen excerpts from current pictures."

Cites Organization Efforts

Mr. Myers addressed his third problem to "the class in elementary logic." He explained that to quiet reports of scandals in Hollywood the industry "set up a vast and expensive organization." "Radio commentators," he continued, "are making a living by broadcasting all the smut and scandal concerning Hollywood and the players that they can unearth or imagine."

To discourage this, Mr. Myers added, the industry permits its stars to appear on the programs of the commentators, thus heightening the interest in them. In conclusion he wrote:

"Viewing the subject from every angle, I can see only one possible justification for the course that the motion picture industry is pursuing. It must be that the chief executives have concluded that pictures will inevitably lose out in their competition with radio and that the smart thing to do is to get in on the ground floor of the new business."

Allied's attack on the union of the radio and motion picture industries was along another channel, too. In a satirical script on Metro Goldwyn Mayer's radio program "Good News of 1938," the association referred to exhibitors "as the forgotten men of the movies."

Radio programs were discussed this week when joint committees of Allied of New Jersey and the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York met.

Government Estimates Radio Cost Public $891,000,000 Last Year

The electrical division estimated that the number of homes equipped with radios increased from 22,869,000 to 24,500,000 during the year and that the number of homes with two or more sets rose from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000. Automobile radios also increased, going from 3,000,000 to 4,500,000.

NATE BLUMBERG NEW PRESIDENT OF UNIVERSAL IN AN ABRUPT UPHEAVAL

Scully Succeeds Grainger as General Sales Manager; Cochrane Challenges Legality of His Replacement

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

In 1913, when there was a battle in Universal, the books and great seal of the corporation were thrown out the window. This week they threw the president.

In the 25 years between, the company has moved from 1660 Broadway, on the sixth floor, to the RCA Building in Rockefeller Center, this time on the twelfth floor. This made the excitement twice as high—and with dramatic elements surpassing all prior chapters in the history of this, the oldest of the surviving corporate entities of the industry.

Tuesday, after some weeks of deeply submerged rumblings, the news erupted with a spectacular abruptness that surprised even blasé Broadway. It was that the controlling-ownership interests held or represented by John Cheever Cowdin and his Standard Capital Company in Universal Pictures Corporation have replaced Robert Harvey Cochrane with Nathan Jerome Blumberg, as president, and James Ross Grainger with William Augustine Scully, as general sales manager.

It was only the third major upset in Universal management in 25 years, but the second in 20 months, since Mr. Cowdin on March 14th, 1936, purchased the company from Carl Laemmle for $5,500,000. And when the Cowdin-controlled Universal directorate arose from the formalities of ratification, late Tuesday afternoon, in the corporation's boardroom in Rockefeller Center, the situation stood about as follows:

Robert H. Cochrane, president under the 20-month Cowdin regime, had been named chairman of Universal's executive committee instead, but had not indicated acceptance, and challenged the legality of his replacement as president.

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman, and Universal's board ratified a five-year contract with Nathan (Nate) Blumberg as president, effective January 1, 1938, when Mr. Blumberg will leave his present position of vice-president and general manager of theatre operations for Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation. He will have Matthew Fox as his assistant, Mr. Fox coming from Skouras Theatres.

William A. Scully had received the appointment of Universal general sales managership, coming from a 19-year sales association with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and its predecessors, and succeeding the always-traveling "Jimmy" Grainger, who has served Universal since 1933. Mr. Grainger's contract with Universal, which will not expire until July, 1938, will be settled by the company for cash. He may enter production, or accept one of two major-company general salesmanagerships reputedly offered him.

Universal's executive sales personnel also has been augmented by the acquisition of Louis Weinberg, presently Columbia Pictures circuit sales manager, and who will serve Universal as western sales manager, the while "U's" eastern sales manager, Frank J. A. McCarthy, continues in that position.

And while Mr. Cowdin and his new appointees were apparently proceeding under the assumption that everything was all settled in the reconstruction of operating management, word to the contrary—insofar as Robert Cochrane is concerned—came from Mr. Cochrane's attorney, Saul Edwin Rogers, New York film lawyer. Mr. Rogers issued the following statement to the press:

"It is Mr. Cochrane's preference to issue no personal statement concerning the new management of the company at present.

"In his behalf and as his attorney, however, I desire to state that the negotiations in connection with engaging the services of Mr. Nate Blumberg and Mr. William Scully were carried on and consummated entirely without his knowledge and, naturally, came to him as a great shock and surprise. It was not until he was present at the board meeting today (Tuesday, November 30th), that he was apprised for the first time of the terms and conditions of their respective proposed contracts.

"I regard the action taken today by the respective boards superseding Mr. Blumberg as president in the stead of Mr. Cochrane as without authority and illegal and, in addition thereto, bad from a business point of view.

"Thirty years of the kind of executive experience in this industry that has been acquired by Mr. Cochrane cannot be disregarded by the gesture of a board, particularly at a time when the company is in great need of the guidance of such mature experience. Mr. Cochrane's contract is unimpaired and in full force and effect and he is prepared to render his services in accordance therewith. His future course of conduct will depend entirely upon the policy and attitude of the new management."

Not disclosed by Mr. Rogers was that the five-year contract held by Mr. Cochrane, as of April 1, 1936, when Mr. Cowdin took control from the Laemmles, still has nearly three and one-half years to run, a period of approximately 182 weeks, which, under its terms of $1,700 salary per week, fixes its remaining value to Mr. Cochrane at about $319,400 on the face.

The Cowdin offer of a new 10-year contract to Mr. Cochrane to serve as chairman of the executive committee, would, it is understood, provide for a salary spreading out over the entire ten years the amount which Mr. Cochrane would receive under his present 3½-year agreement. Obviously, then, it would call for a weekly salary of approximately $600, as against the $1,700 weekly under the existing agreement. The actual offer was made by D. M. Schaefer, Universal board member, a Pennsylvania Railroad executive.

Cowdin Continues as Chairman

Mr. Cowdin, who asserts he is the senior executive of the company, apparently stepped out from the chairmanship of the executive committee to provide that position for Mr. Cochrane. Mr. Cowdin, of course, will continue as chairman of the board.

Apprised of Mr. Cochrane's challenge of the board's action, Mr. Cowdin said Tuesday evening that the board voted the replacement, that it had voted the presidential title to Mr. Blumberg as of January 1st, and, in the interim, the post is held to be vacant, the company operating without a president for the remaining 31 days.

What with Mr. Cochrane's Universal stock ownership, together with that of Mrs. Cochrane, he is one of the largest owners of the company, holding some 20 per cent. Furthermore, the general impression exists that the interests of Electrical Research Products and of Eastman Kodak Company, in Universal, and established through loans and credits to the corporation, against actual stock, were actually brought in by Mr. Cochrane. The attitude of Erpi and Eastman in the new move is unknown. On the other side stand the Woolf-British 30% and the Cowdin Standard-Capital less-than-20% holdings in Universal.

"No Further Changes"

The future in Universal of Philip Dakin Cochrane, brother of R. H., has not been mentioned, save in the generalization of Mr. Cowdin, on Tuesday, that, "emphatically, there will be no further changes in the company." P. D. Cochrane has been with Universal some 23 years, supervising all advertising, publicity and exploitation and variously handling other executive matters.

Besides Mr. Cowdin, board chairman, and Charles Rogers, executive vice-president, the executive personnel of Universal presently is constructed as follows: Willard S. McKay, vice-president and chief company counsel; Charles B. Paine, secretary and treasurer; Eugene Walsh and William Koenig, assistant treasurers; Henry E. Hughes and E. E. Muhl,

JOHN O'CONNOR MAY SUCCEED BLUMBERG

John J. O'Connor, chief film buyer for the RKO circuit nationally, has been recommended to succeed Nate J. Blumberg as operating head of the circuit. Mr. O'Connor has been associated with RKO for several years. The appointment rests with Leo Spitz, president of the company, who is now in California.

No permanent successor has been named to replace William A. Scully, eastern sales director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; E. K. O'Shea is filling the position temporarily by appointment of William F. Rodgers, general sales manager.

IT'S SECOND UPSET IN 20 MONTHS

assistant secretaries. Virtually all have been with the company through the Laemmle regime.

Only two months ago the air was clouded with stories about Universal's finances and about impending changes in management and working personnel. Prominently mentioned was possible new financing, including the extension of C. M. Woolf's reputed 33 per cent present stock holdings in Universal. Mr. Woolf, now controlling National Film Distributors, Ltd., of London, went into the company at the time of and in conjunction with Mr. Cowdin's entrance. Mr. Woolf gained Universal stock when his National Distributors, in 1936, gave Universal cash advances on future Universal pictures to be distributed in England, and also on his purchase, at the same time, of Universal's exchange system in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Grainger's friends point out that, after serving Fox for nine years as vice-president in charge of sales, Mr. Grainger took on the same position with Universal, in 1933, when the company was grossing less than $160,000 weekly from domestic billings, and that the interim has brought sales expansions to the point where some 9,000 theatre accounts are now being served.

New Money Seen

Returning to the subject of Universal finances, it seems that the reshifting of management personnel this week is to bring new money to the company, money which, while unidentified, is said to come from a group "close to Rockefeller interests," although not necessarily Rockefeller money—which already is heavily in RKO, through Music Hall Theatre claims and whatnot, remembering that Mr. Blumberg goes to Universal from RKO.

Mr. Cowdin dismissed reportorial inquiries about "new money" in Universal with an: "All comment will be made in due course."

Regardless, Mr. Cowdin himself, and Mr. Cochrane, too, have of late talked publicly about marked improvements in Universal's business, Mr. Cowdin, two weeks ago, in New York, announcing that domestic billings during the 13 weeks ended October 30th showed an increase of some 17 per cent over the corresponding fourth quarter period in 1936. Mr. Cochrane, on October 19th, declared that an increase of $400,000 in revenue was made for the first nine months of 1937-38, as against the same period for 1936-37.

Scully Starts January 1st

Mr. Scully, like Mr. Blumberg, starts at Universal on January 1st. Salaries of both were not made known, although Mr. Blumberg is said to have stock option arrangements on as many as 5,000 common shares each year for the life of the contract. (Broadway whispers "$1,250-a-week" as his salary.)

Personnel Reduced

Evidently, no new Woolf financing was forthcoming, two months ago. But the company adopted a personnel retrenchment, dismissing a Broadway-estimated total of 150 in the home office alone. Among them was George Cochrane, brother of the Universal president, who was holding the position of eastern talent scout.

Cuts were reportedly to be made next in the sales staff, but general sales manager Grainger's objections are understood to have prevailed and the retrenchment there was called off.

At the same time, rumblings were heard of some misunderstandings over operations between various of the three main Universal chiefs: Mr. Cowdin, Mr. Cochrane and Charles R. Rogers. Many a conference was held in New York by the principals, as a result, until Mr. Rogers, returning to Universal City, on October 1st, announced that the discussions "have cleared the air of all the misunderstandings that have hitherto existed." Mr. Rogers attended the conferences in his position of executive vice-president in charge of production, which he had acquired at the time Mr. Cowdin bought out Mr. Laemmle's interests.

It was presumed then, as a result of Mr. Rogers' declaration, that the personnel retrenchment was at an end, and, more important, that the management would continue as then constructed. Even during the rumblings of misunderstandings in top executive ranks Mr. Cochrane's resignation or replacement was not mentioned once as of public record. Nor, for that matter, was Mr. Grainger's. Not even the discharge of Mr. Cochrane's brother, George, during that October retrenchment was considered to have any special significance other than its relation to the general personnel curtailment.

Earlier Offer Reported

Now, however, it seems that conversations pointing to Mr. Blumberg's acquiring a top Universal executive position, if not the presidency, have been going on secretly and actively since last August or early September, and that the matter was actually broached to him as far back as last winter, when, it is understood, Mr. Rogers submitted an offer to Mr. Blumberg direct. This was rejected, and there the matter stood, until some three months ago when, on a Hollywood visit, Mr. Blumberg again was approached, this time by "a representative of a downtown banking group," according to the Broadway description, which further explained that this "group," identity unknown, "was at one time interested in certain RKO theatre equities and had come to consider Blumberg as a likely candidate for the Universal post through his administration as RKO's general theatre operator."

The negotiations were conducted at all times directly with Mr. Cowdin since they were resumed last week in New York. They were consummated with the burning of midnight oil, at three in the morning last Saturday.

Obviously, the upset establishes the Cowdin-Rogers influence in dominance, Mr. Rogers, of course, continuing as production general, and some even believing that he will now have somewhat greater executive voice in affairs of the company, particularly in connection with the home office.

Broadway and working distribution in the field was doing considerable speculation over the equal suddenness of Mr. Grainger's removal, drawing conclusions all the way from his objections to the management's cutting sales personnel, last October, to his more recent objection to the addition of Budd Rogers, brother of Charles Rogers, to the executive sales force. Other opinion had it that Mr. Blumberg held out for his own sales appointee.

Mr. Scully's contract, for five years, is understood to carry stock options, although Mr. Weinberg's, which is for three, does not. In all cases, including the new contract of R. H. Cochrane, the papers are employment agreements and do not specify positions. (The rumor market places Mr. Scully's salary at $1,000 weekly, and Mr. Weinberg's at starting at $550 and running to $700.)

The Scully contract was ratified by Universal's board at the Tuesday meeting which also ratified Mr. Blumberg's, but the Weinberg contract remains unsigned, due, it is understood, to Mr. Weinberg's desire to await the return to New York, from Hollywood, of his present Columbia Pictures superior, Abe Montague, general sales manager.

Mr. Grainger leaves Universal immediately, the company assigning Frank J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, to his desk until Mr. Scully arrives on New Year's.

Mr. Blumberg's first appointment, made this week, was that of Matthew Fox, his brother-in-law, who will serve as his executive assistant.

Cowdin's Entrance Into "U"

The little-known story of J. Cheever Cowdin's and C. M. Woolf's purchase of the quarter-century-old Laemmle property starts with the imaginations, fanciful at the time, of a slender, ambitious youngster, one James Bulloch, whose name probably never has been mentioned in the transaction, at least publicly.

Mr. Bulloch, still under 30, son of the former London Daily Mail foreign correspondent, had been looking for a future around New York, preferably in motion pictures, after having had a taste of the films through a rather undefined job with the Richard Norton New York film importing offices handling British and Dominion films from England.

There had been repeated rumblings of the sale of Universal to one group or another continuously through 1934 and 1935, and, in the early fall of 1936, young Mr. Bulloch got the idea that the Lord Portal and C. M. Woolf interests in London would be logical purchasers. He carried the idea to them. They liked it, and shortly thereafter purchased about one-fourth of Universal for $2,000,000 part of which was advanced for pictures still to be distributed in England, and an additional $500,000 going to the company—which at the time was sorely in need of finances—for the purchase of Universal Pictures, Ltd., Universal's exchange system in the United Kingdom.

The Woolf-Portal entrance into "U" attracted J. Cheever Cowdin and Standard Capital, a stock-holding and financing company which Mr. Cowdin owns with an associate, George Newell Armsby. The two have been together in Bancamerica-Blair and a dozen other corporate and banking enterprises.

Associated with Lord Portal and Mr. Woolf in the Universal holdings are J. A. Rankin, L. W. Farrow, P. Lindenberg.

At Studio a Short Time

Soon after the deal was closed Mr. Bulloch was handed a job of one kind or another at Universal's studio. His exit therefrom was just as quiet as his entrance. Returning to New York he became a reporter for the Reuter's news agency of Europe.

One of the consummating effects of Mr. Bulloch's idea was the payment of $1,600,000 in cash by Mr. Cowdin to Carl Laemmle on the morning of March 21, 1936, to exercise a purchase option on Universal. Then, on April 3rd, 1936, when Mr. Cowdin took Laemmle's, he turned over an additional $4,000,000 in cash to "Uncle" Carl. Mr. Laemmle, in turn, is supposed to have handed $1,000,000 or so to his two children, Carl, Junior, and Carla. Then he went into retirement, where he has remained, ferrying between Hollywood and the baths in Europe.

Ironically or otherwise, Robert H. Cochrane acted for Mr. Laemmle in the sale, having his power of attorney. Also, it was generally understood at the time that Mr. Cochrane played an important part on his own in concluding the arrangements. So did Mr. Rogers, for Mr. Cowdin. Mr. Rogers had been an independent producer, distributing through Paramount Pictures.

Thus was marked another milestone in the

TRADE PRACTICES INVOLVED IN SIX SUITS; CANADA MOVES FOR 'REFORMS'

Gary Suit Is Dismissed, and Three New Actions Are Filed in New York, Philadelphia; Conciliation Court Set Up

In a week marked by a varied assortment of legal actions involving trade practices in distribution-exhibition, organized exhibition's ambitions to effect trade practice reforms marked time in the United States, but gained ground in Canada.

The courts witnessed the dismissal of the Gary Theatre Company's "unfair" clearance complaint against Balaban & Katz and majors, filing of suits in Newark, New York and Philadelphia by independents for non, or retarded, film deliveries, and the resumption of deposition-taking in the Morse & Rothenberg New England suit against circuits and distributors. Too, distributors were drafting their appeal from the Dallas trust decision in the interstate case, and in Indianapolis the pending suit of an independent against majors moved to permit the company, Indianapolis Amusements, to submit records to the defendants.

Loss of ground in developing a possible trade practice "reform" program in the United States came this week when Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, was compelled to postpone his presence, until after New Year's, at the proposed "peace" conference with Allied States and New York's ITOA to formulate plans for unified exhibitor organization action to compel distributors to adopt a trade practice program.

Action in Canada

In Canada, machinery for establishing a "fair trade practice" conciliation group was placed in motion, following the presentation of a petition signed by 65 independent Quebec exhibitors and submitted to Premier Maurice Duplessis of the Quebec Provincial Government, urging an investigation into film trade practices.

Immediately, a move was made in Toronto to set up a committee of conciliation, representing all branches of the Dominion's industry, for the purpose of hearing all grievances of theatre owners and studying the procedures of the business with a view to straightening out differences, such as arbitration practices, block booking, subsequent run clearances, score charges and other matters.

One angle that encouraged the step toward the formation of the committee was the fact that four representatives of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario joined with the independents of the Province of Quebec in placing the petition before the Quebec premier, the cooperation of the organized owners in Ontario being assured.

Aims Outlined

The committee has already held a preliminary meeting at which the aims and objects of the conciliatory board were generally outlined. Those comprising the committee are: N. A. Taylor, representing the Exhibitors' Booking Association; H. Freedman, president of the Independent Theatres Association; L. M. Devaney, general manager of Radio Pictures Corporation of Canada; Clair Hague, Canadian representative of Universal; Clarence Robson, division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corporation; H. T. Long, general manager of Associated Theatres, Ltd.; S. Fine of Bloom and Fine, Ltd., a subsidiary of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, and H. Allen of Premier Operating Corporation, which controls a group of theatres in Ontario. All of these officials are Toronto men, with two representing the Canadian film distributors.

The campaign in Quebec is being sponsored by the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries, of which the secretary is D. A. Burpee, theatre owner. Considerable importance is attached to the fact that the independents of both provinces have lined up with an apparent degree of solidity and also that the creation of a committee at Toronto would have considerable effect on the situation in Quebec as well as in Ontario because of the industrial leadership in Toronto.

Theatre's Complaint Dismissed

The Gary Theatre's complaint was dismissed by Robert C. Baltzell, federal judge in Indianapolis, on petition of the plaintiff who made the motion "because defendants presented the fact that B & K was not served and is not amenable to process in this district."

At the same time, the theatre company indicated it would institute a new proceeding in a court in which jurisdiction over B & K could be acquired. The Gary company had sought to enjoin distributors from enforcing clearance schedules alleged to have been drafted in favor of Balaban and Katz.

The two actions instituted over delivery of films were filed by the Newark Amusement Company, Inc., operators of the Rivoli, Newark, against Paramount Pictures in New York supreme court, and by the Garbo Amusement Company against RKO, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox, and Warner Brothers in United States district court, Philadelphia.

The Newark company announced it is seeking to determine whether Paramount should have released "Artists and Models" during the season ended July 31st, 1937. The plaintiff will ask Peter Schmuck, justice, on Monday to appoint an arbitrator.

The Garbo company, operating the Garbo Theatre, in Darby, a suburb of Philadelphia, instituted an injunction suit to obtain faster delivery of films. Quicker delivery is necessary, Melvin Koff, president, said, because the Parker, a Warner Brothers house, obtains films three or four weeks ahead of the Garbo. Mr. Koff said he had signed an agreement with distributors allowing for a time lapse but said he is seeking to have the agreement invalidated because it has been found to be unfair.

Quemos Theatre Company is plaintiff in an anti-trust action started in Newark against 42 defendants, all of whom are companies or individuals associated with Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, United Artists, Columbia, RKO, Loew's, Universal and Grand National.

The plaintiff seeks actual damages of $1,175,000, but the sum is tripled under the Clayton act. The company charges it was unable to operate the Mosque Theatre, Newark, because the defendants conspired to keep the house from presenting first or second run pictures.

The taking of deposition in the anti-trust action of the Morse & Rothenberg circuit against major distributors, Maine & New Hampshire and M. A. Shea circuits, was resumed in New York Tuesday by George S. Ryan, attorney for the plaintiff. The action is for $800,000 damages, which are tripled in anti-trust suits in the event judgment is awarded the plaintiff.

Leon Netter, Paramount theatre executive, was questioned by Mr. Ryan on Tuesday concerning film franchises made by Paramount theatre companies during the last ten years.

Paramount filed a supplementary memorandum in United States district court, Indianapolis, Tuesday, in the case brought against it by Gary Theatre Company to force delivery of ten pictures reputedly included in last season's contract. Granting of a temporary injunction in the case, Paramount stated, would harm exhibitors who are not parties to the action.

It was also in New York that distributors started the drafting of papers for the appeal from the Dallas Federal court decision finding that major distributors conspired with Interstate Circuit in the making of contracts which tended to regulate admission prices in subsequent runs.

Thomas D. Thacher, former United States silicitor general, will have charge of the appeal. George Wright, defendants' counsel at Dallas, and John Moroney of the Interstate Circuit, arrived in New York this week to aid Mr. Thacher in preparing for the appeal which will go directly to the United States supreme court.

Distributors named as defendants in the damage action brought by the Indianapolis Amusement Company are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, United Artists, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal, Vitagraph and Educational. The amusement company seeks to reply to the defendants' questions by submitting its books rather than by giving direct answers.

KUYKENDALL UNABLE TO ATTEND MEETING

A proposed meeting of representatives of three exhibitor organizations to discuss a joint fair trade practice program was postponed this week after Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, announced he would be unable to attend a conference until after the Christmas holidays.

Mr. Kuykendall made the announcement in a telegram to Harry Brandt, head of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, who originally proposed the meeting which was to be held December 14th. The conference also was to be attended by Nathan Yamins, president of National Allied Association.

Three Pictures Banned By Brazilian Government

by L. S. MARINHO

in Rio de Janeiro

After being in exhibition for three days at the Metro theatre here, "They Gave Him a Gun," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release, was withdrawn by order of the government. The picture, which had been passed by the censor board, was considered by the government to be unsuitable for public showing in view of the changed political situation here. "The Road Back," Universal, and "Sabotage," Gaumont British picture also were banned.

TAX ISSUE IN OHIO, TEXAS, KANSAS, GEORGIA, CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA

All Hope for Relief from U. S. Admission Tax Fades; Further Tax Burdens Face Exhibitors in Several Cities and States

Tax legislation and Sunday "blue laws" developments continued to be a matter of concern to exhibitors this week.

From Washington reports indicated that the federal admissions tax will be retained and that it and other so-called nuisance levies will be made permanent.

Governor Martin Davey of Ohio proposed the admission tax receipts for Ohio be earmarked for unemployment relief.

Governor James Allred of Texas determined to force his special tax bills through an extra session of the legislature.

Georgia faces a new admissions levy.

The new sales tax payment schedule became effective in Kansas, December 1st.

Other tax developments were recorded in Chicago, St. Louis, Madison, Cushing, Okla.; Philadelphia and St. Paul.

Sunday shows received setbacks in Vermont, in Jackson, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga., and were approved in Ireton, Iowa.

The House Ways and Means Tax Sub-Committee met to consider what, if any, changes should be made in the federal admissions tax and other socalled nuisance levies and whether the taxes should be made a part of the permanent Revenue Law. The sub-committee, considering all phases of the tax situation, is preparing to write a comprehensive revision of the present statute for introduction in Congress at the beginning of the regular session.

Should the present admissions and nuisance taxes be made permanent the effect of such action would be to relieve Congress of the necessity of extending the life of the taxes every so often, and it would offer no barrier to their repeal at any time the administration felt they no longer were necessary.

Proposes "Earmarking"

Governor Davey proposed earmarking of Ohio's admission tax receipts for unemployment relief in his call message for a special session of the legislature, which convened on Monday.

Ohio exhibitors immediately started organizing a move to oppose the proposal on the ground that it would permit the legislature to increase the present three per cent tax rate from time to time as relief needs required. Fear that the rate may ultimately be advanced to the old 12 per cent tax level was expressed by P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in a bulletin urging exhibitors to attend the organization's regional conference in Columbus, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, at which time plans will be completed for opposing the change in the admission tax provisions.

The ITO bulletin also said that the organization will launch a move at the conference to introduce anti-ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers) legislation in Ohio "similar to that enacted in Nebraska." An injunction restraining Nebraska from enforcing its anti-ASCAP legislation was issued by a federal statutory court recently.

The special tax bills that Governor Allred of Texas seeks to force through an extra session of the state legislature propose to place a 10 per cent state tax on theatre admissions over 25 cents. This will be in addition to a first 10 per cent state tax on admissions over 50 cents and a federal tax of 10 per cent on admissions over 40 cents.

Kansas Tax Schedule

The Kansas tax schedule that became effective December 1st provides: 0 to two cents, no tax; three to seven cents, one mill; eight to 12 cents, two mills; 13 to 17 cents, three mills; 18 to 22 cents, four mills, etc. One mill tokens have been issued to make the new schedule possible.

Chicago exhibitors are faced with a three per cent tax on gross receipts in place of the present license fee if measures proposed by Alderman Roger Riley and Deputy City Collector George Lohman are approved by the City Council as a means of obtaining $1,000,000 in revenue instead of the $130,000 which is now received from license fees on theatres.

At a session last summer the council considered a plan for a similar tax but the idea was abandoned. Since then numerous plans have been discussed but none has been decided upon.

The legislative committee of the St. Louis board of aldermen is expected to reject the proposed revenue raising bill providing for a general amusement tax.

Would Reenact Old License

In Madison, Wis., an attempt is being made to reenact the old theatre ordinance which provides for higher annual license fees.

Under the proposed measure, vaudeville houses would be required to pay $200 a year, unless they have 1,200 or more seats, then the fee would be $300; $75 for motion picture theatres with 500 seats or less, $150 for more than 500 or less than 1,200 seats; $300 for over 1,200 seats and an additional $50 if used for shows and exhibitions other than films.

The present ordinance provides for an annual $50 fee for houses with 500 seats or less, $100 for more than 500 and less than 1,200 seats and $200 for 1,200 or more seats.

L. D. Melton, director of research of the Oklahoma Tax Commission, told members of the Oklahoma Motion Picture Theatre Owners in session at the Biltmore Hotel in Oklahoma City, recently, that the two per cent sales tax on theatre admissions had not caused any slump in attendance. He said $130,000 had been received by the commission from theatres and tent shows. Ninety per cent of this was paid by film houses, Mr. Melton said.

In the opinion of Morris Loewenstein, association president, "absorbing the tax by an exhibitor is a form of unfair competition when one exhibitor requires payment of the two per cent tax from the patron and a nearby competitor absorbs the tax."

Representative Booth in Georgia has introduced a bill to levy a tax on admission to places of amusement.

The schedule calls for a one-cent tax on 10-cent tickets, two cents on 15-cent tickets and so on with one cent additional tax provided for each additional five cents in the ticket price. The sponsor estimated the bill would yield from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 a year. Representative Booth also is sponsoring the theatre circuit tax bill now ready for final action by the Georgia House.

In a District of Columbia ruling, Assessor Fred D. Allen said the federal levy on admissions to theatres and gasoline taxes are the only excise taxes which may be deducted from the District's gross receipts tax.

April 3, 1936—Title of Carl Laemmle in Universal passes to J. Cheever Cowdin, board electing Mr. Cowdin chairman and Mr. Cochrane president.

COLUMBIA NET INCREASES; FOX FILM DISTRIBUTION UNIT CLAIMS RECORD

Columbia Reports Profits of $147,311 in Quarter; Warners Change Amortization Rates; Three Declare Dividends

Although financial reports and announcements from motion picture companies continued this week to stand up favorably against reports issued in 1936, the Wall Street Journal pointed out that "some concern, naturally, is felt over reports of a 10 per cent to 20 per cent drop in box office receipts in October."

Warner Brothers' estimate that earnings for the first quarter of the new fiscal year, the three months ending November 27th, 1937, will be in excess of $1,500,000, is somewhat less than the $2,037,946 earned in the first quarter of 1936, the Journal stated. The decrease, the newspaper continued, "is due partly to a recession in business and also probably to the adoption of a new and more drastic scale of film amortization. . . ."

On the optimistic side, however, were the announcements that:

Columbia Pictures Corporation and subsidiaries had a net profit of $147,311 for the quarter ended September 25, 1937, as compared to $129,258 for a similar quarter in 1936. The figure was arrived at after depreciation, amortization, federal income taxes, etc., and is equivalent, after dividend requirements on $2.75 preferred stock, to 27 cents a share on 349,468 no par shares of common stock outstanding at the end of the period.

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation claimed a new one week's revenue record for its distribution department. The company did an estimated film rental business of $1,800,000 last week which was the fifteenth and final week of the Kent Sales Drive. The company announced a dividend declaration of $1 for the final quarter of 1937 on its common stock and this, it was pointed out, brought the total dividends to $2.50 as compared to $2 last year.

The board of directors of Pathe Film Corporation declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share on the $7 convertible preferred stock, payable January 3rd to stockholders of record Dec. 23.

United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., on Tuesday declared a dividend of $1.25 on preferred stock payable December 15th to holders of record December 1st. Joseph M. Schenck and other officers were re-elected.

Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., Canadian firm, voted payment of a $1.75 dividend on the 7 per cent preferred stock. The dividend is payable December 15th.

In Columbia's financial report no provision was made for surtax on undistributed profits. The consolidated balance sheet of showed current assets including $1,308,205 the corporation and domestic subsidiaries cash, amounted to $12,719,464 and current liabilities were $2,412,742, compared with cash of $1,537,049, current assets of $10,328,761 and current liabilities of $1,459,201 on September 26th, 1936.

Total assets on September 25th, 1937, were $15,596,330 against $13,440,453 on September 26, 1936; capital surplus was $67,398 against $67,504, and earned surplus was $4,429,008 compared with $4,021,994.

The Warner Brothers new scale for film amortization writes down a larger proportion of film costs in the first two months after release. The cumulative percentage of film cost written off as compared to the former rate is shown in the following table:

| | Negatives | | Positive | Prints |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Former | Revised | Former | Revised |
| After Release | Rate | Rate | Rate | Rate |
| 4 weeks | 13 | 15 | 17 | 22 |
| 8 weeks | 32½ | 36½ | 45 | 52 |
| 13 weeks | 51½ | 53 | 74 | 75 |
| 26 weeks | 73 | 70½ | 96 | 96 |
| 30 weeks | 77 | 74 | 100 | 100 |
| 39 weeks | 84¼ | 83 | | |
| 52 weeks | 93¾ | 95 | | |
| 65 weeks | 100 | 100 | | |

The Wall Street Journal's mention of reported drops in box office receipts was made in an article on bonds. "The current recession in moving picture box office receipts, and reports that studios are curtailing operations have caused some analysts to turn their attention to the obligations of producing companies," the article stated.

"Some concern naturally is felt over reports of a 10 per cent to 20 per cent drop in box office receipts in October. It is recognized that this probably is due, in a large part, to the decline in general business activity and may be of a temporary nature depending upon the extent of the business recession. Another factor which, in the opinion of many, takes on far greater significance is the sharp increase in production costs. Because of this West Coast reports producers generally have initiated retrenchment programs. As yet, these conditions have had little influence on the bonds of major producing firms, although they have more or less followed the general trend of the market. Whether they will be adversely influenced depends, in a large measure, on the extent of the decline in box office receipts and the success which attends producers' efforts to reduce operating expenses."

In Washington, the Securities and Exchange Commission on Wednesday released its first report on the October transactions of corporation officers and directors in the securities of their companies. The report showed liquidation by Albert Warner, Warner Brothers vice-president, of his holding Company A. In the liquidation, Mr. Warner transferred to direct ownership, during the month, 5,988 shares of common and 264,000 optional 6 per cent convertible debentures.

His only direct transaction in stocks was the disposition of 800 shares of common, and, at the close of the month, he held 64,448 shares of common, 1,794,000 debentures, and 10,618 shares of preferred stock directly and 4,500 shares through holding Company B.

Disposition by transfer of 214,000 debentures was reported by Jack L. Warner, also a vice-president, whose holdings at the end of October totaled 1,288,000.

Returns filed with the SEC showed the Chase National Bank, New York, continued its liquidation of the Twentieth Century-Fox securities held under escrow agreement, disposing of 5,180 shares of preferred and 2,590 of common, and at the end of the month held 681,916 shares of preferred and 340,858 of common.

Reports of most of the motion picture companies were summarized in the SEC report, the first of two which are issued each month. Among the reports were:

exhibition's anniversary

A letter of reminiscences and pleasing memories from Mr. Charles W. Picquet enjoying the autumn sunshine down at Pinehurst brought to realization the other day that just now this industry has come to the completion of its first quarter of a century of organized exhibition.

As is to be noted in these and later news pages the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina are next week taking somewhat official notice of the anniversary period with their twenty-fifth annual convention. Presumably the principal purpose of the function is to make it convenient for the exhibitor from North Carolina to say to the exhibitor from South Carolina what they always so cordially say to each other about convention time.

Meanwhile in the genial atmosphere of the anniversary occasion it has seemed appropriate for Motion Picture Herald, which has grown up with the institution of motion picture exhibition, through more than a quarter of a century of evolutions and developments, to make this the occasion of a recording and notice for the whole field of exhibitor organization, telling again something of the adventures and achievements along the way from Then to Now.

CAROLINA EXHIBITORS CELEBRATE SILVER JUBILEE OF ORGANIZATION

First Meeting Held in Old Warehouse; Picquet To Preside at Pinehurst; Kuykendall, Vincent and Quigley To Speak

An old warehouse in Charlotte, N. C., was the setting of a meeting of motion picture theatre operators in 1913, out of which has developed The Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, Inc., which meets next week at Pinehurst to celebrate a Silver Jubilee.

Principal speakers at the twenty-fifth annual convention will be Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; Walter Vincent, Pennsylvania circuit operator and chairman of the board of directors of Republic Pictures; and Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS.

Sessions will be held at the Carolina hotel in Pinehurst, under the direction of Charles W. Picquet, president.

The organization has had only four presidents in the quarter century of its existence. At that first three-day gathering in Charlotte, the North Carolina association started with 26 members. The late Steve Lambert of Fayetteville was chosen president. He served the one year.

Percy Wells of Wilmington succeeded to the presidency, and continued in service for nine years. Mr. Wells, no longer in the motion picture business, has been at Asheville for three years, seriously ill.

The late Colonel Varner was the third president.

In 1929 exhibitors of South Carolina were invited to join their northern neighbors and the resultant organization was incorporated under the name Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina.

President, Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina

Mr. Picquet, who is now concluding his fourteenth year as president, operates the Carolina theatre at Pinehurst and the Carolina at Southern Pines. He started in the theatre business early, in fact when he was 12 years old. In the summer vacation he joined a traveling troupe which would give a concert in a town, then follow up with a week teaching music.

Away at college preparing to become a physician, he spent his summers traveling as a soloist with two Armenians who sold needles during the day and gave lectures on their homeland at night.

With long years still ahead of him before he would be able to hammer up his own shingle, the necessity of earning his way took him off on another course, singing in a New York stage production. Shortly he found himself manager and tenor of the Herald Square Opera Company.

Mr. Picquet was destined to remain in the field of entertainment, though not on the stage and not without other diversion of interest. More than two decades ago he settled at Southern Pines as a gentleman farmer, with the ambition of making a fortune with peach orchards.

Southern Pines had no motion picture theatre, and business men of the community were seized with the not uncommon idea that if they built a theatre they would deter their folk from going elsewhere for entertainment. They told Mr. Picquet they would put it up if he would operate it. He would, and did.

Southern Exhibitors Denounce Producers for Intermingling of Races in Films; Kuykendall Criticizes ASCAP at Meetings

Endorsement of a plan to seek enactment of a "Guffey Act" for the motion picture industry, criticism of indiscriminate intermingling of races in films, and opposition to producers sponsoring radio programs highlighted the conventions of exhibitors organizations during the last three months.

Ed. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was the principal speaker of several of them.

Allied of New Jersey Favors "Little NRA"

In line with its usual procedure, Allied of New Jersey did not adopt a formal resolution after Mr. Meyers spoke in favor of a "little NRA" for the industry but after the convention, September 23rd, members said the plan was favored unanimously.

Irving Dollinger of Linden was elected president at the Atlantic City convention.

Myers, Richey Speak at Pennsylvania Meeting

Mr. Myers and H. M. Richey addressed the annual two-day convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania at Hotel Schenley, Pittsburgh, October 24th and 25th.

M. A. Rosenberg was reelected president, and other officers are W. L. Brown, vice-president; Fred Herrington, secretary; Joseph Gelman, treasurer, and Carl Poke, William J. Walker and Pete Antinopolis, directors.

Wisconsin Unit Opposes Producers' Radio Shows

Opposition to producer-sponsored radio programs was voted November 3rd when the Wisconsin Independent Theatres Protective Association met in Milwaukee.

The group also endorsed the suggestion of Mr. Myers calling for a "Guffey Act" for the motion picture industry.

Connecticut Allied Names Secretary

Lawrence Caplan, New Haven attorney, was elected executive secretary of Allied Theatres of Connecticut, succeeding Joseph Kelly, former New Jersey exhibitor, who was engaged to solicit new members among independent exhibitors.

Southern Exhibitors Oppose Intermingling of Races

Indiscriminate intermingling of the black and white races in motion pictures was criticized at the 31st semi-annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, Mississippi and Tennessee at Memphis October 5th.

R. X. Williams, mayor of Oxford, Miss., was re-elected president of the organization, and Y. D. Moore, McKenzie, Tenn., was renamed secretary-treasurer.

Rocky Mountain Exhibitors Hear Ascap Denounced

Mr. Kuykendall was the principal speaker at meeting of the Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region October 31st. He denonunced American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers practices, score charges, extended runs and also announced that the Department of Justice had suggested the industry work out its own fair trade practice agreement.

Allied Meets in Texas; Studies Interstate Ruling

H. A. Cole, president of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas, led a round table discussion in Dallas this week on the recent federal court ruling in the Interstate case, affecting the independent exhibitors. He said:

"The latter part of Judge W. H. Atwell's ruling, that gave the producer the right to protect his copyright by fixing the time it might be shown as a subsequent run picture, provided there was no conspiracy to fix prices, is a matter that will bear scrutiny."

MPTOA CONCEIVED IN FIGHT OVER PRODUCER DOMINATION OF THEATRES

Launched on Stormy Seas in 1920, Followed by Meetings of Four National Groups at Cleveland

Conceived in serenity but born amid pangs of strife over independent ownership and operation of motion picture theatres, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America had three sires.

Three organizations, national at least in name, bore down upon Cleveland in June, 1920, but the steering committees were finding trouble at the other end of the reins before they could get their steeds out upon the main road.

There was Alfred S. Black, for instance. Mr. Black was president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, Inc., formed at St. Louis in 1919 as a merger of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League and the Associated Exhibitors of America. With the convention call ringing out a message that there must be no domination of theatres by producers, there came reports that Mr. Black was selling control of his Massachusetts circuit to Famous Players-Lasky Corporation (now Paramount).

Frank J. Rembusch was temporary chairman of the Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors of America, which had had its beginnings in a meeting in Chicago two months earlier, but Mr. Rembusch was also executive secretary of the budding MPTOA.

The third group was the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, temporarily formed in early 1920 by exhibitors from 32 states, in sixteen regional organizations. Sydney S. Cohen was temporary chairman, Sam Bullock secretary.

All branches of the industry were represented in a fourth organization, the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, which was to have its fourth annual convention at the same time. William A. Brady of New York was its president.

All these gentlemen, except Mr. Brady, have passed on.

On Tuesday, June 8th, began the portentous convention, the while the NAMPI met separately. EXHIBITOR'S HERALD opened its summarizing account of the proceedings:

"Defeated at every turn, the embryonic octopus of the motion picture industry—the Famous Players Corporation—dragged itself from the exhibitors' convention . . . a badly beaten factor, more than 700 exhibitors from every state in the Union having

Kuykendall Invites All Groups To Unite in Exhibitor Interest

"The need for intelligently directed exhibitor organizations becomes more essential daily, not for the purpose primarily to make war on any other phase of this industry but to coordinate the entire industry for the common good.

"Outside individuals and organizations, not to mention legislative bodies—national, state, and municipal—continue to look upon the motion picture industry for finances and, in most instances, make unfair discriminatory levies.

"Exhibitors must of course stand together fairly for protection against those who are unfair within the industry.

"There will come out of it all a really powerful national exhibitor organization composed of the worthwhile state units that are sincere in their motives. There is definitely a national unity of thought in this respect. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America invites every person in this industry, regardless of past differences, to work with us to this end."—ED KUYKENDALL, President.

registered their determination to conquer the menace.

"Adolph Zukor, head of the producing exhibiting combine, personally jumped into the breach early in the convention week and began what proved to be a hopeless fight to stem the tide of sentiment against Famous Players . . . "

Marcus Loew, with $2,000, and J. H. Kunsky, with $500, were among the first contributors to a "war chest."

Officers elected were: Sydney S. Cohen, president; C. C. Griffin, first vice-president; Joseph Hopp, Willard C. Patterson (who had organized a committee earlier in the year to bring the issue of producer-ownership to a showdown), and C. W. Gates, also vice-presidents; Sam Bullock, executive secretary; Morton M. Van Praag, financial secretary, and E. T. Peters, treasurer.

A sidelight comment off the convention floor read: "Senator Walker's (James J. Walker) Will Rogerisms pleased the crowd immensely. If oratory, ability and wit will get a man any place he won't stop at a governorship."

But at the next convention, in Minneapolis, while Mr. Walker as general counsel renewed the attack upon producer control, a movement to settle the grievances between Mr. Zukor and the MPTOA was begun when Mr. Cohen, reelected president, was empowered to name a committee to confer with Famous Players.

While these cross-currents were flowing, a committee on ways and means, headed by E. M. Fay, was placing before the convention a proposal that the exhibitors enter the field of distribution with a corporation capitalized at $15,000,000, and the suggestion was adopted. Mr. Cohen reported that several independent interests had offered their cooperation, and named Thomas H. Ince, Lewis J. Selznick, W. W. Hodkinson, Benjamin B. Hampton and the Federated Film Exchanges of America.

Reelected to offices in the MPTOA were Messrs. Cohen, Griffin, Gates, Van Praag (as recording secretary), Bullock. New vice-presidents were Joseph Mogler and C. A. Lick, and J. C. Ritter became treasurer

If the 1922 convention, in Washington, accomplished nothing whatsoever, it at least provided a round-robin of tempestuous words and charges in the fight waged in vain by Senator Walker against reelection of Mr. Cohen.

Mr. Walker had laid at the president's door his dismissal as general counsel. "The wise guy is the lobster after all," he told the convention. "The smarter a New York man thinks he is, the bigger boob he actually is." To which Mr. Cohen responded:

"They talk about Walker being stabbed in the back. My God, I have been stabbed back and front, cut across and up and down. . . . I've been on the level, gentlemen. I haven't taken a penny, not even a free poster, from the producers. I have fought your battles with my limited abilities."

Out of the drag-'m-out fight emerged the following officers: Mr. Cohen, president; Glenn Harper, vice-president; Mr. Mogler and Mr. Lick, reelected vice-president; Joseph Rhode, fourth vice-president; Mr. Van Praag, again recording secretary, and John T. Collins, treasurer.

"An impartial observer of the so-called national exhibitor's convention, held in Chicago last week would have to be exceedingly dumb if he did not come away from the proceedings with a feeling of overwhelming disgust," wrote Martin Quigley of the 1923 gathering in 1923 at the Sherman hotel.

"Backed by the inside group that have been 'sold' on the fruitful possibilities of allegiance to Cohen, he has made one valuable and important exhibitor-leader after another walk the plank—Charles L. O'Reilly, Sam Berman, James J. Walker, Theodore Hayes, Al Steffes, James C. Ritter, Willard Patterson and many others."

Returned to office with Mr. Cohen was Joseph Mogler as a vice-president. Newly elected were Martin G. Smith, Joseph A. Walsh and E. W. Collins. George P. Aarons became recording secretary and William Bender, Jr., treasurer.

An unsupported tale in a vaudeville publication to the effect that Henry Ford was backing James C. Ritter of Michigan for the MPTOA presidency in order that Mr. Ford might gain control of the screen, a canard which was greeted only as a humorless joke by the exhibitors, was made campaign fodder by Mr. Cohen from the convention platform and was bandied about in the public press.

It was at the Chicago convention that

"Fighting Al" Out-Maneouvered in Strategy to Have Ritter Replace Cohen Brought First Bolt by Insurgents in 1923

Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors was born on the convention floor of a now competitive parent, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, on Wednesday, May 23, 1923, in Chicago.

A group of MPTOA leaders had formed a "clique" to elect as president James C. Ritter of Michigan, to overthrow the long rule of Sydney S. Cohen. In that group were H. A. Cole, Texas; Fred Herrington, Missouri, and William Alvin Steffes of Minneapolis, who was already well known in exhibition organization as "Fighting Al" from the Northwest. However, they were out-maneuvered, and Sydney Cohen was returned for his fourth consecutive term. Steffes and Ritter bolted, bringing with them their state units of Minnesota and Michigan.

The fireworks did not start until some days later, when, on arriving home in Minneapolis, Mr. Steffes said: "Personally, I absolutely refuse to associate myself with an organization headed by a 'double-crosser.'"

The days were starting to shorten for single unanimity in exhibitor organization as represented up to that time in the MPTOA and, by the summer of 1923 the issue appeared to be: For or against Sydney S. Cohen as president of the MPTOA. Many felt that if Sydney Cohen had come forward then with an offer to step out of control of the MPTOA, harmony would have been achieved within 24 hours. But Mr. Cohen declined to withdraw. Michigan and Minnesota returned their charters, North Carolina withdrew, headed by H. B. Varner, and Illinois set about to sever relations.

In October, 1923, a "strange coincidence" found leaders of Minnesota, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana, supposedly acting independently of each other, sending out "feelers" for a conference in the midwest to form a "new theatre owners' league."

At about the same time, a second move was made, in Washington, to establish "a national cooperative exhibitor organization, free from all internal politics." Attending that meeting were the MPTOs of Virginia and the District of Columbia, led by Harry Crandall and Jake Wells.

The Jake Wells-Harry Crandall plan for an independent national exhibitor association finally took root in the winter of 1923, representing the forerunner of the present national Allied. It was called the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Alliance.

Within a week, Mr. Wells was found among those present at French Lick, Ind., when Steffes leaders held "the largest meeting ever staged in organized exhibition" since the formation of the MPTOA. Mr. Steffes and Mr. Ritter also succeeded in bringing to French Lick such outstanding chiefs as Joseph Denniston, Michigan; Ludwig Seigel, Illinois; H. A. Cole, Texas; H. B. Varner, North Carolina; Harry Crandall, District of Columbia; R. G. Liggett, Kansas; Gus Schmidt, Indiana, and S. A. Handy, Kansas. A formal organization was not completed, but they did agree on joint action against federal admission taxes, working through Wells' Exhibitors' Alliance.

Without waiting for the MPTOA 1924 summer Boston convention, at which, Mr. Cohen promised, his resignation would be forthcoming, for harmony, the Steffes-Richey and Wells-Crandall groups met in April, in Chicago, at the Congress Hotel, and formally established Allied State Organizations of Motion Picture Theatre Owners, later to be changed to Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors.

At first, Allied activities were governed by a board of directors composed of the presidents of each of the state member organizations. A new chairman was to be appointed every 60 days.

Al Steffes was the first person to hold office in Allied. He was elected at the Chicago conference to serve as first 60-day-chairman. Henderson M. Richey, business manager of Michigan, was elected national Allied secretary. Voting their affiliation were H. A. Cole, president, MPTO of Texas; R. R. Biechele, president MPTO of Kansas; James C. Ritter, past-president, Michigan; Joseph Denniston, president, Michigan; William (Billy) Connors and Frank J. Rembusch, Indiana; Ludwig Siegel and Glenn Reynolds, Illinois; H. B. Varner, North Carolina, besides Mr. Steffes, Mr. Wells and Mr. Crandall.

The first "activity" of Allied on record was instigated at that first meeting in Chicago, for unified action on repeal of the federal admission tax.

Even then attempts continued to reunite the two conflicting national groups, Charles L. O'Reilly, president of the New York Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce proving a leading spirit in the move. Colonel Cole, himself one of the Allied "insurgents," made a similar attempt. So did Eli Whitney Collins of Arkansas. All the while insiders of the MPTOA were naming "peacemakers" as likely candidates to succeed Sydney Cohen as MPTOA president, thus removing the insurgents' objection. Some of the early candidates advanced in this connection were Mike Comerford, R. F. (Pete) Woodhull, among others. A Comerford man, Mike O'Toole, got the post, however, when the MPTOA met in Boston that May. But, even then, peace was not made.

On May 15, 1924, the first Allied-tinged attack on major distributor "aggressions," so-called, came from the direction of Allied-chief Steffes, in Minneapolis, who hit at "excessive" film rentals charged by distributors.

And in June of the same year Allied and MPTOA first locked horns in public when they both took credit for obtaining relief from the federal admission tax. Similar conflicting claims of credit for securing national exhibitor benefits have been heard down through the years ever since.

At about the same time, Allied elected its first board of directors, comprising Mr.

Steffes, as chairman, and A. A. Kaplan, Minnesota; H. A. Cole, Texas; H. B. Varner, North Carolina; Claude E. Cady Michigan, and H. M. Richey, Michigan, as secretary.

National Allied leaders in attendance at North Carolina, June 11, 1924, reelected Al Steffes to continue as chairman of the national board. Allied still had no president as such.

Mr. Steffes at that time estimated that $250,000 annually is necessary to run a successful national exhibitor organization.

Allied grew, winning over some 15 states by the end of 1924, when Mr. Steffes envisioned the disbandment both of Allied and MPTOA and the formation of an exhibitor organization patterned after the federal government. This idea died aborning.

The Hotel Kansas, in Topeka, Kan., witnessed the first annual convention of national Allied, on September 22 and 23, 1924. Mr. Steffes was unanimously elected board chairman for a full year, instead of 60 days.

New blood was then noticeable in Allied. S. W. Neall was on hand from Indiana, Jack Miller from Chicago, Charles Nathan, from Illinois, among others. Mr. Biechele was voted to serve as Allied's first emissary to the distributors to talk over Allied's demands for a "new deal." He was appointed to meet with Will Hays on the subject of a uniform contract. They never met.

On January 27, 1925, another sign pointed to present-day Allied attitudes on trade problems, when Allied in Michigan launched what was later to develop into a national Allied campaign against so-called "compulsory" block booking and blind buying.

The first realignment of Allied with the MPTOA, shortlived, as it was, came unexpectedly when Mr. Steffes led a delegation of Alliedites into an MPTOA convention hall in Milwaukee, May 13, 1925. All were in agreement, along with some independent distributors, on a "war to the finish" against major circuits and affiliated distributors. Some $400,000 was pledged as a "war chest." Carl Laemmle led the distributors.

Then MPTOA, still under Sydney Cohen's behind-the-scenes domination, put in a new directorate with but scant recognition to Allied, giving the Steffes unit only two places on the board. Before the convention was over the new union split, and although the differences were, eventually, patched up, the two never buried the hatchet.

Subsequent meetings that year between the joint groups resulted almost always in personality battles, with Steffes, Cohen, O'Toole, Comerford, Cole, Wells and Glenn Cross, of Michigan, in the front trenches.

Believing that a "uniform contract" between distributors and exhibitors would pave the way for an eventual solution of mutual problems, bringing an end to some of the causes of exhibitor complaints against distributor tactics, Will H. Hays, representing the MPPDA, together with a joint MPTOA and Allied board, in February, 1926, decided on a standard contract form for use throughout the entire industry. Allied and the MPTOA again were feeling kindly toward each other. They met together again and again with Mr. Hays to make readjustments in the contract, but in June, at the Los Angeles convention of the MPTOA, this harmony was again shattered, and the uniform contract lost. But someone patched up that difference, too, only after it was determined "positively" that Sydney Cohen would no longer appear in MPTOA affairs. The delegates then went home with the harmoniously joyous resoundings of Al Steffes, who said from the convention floor: "You can tell the cockeyed world that we are disbanding the Allied States Organization. There will be only one big exhibitor organization in this country."

Through the rest of 1926, Allied States as such was dormant.

Then, at about the time the industry was awakening to the arrival of sound, the Federal Trade Commission, watching the many trust suits and the chaos on trade practices, called on all factions in the business to meet in the Bar Association Building, in New York, in October, 1927, to formulate trade rules for the industry's guidance. Out of that conference, attended by virtually every leader in production, distribution, exhibition and corporate management, came a trade practice program of a sort—on paper.

Presiding at that meeting, for the government, was Federal Trade Commissioner Abram Fern Myers. A story heard on Broadway at that time concerned an offer received by Mr. Myers from Allied.

Fourteen months later, in December, 1928, a brand new Allied States Association emerged from the Congress Hotel, in Chicago, and announced that former-Federal Trade Commissioner Abram Myers had, effective Monday, December 17, 1928, taking over the reins of the resurrected Allied, as president and general counsel, at a salary never disclosed.

The purposes as set forth in the constitution:

(a) To maintain public relationship.

(b) To negotiate with other branches of the industry.

(c) To secure equitable distribution of product.

(d) To oppose restraint of trade.

(e) To disseminate useful information to subscribers.

(f) To encourage higher standards of artistry in pictures.

And so, Allied was established with its first real platform, to which the following subscribed at that Congress Hotel meeting in 1928: W. A. Steffes, representing Minnesota, North and South Dakota; Henderson M. Richey and James C. Ritter, Michigan; Colonel H. A. Cole, Texas and some "new blood" in Allied: Herman Blum, of Maryland; E. P. Smith, Iowa; B. D. Cockrill, Indiana, and Charles Casanave. The eight state affiliates were soon joined by New Jersey, Ohio and Wisconsin.

The new Allied actually started functioning in Washington on January 2, 1929.

Through 1930 and the longest part of 1931, Allied, feeling its way, studied a various assortment of private plans for extend-

But "Al" Steffes Has Been the Power On and Behind the Throne

Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, Inc., had its beginnings in a meeting in St. Paul, Minn., on September 4, 1912.

"The first annual convention of The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Minnesota was held at the St. Paul Hotel, St. Paul, Minnesota, Wednesday, September 4th, 1912. The convention was called to order by Otto W. Raths, temporary president."

Some of the guests were Mayor Herbert P. Keller and Governor Adolph O. Eberhart, Governor of Minnesota; also the late W. J. Sweeney, national vice-president from Illinois, and C. M. Christensen, national secretary.

Other speakers at the morning session were:

"Mr. Thomas Furniss, exhibitor from Duluth, one of the organizers of the League in Minnesota, who told of what was accomplished by the National Convention in Chicago", and

"Mr. S. L. Rothapfel (later known as Roxy) and Mr. E. F. Purdy of Minneapolis who told of the vast amount of good accomplished by the local organization which has been maintained in the Twin Cities for the past few years."

Some of the others speakers at the convention were John Preller, manager of the General Film Company, Minneapolis Branch, and J. V. Bryson, of the Laemmle Film Exchange, Minneapolis.

At this convention letters from the president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of New York and from the secretaries of the Oklahoma, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Indiana, Michigan, New Jersey and Ohio were read by the secretary.

A motion was made by the late S. L. (Roxy) Rothapfel that the exhibitors go into executive session. This was seconded by H. A. Sherman of Minneapolis. Mr. Sherman now is producing the Hop-a-Long Cassidy features.

Otto N. Raths was unanimously elected president; Thomas Furniss of Duluth, vice-president; James Gilowsky of St. Paul, chairman of the executive committee; George Osborne of St. Paul, national vice-president; A. B. Robbins of Winona, constitution and by-laws; H. A. Sherman, treasurer, and E. F. Purdy, secretary.

Prior to this meeting there was an organization known as the Twin City Theatre Owners Association, of which James Gilowsky was president.

At the meeting in 1912 they amalgamated into the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, which was headed at that time by M. A. Neff.

Here is a list of the exhibitors who attended the second day's session:

C. J. Woodsmansee, Majestic Theatre, Bemidji, Minn.

Louisiana Units Have Short Life

One of the largest cities in the deep South, as well as one of the most prosperous states in the Union, is devoid of exhibitor organizations. That is the situation in the city of New Orleans and the state of Louisiana.

Individual exhibitors are fighting for supremacy among themselves again and individually endeavoring to buck the most powerful organization in the amusement world and as a result are getting nowhere, owing to the attitude of the various national exchanges toward individualism and in favor of combinations which buy in gross lots, so to speak, against the small shopper who purchases on a hand to mouth basis.

The first independent exhibitor organization was formed in New Orleans around 1921 with Bert Kern as secretary. Twenty houses formed the basis of the plan. In less than six months the unit fell apart.

In 1932, A. J. Bettencourt of Houma, La., formed with the assistance of approximately 30 upstate exhibitors what was supposed to be one of the strongest organizations of its kind in the South. In his work he was assisted by Hilton Hermann, at that time New Orleans manager for the Bromberg Attractions. The independents of New Orleans joined in a body. Two years later the death knell of this body was sounded by the independents themselves.

In 1927 Fred Flattery renewed organizational activities but with a change of location of his activities, the movement again was halted.

In 1934 Henry Lazarus and Benny Dudenheifer, at the request of the independents, organized a branch of Allied.

About a year later Harry S. McLeod, then manager of the St. Charles theatre, formed the Louisiana Motion Pictures Organization. It got off to a flying start, with banquets and regular meetings, and for a time it looked as if the independents had come into their own.

Then came a suggestion that the Louisina unit merge with the organization in Mississippi. They did and they didn't.

Today the exhibitors in this section are divided. Scarcely half a dozen joined the Mississippi aggregation. Today the independents stand alone.

South Eastern Unit Is Growing

The South Eastern Theatre Owners Association has at present a membership of 234 members which consist of 57 theatre owners, and 177 managers, the greatest membership the organization has known, without the work of a paid secretary, since its organization in 1929.

The present organization is an outgrowth of the old Georgia Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Operators, which at that time was confined solely for Georgia exhibitors. But with the realization that the problems that confronted the Georgia exhibitors also affected the exhibitors of the other three Southeastern states, namely Alabama, Florida and Tennessee, exhibitors from these states were invited to join the Georgia group, and form an organization whereby all would profit from their activities.

As a result of this invitation, representative exhibitors from the four states met in Columbus, Ga., September 8, 1929, at the Ralston hotel, and formed the SETOA.

George Ricker, of Fitzgerald, was elected president at the first meeting and served one year. He has since gone into other business and is not connected with the motion picture industry. The next presidents, in order of their service, were:

Nat Williams, Thomaston, Ga.
O. C. Lam, Rome, Ga.
Col. Thos. E. Orr, Albertville, Ala.
Hugh Manning, Etowah, Tenn.
M. C. Moore, Jacksonville, Fla.

Present officers of the SETOA are:

M. C. Moore, Jacksonville, Fla., President.

O. C. Lam, Rome, Ga., National Representative, MPTOA.

Bill Griffin, Cullman, Ala., Vice-President.

Tom Brandon, Titusville, Fla., Vice-President.

J. H. Thompson, Hawkinsville, Ga., Vice-President.

Hugh Manning, Etowah, Tenn., Vice-President.

Mrs. H. T. Wood, Washington, Ga., Secretary.

R. B. Wilby, Atlanta, Ga., Treasurer.

SAPERSTEIN AND MILLER TELL STORY IN ILLINOIS

AARON SAPERSTEIN
Leader of Illinois Allied

E. J. D. (JACK) MILLER
Former Leader of CEA

Allied Theatres of Illinois, headed by Aaron Saperstein, started in December, 1929, as the Independent Theatres of Illinois, but within a few weeks became a part of the National Allied Association and for the past seven years it has been known under the present name.

During that entire period the group has been under the leadership of Saperstein. The organization holds an annual meeting every year and elects officers for the coming term. Saperstein has been president at all times, but the other officers have changed yearly.

It was dissatisfaction with the Chicago Exhibitors Association which led to the formation of the independent group. The independent exhibitors claimed that the circuits and the distributors dominated the local organization and as a result the withdrawals were many as 80 theatres were represented in the Allied Association which now has 175 theatres listed on the membership rolls.

Outstanding among the things Allied has done as an organization during its career.

In 1931 the Chicago operators' union staged a strike under the direction of the late Thomas Malloy, who was killed by gangsters in 1934. Allied fought the union's demands for increased wages and other concessions and in a tough battle that eventually resulted in flying projectionists from the East to Chicago to run the machines, the Allied group won out.

Another victory was scored in 1932 when Allied fought the changing of the zoning plan as advocated by the circuits and exchanges. In 1932 the group staged and won a fight against double features which were passe here until a year ago.

In 1936 an attempt was made by Balaban & Katz to gain extra clearance between "C" week and the first-week-of-release. The Allied group started plans for a suit against B. & K., and on the eve of the filing of the suit B. & K. agreed not to seek the extra clearance.

During the past year Allied has made rapid strides in establishing itself as an important factor in this territory which is dominated mainly by the B. & K.-Great States circuits. Thirty more theatres have joined the ranks of Allied this year. The Essaness circuit with 27 theatres forms the greater part of this new addition.

Chicago Exhibitors Association

It was the withdrawal of Essaness from the Chicago Exhibitors' Association which brought about an apparent downfall of that group. Today the C. E. A. serves the B. & K. and Warner circuits and a few other theatres.

Started in February, 1924, with E. D. "Jack" Miller as president, Ludwig Siegel, secretary, and Frank Schaefer as treasurer, the C. E. A. was the only exhibitor organization in Chicago. Today the C. E. A. has Morris Leonard, B. & K. legal counsel as president.

When the C. E. A. was started the board of directors consisted of: Sam Abraham, Sam Katz, Andrew Karzas, Robert T. Levy, E. D. (Jack) Miller, L. P. Newhaffer, Harry Newell, Aaron Saperstein, Ludwig Siegel, Emil Stern, Sidney Selig, Ludwig Schindler, Frank Shaefer and P. J. Shaefer.

Under the guidance of Mr. Miller the C. E. A. functioned rather smoothly until the independent theatremen decided to form their own group. Their reasons for withdrawal were not because of troubles that faced them from outside the industry, but from within. Currently the group has been faced with numerous attacks from outside sources that have caused much strife. Notable among these has been two restrictions by the health department of the city, a fight over giveaway games and license fees.

Wisconsin Busy With Legislation

The Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan had its inception January 4, 1934, at a statewide convention in the Plankinton hotel, Milwaukee.

The gathering was the culmination of a series of meetings held by a committee of ten consisting of five former Allied States members and five members of the old Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan in December of 1933.

The association's membership at the start represented approximately 55 theatres in the territory and within a year had expanded to over 100 theatres. Original offices were at 627 North Sixth St., and in March, 1934, the headquarters were moved to 709 N. 11th St., the present location.

The association, which held its third annual convention, Nov. 2 and 3, 1937, started to function with a board of directors composed of fifteen members, ten from Milwaukee and five from the state. At its annual convention a year ago, the organization voted to reduce its board of five members and change the ratio of city to state representatives to three from the state and two from Milwaukee.

The association is still operating under this plan, with E. F. Maertz, Milwaukee, president; William Copeland, Jefferson, vice-president; A. C. Berkholtz, West Bend, secretary; Max Krofta, Milwaukee, treasurer, and F. J. McWilliams, Madison, chairman of the board.

R. A. Tesch has been retained as business manager of the association since its inception, being a hold-over from the old Allied group.

At the start, the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan had no national affiliations, but voted to affiliate with Allied States at its first annual convention.

The association was responsible for the passage of an anti-play date bill in the state legislature, which is still awaiting court action. During the past session of the state legislature it sponsored the introduction of Allied's bill to bar producers from theatre ownership and the chain theatres tax bill. It has been active in assisting federal investigators in the Wisconsin territory and has filed complaints of unfair trade practices with the federal department of justice, as well as with the committee entertaining the Hobbs resolution.

In Milwaukee county 41 exhibitor members were instrumental in breaking down the precedent of two projectionists in a booth.

L. O. LUKAN
President, MPTO of Washington

Far Northwest MPTO Active

The Pacific Northwest's only exhibitor organization, The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, represents a concerted effort over a period of 16 years to develop and maintain a representative, comprehensive group of theatre owners allied for the good of their industry.

The MPTOW was founded in Seattle on October 3, 1923.

James M. Hone was elected secretary-treasurer, and the growth of the organization began under the direction of Howard Clemmer of Spokane, first president.

Following is a list of the presidents:

1923—Howard Clemmer, Spokane
1924—John Hamrick, Seattle
1925—L. A. Drinkwine, Tacoma
1926—H. W. Bruen, Seattle
1927—Robert Bender, Seattle
Ray Grombacher, Spokane
1928—Al Rosenberg, Seattle
1929—Leroy Johnson, Seattle
1930—F. C. Weskil, Sand Point
1931—John Danz, Seattle
1932—M. Kenworthy, Moscow
1933—Al Rosenberg, Seattle
1934—H. W. Bruen, Seattle
1935—H. W. Bruen, Seattle
1936—Wm. Ripley, Longview
1937—L. O. Lukan, Seattle

Officers for the current year, just elected to serve until November, 1938, are:

President: L. O. Lukan, Seattle

First Vice-President: Milton Kenworthy, Moskow.

Second Vice-President: Paul Aust, Seattle

Third Vice-President: Cecil Gwinn, Centralia

AT THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE MEETING

North California Uses Conciliation

Independent Theatre Owners of Northern California, only exhibitor organization in the northern California territory, is one of the most active operators' groups in the western states, and comprises nearly a hundred members representing some 320 theatres.

Unlike ITO of southern California, the northern theatre men have consistently pursued a conciliatory policy in adjusting problems and both during the NRA period and later have achieved definite results in the abolishing of various practices through the conference-table method of settlement. Northern California ITO is allied with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

The organization was formed late in 1930 by a group of theatre men, which included H. V. Harvey, of Harvey Amusement Corporation, Gerald Hardy, at present operator of Harvey's theatre, Fresno, and Al Chamberlin, who recently disposed of his house at Crockett.

President officers of the ITO of Northern California are:

H. V. Harvey, president.

John Distasio and Aaron Goldberg, of San Francisco, vice-presidents.

Herman Cohen, operator of the United Artists and Embassy, San Francisco first-runs, secretary.

B. E. Kragen, assistant secretary.

L. S. Hamm, counsel.

Both Morgan Walsh and Mr. Moore are members of the board of directors.

Formal affiliation with MPTOA was made in 1934, and in the following year the northern California ITO was incorporated under the laws of the state as a non-profit group.

H. V. HARVEY
President, ITO of Northern California

Meetings are held monthly, with the exception of the two slack summer months of July and August, and a monthly bulletin is published which summarizes the meetings and reprints highlights of papers read or speeches made during the proceedings. Attendance at the monthly meetings average 30 members.

San Francisco theatre operators have a most efficient public relations organization known as the California Theatre Association, which acts as a watch dog over the industry's interests, particularly in local and state legislative activities. Hulda McGinn is secretary-manager of the group, which was formed in the middle twenties by the late Thomas D. Van Osten.

Virginia Leaders Fight Legislation

Discriminatory and adverse legislation has been consistently fought by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia, Inc., permanently organized in July, 1934. Exhibitors have expressed themselves as being well pleased with the work accomplished in behalf of the theatres in the state.

Original officers of the organization were: Morton G. Thalhimer, Richmond, president; Elmer H. Brient, Richmond, secretary; Sam Bendheim, Jr., Richmond, treasurer; William S. Wilder, Norfolk; Hunter Perry, Charlottesville; Isaac Weinberg, Winchester; R. C. Overbey, South Boston; Sydney Gates, Portsmouth; Benjamin T. Pitts, Fredericksburg, vice-presidents.

Under the Thalhimer regime, insurance rates on theatre property were reduced approximately 25 per cent.

The organization has gone on record as opposed to chance games and all similar forms of lottery. Through certain forms of legitimate advertising, however, gift tickets have been offered by a number of newspapers in Virginia.

Charles A. Somma, Richmond's first exhibitor, who achieved success in a theatre in New Bern, N. C., and later became one of the principal owners of a Virginia circuit of amusement houses, was named first chairman of the board of directors of the MPTO.

W. F. Crockett of Virginia Beach has succeeded William S. Wilder of Norfolk as president.

Benjamin T. Pitts of Fredericksburg, owner of a circuit in Virginia and West Virginia, succeeded Charles A. Somma as vice-president.

George Arthur Jones, former manager of Loew's in Richmond, was a director of the Virginia organization before being transferred to Boston several weeks ago.

REMBUSCH DOMINATED INDIANA ASSOCIATION

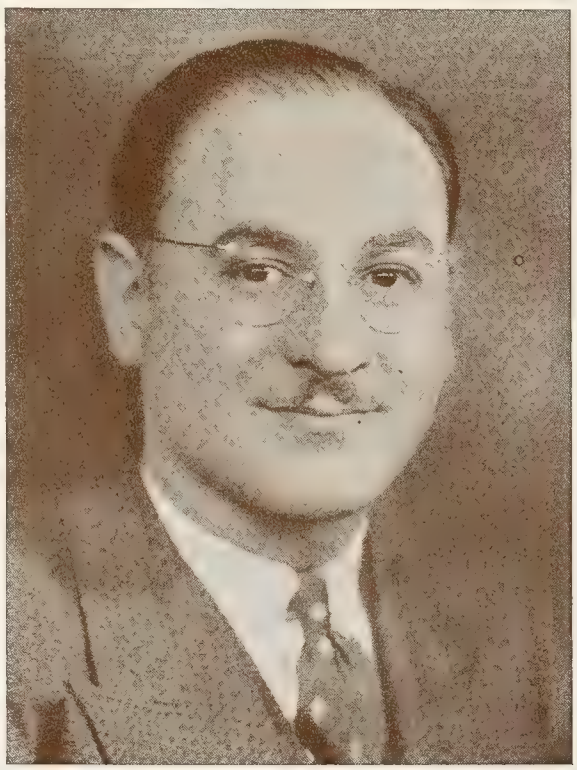
But Membership Since Has Tripled; Board Acts as a Service Agency

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, sole statewide exhibitor group in Indiana, assumed its present name and organization at a meeting in Indianapolis in March 1927, when A. C. Zaring, veteran exhibitor and owner of Zaring's Theatre in Indianapolis, was host.

Offices were established by the group in June, 1927, in the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce building, where they remained until Oct. 1, 1932, when permanent headquarters were set up at 444 North Illinois street, on Film Row. Membership has more than tripled in the ten years' life of the organization. Virtually all city exhibitor groups in the state are affiliated with it.



The organization was incorporated June 13, 1935. Predecessor organizations in Indiana were part of the MPTOA, but as far as can be gleaned from the present group's records, it has been a part of Allied ever since its inception.

Frank Rembusch of Shelbyville, who died in January, 1936, was an early leader and Charles G. Metzger, attorney who now is with the Motion Picture Producers Association in Hollywood, was first president. Mr. Metzger became office manager of the association later and continued for several years in active charge of virtually all its work between conventions. To him and to Roy R. Bair, head of the Bair's circuit in Indianapolis, who was president the last two years, and Mrs. Helen B. Keeler, former secretary, is given much of the credit for growth and strength of the association.

Maurice Rubin of Michigan City, new president, has inaugurated a series of regional meetings this winter which are expected to stimulate interest in the organization.

"The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana is primarily a service organization," Miss Norma Campbell, secretary, says.

The organization has two full-time staff members, Miss Campbell in the office and William C. Carpentier, field representative, who formerly was a field representative for Ohio Allied. Published by the association is a monthly magazine, The Indiana Exhibitor, which was started in January, 1936. Howard M. Rudeaux of Indianapolis is managing editor.

MAURICE RUBIN

Cleveland Unit Started in 1911

Organization and strength in numbers is not a modern idea of Cleveland motion picture exhibitors. The plan was crystallized as far back as 1911 with formation of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, and there has never been a time since then when Cleveland has not had an active motion picture exhibitor association.

Sam Morris, now foreign sales manager for Warner Brothers, was the first exhibitor torch bearer. In 1911, 15 exhibitors, comprising the entire exhibitor personnel of Cleveland, met in the Columbia building on Ontario Street, and elected Morris president. At that time Morris owned and operated two neighborhood houses. They were the Crown and the Home theatres.

William J. Slimm followed Morris to the League presidency. Slimm has been dead about 15 years. Ben Sawyer, attorney with offices connected with Ernest Schwartz in the Williamson Building, and a fiery orator, followed Slimm.

In 1919 a reorganization of the association took place, including a change of name. Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' League passed out of the picture and in its stead came the Cleveland Picture Exhibitors' Association. Meetings were held in the Colonial Hotel. Original officers of the reorganized association were: Henry H. Lustig, president (deceased); C. W. Masterman, vice-president (present location unknown); Adolph Mahrer (deceased, treasurer; Sam Bullock (deceased), executive secretary.

Since 1919, the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association has had seven presidents. They are Henry H. Lustig (deceased); Paul Gusdanovic, vice-president, fulfilling one of Lustig's unexpired terms; George Palda, attorney, formerly associated with Paul Gusdanovic; O. E. Belles, now with the Washington circuit; John J. Harwood, deceased; Ed. J. Flanigon and Ernest Schwartz, who has held the top association post uninterruptedly since 1933.

Connecticut Has Two Associations

Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut was formed May 1, 1927, with Arthur Lockwood of Middlesex Enterprises, Middletown, Conn., president. Edward G. Levy was its first executive secretary and he has remained in that position to the present. As of July, 1936, the organization numbered 48 affiliated and 57 unaffiliated theatres in its ranks.

Dr. J. B. Fishman of Fishman Theatres, New Haven, was president for four terms, then was instrumental in forming a new group in February, 1936, on the grounds that the MPTO in this state was not so constituted and conducted as best to further the interests of the independent exhibitor.

Irving C. Jacocks, Jr., of the Branford Theatre, Branford, Conn., then became president of the MPTO and is now its head. Other Officers are: Arthur Lockwood of Middletown, first vice-president; Adolph G. Johnson of Hamden, second vice-president; Edwin S. Raffile of New Haven, treasurer, and Edward G. Levy of New Haven, executive secretary.

Independent MPTO

The new group organized as the Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners, with Harry L. Lavietes of the Pequot, New Haven, president, and Joseph A. Davis of the Colonial, Southington, executive secretary.

In March, 1937, Joseph F. Reed of Washington Depot was elected president, Ralph Pasho vice-president, Maurice Shulman second vice-president, Abe Fishman treasurer and Joseph A. Davis secretary, Jack Post financial secretary. Recently Lawrence Caplan of New Haven, attorney, was made executive secretary.

An all-day meeting, with nationally-known speakers, dinner and dancing is planned by the group in the near future.

Both Connecticut MPTO and Allied Theatres of Connecticut meet semi-monthly. Both are to elect officers in February.

HALF DOZEN LAUNCHED NEBRASKA ASSOCIATION

Charles E. Williams and MPTO Have Been Synonymous for 18 Years

Early in 1916 less than a dozen Omaha independent theatre owners sat around a table in Attorney Van Dorn's office and drew up a set of by-laws which established the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Nebraska and western Iowa.

Such organization had been discussed by some of the theatre men late in 1915, but the first real meeting was held in the attorney's office. Van Dorn agreed to handle the by-laws because he was a friend of Al Pramer, first president of the association.

J. Earl Kirk, who now operates the North Star in Omaha, was the first secretary-treasurer.

The group was formed for two reasons: First, to promote good fellowship among independent theatre owners, and second and more important, to protect the independent exhibitors' interests.

Among the present-day theatre men who were active in the infant organization 20 years ago are H. F. Kennedy, owner of the Bow Theatre, Broken Bow, Neb., who has been first vice-president of the association for 18 years; R. E. Falkenberg, owner of the Majestic at Lexington, Neb.; A. H. Reckord, owner of the Majestic at Hebron, Neb., who now leases his theatre and is now in Florida; L. W. Heal, owner of the Pastime Theatre at Ravenna, Neb., and Sam Epstein, head of the Epstein Theatre Corporation of Omaha, who owns six independent theatres in Omaha at present.

M. A. ROSENBERG
President, MPTO of Western Pennsylvania

For more than eighteen years the MPTOA here has been Charles E. Williams, and Charles E. Williams has been the MPTOA of Nebraska and Western Iowa.

The first convention of the association was held at the Hotel Castle here, the second in the Hotel Paxton and for the past 18 years the regular headquarters and annual convention place has been Hotel Loyal.

Officers in addition to Mr. Williams, president, are Mr. Kennedy, first vice-president, and D. R. Goldie, American Theatre, Cherokee, Iowa, second vice-president. Mr. Williams is also secretary-treasurer.

PRODUCER THEATRES ADMITTED IN 1927

Lee A. Ochs, breathing the fire of exhibitor politics, declared as the opposition to the Cohen slate vanished with slight protestation, "We've got the rats on the run."

A uniform Contract was rejected in its entirety at the Chicago convention. W. D. Burford of Illinois reported on negotiations with Will H. Hays, and said that a series of meetings had failed to bring agreement on these seven points.

One of the speakers at the convention was Rodolph Valentino.

A turning point in the efforts to shape a working organization of exhibitors came with the Boston convention of 1924. While the administration of affairs was placed in the hands of men who had been closest to Mr. Cohen during his four years of presidency, Mr. Cohen did at least step out of office.

Michael J. O'Toole became president, after having served as director of the department of public service. R. F. (Pete) Woodhull was elected chairman of the board of directors.

Two developments of the convention the following year, at Milwaukee, gave promise, though one of them eventually was not as permanent at it appeared at the time.

The squabbles of several earlier annual meetings had brought into the picture a new organization, Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, whose call to arms had been the complaint that the MPTOA did not represent the independent theatre owner.

At Milwaukee, Allied States agreed to return to the fold, but not without a threat of withdrawal unless given acceptable representation on the board of directors.

"I've heard so much harmony talk here in the last few minutes I don't know what to say," Mr. Steffes told the convention. "Personally, I'm not used to it."

Mr. Woodhull became president of the MPTOA, with Sydney Cohen retaining the chairmanship of the directors. Louis M. Sagal continued as treasurer.

For the first time, at the Los Angeles convention in 1926, the presidency was awarded to an individual not of the New York persuasion. Eli Whitney Collins, owner of the Grand theatre at Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Al Steffes placed an extra long handle on the olive branch he had extended at Milwaukee, though several leaves were torn off at the first day's session, and announced that Allied States was being disbanded. (The return of Allied, if it ever had "gone", is recorded in another article in this issue). Jack Miller of Chicago suggested a tombstone be erected on the lawn of the Ambassador hotel.

Joseph M. Seider, who had been chosen as business manager on the recommendation of the Milwaukee convention, was retained in office.

The history of seven years of organizational activity, real or attempted, was summed up in a decision of the convention of 1927, at Columbus, Ohio. When the exhibitors voted to admit to membership producer-owned theatres they both acknowledged and overcame a losing fight to finance organization entirely through independent theatre owners.

ED. KUYKENDALL
President, MPTOA

One direction in particular in which the exhibitors saw future benefits for themselves through the alliance with producers was in combatting inimical legislation. Jack Miller expressed it this way to the convention:

"So far the organization hasn't been worth a good damn. It hasn't been worth the powder to blow it to hell. It has been almost a corpse. But today some pep has been blown into it. Legislation, goodwill and solution of labor problems mean more to me than the contract issue." Mr. Miller added, to a chorus of laughter, "You buried me in Los Angeles, Al Steffes with me." NOTE: Mr. Steffes was not at the Columbus session.

Besides the return of Mr. Woodhull to the presidency and Mr. Sagal to the treasurership, the exhibitors chose M. J. O'Toole to be secretary and A. Julian Brylawski as chairman of the board.

Before the next convention of the MPTOA at Toronto in October, 1928, the Allied States leaders had determined to revive their own association, and they did not participate in the sessions at the King Edward hotel, though they were in evidence in the lobby. Allied was not mentioned on the convention floor.

Greater participation of the large circuits in the affairs of the MPTOA was noted, and among the newly eelcted directors were Colvin Brown, then executive vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and of Keith-Albee-Orpheum; Harold B. Franklin, then president of Fox West Coast Theatres; Harry M. Crandall of Stanley-Crandall Theatres, and Sam Dembow of Publix. Harry Marx of Publix was a vice-president-elect, with J. C. Brady, R. R. Biechele, Charles C. Picquet, and M. A. Lightman. Jay Emanuel was chosen treasurer, Mr. O'Toole continued as secretary. Pete Woodhull was reelected president.

The stormy days of MPTOA conventions were over, but new problems had arisen. Sound was the theme of practically all addresses and actions at the Memphis convention in the fall of 1929.

Mr. Woodhull, who had become an executive of Lee Deforest Corporation, presided when M. A. Lightman, president-elect, took office. Vice-presidents included Frank C. Walker, Willard C. Patterson, and Mr. Picquet and Mrs. Biechele, reelected, as were the secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Kent, again a principal speaker at the 1930 meeting, in Philadelphia, said that "the Progressive independent today has as great a future as anyone in the business," adding, "I didn't feel that way a year ago."

The twelfth annual convention, held at Washington in March, 1932, adopted as its keynote the words of Mr. Lightman, reelected president, that "we gain more by laying bricks than by throwing them."

The convention reelected Secretary O'Toole and Treasurer Jay Emanuel.

In May, 1933, Mr. Lightman resigned, and in a mail election, Edward Kuykendall, president of the Tri-States Motion Picture Theatre Owners, was chosen to succeed him. Mr. Kuykendall has continued ever since in the presidency.

Decency in motion pictures was a first word in addresses before the annual meeting in April, 1934, in Los Angeles.

Louis B. Mayer said exhibitors had forced the producers into theatre ownership, asserting that it was "either that or the ocean, and they elected theatres."

M. E. Comerford was elected first vice-president, W. S. Butterfield, M. A. Lightman, Ben Berinstein, A. Julian Brylawski, also vice-presidents; Walter Vincent was named treatsurer, Fred S. Meyer continued as secretary, and Fred Wehrenberg was reelected chairman of the board.

All grievances and intra-organization differences were forgotten in favor of a united complaint against the government's Motion Picture Code at the New Orleans convention in March, 1935. "Let's give it (the industry) back to the Indians we worked with in Washington," said Jack Miller.

When the directors of the organization met in March, 1936, at the Miami Biltmore hotel in lieu of a general convention, the entire official personnel was retained.

Twenty-five states sent exhibitor delegations to the seventeenth annual convention, held in March of this year in Miami.

All officers were reelected, with the exception of the addition of E. C. Beatty and Mitchell Wolfson, vice-presidents, to fill the places vacated by W. C. Butterfield and Ben Berinstein.

ALLIED STILL HOLDS TO LEGISLATION

ing its power through championing independent exhibitor problems of the day. Labeled at its outset as "militant" against so-called "aggressions" of major distributor-circuits, all possibilities of any circuit membership were discouraged and before the new organization was operating two years, it became the self-styled "defender" of "the little independent."

Efforts of responsible industry leaders to effect a trade practice program in 1930 and 1931 through the so-called "5-5-5" conference between MPTOA, Allied and distributer leaders were fruitless, and along about the beginning of 1932, Allied started to think of federal and/or state legislation to force industry regulation.

In 1930, Mr. Myers credited Allied members with helping, by testimony, to bring about the death of compulsory arbitration, ruled illegal in the Judge Thacher Supreme Court decision, and also outlawing the credit-rating committees of the Film Boards of Trade, thereby marking the beginning of the end of the board's usefulness to the MPPDA.

First annual convention of the new Allied was held in Chicago, February 10 and 11, 1931. Some 450 delegates pledged $100,000 to carry on the fight against "unfair and discriminatory" tactics of distributors. For the first time Allied chieftains suggested carrying their case to the public and the courts. Petitions for prosecution by the Department of Justice and other governmental agencies were heard—unusual procedure for organized exhibition at that time.

Out of that convention emerged: (1) a campaign to be brought to the public to show that independent exhibitors are forced to show "salacious" and "unfit" pictures through block booking; (2) first Allied endorsement of the Brookhart anti-block booking bill; (3) endorsement of amendments to the U. S. copyright laws, and (4) endorsement of a plan, preferred by Oscar Hanson, for issuing an ambitious newsreel containing a limited amount of advertising through Kinograms.

Before the year was over, Mr. Myers announced that the Kinograms reel would be suspended after three months.

Steffes Elected

Mr. Myers, in 1931, gave up the presidency, because the duties conflicted with his post as general counsel, and, instead, accepted the board chairmanship. Al Steffes took over the presidency, on January 2, 1932. On that date the board also created the post of paid business manager, naming Michigan's H. M. Richey.

The nature of Allied's program became further known in January, 1932, when the board "suggested" to its members that they refuse to sign percentage contracts and that exhibitors themselves take on the fight for "open" selling as against block and blind booking.

The Vestal Bill in Congress for the relief of violators of the music copyright law was an early 1932 Allied favorite.

Sidney Samuelson of New Jersey, later to become national Allied president, entered the fold in January, 1932, in the post of vice-president. Accompanying him into the official ranks was Herman Blum, a founder, who became first national treasurer. James C. Ritter, Detroit, was Allied's second president.

NATHAN YAMINS
President, Allied States Association

The first formal anti-MPPDA mention by Allied came from Al Steffes when he told a Nebraska state gathering, in January, 1932, that "a national campaign will be directed against the Hays group" to correct "illegal practices."

The forcing of distributor divorcement of theatre holdings was also first heard at that Nebraska convention, finally bringing, in recent years, a series of Allied-sponsored state laws compelling distributors to abandon circuit operation.

By unanimous vote, Allied, in second annual convention assembled at the Hotel Statler in Detroit on Wednesday, March 9, 1932, actually set about a program of reforms and modifications of trade practices, by national legislative action, and, by endorsement, made Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart, their banner bearer.

That very week the competitive MPTOA, in convention at Washington, voted to effect industry "reforms" by and within the industry.

And there both organizations have followed clearly-defined lines down through the years to the present day, Allied "sponsoring" the anti-block booking, anti-blind buying bills both of Senator Brookhart and the Neely-Pettingill Congressmen; aiding the late Dr. William Harrison Short in his Motion Picture Research Council "reform program"; flooding the Department of Justice offices with complaints charging distributors with anti-trust law violations; sponsoring bills in state legislatures aimed at the so-called distributor-circuit "aggressions," and otherwise conducting an open militant campaign for trade practice "reforms," while the MPTOA, on the other hand, has been fighting just as strenuously, within the industry, for voluntary regulation.

Allied States first attempted in June, 1932, to enlist "outside" aid, spending large sums to circularize women's clubs, civic organizations and the public with speeches and other printed matter setting forth its position.

Reaching the height of the general business depression, in 1933, Allied States turned for the moment from its legislative campaign to a move to "Keep the Theatres Open," sounding a friendlier note to its opponents with its "hopes to see a great co-operative movement with the industry."

Congress Petitioned

Sidney Samuelson, New Jerseyite, rode to the presidency of Allied, succeeding Jim Ritter, on February 1, 1934, at a board meeting in New York.

Allied's first public appearance in the halls of Congress came in March, 1934, when the organization, headed by Mr. Myers, filed a brief urging Congress to enact Representative Wright Patman's bill to abolish block booking, on the grounds that the industry is "an absolute monopoly."

Meanwhile, Allied added as "musts" to its legislative program the Congressional enactment of Congressman Sirovich's bill for music copyright relief, and legislative action against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Sidney Samuelson was reelected president at a 1935 directors' meeting at Washington.

First mention of "boycott" of major interests in Allied's campaign was heard in April, 1935, when Abram Myers, addressing the Northwest unit, urged a "boycott" of distributors for exhibition invasions.

Allied's 1935 convention, held in Atlanta, May 20th to 23rd, brought Al Steffes out of virtual retirement. His observation that distributor tactics were crowding independents out of business caused the convention to vote to send a committee to Will Hays and the "powers that be" in New York demanding an end to distributors' "aggression."

"Boycott" was heard again, this time from Colonel Cole of Texas. The elimination of pyrotechnics and of hell-roaring which marked previous Allied conventions gave the "boycott" warning added significance.

Mr. Yamins was reelected president on January 22, 1937, and, as part of his platform, continues to push Allied's pending state legislative campaign for theatre divorcement by distributor-circuits, enactment of regulatory measures in Congress, using the circuit divorce attacks as the chief weapon against the majors.

Meanwhile, Allied is marking time on the possible development, if any, from the pending proposal of New York's ITOA for joint conferences, this month, with the MPTOA to discuss a possible unified front to force distributors to adopt trade practice reforms.

Ohio Groups Now An Allied Affiliate

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, with headquarters at Columbus, functioning as a state unit in the interests of the independent exhibitor, is the successor of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio, a subsidiary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. It was formed in 1933, shortly after abandonment of the original organization, and proceeded "on its own" until 1934, when it affiliated with the Allied States Association, of which it now is a part. Officers are:

Martin G. Smith, Toledo, president.
Sam E. Lind, Zanesville, vice-president.
Chas. E. Weigel, Cincinnati, vice-president.

M. L. Horwitz, Cleveland, treasurer.
P. J. Wood, Columbus, secretary.

Directors are: Henry Greenberger, Cleveland; John Kalafat, Cleveland; Nat Charnas, Toledo; Harold Bernstein, Cincinnati; F. W. Huss, Jr., Cincinnati; Max Stearn, Columbus; J. Real Neth, Columbus; Robert Menches, Akron; L. F. Eick, Martins Ferry; R. E. Myers, Chillicothe; John Pekras, Elyria; Dwight Jones, Jackson, and J. W. Trunk, Youngstown.

The organization has taken an effective part in legislation, through the individual and collective efforts of the members under the leadership of P. J. Wood, who is a registered lobbyist and close to the various city officials and legislators in Columbus.

The erstwhile Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio was formed in 1921, with Martin G. Smith as the first president. He held this office until 1925, when he was succeeded by William M. James, who occupied the chair until the organization was dissolved. Mr. Wood, business manager of the old organization from 1923, has held the office ever since, in addition to now being secretary as well.

Kansas-Missouri Began Before 1910

The Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, which includes exhibitors from Kansas, western Missouri, and, to a small extent, those from Greater Kansas City (for instance, Ed Rolsky, president, Independent Theatre Owners, Kansas City, Mo., is a director of the KMTA), is the result of a reorganization on June 7, 1933. John C. Stapel, Paramount, Rock Port, Mo., is president; E. B. Danielson, Russell, Kan., is vice-president, and R. R. Biechele, Osage, Kansas City, Kan., is secretary-treasurer.

Both Kansas and western Missouri had exhibitor associations before 1910. However, they were not permanent groups; they were active for a while and then disintegrated. For instance, in 1915 there was a Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association of Kansas, of which Carl F. Mensing, Leavenworth, was president, and Con Cannon, Emporia, was secretary. At the convention in Pittsburgh, that year, the association was approached by the Exchangemen's Association of Kansas City

Mr. Mensing continued as president of the Amusement Association; William Meyn, Kansas City, Kas., father of Fred Meyn, Pershing, Kansas City, Kan., was treasurer. Elmer Pearson was an officer. Jimmie Foland became secretary.

It was not until May 18, 19 and 20, at Hutchinson, Kan., that exhibitors of the state formed an enduring organization. The Kansas State Exhibitors' League, which became the Kansas Exhibitors' Association before the end of the meeting, was formed with L. M. Miller (inactive partner, now in Commonwealth Amusement Corporation) of Wichita as president.

At the 1922 convention in Wichita, March 27-28, exhibitors elected Mr. Van Praag president.

In 1923, R. G. Liggett, Kansas City, Kas., was named president; C. E. Cook, now an exhibitor at Maryville and Savannah, Mo., was made manager.

July 21, 1924, directors of the MPTO of Kansas suggested merging with western Missouri in connection with the meeting of Allied States in Kansas City, August, 1924. The Missouri group met August 11th, with Mr. Eisner, Kansas City, president.

Mr. Biechele that year was named president; vice-presidents were James Watson, McClure, and Charles Bull of Wichita.

Kansas City, Mo., Unit

The Independent Theatre Owners is the present organization of Kansas City, Mo., exhibitors of the class indicated. Ed Rolsky, National, is president; E. S. Young, Central, is first vice-president; Mrs. Rosa Baier, Lindbergh, is second vice-president; C. H. Potter, Baltis, Murray and Admiral, treasurer, and Ed Hartman, Murray, is secretary.

Kansas City, Kan., Unit

The Theatre Owners' Association of Kansas City, Kan., was organized late in 1936 and incorporated. George Baker, Electric, is president; Charles Vaughan, Art, vice-president, and Fred Meyn, Pershing, secretary-treasurer.

Two Units Active At U. S. Capital

Oldest of the exhibitor organizations in the District or Columbia—and for many years the only one—is the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia, Inc.

The organization came into being on April 29, 1920, the date of its incorporation, as the District of Columbia Exhibitors Association, Inc., with the name being changed to the present one on February 24, 1922.

Since the change of name, the organization has continued. About 1924, A. Julian Brylawski, son of Aaron ("Daddy B") Brylawski, since deceased, was named president, a post he has held, with two or three years excepted, to the present time.

Present officers of the MPTODC, elected at the annual meeting on November 9th, are:

President, A. Julian Brylawski, head of Warner theatres' realty department;

Vice-president and member of the board of the national organization, Sidney B. Lust, head of the theatres bearing his name;

Treasurer, Dr. William P. Herbst, president of the Circle Amusement Corporation, operating the Circle theatre.

Secretary, Nat B. Browne, private secretary to Warner Theatre' general zone manager, John J. Payette, and also executive secretary to that organization.

Allied Theatre Owners

In June, 1934, there was an independent theatre owners' organization, which resolved itself into a semblance of independent existence with the coming of the new year when Charles H. Olive, operator of the Princess theatre, was elected president and a distinct break was made with the parent group.

The Allied Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia, affiliated with the Allied States Association, represents sixteen out of the thirty-four unaffiliated groups.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Economy

Hollywood studios, large and small, are pruning contract lists and departmental staffs in an economy move dictated by a reduction of available cash for production. The action apparently is prompted by orders from home offices.

One studio is eliminating more than half of its writing staff. Another is dropping over 50 per cent of its directors as well. One large studio is paying for story properties by installments. Directors and players also are affected by decisions to permit contracts to lapse at the end of option periods.

It is reported that several studios will suspend production activities for as long as 12 weeks after the first of year, judging from the cutting down of personnel.

Writers' staffs have been at the highest peak of the year, so that a large number of working scripts have been ready to go at a short notice, thus permitting a lull. Indications are that production will spurt until the end of this year to enable studios to meet release dates during the expected furlough.

Union offices reported a record number of men out of work this week, despite the number of films shooting. Layoffs have been occasioned by a desire to use as few men as the union contracts allow. The 10 per cent increase given five internationals at the studio basic pact conference in New York, and under the Screen Actors Guild shop contract, has brought a sharp advance in labor costs, an estimated $2,000,000 a year under the Guild contract alone. Prices of materials also have increased.

Healthy

Rumors and alarums to the contrary the production picture assumed a more healthy aspect during Thanksgiving week. Ten features, one of which is a serial, started. Eleven finished. The total number of pictures actually in work is compared evenly with the record of one and two years ago and is several ahead of the 1934 total.

Four features were started at 20th Century-Fox. "Blonde Moll" will present Ricardo Cortez, Phyllis Brooks, Douglas Fowley, Robert Wilcox, Chick Chandler, Adrienne Ames and Esther Muir. Alfred T. Werker was assigned to direct. The cast of "Shanghai Deadline" will include Dolores Del Rio, June Lang, Dick Baldwin, Ruth Perry, John Carradine, Leon Ames and Keye Luke. Eugene Forde is directing. Featured players in "Headline Huntress," which James Tinling is directing, are Gloria Stuart, Lyle Talbot, Michael Whalen and Jane Darwell. "Love on a Budget," a member of the "Jones Family" series, will offer Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russell Gleason, Kenneth Howell, Alan Dinehart, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts, Billy Mahan, Marvyn Stephens and Dixie Dunbar for name value. Bert Levy is the director.

ACTRESSES MUST LEARN TO BLUSH

Ladies whose cheeks redden prettily during romantic or confusing moments will soon be in demand as the result of the current color boon in pictures, says Director Bill Wellman. As yet, no script has called for a blush in a color production, but since it is a natural emotion, the time is coming when it will be called for. Men whose necks redden easily can always keep their faces towards the camera in case they become unduly romantic or confused.

Universal started two pictures. Principals in "Border Wolves" are Bob Blake, Constance Worth and Fuzzy Knight. Joe Lewis is directing. The serial, "Flash Gordon's Trip to Mars," which will have the combined values of Ford Beebe's and Robert Hill's co-directorial abilities, will feature Larry Crabbe, Jean Rogers, Frank Shannon, Charles Middleton, Donald Kerr, Beatrice Roberts and Dick Alexander.

Republic Starts Two

At Republic two pictures went into work. The cast members of "The Old Barn Dance" are Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Ivan Miller, Helen Barkis, Sammy McKim, Jack Rockwell and George Guessford. Joe Kane is directing. In "Outside of Paradise," being directed by John H. Auer, Phil Regan, Dorothy McNulty, Ruth Coleman, Mischa Moody, Joe Marks and Cliff Nazarro will be seen.

"Three Men in the Snow" was started at MGM. The principals are Robert Young, Florence Rice, Edna May Oliver, Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen, Herman Bing, Henry Hull and Mary Astor. Eddie Buzzell is directing.

For Paramount release, Harold Lloyd started "Professor Beware." As Elliott Nugent directs and with many more names to be added, his feature supports are Phyllis Welch and Raymond Walburn.

RKO Completes Three

Three of the completed pictures are credited to RKO-Radio. The most important players in "Women Have a Way" are Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland, Walter Abel, Henry Stephenson, Alec Craig, Guinn Williams and Richard Lane. Leigh Jason directed. Lee Tracy and Joan Woodbury are starred in "Lights Out." The support lists Lee Patrick, Paul Guilfoyle, Richard Lane, Bradley Page and Tom Kennedy. Lew Landers directed. "Easy Millions" will present Preston Foster, Sally Eilers, Cecil Kellaway, William Brisbane, Guinn Williams, Paul Guilfoyle and Lorraine Krueger. Christy Cabanne directed.

Warners finished two pictures. Leading names in "A Slight Case of Murder" are Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Ruth Donnelly, Allen Jenkins, George E. Stone, Edward Brophy, Henry O'Neill, Harold Huber and Willard Parker. Lloyd Bacon directed. "The Mystery of Hunting's End" will present Dick Purcell, Ann Sheridan, Elspeth Dudgeon, Ben Welden, Anthony Averill, Anne Nagel, William Hopper, Anderson Lawler, Sheila Bromley, Hugh O'Connell, Trevor Bardet and Dennie Moore. Noel Smith directed.

Arlen and Mary Astor

Columbia finished "No Time to Marry." Richard Arlen and Mary Astor are featured supported by Lionel Stander, Virginia Dale, Thurston Hall, Marjorie Gateson and Arthur Loft. Harry Lachman directed.

At Paramount "Romance in the Dark" was completed. Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, John Barrymore, Claire Dodd, Curt Bois and Fritz Feld are the principals. H. C. Potter directed.

Under Eddie Cline's direction and with Bobby Breen starred, Principal completed "Hawaii Calls." The support lists Ned Sparks, Pua Lani, Mamo Clark, Irvin S. Cobb, Gloria Holden, Raymond Page, Warren Hull, Juanita Quigley and Ward Bond.

"Checkers" was completed at 20th Century-Fox. The cast lists Jane Withers, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel, Marvyn Stephens, June Carlson, John Harrington, Andrew Tombes and Ivan Miller. H. Bruce Humberstone was the director.

Goldwyn's "Follies"

For United Artists, Samuel Goldwyn completed "Goldwyn Follies," last picture on his current program. In color, directed by George Marshall, it will offer Kenny Baker, Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou, Ritz Brothers, Helen Jepson, Charles Kullman, Phil Baker, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Zorina, Bobby Clarke, Ella Logan, William Dollar and George Balanchine's American Ballet.

Universal finished "Deadlocked." The complete cast numbers Kent Taylor, Fay Wray, Larry Blake, Nan Grey, Samuel S. Hinds, Halliwell Hobbes, Jane Darwell, Fritz Leiber, Granville Bates, Leonard Mudie, Bert Roach, Virginia Sale, William Elliott, John Miller and Henry Hunter. Ted Sloman directed.

"Mama Runs Wild," listed last week as a Universal starter, is a Republic production to be directed by Ralph Staub and featuring Mary Boland, Ernest Truex, Max Terhune, Sammy McKim, William Henry, Lynn Roberts and Dorothy Page.

Everybody Sing

(MGM)

Comedy and Music

They're plotting something out at MGM which, at the moment, promises to have exhibitors and audiences agog with excitement. The chief plotters are Producer Harry Rapf who, during his long Broadway and Hollywood experience, has learned that people like nothing better than to be surprised; director Edwin L. Marin, recently credited with "Married Before Breakfast," and writers Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf.

They intend that what they are plotting will result in entertainment which, in radical ways, combines the best values of a madcap domestic comedy and a musical show. Aware of the present public demand for love stories with a snap, semi-sophistication that permits an occasional old fashioned tear and melodies which blend the ultra modern swing tunes with the classics and that, most of all, comedy is the article desired, the production group is shooting just for that.

That there should be no lack of name values with which to interest prospective patrons, the producing group apparently did quite a bit of picking and choosing from the MGM star roster. The principals are Allan Jones, direct from "The Firefly," and Judy Garland, fresh from her triumph in "Broadway Melody of 1938." The featured support lists Fanny Brice, well known and remembered for her work in "The Great Ziegfeld," Billie Burke, Reginald Gardiner, Lynn Carver and Mary Forbes. Parts of lesser importance were assigned to Elise Cavonna, Cupid Ainsworth, Marie Blake and Helen Troy.

Sally, Irene and Mary

(Twentieth Century - Fox)

Musical Romance

The title is famous. Originally it lured millions of dollars into legitimate theatre box offices. MGM used it in 1925, and the silent picture was successful.

The story which is being used this time and which is credited to Harry Tugend and Jack Yellen is peppy and modernly lively. The music, some of which was contributed by Walter Bullock and Harold Spina and some of which is credited to Mack Gordon and Harry Revel is intended to accentuate those qualities. It features three girls who go adventuring on Broadway, invade Greenwich Village take over a Hudson River show boat, where they become the focal point of many gay incidents, particularly when the boat drifts out onto the Atlantic.

The cast is one of those aggregations that received Darryl Zanuck's personal attention. "Sally," the swingy songstress, is Alice Faye; flirtatious "Irene" is Joan Davis, who burlesqued her way pleasingly through "Wake Up and Live" and "Life Begins at College"; "Mary" is newcomer Marjorie Weaver, who after bit and small part roles, won featured billing in "Second Honeymoon." Then there is Fred Allen of "Town Hall Tonight" radio note, seen earlier in "Thanks a Million," Tony Martin seen in nine previous 20th Century-Fox films, Jimmy Durante, Gregory Ratoff, Barnett Parker borrowed from MGM, Louise Hovick now in "Ali Baba Goes to Town," Mary Treen, the Raymond Scott Quintet and the Peters Sisters.

There will be plenty of eye glamour in "Sally, Irene and Mary." Some of the settings are among the most lavish the studio ever attempted.

In the hands of William A. Seiter, much can be expected of the quality of direction.

Release date: Jan. 14, 1938.

Hawaii Calls

(RKO Radio - Principal)

Musical Spectacle

"Let's Sing Again," "Rainbow on the River" and "Make a Wish" did much to establish Bobby Breen as a screen personality. Sol Lesser expects that "Hawaii Calls" will further enhance his protege's popularity. To that end he is spending more money on this picture, giving it more spectacular production settings and assigning more important people to the cast than he has to any of the previous productions.

In gist the story is a musical comedy adventure yarn. Two boys stowaway on a boat and reach Honolulu. There they become involved in an exciting series of incidents which involve the theft of naval secrets and a kidnaping.

The story is based on the Islands' poet Don Blanding's novel "Stowaways in Paradise." Screen play was done by Wanda Tuchok, who received credit for "O'Shaughnessey's Boy," "Grand Old Girl," "The Champ" and "Bird of Paradise," which story also was localed in Hawaii. Lesser, who has enjoyed notable success in producing films featuring boys, such as "Peck's Bad Boy" and others in which Jackie Coogan, Jackie Cooper and Baby Peggy were starred, entrusted the job of direction to Edward Kline.

Release date: Jan. 6, 1938 (tentatively).

Scandal Street

Comedy-Melodrama

Although what some people chose to call a potentially scandalous situation exists in this story and although there is a murder or two plus a rather difficult to explain disappearance, the character of this forthcoming release is not nearly as scandalous as the present working title might indicate. Essentially it is a comedy of family affairs which encounter bewildering complications.

The cast does not offer any standout names, but it does include many capable performers. Listed are Lew Ayres, Louise Campbell now in "Night Club Scandal," Porter Hall, Virginia Weidler, Roscoe Karns, Cecil Cunningham, Edgar Kennedy, Elizabeth Patterson, Jan Duggan, George Offerman Jr., Esther Howard, Lucien Littlefield, Louise Beavers and Carl "Alfalfa" (Our Gang) Switzer.

Based on a Vera Gaspary story, with the screen play credited to Bertram Millhauser and Eddie Welch, the director is James Hogan, who made "Ebb Tide."

Release date: Not determined.

Little Miss Roughneck

(Columbia)

Comedy

Exhibitors who go in for trick, stunt and gag exploitation may just as well prepare to revive all the old ones and concoct all the new they can when "Little Miss Roughneck" comes to town. Its story is about the most ridiculous setup for an explosive comedy that has come along in many moons. It satirizes just about everything from the doting mother idea, the vaudeville, night club and motion picture business, crime, innocent, though planned deception, down to love. It features a little girl who, true to her title, is nothing but a pain in the neck to managers, impressarios, agents, film producers, police, an unsuspecting Mexican and his family, her sister, the police and all save her mother,

In the picture the little girl, who happens to be Edith Fellows, and who has demonstrated her talents in many pictures does everything from recite Kipling poetry to singing grand opera. The center of everything, she is supported by Margaret Irving as her mother; Jacqueline Wells as her horrified sister; Leo Carrillo, Scott Colton, Inez Palange, Thurston Hall, Frank Wilson, Phillipe Urick and Gilbert Enriquez.

The story is a figment of the imaginations of Fred Niblo, Jr., and Grace Neville, who had the help of Michael Simmons in adapting it.

Aubrey Scotto is the director.

Release date: Dec. 23, 1937 (tentatively).

Benefits Forget

(MGM)

A Family Problem

It is not Walter Huston's habit to appear on the screen unless he is convinced that the vehicle chosen for his appearance and the character selected for him to portray is solid and substantial. He has made his position known many times. And the fact that "Dodsworth" was his only picture in several years demonstrates his determination to stick to his decision. When he was invited to consider playing in the screen adaptation of Honore Willsie Morrow's classic story of a potent problem in American family life, he consented with enthusiasm.

Although the time of "Benefits Forgot," and the title has definite showmanship significance, is about eighty-five years ago, its appeal is as modern as today. It's a story of a boy who couldn't get along with his father, but a boy who enjoyed a great mother love.

Huston will be seen as a fanatic circuit riding preacher in the days of the pioneer mid-West. His wife is Beulah Bondi. The son is James Stewart, seen in "Seventh Heaven," and presently in "Navy Blue and Gold." Character players include Charley Grapewin, Guy Kibbee and Charles Coburn, a recruit from the New York stage. Ted Healy and Sterling Holloway will carry the necessary comedy relief. Other players are Arthur Aylesworth, Ann Rutherford and Charles Peck. It may be a point of exploitation interest to note that Leatrice Joy Gilbert, daughter of Leatrice Joy and John Gilbert, will make her debut in the film.

Being directed by Clarence Brown, maker of "Conquest" and "Ah, Wilderness," it may be expected that "Benefits Forgot" will be an intense study of typical American characters.

Release date: Jan. 28, 1938.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Tovarich

Continental Comedy

Showmen setting out to sell this merchandise to their customers do not start from scratch. "Tovarich" is the beneficiary of a singularly fortuitous sequence of legitimate stories that have conspired to acquaint the public widely and well with the product from play purchase to premiere. These have been of variety and kind . . . the title changes and causes therefor, the legal action arising out of a principal casting. The vaguely grounded but engaging speculation about possible political connotations . . . to whet public anticipation to keen edge. It is written in the book of showmanship that pictures brought to the screen under such circumstances as these are promptly and quite unanimously pronounced terrific or terrible, never less. It is written here, therefore, at once and bluntly, that a mixed audience attending the Hollywood preview, without a discernible prejudice or public notification of the picture to be screened, expressed its opinion in all the known synonyms for terrific and none of the opposite significance.

The showman who chooses to accept this evidence as assurance that a group of individually notable craftsmen have combined their separate talents successfully in a distinguished demonstration of craftsmanship will find his hands full of powerful ammunition when he proceeds, as it would seem he needs must, to shoot the works.

There is, atop the cast, Claudette Colbert, who may be billed as in her most congenial role since "It Happened One Night."

Next in order, although his role is equally stellar, there is Charles Boyer, lately come to peak eminence as the Napoleon of "Conquest" and mentionable here as proving that was in no sense a fluke triumph.

Players meriting special billing, selected from the 26 named on the screen, are Basil Rathbone, whose handling of a commissar assignment keeps the plot from going partisan, Anita Louise, Melville Cooper, Isabel Jeans and Montagu Love. It may be safely promised, incidentally, that more than one of the new players in the cast will become well knowns in short order because of what they do to it.

The stage play, of course, is widely known as a consistent success as to call for factual data relating to its hardihood.

The fact that Robert E. Sherwood, whose name is potent in the American home as a fashioner of fine play ware, wrote the English version of Jacques Deval's play, which Casey Robinson adapted, is good for extra ticket sales in almost any community.

The story, in common with that of most or all comedies, is a thing to be suggested rather than told, since it is the telling of it rather than the plot which matters. In short, two impoverished members of the Russian royal family enter domestic service in Paris rather than give to the Soviets or use for their own purposes some forty billion francs given them by the late Tsar. After many amusing and satirically significant experiences they donate the fortune to what they consider their Russia and find happiness in continued menial duties. The nationalistic motif is touched upon but briefly and in excellent taste.

Anatole Litvak's direction is in the better Continental manner and happily free of the socalled touches commonly expected in material of the kind. Robert Lord adds to his stature as the associate producer who marshaled in harmonious working company the highly specialized talent represented.

Previewed at Warners' Hollywood theatre in Hollywood. There was occasional spontaneous applause for impressive acting, and laughs of the right kind came in precisely proper places. Comments from press, profession and public were emphatically on the favorable side.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Hitting a New High

(RKO Radio)

Lily Pons

Again in this bizarrely premised and presented picture another attempt is made to wed grand opera to the more common and plebeian forms of screen entertainment.

Its principal feature is Lily Pons and her singing. The picture leaves no doubt that was the element upon which the producers concentrated. On the screen four-fifths of the film's length, and singing most of that time, she is heard in operatic arias, especially composed modern numbers. Imitating bird songs and calls and harmonizing with musical instruments. Those who understand and appreciate musical art undoubtedly will be impressed. Those whose preferences lie in other directions probably will react otherwise.

As she sings, Miss Pons is the central figure in a story of a hoax that backfired in several different ways. The detailing of the story permits Jack Oakie and Edward Everett Horton to be characteristically comic, and while there is a suggestion of romance in John Howard's relationship with Miss Pons, Eduardo Ciannelli, Luis Alberni, Jack Arnold and Leonard Carey have fill-in parts.

Presented in gaudy settings and keynoted so that comedy is the vein, Miss Pons singing with Howard's band in Paris, had operatic ambitions. Heard by press agent Oakie, who realizes she is the voice Horton is seeking, he hides her out in an African jungle. Discovered there by impresario and mighty hunter Horton, she is brought to America and presented via radio after being trained by Alberni as the bird girl. Howard's discovery of the hoax complicates matters for Oakie as he forces her to sing in his night club. Ciannelli hears her and wants her for opera, but Horton, jealous of his partner will not listen to him. He, in turn, plans a garden party for her presentation. Ciannelli discovers the night club singer and the bird girl are one and the same. Horton does likewise later in the night club. Both want her for opera but she prefers romance and singing with Howard.

Previewed in the Pantages theatre, Hollywood. Audience reaction indicated that exhibitors have showmanship problem cut out for them. Eavesdropping on remarks made in the theatre and in the lobby afterwards lead to the forming of the opinion that the patrons thought there was too much of everything and that they would have been better pleased had the material been more expertly shortened.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Beg, Borrow Or Steal

(MGM)

Comedy

The audience which witnessed the preview of "Beg, Borrow or Steal" didn't see any great stars. The last issue of Fame, gave none of the players featured any kind of recognition for box office draw. Yet casting the lot of them in a farce comedy, seemingly in violation of the first showmanship law that there must be at least one big name in a picture, MGM turned out an attraction which had the preview crowd in stitches from opening shot to fadeout.

The players featured (you are referred to the credits for their identities) are actors who know what to do and how to do it. As a general rule they are character or support players who, most of the time, confine their activities to carrying the show and making the big name players look good. As they worked in this picture, all seemed glad of the opportunity to have the whole show to themselves. In adapting William C. White's story, the screen play writers, Leonard Lee, Harry Ruskin and Marion Parsonnet, provided good lines and situations for them, and it is plain to see that producer Frederick Stephani and director William Thiele were content to let the crowd, more or less, go along on its own. The result is amusement which provokes laughter that obliterates much of the dialogue.

"Beg, Borrow or Steal" the locale of which is the French Riviera is the tale of a suave American bunco steerer who steered himself into a mess. In doing so he steered his daughter into romantic happiness. There isn't much novelty to anything that is done yet all that is done seems fresh and new. With his gentle crook pals, Herman Bing, Eric Rhodes, George Givot, Reginald Denny and Vladimir Sokoloff, flim-flammer, played by Frank Morgan, is always just a step ahead of the police. He runs up against a real crisis when his daughter, Florence Rice, whom he deserted 15 years earlier, announces she is coming to France to be married.

Outslicking himself, as it is eventually demonstrated, he prevails upon John Beal to loan him a chateau. The wedding party arrives and Beal falls in love with Miss Rice, much to the indignation of suitor Tom Rutherfurd. The amusement of this situation is accentuated by that which pertains to the sequence in which Morgan and his gang refuse to accept E. E. Clive as a real nobleman. Soon one of Morgan's shady deals, and the police, catch up with him. Miss Rice overhears him as he confesses to Beal, who saves his hide. Later he makes a clean breast of everything to the wedding party and as Harlan Briggs, Cora Witherspoon and Rutherfurd walk out in indignation, Beal reveals himself as a real Count, the owner of the chateau, and glad to have Miss Rice as a bride. Clive adopts Morgan and his henchmen as companions.

Previewed at the Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles, November 26. Seldom has an audience been heard laughing so continually. If it felt any disappointment at the absence of big names, it certainly didn't show it. Inasmuch as the patrons represent a cross section crowd that might be found in any neighborhood theatre, it may be expected that similarly composed audiences will react to the film's amusement quality in like manner.—G. ## Small Town Boy

In his portrayal of a homey, likeable small town character who is forever being imposed upon by others, Stuart Erwin captures the spirit of the story and provides enjoyable comedy. A theme that is not particularly novel has a few good twists to it, but in the final analysis it is a picture which has been built around Erwin and on his performance its success depends.

Based on a Cosmopolitan Magazine story, "The Thousand Dollar Bill," by Manuel Komroff and converted into a screenplay by Glenn Tryon, who also directed the picture, it tells of an easy-going, unassuming "Henry" who undergoes amazing changes when he finds a $1,000 bill. In the cast are Joyce Compton, Jed Prouty, Clara Blandick, James Blakely, Dorothy Appleby and Clarence Wilson.

The "Armstrong" household is divided into two camps. There's "Henry" and his father and "Eddie" (James Blakely) and his mother. The mother rules the house and pampers "Eddie." "Henry" and his father are two of a kind. "Henry" works in an insurance office as a salesman, but he never makes a sale. He would like to marry "Molly," but he can't earn any money.

"Henry" finds a $1,000 bill in the street and advertises for its owner in the paper. No one claims it and "Henry," feeling that as long as he has the bill with him he has power, becomes forceful, turns against the poolroom hanger-on "Eddie" and sets his wedding date with "Molly." "Henry" loses the bill and a chase begins which finally winds up in court with the judge declaring the bill a "phoney." "Henry," however, has had a taste of power and doesn't intend to lose it.

The Life and Loves of Beethoven

(World)

Musical Biography

Any study that treats as its subject one of the immortal geniuses of the ages is bound to borrow from the nature of the theme a certain amount of impressiveness and importance. So, too, with this motion picture of the German music master, Beethoven.

Scholars and critics may find some excuse for carping and debate on this screen biographical transcription. A middle aged and advanced musician is the Beethoven presented in the introductory sequences. There are no scenes of his early life and training.

The title role is essayed by Harry Baur, one of Europe's foremost character actors. M. Baur plays his part with steady, somber and thoughtful precision. Jany Holt performs the important assignment of Juliette, who according to the claims of this narrative was the direct inspiration of the immortal melodies of "The Moonlight Sonata" and to whose person was penned the famous love letter "Immortal Beloved." However, Mademoiselle Holt looks and plays her part in the tempo of one more familiar with modern swing tunes and the tabloid's advice to the lovelorn epistles. On the other hand, Annie Ducaux as the silent and devoted Therese is vastly effective and appealing in her quiet yet eloquent performance.

Abel Gance has given the episodic nature of his own scenario an uneven and sluggish directorial pace. Lighting and sound effects vary throughout the running of the story from expert to slovenly handling. A collection of readable English titles translate adequately the mumbled and rapidly spoken French lines of the players. Under the polished performance of the Orchestra de la Societe des Concerts du Conservatoire such Beethoven musical compositions as the "Pastoral" and "The Ninth Symphony" are given beautiful renditions.

Seen at the 55th Street Playhouse, close to the heart of New York's musical center, where a crowded evening audience was properly attentive and interested but strangely enough hardly demonstrative in its approval of this picturization of the life and work of the great Master.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

The Shadow

Murder Mystery

Murder, with a circus background dotted by freaks, forms the gruesome background of "The Shadow," Columbia production. It adopts the formula style of throwing possible suspects together, making everyone suspicious of one another, and climaxing in a denouement which startles the audience as well as rouses its credulity.

Rita Hayworth and Charles Quigley top the cast. Other players are of no especial name value.

"Mary Gillespie," owner of a circus bequeathed her by her father, finds that business is good for the first time in a long time, due mostly to efforts of "Jim Quinn," press agent. Suddenly, the star entertainer of the show tells her that he holds $60,000 in notes against the circus and wants payment, threatening foreclosure. The star, "Peter Martinet," is killed by a poison dart. The weapon had been stolen from the quarters of "Mary." The notes "Martinet" had are missing, but are found in the safe of "Mary." "Quinn," after exposing himself to danger from the unknown criminal, finally solves the mystery—the killer is one-half of the phoney Siamese Twins.

Willie Howard, dialect comedian, exercises his talents in the role of Professor Ginsberg, an interpreter with more nerve than knowledge. His employers discover his ignorance the first day out of port on a French liner and discharge him forthwith. Because the chef happens to be an old friend Ginsberg finds favor and fortune with two gangster passengers who have had difficulty ordering plain ham and eggs from the French menu. His good fortune lasts only until his persistent flirting with a blonde whom he discovers too late to be the wife of one of his new friends results in his being thrown unceremoniously overboard. In the bubbling wake of the ship he is last seen calling for the French words for "Save me."—Running time, 17 minutes.

Crusade Against Crime

This chapter from the "Crime Does Not Pay Series" uncovers the underhand machinations of the brains behind the criminal, the "mouthpiece" or criminal lawyer. In a way more reprehensible than his gangster client, the crooked barrister aims not to defend justice but defeat it. Taking the case history of one shyster, the episode reveals how an unscrupulous attorney "beats the rap" by false alibis and perjured testimony. How eventually the unethical career of the counselor lands him behind the bars fashions a miniature of staccato action, smooth acting and careful background development.—Running time, 21 minutes.

The wily Oswald and his animal teammates down the brutes in a wild and exciting bit of last minute play. The artists have taken full and imaginative advantage of the material on hand and the various sequences depicting the four-legged creatures rushing the ball back and forth over the field supply several moments of splendid animated amusement.—Running time, 7¼ minutes.

Excellent

Three varied subjects make this newest issue of this series exceptionally entertaining. The first sequence is devoted to a chemical farm out in Berkeley, Cal., where in an experiment vegetables are being grown without soil. The trick is done by using a specially prepared water containing the elements of 10 chemicals. The middle portion concerns further revelations of the life and industry of the descendants of the Bounty mutineers on Pitcairn Island, given widespread film and newspaper treatment. A visit to the lonely and mysterious Easter Island to view the weird stone sculpture that has baffled anthropologists for a ready explanation completes the review.—Running time, nine minutes.

CONCENTRATION OF OWNERSHIP NOTED IN THEATRES OF GERMANY

5,302 Is Total Number of Cinemas Now in Hands of 3,496 Operators; Only 2,644 Exhibitors Have One Theatre

by J. K. RUTENBERG
in Berlin

The transformation of the distribution system in Germany and its effects upon the industry were discussed by Joachim K. Rutenberg in the October 2nd issue of Motion Picture Herald.

Changes made in exhibition and production are analyzed in the article on this page.

A remarkable trend toward concentration is noticed in the exhibition branch of the German industry. Germany has 5,302 cinemas at present. A little less than half of these are playing daily, a third operate from two to three times a week, and the others show films only once a week. Communities without a cinema are covered in regular intervals by traveling enterprises playing in converted halls.

The 5,302 cinemas throughout the Reich have a total seating capacity of 1,943,049 places and are in the hands of 3,496 operators. The chart below shows the number of cinemas controlled by individual companies and the respective number of seats.

| Companies | Cinemas | Total | Seats |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 (Ufa) | 110 | 110 | 119,692 |
| 1 | 18 | 18 | 13,827 |
| 2 | 15 | 30 | 17,152 |
| 1 | 12 | 12 | 7,395 |
| 4 | 11 | 44 | 23,859 |
| 5 | 10 | 60 | 33,292 |

| No. of companies | No. of cinemas | Total of cinemas | No. of seats |
|---|---|---|---|
| 6 | 9 | 54 | 31,429 |
| 10 | 8 | 80 | 31,471 |
| 12 | 7 | 84 | 23,511 |
| 31 | 6 | 186 | 52,667 |
| 34 | 5 | 170 | 61,914 |
| 79 | 4 | 316 | 116,324 |
| 164 | 3 | 492 | 175,319 |
| 501 | 2 | 1,002 | 363,836 |
| 2,644 | 1 | 2,644 | 871,361 |
| 3,496 | | 5,302 | 1,943,049 |

The 5,302 German cinemas are thus controlled by 3,496 individual companies or exhibitors. The greatest theatre circuit in Germany is that of the Ufa, with 110 cinemas throughout the Reich, ten of which are in Berlin.

Rising Income

The total income of all German cinemas rose from 176 million reichsmarks in 1932 (the critical year in Germany) to 220 million reichsmarks in 1935, and it is estimated that the turnover of 1936 is not less than 240 million reichsmarks, although final figures are not available as yet. The attendance likewise rose from 235 millions in 1932 to 310 millions in 1936.

The distribution of cinemas throughout the Reich may be drawn from the following chart:

|---|---|---|---|---|
| Berlin and the East of the Reich | 1,001 | 618 | 295,664 | 381,058 |
| Middle Germany including Silesia | 1,406 | 467 | 247,876 | 477,448 |
| Northern Germany | 767 | 303 | 174,115 | 292,774 |
| Southern Germany | 1,315 | 492 | 222,153 | 415,301 |
| Western Germany | 813 | 426 | 257,098 | 376,468 |
| Total | 5,302 | 2,306 | 1,196,906 | 1,943,049 |

The average seating capacity of the German cinema is comparatively low compared with the United States. The average for the whole Reich is 3600 of all theatres and 512 for those open daily. The highest average is in the western part of the Reich, as shown in the following table:

| DISTRICT | Average Capacity of All Theatres | Average Capacity of Cinemas Playing Daily |
| Berlin and the East of the Reich | 387 | 479 |
| Middle Germany including Silesia | 340 | 531 |
| Northern Germany | 382 | 575 |
| Southern Germany | 316 | 452 |
| Western Germany | 464 | 604 |
| Total for the Reich | 366 | 512 |

The various sections contribute different amounts of income in film rentals, as reflected in the following figures for 1936-37:

Berlin and the East—28% of the total.
Middle Germany and Silesia—22%.
Northern Germany—15-17%.
Southern Germany—18%.
Western Germany—17%.

The balance between the number of films released and the attendance per film likewise has changed completely. In 1928 the board of censors admitted 520 features in Germany, 220 of which were of German origin. In 1936 only 180 foreign features were admitted, compared with 115 national productions. In 1928 there was 116,517 attendance registered per film, against 340,084 in 1936. This change is due mainly to the shrinking film offer and, simultaneously, to the increasing attendance within the last few years, which makes a better exploitation per production possible. The total income of all Berlin cinemas in 1928 was 110,-041 reichsmarks per feature, compared with 275,464 reichsmarks per feature in 1936.

Berlin with its 403 cinemas seating a little less than 200,000 delivers between 15 and 18 per cent of the total film income throughout the Reich, with an ever increasing annual attendance. The figures for the last ten years may be drawn from these statistics.

| 1927 | 53,804 | 50,967 | 5,841 | 0.94 |
| 1928 | 60,588 | 57,221 | 6,517 | 0.94 |
| 1929 | 58,449 | 58,181 | 6,187 | 0.99 |
| 1930 | 56,658 | 57,141 | 6,249 | 1.01 |
| 1931 | 55,606 | 49,120 | 5,089 | 0.88 |
| 1932 | 51,942 | 40,228 | 4,116 | 0.77 |
| 1933 | 48,774 | 36,870 | 3,367 | 0.76 |
| 1934 | 50,225 | 39,274 | 2,988 | 0.78 |
| 1935 | 53,887 | 42,515 | 3,224 | 0.79 |
| 1936 | 61,215 | 49,583 | 3,558 | 0.81 |

The entertainment tax, which in 1924 was 18.4 per cent of the admission price, has been reduced from year to year and attained a low level of 7.18 per cent in 1936.

The restriction in the erection of new halls, which became effective at the beginning of 1935, the strict regulation of admission prices throughout the Reich to prevent unfair competition, the stipulation of uniform film rentals and other regulations affecting the industry as a whole have been considered beneficial.

The other two branches, production and distribution, are far less promising. The increase in production costs could not be balanced by the greater cinema attendance, so that distribution and production saw heavy losses at the end of 1936.

Production costs are compared in this table:

| Year | Costs in Reichsmarks per Feature |
|---|---|
| 1910 | 60,000 |
| 1933 | 220,000 |
| 1934 | 310,000 |
| 1936 | 480,000 |

The increase in production costs without a corresponding rise in film rentals led to a crisis which has not yet been fully overcome. The remedy has been in concentration, so that on the production and distribution end of the industry only a relatively small number of companies remains.

The distribution season just opened will see a total of about 200 features as follows:

| Distributor | Features |
|---|---|
| Ufa | 40 |
| Tobis | 40 |
| Terra | 26 |
| Maerkische-Panorama | 14 |
| N. A. G. | 9 |
| Difu | 7 |
| Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer | 15 |
| 20th Century-Fox | 10 |
| Paramount | 10–12 |
| Siegel-Monopol | 4–6 |
| Others | 21–25 |

The business done by the German-made film in the inland depends exclusively upon the quality of these films.

Without American films at the disposal of the German showmen, the German distributors scarcely would have been more prosperous, and the German exhibitors would have been considerably poorer, for a critical film shortage would have been the unavoidable result.

It is, therefore, much better and wiser for the German distributor to have the American film exploited in Germany than to have a film shortage.

Without a very considerable effort the German-made film cannot draw the many millions of marks in receipts which the Hollywood-made film collects through the Reich, on account of its quality. The chart shows the financial success of German-made and American-made films in three different cities of the Reich:

| Distributor | No. of films | Net cinema income in Reichsmarks | Income per feature in Reichsmarks |
|---|---|---|---|
| FIRST CITY | | | |
| Bavaria Co. | 7 | 70,000 | 10,000 |
| Europa Co. | 7 | 72,000 | 10,300 |
| Metro | 7 | 74,000 | 10,500 |
| SECOND CITY | | | |
| Bavaria Co. | 9 | 104,000 | 11,700 |
| Europa Co. | 8 | 80,000 | 10,000 |
| Metro | 6 | 65,000 | 10,800 |
| THIRD CITY | | | |
| Bavaria Co. | 11 | 77,000 | 7,000 |
| Europa Co. | 7 | 39,000 | 5,600 |
| Metro | 6 | 45,000 | 7,500 |

The bigger the city the better the result for the American-made film. On the average, however, the financial returns correspond to those of the German production.

Theatre Workers, Projectionists in Contract Talks

Projectionist, theatre employee, film laboratory and home office unions, all affiliates of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees in widely scattered cities this week were conducting negotiations for wage and hour contracts.

In Kansas City, Mo., Felix Snow, IATSE representative, completed a pact under which members of the theatre employees' union will receive wage increases. Ushers will receive a minimum of 35 cents an hour and all other employees an additional two dollars a week.

With the exception of several adjustments in the reclassification of houses, negotiations between Milwuakee exhibitors and the Motion Picture Projectionists' Union, Local 164, were completed. The new contract calls for a two-year, ten per cent increase.

More than 300 employees of the Fort Lee, N. J., plant of Consolidated Film Industries were reported to have joined the new IATSE local, the organization which effected settlement of a strike at the plant several months ago. The new union, Local 702, succeeds Local 669 of the Alliance which was the source of a serious clash between film workers during the summer arising from charges brought by members against Richard Walsh, fourth vice-president of the IATSE. The majority of the Consolidated members joined the New York insurgents and formed an independent union. After several months of negotiations a charter has been granted the new local under the jurisdiction of the Alliance.

Possibility of a strike at the De Luxe Laboratories in New York was scouted by Alan Freedman, president of the company, who said there had been no breach of the union's contract. Employees recently dismissed were laid off, not discharged, he pointed out, and they will be rehired as soon as business warrants.

The American Federation of Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants, American Federation of Labor affiliate, was reported to have opened negotiations with Universal Pictures executives in New York for a contract for home office employees.

Oral arguments on the petition of the Screen Writers Guild for an election to determine the collective bargaining unit were heard Wednesday before the national labor relations board in Washington.

Present were representatives of the Screen Writers, the Screen Directors Guild, the Screen Playwrights and Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount and MGM.

Argument before the board revolved around the questions whether the activities of the writers affected interstate commerce; whether they are employees under the Wagner act; and the appropriate method of holding an election, the determination of who would be eligible to vote, and the determining date of the election, if held.

Broadly, the case involves a controversy between the Screen Writers Guild and the Screen Playwrights as to jurisdiction, both being opposed by the producers on the ground that production itself is intrastate business and that distribution, which brings the films into interstate commerce, is in the hands of separate corporations.

Warners' Sales Force Realigned

In a realignment of the Warner Brothers sales staff by Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, Ben Kalmenson, eastern district manager, with headquarters at the New York exchange, was promoted last week to southern and western division sales manager, succeeding Herbert J. Ochs, effective in two weeks.

Edward M. Schnitzer, eastern district manager for Republic Pictures, will join Warners January 1st assuming Mr. Kalmenson's vacated position, under Roy H. Haines, eastern division sales manager.

Mr. Ochs, it was unofficially said will have one or two offices under his supervision in the shift.

Mr. Schnitzer's successor at Republic is not expected to be named before the first of the year.

Mr. Schnitzer started in the industry in 1922. He was with Commonwealth Pictures Corporation for one year and with Producers Distributing Corporation for a like period. Subsequently he joined Fox, where he remained for eight years as branch manager for the New York and Brooklyn territories. In 1932 he joined World Wide as New York sales manager and continued until Fox took over distribution. In March of 1933 he joined Columbia as head of the New York exchange. In 1936 Mr. Schnitzer became eastern district manager for Republic.

Mr. Kalmenson has been with Warners and affiliated companies for more than 10 years. He joined the First National branch at Pittsburgh in 1927.

Early this year Mr. Haines promoted Mr. Kalmenson to eastern district sales manager. The move followed shortly after Mr. Haines was elevated by Mr. Sears as eastern division sales head.

Tax Problems Discovered in U A Purchase

A change in the Samuel Goldwyn-Alexander Korda agreement for the exercise of the options on the outstanding three-fifths of the United Artists common stock may be required as a result of tax liabilities which the deal, in its present form imposes upon the company, it is understood. The possibility is said to have been shown by a study of the agreement now under way by New York and Washington tax experts.

Formal closing of the deal, originally expected this week, will be held up pending the outcome of the study.

Meanwhile no date has been set for the United Artists stockholders' meeting, which was to have been held November 24th in Los Angeles to ratify the sale and which was postponed indefinitely.

Persistent reports current in Hollywood that Maurice Silverstone, head of the company in England, would be named president of the parent organization, were denied by a spokesman for the company.

Unofficial indications are that the source of the difficulties uncovered by the tax experts is the agreement's provision that no dividend be paid on the United Artists common stock until the $6,000,000 obligation accruing from the exercise of the option has been liquidated.

Presumably, this provision would subject United Artists to heavy liabilities under the federal undistributed profits tax over the period during which the indebtedness was being liquidated, with the result that the tax experts retained by the principals apparently are attempting to simplify and revise the agreement in such a way as to lighten the indicated tax liabilities while retaining the original intent of the principals.

Thurston Macauley, American newspaperman and writer, who has been in Hollywood for the last six months as the first Hollywood correspondent of the London Times, will leave shortly to become associated with Alexander Korda's London Films studios at Denham, England, handling Mr. Korda's American publicity from the Britain end. Mr. Macauley has been in newspaper and publishing work for 15 years, the last eight in the London bureau of the New York Times.

STANDARD NAMES GIVEN VARIOUS SOUND TRACKS

17,000 Theatres Receive Bulletin on "Hi-Range" Prints, Standard Fader Setting Instructions

In an effort to prevent confusion and misunderstanding as to the proper handling of the various types of sound tracks, the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences this week issued a bulletin to 17,000 theatres, in United States, Canada and Alaska, listing standardized nomenclature for release print sound tracks.

"Developments in sound recording equipment and technique during the past year," the council announced, "have led to the appearance in the theatre field of a number of various new and different types of sound track."

In the bulletin, mailed to theatres in United States, Canada and Alaska, the council lists the following standard names for sound track:

Single variable density track.
Single variable density squeeze track.
Single variable density double squeeze track.
Unilateral variable area track.
Bilateral variable area track.
Duplex variable area track.
Push-pull variable density track.
Push-pull variable density squeeze track.
Push-pull variable area track.

The bulletin also includes a paper on the "Procedure for Projecting 'Hi-Range' Prints in the Theatre" and "Standard Fader Setting Instructions."

Improved Technique

In explanation of the "Hi-Range" paper, the council announced: "During the past year several of the major companies have in a limited number of releases made 'Hi-Range' prints available to the theatres, which, requiring increased amplifier power in the theatres and having an approximate sound intensity range of 50 db, produce intensity changes which closely approximate those occurring in nature.

"By means of a lately improved technique in the studio 'Hi-Range' prints have a controlled balance of volume between dialogue and music and by means of proper adjustment of the theatre equipment will provide an increased volume differential between music and dialogue which will greatly increase the showmanship value of sound recorded for motion pictures."

The fact that some productions will be sent to theatres on "Hi-Range" prints and some on "regular" type prints, the council announced, makes it necessary for the studio to designate each print as to its type.

Standard Instruction Leader

"Consequently, the council has adopted a standard fading setting instruction leader which will be included in the Academy Research Council Standard Release Print Leader," it was announced. "This standard fading setting instruction leader will designate the type of print, the type of reproducing equipment necessary to project that print, and the general fader setting to be used in each theatre specified in relation to the average fader setting in that particular theatre for the productions of the particular studio under consideration.

"This standard instruction leader will also be of assistance to the exchange in that it will facilitate the special handling required in the exchange for the various types of prints."

In a prefatory note to the bulletin, Gordon S. Mitchell, Research Council manager, explains the standard nomenclature for release print sound track was approved for designating sound tracks by the sound equipment companies and the studio recording authorities.

The paper on the procedure for projecting "Hi-Range" and "Lo-Range" prints was included, he said, to assist exhibitors toward achieving the maximum showmanship from sound recorded for motion pictures.

The fader setting instructions, he added, were approved by the sound directors of all studio sound departments.

Revised Paramount Settlement Affects Eugene, Adolph Zukor

The amendment authorized by Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe last week calling for a change in the $2,150,000 settlement of former officers and directors of the Paramount Publix Corporation, affects only Adolph and Eugene Zukor. The amendment was the result of a mismanagement suit brought by Charles D. Hilles, Paramount reorganization trustee.

Under the arrangement Adolph Zukor will pay $45,000 in cash and $202,500 in nine notes which fall due annually beginning December 31, 1938. In addition both Adolph and Eugene will sign nine notes jointly for $202,500 with the notes falling due on the same date. The petition sets forth that the original settlement provided for both Zukors to share equally in the payment of $450,000 and that it was "misworded."

RKO in Springer Houses

RKO Radio is reporting preparing to acquire a 37½ per cent interest in the six theatres George Skouras recently took over from the estate of the late Jack W. Springer. The actual deal will be held in abeyance until RKO's reorganization plans are approved by the court.

Publix Michigan Theatres, Inc., a Delaware corporation, has been declared dissolved. A certificate of voluntary dissolution was issued at Dover, Del., by the Secretary of State.

See Approval Of RKO Plan

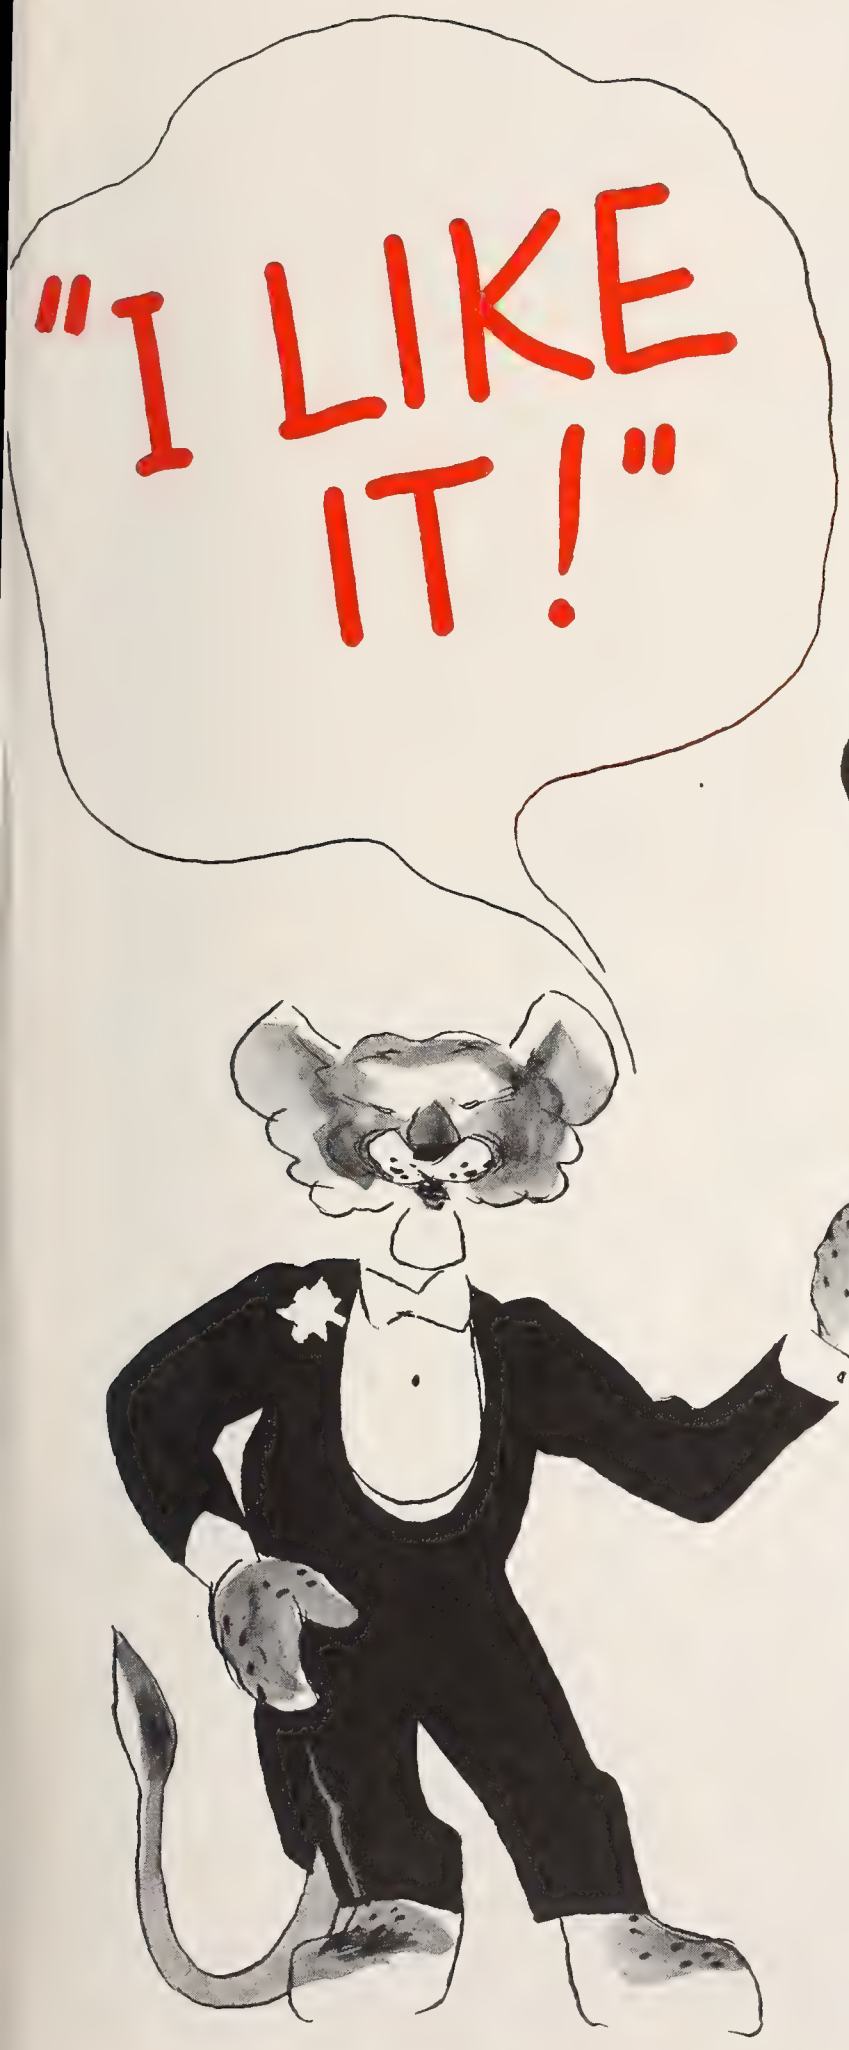
The probability of the RKO Radio plan of reorganization being confirmed by January 1st was increased this week when Federal Judge William Bondy set December 21st for hearing on an order submitted by Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan, calling for confirmation of the plan as amended along the lines recommended in the final report of Special Master George W. Alger.

Opposition to the plan is limited to minority stockholder groups. John A. Stover, attorney for Ernest W. Stirn of Milwaukee,, a holder of old Class A shares of RKO, whose petition for special treatment in the plan for that class of shares was denied by Mr. Alger in his report, indicated this week that he would carry his fight to Judge Bondy and, possibly to the United States circuit court of appeals.

Moreover, Joseph M. Cohen, attorney for GeorgeL. Shein, an RKO common stockholder, declared that he would oppose the plan before Judge Bondy on the ground that better provision should be made for common shareholders than that now made in the plan. Common stockholders receive one share of new common for every two shares of old under the plan.

Opposition from these sources possibly could delay consummation of the plan but its confirmation prior to January 1 still would be discretionary with Judge Bondy.



The Atlas Corporation order submitted by H. C. Rickaby, counsel, provides that the amendments to the plan proposed by Mr. Alger will be mailed to creditors and security holders whose consents to the plan already have been received. In the event their consents have not been withdrawn by December 16, all such creditors and security holders shall be deemed to have assented to the plan in its amended form. All of the major creditors, such as the principal bondholders' and stockholders' committees, Rockefeller Center, Atlas and Lehman Brothers, whose assents to the plan constitute a sufficient number to permit its confirmation, indicated that they will not oppose the proposed amendments.

Only four principal amendments have been suggested by Mr. Alger. They are, that stockholders be given prior right, rather than general creditors, to subscribe for any additional common stock which may be issued for additional working capital or other authorized purposes; that cumulative voting for members of the board be employed in order to provide representation for minorities, and that it be optional with the company whether three-year sinking fund provisions for retirement of debentures be left intact.

MOTION PICTURE DAILY'S HOLLYWOOD PREVIEW

"Beg, Borrow or Steal"

(M-G-M)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—Down New Orleans way they have a custom called "lagniappe." In the north it is known as the baker's dozen. Both mean the purchaser gets an extra doughnut or cookie. In either place it is a gracious gesture. It is not recalled that any great emphasis was placed on "Beg, Borrow or Steal" in the company's annual announcement. But it seems that M-G-M has adopted the "lagniappe" practice. Like "Navy Blue and Gold" and "You're Only Young Once," it is first rate, audience pleasing entertainment. Like a doughnut it is not very much, but there is a whole lot around it. As it delivered one emotion-stirring sock in the climax it had no difficulty in causing the preview crowd to smile, giggle and guffaw from opening frame to fadeout.

Based on a William White story, the screenplay by Leonard Lee, Harry Ruskin and Marion Parsonnet is a frothy, bubbling concoction of clever dialogue and intriguing situations that make sparkling character performances automatic. Actors like Frank Morgan, Janet Beecher, Herman Bing, Erik Rhodes, George Givot, E. E. Clive, Cora Witherspoon, Reginald Denny, Vladimir Sokoloff and Harlan Briggs know exactly how to handle that type of material and the way they handle it, in this instance, leaves nothing to be desired. As this group indulges in its round of tomfoolery, Florence Rice and John Beal, the second leads in "Double Wedding," with the aid of Tom Rutherford, a newcomer, take excellent care of the romantic angle.

Morgan, a gentle grafter, the pal of Bing, Rhodes, Givot, Denny and Sokoloff who prefer to live otherwise than by laboring, persuades Beal to loan him a chateau as a wedding place for his daughter, Miss Rice. The deception is carried out in grand style to the amazement of suitor Rutherford and his parents, Briggs and Miss Witherspoon. All goes well until Beal falls in love with Miss Rice and the gang refuses to believe that Clive is a real nobleman. At the point where one of his shady deals and the police catch up with him, Morgan reveals his true identity to Beal. It would not be real romance did not the latter also prove to be a Prince Charming to take Miss Rice into his arms after Miss Rutherford, Briggs and Miss Witherspoon depart homeward.

Showmen have a show here that they can present to their patrons with the full confidence that it will meet with their approval. If "Beg, Borrow or Steal" is anything but a class A attraction the alphabet is all wrong. Producer Frederick Stephani and Director William Thiele here have given a conclusive demonstration that only a good story, capable players and the application of a little common sense are necessary to make a good film, high in entertainment and commercial value.

"Running time, 72 minutes. "G."

"You're Only Young Once"

(M-G-M)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 28.—This unostentatious production is pointed straight at the great middle class which still pays most of the nation's taxes and does practically all of its voting. It strikes the common people, the number of which the Great Emancipator is said to have commented upon eloquently, right where they live—in their homes, hopes, ideals and emotions. If this preponderant majority of the population has undergone no vital change since compilation of last week's grosses there can be little question that the film will give an excellent box-office account of itself, more than possibly embarrassing most of the costlier productions alongside which it may be programmed.

The central character, a small town judge, is played by Lewis Stone in a manner arguing long and prosperous employment for the widely beloved veteran if this turns out, as expected, to be the first of a series built around the affairs of the Hardy family, plain people. Fay Holden plays the wife, Mickey Rooney and Cecilia Parker, the adolescent children, and Sara Haden, their aunt. The screenplay, by Kay Van Riper, using characters accredited to Aurania Rouverol, takes the family from a small town somewhere in mid-America to Catalina Island on vacation. At that place both youngsters incur romantic attachments of dubious promise and are rescued, so to speak, by their father's common sense counsel. Later, he extricates himself from a financial difficulty.

As directed by George B. Seitz and played by those named, plus Eleanor Lynn, Frank Craven, Ann Rutherford and others, "You're Only Young Once" moves smoothly along from plausible cause to logical effect, employing situations, dialogue and relationships snugly within the experience of perhaps 80 per cent of the 90,000,000 Americans who, unless the figure be down a bit just now, attend picture shows weekly. It's a pretty fine piece of plain bread-and-butter product.

OHIO ITO WILL PROTEST PLAN TO EARMARK TAXES

Exhibitors Urged to Protest to Legislators Personally While Attending Convention

An appeal for united opposition against a proposal that admission tax receipts in Ohio be earmarked for relief purposes was issued this week by Pete J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, who urged exhibitors to attend the ITO convention in Columbus next week and to protest personally to the state's legislators who are meeting in special session.

The proposal to earmark the three per cent tax receipts, Mr. Wood pointed out, was made by Governor Martin Davey in his call message to senators and representatives. "We are opposed to this," Mr. Wood continued, "for the reason that, as the need for additional relief money increases, it would be a simple matter for the legislature to eventually increase the admission tax back to the old 12 per cent rate."

In suggesting a personal protest to legislators, Mr. Wood said: "You will find your representative very willing to listen to your side of the story and, coming from one of his constituents, anything you say will carry a lot of weight."

The convention will open Monday with a regional conference of National Allied at which Martin G. Smith of Toledo, regional vice-president, will preside. Theatre owners from Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio are expected to attend.

Tuesday afternoon the first business session of the convention will be held, an annual banquet will take place Tuesday night and the final business session will be held Wednesday afternoon.

One of the most important items to be considered, Mr. Wood announced, will be the matter of formulating plans to introduce legislation similar to that enacted in Nebraska to curb the "monopolistic practices" of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

In addition to the business sessions and the program of entertainment there will be theatre equipment exhibits and displays of theatre building and remodeling materials.

Included on the list of speakers for the meeting are Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board and general counsel of Allied; Nathan Yamins, Allied president; and Walter Mitchell, a member of the Ohio tax commission.

Neil F. Agnew, vice-president of Paramount, was scheduled to speak but he cancelled the appointment when he left New York last week to attend conferences on the coast with Barney Balaban, Paramount president, and other officials of the company.

Approximately 150 independent exhibitors attended a two day convention of Allied Theatre Owners of Texas. A feature of the session was a round table discussion of recent federal court rulings and the effect of the decisions on the interests of independent exhibitors.

Allied of New Jersey recently announced that the first six weeks of a membership drive resulted in a 30 per cent increase in members.

RKO, Warner and Skouras Men Meet

Midseasonal business drive conferences were held this week by one large circuit, Fox National Theatres, and by two large distributors, Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Warners.

The eastern division branch managers of Warner Brothers attended a meeting at the home office last week to discuss plans for the company's forthcoming "Sears Drive," which will begin on December 26th and run until April 16th. Those attending were: Charles Rich, Metropolitan branch manager; Harry Decker, New York-Brooklyn branch manager; Harry Hummell, New Jersey branch manager; Norman Ayers, Albany branch manager; Nat Furst, Boston branch manager; R. S. Smith, Buffalo branch manager; John Pavone, New Haven branch manager; Gus Solomon, and Sam Lefkowitz.

Southern division branch managers of RKO Radio held a meeting last Saturday at the Peabody Hotel, Memphis, Tenn. Cresson E. Smith, western and southern sales head, and Herb McIntyre, southern district manager, conducted the session. The following branch managers attended: H. M. Lyons, Atlanta; S. M. Sachs, Dallas; R. C. Price, Charlotte; C. W. Allen, Jacksonville; P. M. Baker, Memphis; G. C. Brown, New Orleans, and H. B. Williams, Oklahoma City.

Spyros Skouras, operating head of National Theatres, left New York for the coast Monday for a meeting in Los Angeles, the first of a series of meetings with divisional operating heads of the circuit throughout the country. He was accompanied by A. S. Gambree, Edward Zabel and John Healy.

Subsequent sessions will be held in Denver, Seattle, Kansas City, Milwaukee and other operating points.

Perkins Far East Head, Paramount

James E. Perkins, Paramount sales representative in the Orient since 1924, was named general sales manager for the Orient on Saturday by John W. Hicks, Jr., vice-president in charge of foreign distribution. Mr. Perkins succeeds the late Tom Cochrane, who died recently.

Mr. Perkins left New York for the coast Sunday where he will remain with his family until late this month when he is scheduled to return to Tokyo, his headquarters.

'Monastery' Shows Lives of Monks

"Monastery," authentic and ecclesiastically approved Roman Catholic film record of the lives of the monks of a Trappist Monastery in France, and of the monks of Saint Bernard in Switzerland, will be publicly exhibited for the first time at George Kraska's Fine Arts theatre in Boston on December 9th, the premiere being dedicated to the Reverend Father Michael J. Ahern, S.J.

Mr. Kraska and a committee of 100, including most of the film exchange managers and executives in Boston organized the Father Ahern Fellowship in Seismology at Weston College, Weston, Mass., and for that purpose arranged the "Monastery" premiere at $10 per seat, with the expectation of receiving some $5,000, to be presented to Father Ahern on December 9th, as the first unit in the endowment of the Fellowship in Weston's observatory. His Eminence, William Cardinal, of Boston, is permitting the film to be dedicated to him.

The Father Ahern Fellowship committee has further arranged that the names of all purchasers of tickets to the testimonial premiere will be inscribed on a scroll which will be hung in the office at Weston College Seismological Observatory.

Heading the organization as honorary chairman is the Hon. John E. Swift; Maurice N. Wolf, chairman; Major Patrick F. Healey, vice-chairman; William J. Keane, treasurer, and Florence M. Turner as secretary.

The following head their respective committees: Chairman Catholic Men's Fraternal Organization—Patrick Moynahan, State Deputy Knights of Columbus; Chairman Catholic Women's Fraternal Organizations—Mrs. John H. Murray, State Regent Catholic Daughters of America; Chairman Jewish Brotherhood Associations—Ben G. Shapiro; Chairman Boston Friars Club—Louis M. Boas; Chairman Charge of Theatres—Jos. H. Brennan; Chairman Organized Labor—James F. Burke; Chairman Motion Picture Exchange—Tom Spry; Chairman Newspaper Publicity—Jos. DiPesa; Chairman Radio Publicity—Carlton McVarish; Chairman Headquarters—Mrs. Alice Phelan Keefe.

Robert Alexander, who directed "Cloistered," taken in a European nunnery, also directed "Monastery," and Father Ahern supervised the editing. He gives an introduction and a dialogue narration of scenes taken behind the high walls of the two monasteries reputedly for the first time, including chants by the monks themselves.

Mr. Kraska holds the American distribution rights and distribution is through Du-World Pictures, New York.

Theatre Fire Control In Camden

A permanent theatre fire patrol has been placed in operation by the Camden, N. J., fire marshal. A feature of the system is the education of theatre employees in fire prevention and a recommendation to form their own brigades and elect a chief and other officers.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

There is an echo to our recent item about the publicity from Jack McInerney, Paramount theatre press agent, which, on the occasion of that Broadway theatre's recent anniversary, asserted that some 500,000,000 persons had attended the house in its 11 years. We called it "motion picture arithmetic," and calculated that 74,277,500 was the absolute capacity for the period, observing that the Paramount must have done a whale of a business in standees to have played to 500,000,000.

The echo comes in a letter from Mr. McInerney. Jack admits he was probably cut out for a night club waiter, but went wrong early and became a press agent. "At golf," he added, "I can't figure my score more than 98, while everybody else counts it 118."

"But when it comes to a matter of 500,000,000 persons attending the Paramount theatre in 11 years—well, you've got me, pal. It does seem a bit exaggerated.

"Come to think of it, that's a little more than the number of girls who said they worked for Ziegfeld in the 'Follies,' or were schoolmates of Wally Simpson; even more than the number of persons who claim they discovered Bing Crosby.

"But," Jack continued, "since you've exposed me as an arithmetician, I've been all hours figuring the thing out. Instead of counting sheep to go to sleep, it's got so I count persons entering the Paramount." (Advt.)

Further progress—but, what progress—is reported from the California sector of Warner Brothers studio, where the up-and-at-'em Bob Taplinger now holds forth as new chief of studio press agentry. The other day, right out of his hat, Mr. Taplinger pulled the new publicity position of "party-thinker-upper," naming Miss Helen Walterof, whose duty is to arrange and stage novel games and gags for the Warner players, in order to create publicity material.

This week Mr. Taplinger comes back with a device for welcoming "the visiting firemen" to Warners, using a piece of carpeting, a very conservative piece in size, to which is pasted the hearty greeting: "We roll out the RED CARPET for you, and bid you welcome* to Warner Bros. Studio. Please call upon us, as we are very anxious to play a prominent part in making your visit to Hollywood most pleasing and successful. Cordially, Robert S. Taplinger."

Further up Broadway, near Columbus Circle the Telephone Company is virtually conducting an auction of its ERPI motion picture holdings, already disposing of its installation and servicing business to a Wall Street group headed by Tripp and Engels, and its theatre reproducer manufacturing business, under a license arrangement, to National Theatre Supply and Motiograph—all at the "suggestion" or anticipated "suggestion" of the United States Government that the Telephone Company should stay in the communications business.

His exploitation ambitions were best described the other luncheon time by Arthur DeBra, of the Hays organization, who told a New York Rotary Club gathering that Mr. Morgan offered a season's pass to Loew theatres to a New York churchman if he would have his parishioners, at the end of each prayer, substitute "Amen" with MGM.

Much to the dismay of the management and the chagrin of the publicity department of the Penn theatre in New Castle, Pa., the Monarch Circuit unit underwent a somewhat moistened setback on a first time stunt in anticipation of exploitation for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Double Wedding."

Not anticipating nature's interference—although ignoring a city ordinance—four one-sheet posters on "Double Wedding" were water-glassed to the sidewalk in front of the house, using that good old egg preservative as a paste. Everything went swell until the morning after, when down came the precipitation (rain) and quite an undesirable skating rink formed all over the entire front sidewalk of the Penn.

Firemen-like activity was employed by the entire house management and staff with ashes, buckets of hot water, ice scrapers, brooms and shovels to demolish an investment of $1.10.

But, writes M. D. Cohn, the manager, "Such a sad event has been happily reconciled, since the campaign had plenty of 'youmph.'"

VARNISH OF QUOTA UNITY RUBS OFF; RECIPROCITY ISSUE SPLITS GROUPS

Producers Divided on Separate Quota; Maxwell and Ostrers Disown It Publicly; Exhibitors Play Into Stanley's Hands

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

The superficial air of unity on the new film legislation has been rudely shattered. Now the predominant atmosphere is one of muddled confusion, with different trade branches demanding different remedies and disunity rife in at least some of the individual organizations.

The separate quota proposal sponsored by the Films Group of the Federation of British Industries has already split the producers, and the Gaumont British and Associated British interests, represented by the Ostrers and John Maxwell, have disowned it publicly, walking out of an FBI Film Group meeting, which ratified its faith in the London scheme.

Reciprocity, sponsored by Oliver Stanley, Government spokesman, and approved in the Films Act Committee, has not satisfied the Ostrer-Maxwell group, who have their own reciprocity theories. Nor is it satisfactory to the Labor unions, who are for Imperial reciprocity but against it for foreign territories.

Play Into Stanley's Hands

Exhibitors, with Government invocation, even though it be diplomatic rather than direct, have played into Mr. Stanley's hands by expressing their oneness with the Ostrer-Maxwell group, in opposing a separate quota, and, while not giving any vociferous support to reciprocity in principle offer silent approval of the Government plan.

Meanwhile, as already suggested, the Government's reciprocity scheme, under which a renter acquiring a £20,000 ($100,000) British film for distribution abroad may count it as one British quota film, has gone through the Committee stage in spite of opposition by labor interests.

It was claimed by Labor spokesmen, notably by Miss Ellen Wilkinson, that American interests did not want to distribute British films at all, and that the Stanley clause did not assist that process anyway.

Calls $100,000 Too High

The Ostrer-Maxwell scheme was exposed by the executive of Associated British in a long and vigorous letter to the press last week end, in which he invoked British producers to follow the Ostrer lead and support a scheme which would assist the distribution of product in the United States, though not by the setting up of separate distribution organizations, but rather through existing United States channels. Mr. Maxwell does not believe that American renters should be asked to pay full price for British product, but, suggesting that the £20,000 figure is too high, promises that a fair price would be 33⅓ per cent of manufacturing cost.

A like view was put forward by Maurice Ostrer, chief of Gainsborough Pictures, the Gaumont British subsidiary, who told this writer that his organization would be content to draw £7,000 on each picture from the American market. That, he said, would mean all the difference between profit and loss.

The viewpoint that it is impracticable to get adequate returns from the British market alone is gaining increasing hold among producers here, in spite of the FBI Film Group standpoint. The FBI Group, in a report on the ratification meeting out of which the GB and Associated British representatives walked, and in letters to the press, suggest that opposition comes only from those companies whose interests as producers are wholly subordinated to their interests as exhibitors—this in spite of the inclusion among the rebels of C. M. Woolf, who is predominantly interested in distribution and production. Less prejudiced observers believe, however, that they represent a body of production activity which has sought to improve the quality of product by spending reasonable money, and judiciously, on their films.

Exhibitors who are firmly and flatly against any separate quota proposal have been canvassing the interest of members of parliament, notably those on the Committee going through the Bill, and they have helped the Government—and not without a broad hint that it would be helpful—to kill the FBI Group's scheme.

With this backing and the knowledge that he is supported by at least two of the major production groups in the country, Mr. Stanley has pushed ahead his Films Council scheme, which is the one principle which has solid trade support.

Exhibitors, or a great number of them, are convinced that the Films Council, while not the solution of all their difficulties, will be sufficiently elastic in its constitution and machinery to enable them to obtain any rights they may have been denied in other clauses of the Bill. Not only its duties but its privileges are likely to be so wide that its powers will be great.

In the Committee Mr. Stanley moved adjournment of consideration of a whole batch of the Bill's clauses until the Committee had had an opportunity to consider at length his Films Council plan.

Exhibitor opposition to the separate quota plan is based on six premises:

It will force a new type of "quickie" on the public.

British production will not be encouraged, for foreign renters will make their own films.

American interests would not need to help reciprocity.

British producers are already divided.

Renters will take the pick for themselves and leave exhibitors with the trashy residue.

The Government's scheme is already practicable and representative.

In spite of the fact that the Labor unions and the FBI Film Group have united on the idea, the separate quota proposal is as good as dead, and it is doubtful if it will be revived in Parliament. The enlightened are now asking if the FBI group is as representative as it was, and if Mr. Stanley still has faith in his Labor friends.

Until the Committee stages are a trifle more advanced it is dangerous to speculate too far on the Bill's final form and its effects on foreign interests.

Jabs at Foreign Distributors

That they will be constantly under the surveillance of the Council is obvious, yet it is very dubious that any drastic action would be taken against representatives of a country with which Britain is on friendly trading relations and with which it is presently concluding a trading pact.

There is, however, the likelihood of jabs being taken at foreign renters by various clauses.

Predominantly there is the amendment proposed by Stanley to his own cost clause. This would make possible dismissal of a film from quota consideration if it has passed the cost qualification, provided it is found "to have insufficient value for purposes of entertainment." This on the face of it appears to be of serious import, for it imposes an immediate element of uncertainty on every British film. It would mean that there would be no guarantee of any film, even a film made on the required budget, passing as quota. Obviously it would affect financiers, producers and distributors.

It may be that Mr. Stanley's objective is to put a bar on Indian and Australian pictures and "faked" home product.

But the instrument is there, and an ugly one, it would seem to be. Renters see in it an immediate weapon forged for their own hands to be used by exhibitors discontented with, say, rentals. Much depends on how it operates.

Not least significant of the amendments passed by the Committee is one dividing the renters' quota year into two six-months periods. This is a direct effort to prevent renters acquiring all their quota product towards the end of the year, and once agains shows that the exhibitors have won Mr. Stanley's ear.

Nor are foreign interests too happy about the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association's vitriolic attack on the renters. It is felt that they have overstepped the bounds of fairness, and efforts may be made through diplomatic channels to prevent a recurrence.

Censorship

Efforts seldom cease, from one quarter or another, to provide a change in the trade's censorship institution. Not least active among the wouldbe reformers are extreme labor groups who have found their films trimmed of allegedly provocative sequences.

The movement was exemplified the other day in Commons when Mr. Edwards, Labor representative of Middlesborough, asked the Home Secretary, if he would consider taking steps to appoint a film censor to protect the public interest, in view of the fact that the present film censor is appointed and paid by the trade and has no responsibility to the public or State.

Sir Samuel Hoare in reply said: "I have no reason to differ from the opinions expressed by my predecessors that the present system of censorship works on the whole very well."

Mr. Edwards: "Is the Home Secretary familiar with a case in which a body of people recently wrote to the censor under the impression that he was there to protect public interest, and he not only did not acknowledge their letter but sent it on to the producers, who took legal action against those people? In view of this, will the Home Secretary reconsider this matter?"

Sir Samuel Hoare: "No, Sir. I do not think that an exceptional case of that kind would justify me in imposing any new action."

It was revealed in the Commons recently that out of a total of 144, some 35 colleges for further education in Britain are equipped for showing talking films. Only five of them show standard gauge films.

£4,673,000 was taken by British exhibitors as Entertainment tax for the seven months ended October last. This shows a drop on previous figures. Reduction, it is stated, is due to the concession along lower tax rates for stage entertainment. Only £624,000 was received in this class for the seven months, compared with £4,049,000 from mechanical entertainment, mostly picture theatres.

Warners Subject of Fortune Story

The Warner brothers, personally and incorporated, the organization and operation of the Warner studios at Burbank and the relative place of the company in the film industry are the subject of a feature story in the December issue of Fortune which covers at some length the history of the company from 1905 when Albert and the late Sam Warner acquired a nickelodeon in Newcastle, Pa., to the present.

Character studies of Harry, head of the family and of the company, Albert, in charge of distribution, and Jack, production executive, run through the story as the details of the company's operations are considered. Dating the "real story" of Warner Brothers from the financial alliance in 1925 with Waddill Catchings, Goldman Sachs partner, the article summarizes the early history of the company during which the brothers built up a distribution organization, produced James W. Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," and began making pictures with John Barrymore, Rin Tin Tin, Lenore Ulrich and Ernst Lubitsch.

Purchase of the Vitagraph Company in 1925 with $800,000 raised through Goldman Sachs and the subsequent expansion through the development of sound and the acquisition of the Stanley Company, controlling 250 theatres and a third interest in First National Pictures, are then related as the article traces the company's growth to a "$230,000,000 corporation."

A considerable section of the story is devoted to the company's involved dealings with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company subsidiary, Erpi, which at that time was headed by John E. Otterson, during the development of talking pictures. Also treated are the stock operations of the Renraw holding corporation, the rigid economies by which the brothers staved off receiverships and reorganizations and retained their control during the depression, and the federal government's anti-trust suit against the company, only recently concluded.

"Magazine Night"

(ALL RIGHTS RESERVED)

AFTER months of preparation and negotiation we have succeeded in prevailing upon the publishers of many leading magazines to duplicate the success achieved by newspaper publishers who, with the cooperation of book publishers and authors, have sold almost 45,000,000 books to their readers. We, however, have made it possible for theatre-owners to purchase leading magazines at prices so low as to make it possible for them to give the magazines absolutely free to their patrons.

What this "MAGAZINE NIGHT" plan will mean to theatre-owners is best conveyed by a recent survey conducted by PRINCETON UNIVERSITY, which revealed that patrons of motion picture theatres read more magazines than do any other class of people. This fact will answer a theatre-owner's question: "Would my patrons want free copies of the leading magazines?"

Since theatre-goers purchase more magazines than any other class of people, they certainly will be thankful to the theatre-owners who will make it possible for them to get leading magazines free. In addition to creating goodwill, theatre-owners will make a satisfactory profit on the venture, too.

We have made arrangements with the magazines listed opposite to participate in our "MAGAZINE NIGHT" project.

We have more magazines under contract not listed here, and are negotiating with still others. Our months of negotiations leave us convinced that we have all the available and desirable magazines.

Despite that we will have no competition, in quality magazines, we will nevertheless sell the magazines to theatres at very low prices.

There will be two groups of magazines: A low priced group that will contain the leading low-priced magazines, which will be especially attractive to theatres that charge low admissions. These theatres, which have been unable to participate in the higher priced theatre premiums, can profitably contract for "MAGAZINE NIGHT," with the satisfaction that, though the magazines will be in the low-priced group, they nevertheless will be the leaders in their respective fields.

The higher priced group of magazines will appeal to deluxe theatres—including theatres that have never given premiums to their patrons.

We wish to emphasize this important point: All magazines will be CURRENT ISSUES (not back or off-sale numbers.)

CHANCE GAMES DEFEATED IN ALABAMA, NEBRASKA

Two State Decisions More Than Offset Few Localized Victories Won by the Theatre Practice

State, municipal and court opinions on the legality of chance games at motion picture theatres continues divided, although this week the practice received serious setbacks in adverse rulings in Alabama and Nebraska.

On the One Side:

The Alabama supreme court ruled that games are a violation of state lottery laws.

In Cleveland, Ohio, two Bingo operators were found guilty of violating the anti-gambling laws.

The operation of Bank Night at a Sanford, Fla., theatre was halted by the local sheriff's office.

The Attorney General of Nebraska ruled that Screeno and Bingo are lottery violations.

A Racine, Wis., ordinance banning chance games was drafted and referred to committee.

The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture and Markets advised that a new merchandise credit scheme called Speedo Byke was a violation of the state trading stamp law.

On the Other Hand:

The Jacksonville, Fla., City Council rejected a proposed ordinance to prohibit the holding of Bank Night contests in the city.

The Chicago City Council is reported to be considering a plan to license games of skill.

In New York, the Loew's and RKO circuits have no plans to drop games and giveaways.

A Philadelphia exhibitor was acquitted by a jury of charges growing out of operation of a Bingo game, as an illegal lottery.

A Providence, R. I., district judge ruled Bank Night as conducted at the Grand Central Market in Providence "a trade-stimulating plan."

In the Middle:

The Skouras circuit in New York was reported to be definitely in favor of eliminating games despite the fact that the circuit has inaugurated giveaway policies in several of its Long Island houses.

The Tri-State Theatre Corporation, Des Moines, Iowa, is seeking a new way to handle Bank Night following disturbances at several of their theatres.

Hearings will begin in Washington shortly to legalize federal lotteries to ease the tax burden and to reduce relief costs.

The Alabama Ruling

In the Alabama ruling the supreme court of the state refused a writ of certiorari to the court of appeals in the giveaway case of Cecil Grimes, manager of a theatre at Tuscaloosa. Birmingham set December 4th as the deadline for games.

The ruling in part read:

"The lust for profit by catering to and commercializing the gambling spirit has given rise to many ingenious devices resulting in very many decisions by the courts dealing with the application of lottery statutes similar to ours. The very fact that it is a business enterprise intended to swell the receipts from paid admissions to the theatre, evidences an intention to garner a profit from the gift enterprise.

In Cleveland, Julius Goldstein and David Spivak, Bingo operators, were found guilty in municipal court of violating the anti-gambling laws. The verdict was reached by a jury of eight women and four men with Judge Oscar C. Bell presiding. The defendants, through their attorneys, filed a motion for a new trial.

Sweeping Decision

The ruling of Attorney General Hunter of Nebraska that Screeno and Bingo are lottery violations covers more ground than the earlier Banko ruling, since not only theatres, but churches, organizations and clubs have depended on both for raising money. The Attorney General advised Glen Van Way, Gothenburg, Neb., that he might donate the $200 undistributed Bank Night pool at his theatre to relief if he desired, although it was within the exhibitor's right to keep the money.

An ordinance to ban lotteries, gift nights, corn and bingo games and similar promotions has been introduced in the common council of Racine, Wis., and referred to the committee of the whole.

The Kenosha, Wis., common council has instructed its city attorney to draft a similar measure.

The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture and Markets advises that a new merchandise credit scheme called Speedo Byke and offered to Wisconsin theatres is a violation of the state trading stamp law.

The city council of Jacksonville, Fla., by a vote of 13 to 7, rejected a proposed ordinance to prohibit the holding of Bank Night contests in the city.

The Chicago city council is reported to be considering a plan to license games of skill in the city. Included is Screeno, pin games and other similar chance games.

Exhibitor Acquitted

Ray O'Rourke, proprietor of the Doris theatre, Philadelphia, was acquitted by a jury of charges growing out of operation of a bingo game at his theatre. He was accused of running an illegal lottery. A jury of seven men and five women handed down the verdict.

Judge Maurice Robinson in sixth district court in Providence, R. I., ruled that Bank Night as conducted at the Grand Central Market there September 30th "is a trade-stimulating plan and does not amount to a lottery." Judge Robinson acquitted Michael J. Hurney, Quincy, Mass., promoter who was arrested by Providence police in a raid on the market drawing.

The Tri-State Theatre Corporation plans to handle special Bank Night in a different manner, following disturbances at several of their theatres caused by impatient patrons protesting the length required for the draw.

Edward A. Kenney, member of the House of Representatives from New Jersey, in Washington, said that hearings on his bill to legalize federal lotteries to ease the tax burden and to reduce relief costs, will be held early this month. Hearings will be held before a House Ways and Means Sub-committee headed by Representative Lamneck of Ohio.

"Snow White" Premiere Set

Walt Disney's feature length animated picture, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," will have its world premiere at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood, shortly before Christmas. Mr. Disney has 20 cartoons in various stages of animation divided as follows: Five Donald Ducks, two Mickey Mouse solos, five with his gang; one Goofy in his first starring role and seven Silly Symphonies, one of which will reunite the three little pigs and the big bad wolf.

Capra, Columbia Settle Difference, Director Returns

In announcing a settlement of the dispute between Frank Capra and Columbia the home office in New York this week released to the press the following telegram from their Hollywood studio:

"Harry Cohn, president, and Frank Capra, director, have jointly announced that all differences and litigation arising therefrom had been completely and satisfactorily adjusted. Mr. Capra returns to Columbia Studios immediately."

A Hollywood dispatch to the New York Times said that Mr. Capra will at once launch plans for two films he will make next year. The first, it was said, will be "You Can't Take It with You." The Times also said, "It is understood Columbia concedes that Mr. Capra has only two pictures to make under his old contract, abandoning the third claimed by the studio. An attempt will be made to provide the director with ample material so that he can complete his assignments during 1938.

Several months ago Mr. Capra sued, first in Hollywood and later in London, to abrogate his contract. One basis for the action was credited to Columbia's editing his "Lost Horizon" contrary to Mr. Capra's wishes.

Interior Bureau's Film Report

Approximately 4,000,000 persons saw motion pictures distributed by the Interior Department during the fiscal year ended June 30, last, it is estimated by Fanning Hearon, director, in his annual report on the activities of the motion picture division, made public this week.

During the year, it was said, the division produced some 30 reels at a cost of $1,700 each, including the most ambitious film the department has yet attempted, "The Price of Progress," dealing with the destruction and conservation of natural resources.

In addition to the conservation film, Mr. Hearon said, production activities included three Indian pictures; a presentation of the rehabilitation of the Virgin Islands; a picture on Boulder Dam and another on the Bureau of Reclamation in general; a story of the Ohio-Mississippi flood, and the beginning of a film record of Grand Coulee Dam. Of lesser importance were several pictures on national and state parks and the Civilian Conservation Corps and related subjects.

The pictures produced by the department are distributed at the rate of 500 shipments a week to theatres, colleges, schools, CCC camps and interested institutions, organizations and groups, it was reported.

BOOK REVIEWS OF THE WEEK

TALKING PICTURES, How They Are Made, How to Appreciate Them, by Barrett C. Kiesling. Johnson Publishing Company, Richmond, Va. 332 pages. Illustrated and indexed. (Price $1.40.)

In this document is the most competent, unified presentation in lay language of the processes of making today's motion pictures that has yet been achieved. It is so far as this reader is aware the only exposition of the studio processes and the Hollywood job that has been done with competency and authority. It is so lucid that even executives will be able to understand it, and while it is addressed at a very general public it might, if adequately administered, convey information to persons engaged in the art and industry.

This book is an examplification of the proper processing and functioning in the art of writing, which is to say that it is the expression of authority gained by participation in the subject. The common failure of the art of writing is that it is done so preponderantly by persons who make writing their business and in consequence are likely to know a lot about laying words end-to-end and to have actual authority about nothing else. Mr. Kiesling, while a writer, is, and has been these years and years, primarily engaged in the activities of the studio in the making and purveying of motion pictures. His book in consequence has a deal in it that is not to be found in the more frequent efforts of persons writing from their experiences in theatre seats and from a stack of newspaper clippings.

The illustrations have narrative integration with the job and there as elsewhere the facilities available through the author's association with the great Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer machine are in evidence without invading the comprehensive nature of the work or making it in any sense a partisan expression, an element which has at times colored some of the writings of Hollywood.

In his twenty-fourth chapter entitled "Social Influences," one may fear Mr. Keisling was not entirely fortunate in argument for the motion picture as a force for friendship between nations, and in behalf of universal peace. It would seem to some observers that the world has been having bigger and better wars ever since the screen came into operation. The author does make a great case for the motion picture's stimulation of fashion waves in this simian world and its aid to the spread of gadgetry, accepted in some quarters as evidence of advancing civilization.

Other interesting headings are "The Short Subject," which many will remember as a component of entertainment in the earlier days, a chapter on "The Home and School" and some forecasting, conservatively done on "The Road Ahead."

The book is essentially a textbook but sufficiently entertaining in its approach to avoid offense to the many who object to being educated.

It includes an excellent glossary and a comprehensive index.—TERRY RAMSAYE.

FILM AND SCHOOL, a handbook in moving picture evaluation, by Helen Rand and Richard Lewis, a publication of the National Council of Teachers of English. D. Appleton-Century Company, New York. 182 pages. Illustrated. (Price $1.12.)

This is a solid job of words on paper to say over again a considerable number of things that teachers have been saying about the screen for several years along with textbook outlines of methods for student attention to the art. There has been an apparent striving to make the book detached, objective, but it is also made clear enough that the authors, and their clan, are considerably more than conservative in their attitude toward the motion picture of today as a contribution to culture. There is also evidence that they think that the screen sêrves the political purposes of what used to be called "the vested interests" and that it neglects human problems of the great common people. There is no indication of any awareness that it has been the dumb dime vote of the all too common people of the box office majority who have made the motion picture of entertainment precisely what it is.

If indeed "moving picture evaluation" is to be taught in the schools this little text book will perhaps suffice and even well serve. The book presents as reasons for its existence the fact that the motion picture is a large influence. This petulant and old fashioned reviewer, having had long to deal in executive capacities with the products and by products of the educational machine, can think of several subjects in which instruction could stand attention and improvement ahead of movie studies. It would be nice if high school students were taught to read accurately and spell with approximation, and it would seem reasonable to ask that more of the graduates of colleges should have been required to acquire a touch of grammar and at least an awareness of the existence of syntax.

Also while carping, it may be observed that their term "moving pictures" is both archaic and in basic error. They are writing of what the spectator sees on the screen, which assuredly is not pictures which move, but decidedly is a succession of pictures from which he implies motion.

Some entertainment can be had from the pages of this volume in its schoolmasterly presentation of two graphs calculated to show that Mr. Morgan and Mr. Rockefeller are in complete final control of the motion picture industry. Both of those gentlemen will be surprised and if the control is as simple and direct as the lines on the chart the booking problem of the Music Hall, right downstairs, is just nothing at all. One graph shows banking control lines, the other sound patents.

The authors have found space to give support to a number of organizations which have notable concentration of extreme leftist memberships.

This book could supply clinical information concerning the factions that it represents to a foresighted industry. It also without intent conveys reiterative information about the nature of what is called democratic education.—T. R.

Minsky Closes Two Theatres

The Oriental and Apollo, burlesque theatres in New York's Broadway district were closed this week by Morton Minsky, owner, who said the houses had lost $25,000 in the last few months "trying to succeed in spite of Mayor La Guardia's ban on the 'strip-tease' and the use of the word 'burlesque' in advertising matter." Mr. Minsky said that 150 persons will lose jobs.

The houses are expected to reopen as motion picture theatres. The Apollo has been leased by Harry Brandt, New York theatre operator.

License Commissioner Paul Moss denied burlesque licenses to all burlesque theatres last May. In September they were allowed to reopen under 90 day permits, and under the supervision of a board of citizens headed by John F. X. Masterson, Brooklyn lawyer. The permits expired on November 22nd and since then the theatres have been allowed to operate temporarily without permits.

Mr. Minsky said that his relations with the supervisory board has been pleasant and that he had had no trouble with the license commissioner. It was, he said, "a case of bad business." But, he said, in referring to city officials, "they're just putting us out of business. You can't sell people a show tagged 'Follies' for 25 or 30 cents and make them believe that it is patterned on the old time burlesque shows. The name 'burlesque' has been used for 40 years, and for 15 years we have spent a lot of money building up the name of Minsky. They are kicking us around."

There are six other burlesque houses operating temporarily without permits. It is not known whether their license will be renewed.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 94

Question No. 94 was: (A) Name seven variable factors that require adjustment of volume control as the show runs. (B) Set forth your own views as to box office value of really competent volume control. (C) Name the various duties requiring attention by the projectionist after the show has closed for the day.

The following made acceptable replies: S. Evans and C. Rau; H. Edwards; C. Oldham; L. Cimikoski; G. E. Doe; J. R. Prater; W. Limmroth; M. and J. Devoy; J. A. Zachritz; H. B. Smith; K. and R. Wells; L. F. Hayes; W. H. Edmonds; P. and L. Felt; L. H. Kelley; J. J. Petersen; J. Schmidt; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; G. L. Goss; T. W. Redhouse; Q. G. Roldon; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkler; E. F. and M. Wentworth; H. Bunker; J. Morton; H. T. Plum and D. A. Shea; D. Coates; W. V. Henderson and H. M. Jackson; B. L. Kent; L. F. and G. Brown; H. A. Ames and F. E. Dorp; H. T. Randolph; W. B. Myers and L. G. Dillon; R. H. Carter; B. and M. Walker; R. S. Welch; A. W. Baxter; K. L. Brant; F. M. Brown and R. Davis; C. H. Lowrie; M. F. Robinson and L. A. Beachwood; A. C. Greene; R. R. Jacobs and B. B. Hornstein; F. W. Brandenburg; E. Exline; D. and W. Porter; R. M. Schnider; H. T. Watkins and N. S. Reid; T. D. Williams; L. and F. L. Savlor; T. and W. Turk; W. R. Davis and B. L. Bunt; S. Hewitt; J. K. Robinson and R. E. Bullard; P. F. Maxwell and S. U. Lamont; W. R. Matthews and J. R. Davidson; L. Johnson; A. H. Bradley; F. D. Scanlon; M. O'Connell; W. L. Brandon and S. H. Billings; M. Samuels and O. L. Goldstein; H. T. Todd and L. E. Dodson; C. Caldwell; G. T. Jones and A. Leonard; D. Dennis; M. D. McGuire; A. D. Lonby; S. L. Maxwell; G. T. Vieller.

G. E. Doe lists the variable factors tending to necessitate adjustment of volume as the show runs as follows: Proportion to which auditorium is filled or empty. Character of clothing worn by audience present. Different kinds of clothing absorbs different percentages of sound energy. Variations in recorded sound level upon the film itself. Possible fluctuations in supply voltage. Variations in amount of noise created by the audience, by operation or non-operation of ventilation fans or from other possible causes. Possible variations in some portion of the projection equipment, for example, possible sagging of exciter lamp filament. In addition, atmospheric conditions call for different adjustments of fader, but this is very unlikely to call for changes as the show runs."

"Last week I visited a neighborhood theatre seating about 500. The volume of sound was sufficiently high to be extremely unpleasant, not to say deafening. The difference may be charged to the fact that the great Music Hall has a manager who has understanding, whereas the small theatre has not. And this lack of understanding is found, in greater or less degree, in thousands of theatres. Managers have no right to blame the projectionist, who is cut entirely off from all direct connection with the sound he is recreating. It is the business of theatre managers to maintain sound at proper level by some system of observation followed by signals to the projectionist.

"Sound volume for best results at the box office must be kept at a level simulating naturalness—at a level where it is pleasant to listen to. When it reaches the noisy stage the reaction of audiences will be noisy because very many individuals will become fidgety, restless and irritated. In justice patrons should register a complaint with the management. But, except rarely, they don't bother to do that. They sit the show out and, except where some feature they just must see comes along, try some other theatre, if any other be available.

"Attending a theatre where sound is well reproduced and of proper volume we find the audience, save in comedy spots or at exciting points, to be "still as a mouse," wholly absorbed in the story. This of course is the condition desired by all concerned. It would seem that volume a trifle too low is better than the opposite. It also seems this is a matter that is given entirely too little attention by the managements of very many theatres, or should I say by the average management.

"Where the audience has witnessed a good production, well projected visually and accompanied by as nearly as possible perfect naturalness in sound, it leaves the theatre well satisfied. It has been well entertained. The management and projectionist working in proper cooperation have proven to producers that proper delivery of productions can be provided. That those millions who really pay the producers for their often huge investments can be satisfied and of mind to continue that generous support at theatre box offices upon which the success of the industry and all connected therewith depends.

"In conclusion I would say that all exhibitors and theatre managers should be impressed with the vital necessity for very careful handling of sound volume. True there is a relatively small percentage of theatre goers who demand, perhaps vociferously, a torrent of sound. True naturalness does not satisfy them. But such patrons can only be satisfied by making nine out of every ten patrons uncomfortable and to a goodly number of them literally spoiling the show."

Note: I have rewritten brother Cimikoski's reply, following, I believe, his thought throughout. If I have over-emphasized some of his points, I trust I shall be forgiven. I followed what seemed to be his general trend and heartily endorse his views.—F. H. R.

(C) C. H. Lowrie says: "At the end of a day's run the projectionist must of course shut down all equipment and disconnect by opening the projection room main switch, which presumably does not carry the incandescent lighting circuit. He should inspect his storage batteries, if any, and do whatever may be required to have them in proper trim for the next run. He then should, and if a true projectionist will, remain and make any repairs and replacements inspection or the day's run has shown to be necessary. Important matters should never be left until next morning, except for some valid reason other than disinclination to do it that night. One never can tell how long any repair may take. A screw may twist off. This, that or the other may happen and a job presumed to consume only a few moments may take an hour or more. In case that for some reason a repair must be left until next morning the bulletin board should bear a conspicuous reminder, and explicit directions in case some other man is to start the show next day.

"In fact while no exact statement can be made as to what must be done when the show closes, it may be summed up with: The projectionist at close of a day's run must disconnect his equipments electrically (save the storage batteries in case they need recharging) and do any and all things necessary to insure that all equipments will be in shape to give proper service next day."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 100

(A) At what minimum speed should the projector fire shutter rise and fall? Explain.

(B) Tell us just what you know about proper size of loops, upper and lower, and what, if any, variation is permissible.

(C) Tell us what you know about fire shutter mechanisms, their operation, care and what items make for maximum accuracy in their functioning.

(Note: Remember this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

Andrew Smith, Toastmaster For Si Fabian Albany Fete

Andrew Smith, eastern division manager of United Artists, will act as toastmaster at the testimonial dinner in honor of Si Fabian, general manager of Fabian Theatres, December 13th, in the DeWitt Clinton Hotel in Albany.

The committee in charge of the dinner has arranged for two special cars on the Commodore Vanderbilt, which will leave New York for Albany the afternoon of December 13th.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CRIMINALS OF THE AIR: Rosalind Keith, Charles Quigley—A very good action picture which we played on a weekend with Dick Foran to satisfactory business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DANGEROUS ADVENTURE: Don Terry, Rosalind Keith—Interesting melodrama, although nothing to draw them in. Played Nov. 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll—Fair picture sold at special price that failed by far to gross film rental. Absolutely no drawing power. Played Oct. 25-26.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—While attendance was reasonably good on this, audience reaction was bad. The result, therefore, wasn't entirely satisfactory. Of course, since it will be best appreciated by the class trade, you can book it for best results on their nights. Played Nov. 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OLD WYOMING TRAIL, THE: Charles Starrett, Barbara Weeks—A good action western with plenty of suspense. Western fans will enjoy this. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Nov. 12-13.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE ORIENT: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke—Pretty fair action picture. Not strong enough to stand alone. Running time, 61 minutes. Played Nov. 6-7.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE ORIENT: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke—This continues the bad breaks Jack Holt has been receiving of late. The result in this particular case was again bad grosses and patron dissatisfaction with it, one less reason for their wanting to see his next release. Too bad! Played Nov. 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell—Well received. Even Blondell was fairly good in this. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Oct. 27-28.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

CONFESSION: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—Regardless of adverse critical reports circulated in fan magazines on this picture, our folks found it entertaining. Business draw was just fair. Played Nov. 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General.

DANCE, CHARLIE, DANCE: Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir, Glenda Farrell—Very, very ordinary with a few laughs. No drawing power whatsoever. Running time, 64 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DRAEGERMAN COURAGE: Barton MacLane, Jean Muir—A good action play. Played Oct. 27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—Very well received. A wonderful picture. Could sure do with more of Mr. Muni. He's tops. Received many favorable comments for Paul Muni on this. Running time, 118 minutes. Played Oct. 24-25-26.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LOVE IS ON THE AIR: Ronald Reagan, June Travis—Was okay. A little too much like a much better picture of a year ago. Running time, 65 minutes. Played Nov. 5-6.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR: Kenny Baker, Jane Wyman—Good program picture. Running time, 80 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR: Kenny Baker, Jane Wyman—Pleasing program picture enjoyed by my audience. Baker could have been used more in song hits. Play it; it will please any audience. Running time, 10 reels. Played November 4.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

In this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell—This is a picture that along with "Back in Circulation" shows a marked improvement in Miss Blondell's ability. The show is all that any exhibitor could ask for in the way of entertainment. We had a bad snow storm that cut the attendance tremendously. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PRAIRIE THUNDER: Dick Foran—Dick is steadily becoming a Robert Taylor of the western pictures with ladies. We enjoyed very favorable weekend business and feel that these type of westerns are business builders.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THEY WON'T FORGET: Gloria Dickson, Claude Rains—Too deep for my patrons, although a very good story in this class of picture. Many of my patrons were under the impression that the identification of the murderer should have been revealed to finish the story to suit the public. Running time, 10 reels. Played November 11.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—An excellent piece of entertainment that rated good as an attendance getter. But still, it hardly belonged in so high a rental classification when total gross for the engagement is stacked against costs. Played Nov. 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—A pleasing picture enjoyed by all and there were many. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Nov. 3-4.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BRIDE WORE RED, THE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Robert Young, Billie Burke—The Bride Wore Red and the exhibitor sackcloth and ashes after this one, and I speak for most of the audience. The picture bogs down with a preponderance of dialogue and no action and Crawford is slipping and Franchot Tone and Billie Burke never arrived with our audience. I had to open both exits to let the walkouts through, and that is something that has not happened for a long time. With business receding, and it is, it is going to take better than this one to keep them coming.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor—Not up to expectations. Nothing to compare with "Born to Dance" or previous Melody pictures. Without Robert Taylor (to pull patrons) it would have been a dismal failure for us. Played November 11-12.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

GOOD EARTH, THE: Paul Muni, Luise Rainer—Swell! Didn't think our patrons would take to it, but they did, and after seeing it we can really understand why they did and why it was such a hit all over these United States. What wonderful performances by Muni and Rainer! They were grand. Running time, 139 minutes. Played November 7-8.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan—There are no roars coming from Leo on this one. Just about the thinnest story and picture that they could produce and still have a feature. No dice.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan—Pleased, and on a Friday-Saturday, too. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 5-6.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Laurel and Hardy—Here is a natural and does one's heart good to get the front seats dusted off. We thought we had our days mixed up, we did such business, but the calendar said it wasn't Saturday. If Metro would deliver more of these pictures the small town exhibitors, I believe, would appreciate it. Bring on the Laurel and Hardys. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WOMEN MEN MARRY, THE: George Murphy, Josephine Hutchinson—Just ordinary and good for dual bill only. We played as an only feature and it didn't do the business. Running time, 61 minutes. Played November 12-13.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall—Fairly good, but it isn't a small town picture. It's a little too supersophisticated and slow. We played it too hot for a good B. O. Dietrich is a little better in this. Could have been in a little lighter vein for its own good. Running time, 90 minutes. Played November 14-15-16.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny, Ida Lupino, Gail Patrick—A very good picture with the exception of the "Specialty" by Martha Raye. Her part was supposed to be funny, but in reality it was vulgar. Many told me she spoiled the entire picture and I agreed with them. Compare that with the part played by Judy Canova and you'll agree that Martha Raye had no place in the picture. In my opinion Judy all but stole the show. Incidentally, this picture was a complete flop at the box-office. Running time, 97 minutes. Played November 13-14.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—A very good picture. Why it has received so much panning is hard for us to understand. Patrons praised it highly. Played November 18-19.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

EASY LIVING: Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold—Good program picture that drew fair. Running time, 88 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Randolph Scott, Irene Dunne—A good picture that failed to draw, due primarily to its title, I believe. Who said Irene Dunne could sing? Maybe that's what kept them away. Running time, 110 minutes. Played Oct. 31-Nov. 1-2.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

SHE'S NO LADY: Ann Dvorak, John Trent—Pretty good program picture that did not draw at the box-office.—P. G. Held, New Strand, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft—Fine production to better than average business. Played Nov. 15-16.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

THIS WAY, PLEASE: Charles "Buddy" Rogers, Betty Grable—Pleased. Don't believe I could have gotten a better feature for Armistice Day. Plenty of comedy to make it enjoyable for all. Running time, 73 minutes. Played Nov. 10-11.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

ALL OVER TOWN: Olson & Johnson—Terrible. Only one good act in the whole three reels. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Oct. 29-30.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ARIZONA GUNFIGHTER: Bob Steele, Jean Carmen. A good western, but evidently filmed between midnight and day, as the exterior scenes were so dark you could hardly distinguish the various characters. With better sound and lighting this series would be tops. Played Nov. 6.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen, Marion Claire, Basil Rathbone—Breen's best picture to date. His voice is getting better as he grows older. Let us hope he retains it. Rathbone is terribly miscast in this production and Miss Claire is wonderful. Let us have more of her. All in all, this is good meat for the Breen fans.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen, Basil Rathbone—An entirely wholesome story, but still one that is a little weak for sustaining Breen's future popularity. However, picture did a fair business. Played Oct. 31-Nov. 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

QUALITY STREET: Katharine Hepburn—A very pleasing production, especially from the women's standpoint. It did not draw as well as we expected. Played Nov. 10-11.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers—Can rightfully be classed as one of the year's best. Fine entertainment for any audience, and properly exploited should do plenty of business. Not a dull moment in the whole picture.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

STAGE DOOR: Ginger Rogers, Katharine Hepburn—Very good and we played it to a good house. I don't believe the men enjoyed it as much as the ladies did, though. Was a little too fast to get it all in one run. The recording on our last reel was very poor. Running time, 90 minutes. Played Nov. 7-8-9.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

THAT GIRL FROM PARIS: Lily Pons, Gene Raymond, Mischa Auer, Jack Oakie—RKO deserves congratulations for presenting an opera star of such magnitude as Lily Pons in a picture built to satisfy the tastes of the lowly as well as the high. A mixture of high class singing with good comedy to offset any prejudice against opera, "That Girl from Paris" offers the acme of film entertainment. It is an exhibitor's dream come true and a picture that will be long remembered. Everyone enjoyed it here and it was voted the best of the year so far. Give us more of Lily Pons. Running time, 105 minutes. Played Nov. 20.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WINDJAMMER: George O'Brien, Constance Worth—O'Brien is slipping and going fast. One of the poorest we have ever run on a weekend with absolutely no draw. His acting seems that if he were half as good as he thought he is he would be in top allocation. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, June Lang—Good comedy, but failed to draw. Eddie is not so popular as he once was. Personally thought this a very clever picture with plenty of wisecracks. Some scenes really should be cut as they are somewhat disgusting, especially the Peters Sisters' dance number. Played Nov. 8-9.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BIG BUSINESS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—This picture might look like "Big Business" to 20th Century-Fox, but turned in darn poor business with us. My advice, skip this if you can. If you do use it, double-feature it and expect the co-feature to get the business for you. Played Nov. 3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BORN RECKLESS: Brian Donlevy, Rochelle Hudson—An okay action picture, but poor at box-office. Played Oct. 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CAFE METROPOLE: Tyrone Power, Loretta Young—This picture failed us miserably. Our advice to those who have selective contracts and have not played this one, would be to pass it up. We barely made film rental.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CALIFORNIAN, THE: Ricardo Cortez, Marjorie Weaver—Mediocre western helped by the star to look important. Direction is sloppy and gross bad. Played Oct. 26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAVID HARUM (REISSUE): Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—Undoubtedly the best Rogers picture yet reissued, but grosses were unsatisfactory. Played Oct. 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt, Arthur Treacher, Marcia Mae Jones—Swell. Everything for mass entertainment. The cast was right on top of the picture all the way, and as for the kids, wait until they see the monkey that strays in and upsets the apple car with his monkey shines.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple, Jean Hersholt—Many said absolutely her finest picture. We had wonderful tieup with all elementary schools of county, and more than one thousand children witnessed the picture. Boost it, and you won't be sorry. Played Nov. 2-3-4-5.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

LANCER SPY: Peter Lorre, Dolores Del Rio—The jinx holds good against anything that even touches war. Fails at the box-office. The picture is okay, but it did no business and why I don't know, except that the newsreels have been so full of it that the public is fed up.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LOVE UNDER FIRE: Don Ameche, Loretta Young—Good picture we made mistake of playing only one day.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE MILE FROM HEAVEN: Claire Trevor, Sally Blane—Played on a double bill with "Borneo" and whether it was the features or the fact that it was Armistice, we don't know, but they did do a real business for the midweek. We were very much surprised. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Nov. 10-11.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—Fine picture, but many said not as good as "One in a Million." None of our patrons seem to like Tyrone Power, and some other leading man would be more welcome. Played Oct. 21-22.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple, Victor McLaglen—Good program picture. Nothing special about this except the rental. Shirley not half the drawing card she used to be. Running time, 98 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple, Victor McLaglen—Lowest grosser of the Temple pictures. Shirley is excellent in her part; the fault lies in the part not being the sort of thing Temple fans expect of her. On its own, it's a fine picture, but as a Shirley Temple picture it's a mistake and no fault of the star. Played Oct. 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

WESTERN GOLD: Smith Bellew, Heather Angel—Another one of those Harold Bell Wrights that fell flat at the box-office. If you have them booked, you better change them to something else. Running time, 59 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WESTERN GOLD: Smith Bellew, Heather Angel—This guy can sing and that is all. Very slow and dull western that didn't make us any friends. Played Nov. 20.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche—Very good with plenty of action and real entertainment. But it didn't draw for us like we thought it would or like it was entitled to. But nothing does any more. Business is really very poor. Running time, 99 minutes. Played Nov. 14-15.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

United Artists

PRISONER OF ZENDA: Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—One of the finest pictures we have played this year. Second day's business much better than first, which is something here. Played Oct. 28-29.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD: John Wayne, Louise Latimer—Good program picture that at least drew all of the truckers. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAN WHO CRIED WOLF, THE: Tom Brown, Barbara Read—Good murder mystery. Running time, 65 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

REPORTED MISSING: William Gargan, Jean Rogers—A very good programer to less than normal business. Played November 6.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

ROAD BACK, THE: Richard Cromwell, John King—Very strong and well appreciated sequel to "All Quiet on the Western Front." A trifle better than average business. Played Nov. 3-4.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WINGS OVER HONOLULU: Wendy Barrie, Ray Milland—A very good air picture which drew better than average attendance. Played Nov. 13.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Warner Bros.

MARRY THE GIRL: Hugh Herbert, Mary Boland—What tripe! Never saw such worthless waste of film in months. And never had so many kicks in a long, long time. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Nov. 5-6.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SLIM: Pat O'Brien, Henry Fonda—An excellent production, suitable for any spot. In fact, this can be said for any Warner picture we ever played. Played Oct. 30-Nov. 1.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WINE, WOMEN AND HORSES: Barton MacLane, Ann Sheridan—Good. Pleased on Friday and Saturday. Running time, 64 minutes. Played Nov. 12-13.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Serials

Republic

S. O. S. COAST GUARD: Ralph Byrd, Maxine Doyle—Very popular serial, but, like all other Republic serials, repeats about one-half of last reel of previous chapter. In other words, we are paying for the same stuff over and over again.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala.

Short Features

Columbia

BACK TO THE WOODS: 3 Stooges—The usual hilarious comedians that brought the house down. Real trouble chasers. Awful hard on our seats. People couldn't sit still.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 3: A good football season sing. Some of the songs weren't familiar enough for my patrons, so response wasn't too good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

LODGE NIGHT: Andy Clyde—A fairly funny Broadway comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Educational

PUDDY'S CORONATION: Terrytoons—A poor cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

SWEETIES: Two-Reel Comedies—Very good two-reeler.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala.

WHO'S CRAZY: Harry Gribbon—I'd say Educational is, for putting this guy in comedies.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BARS AND STRIPES: Tabloid Musicals—Fairly good musical. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

BOSKO AND THE CANNIBALS: Harman-Ising—These Bosko cartoons are all the same. Noise and more noise with a caricature of Fats Waller and Cab Calloway, and are getting rather tiresome. In fact, the song "Off to Grandma's I Must Go" is getting to be a theme song with them. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BOSKO AND THE PIRATES: Harman-Ising Series—A crackerjack cartoon idea. The voices are excellent and are in keeping with the appearance of the cartoon characters.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

FISHY TALES: Our Gang Comedies—A good short comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—Good. Had audience in the aisles. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

HAVE COURAGE: MGM Miniatures—Very clever. Married couples will enjoy this very much.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOUND AND THE RABBIT, THE: Harman-Ising Series—Very good color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

NEWS OF THE DAY: I want to protest on the same six shots that we have had of Snite in the iron lung in the News in the last 60 days. Too much of a good thing.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PENNY WISDOM: Pete Smith Specialties—Play this one up. It's an all-color subject on a lot of new tricks and economizing on cooking.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF DIGESTION: MGM Miniatures—Mildly amusing monologue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

WAYWARD PUPS: Harman-Ising Series—An excellent color cartoon. This series is so good we don't see why Metro is switching to the "Captain and the Kids." They will certainly have some precedent to live up to.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Paramount

I NEVER CHANGE MY ALTITUDE: Popeye the Sailor—These Popeye cartoons are very good for the kids. This one did not go over with the adults. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IMPRACTICAL JOKER, THE: Betty Boop—Good cartoon.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

IT'S A GOOD STUNT: Paragraphics—Very interesting and hair-raising. Running time, 10 minutes. A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

MY ARTISTICAL TEMPERATURE: Popeye Series—A good Popeye number.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

PICKING PETS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very interesting. Show it. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

QUEENS OF HARMONY: Phil Spitalny and His Girl Orchestra—Very, very good. The ladies are swell musicians. In my estimation the best single reel of the year. Classy and right up to the minute. Running time, eight minutes.—F. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

SAFETY IN THE AIR: Paragraphics—An instructive bit of celluloid.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

RKO Radio

DAY WITH THE DIONNE QUINTUPLETS, A: Special—This is a swell two-reeler, better than many features. If you haven't played this, be sure and do so. It is almost sure to draw the ladies if you let them know you are playing it. This is the first two-reeler that got in people that never come otherwise. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

FROZEN AFFAIR, A: Condor Musicales—A miniature musical on ice, featuring Evelyn Chandler. Good ice skating and comedy, but rather short. Would have been much better as a two-reeler. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MORNING, JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—An Edgar Kennedy comedy that really is funny.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala.

OLD MILL, THE: Mickey Mouse—Very good with wonderful coloring. Running time, eight minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

PHONEY BOY: Nu-Atlas Productions—A very good musical comedy. Good any night of the week. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

RHYTHM IN A NIGHT COURT: Nu-Atlas Productions—A good little vaudeville reel, featuring a singer, a child tap dancer, an impersonator and a quartet of acrobats, all of which are tops. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RHYTHM WRANGLERS: Ray Whitley and Cowboys—One of the best Smart Set Comedies we have ever played. Give us more like this, Ray.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala.

TRAILING ALONG: Headliner Series—Fine musical that pleased our Saturday patrons.—E. F. Ingram, Ashland Theatre, Ashland, Ala.

Twentieth Century-Fox

SKI PARADE, THE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—A very good subject of its kind.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Universal

GOING PLACES, NO. 39: This is devoted entirely to table tennis and is a good presentation of the game.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

SCHOOL FOR SWING: Mentone Musical Comedies—A fair musical reel. Not the pep they ought to have, though.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

WILY WEASEL, THE: Oswald Cartoons—Very amusing cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Vitaphone

ATTIC OF TERROR: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—This is the first of this series we have played and if they are as good as this they will be knockouts. Running time, 12 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BED-TIME VAUDEVILLE: Big Time Vaudeville Reels—A fair collection of child acts.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

BRING ON THE GIRLS: Big-Time Vaudeville Reel—Very good Edgar Bergen reel enjoyed by all. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

BRING ON THE GIRLS: Big-Time Vaudeville Reel—Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy introduce some vaudeville acts in their inimitable fashion.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

CASE OF THE STUTTERING PIG, THE: Looney Tunes—Was of more interest to adults than to kids. Very good cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

GET RICH PORKY: Looney Tunes—A fair cartoon in black and white.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

NEWSBOY'S NOCTURNE: Lane, Tree and Edwards—Very good two-reeler.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

NEWSBOY'S NOCTURNE: Broadway Brevities—A fair musical short.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

RUSS MORGAN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good musical. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

STARLETS: Walter Kibbler, Betty Ann Nyman, Janet Dempsey—Finally Vitagraph has given us a Brevity that is tops. There is more talent in this short than in some of their top productions. The little boy Walter has more talent than Breen ever hoped to have and Betty and Janet are tops. Play it on big days. Running time, 17 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IN COURTS

Writ Halting Building of Cocalis Theatre Denied

Supreme Court Justice Bergen of Catskill, New York, last week denied Grossman and Frieder a temporary injunction restraining Sam D. Cocalis from building a new theatre at Hudson, N. Y., at the same time holding the case for trial. No trial date was set.

Sol Goodman, attorney for Grossman and Frieder, argued that Mr. Cocalis had made an agreement to stay out of Hudson and the building of a new theatre was a breach of the pact. Watson and Looby, Albany counsel for Mr. Cocalis, contended that Grossman and Frieder violated the agreement by making a partnership arrangement with Walter Reade, New York theatre operator. Meanwhile Mr. Cocalis is going ahead with his theatre until the court rules otherwise.

Warners Enter Denial In Two Court Actions

Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., First National Pictures, Inc., and M. Witmark and Sons filed a general denial in the United States district court in New York Monday in answer to the amended complaint in the $1,500,000 infringement suit brought against them by Irving Gielow. Mr. Gielow alleges that his songs, "Flirtation Walk" and "Mr. and Mrs. is the Name," were infringed in the Warner picture "Flirtation Walk" and two short subjects. Dismissal of the suit with costs is asked.

The company filed a general denial in federal court in New York Monday in answer to the $10,000 suit of Select Theatres Corporation which charges that "Ready, Willing and Able" was "deliberately pirated" from their play "The Audition."

Morny Suit Filed

Fredric A. Morny, inventor, this week filed suit in United States district court in New York for treble damages of $3,000,000 under the Sherman Anti-Trust Laws against Trans-Lux Daylight Picture Screen Corporation, Trans-Lux Movie Ticker Corporation News Projection Corporation and Western Union Telegraph Company. Five individuals are also named in the suit. Mr. Morny, formerly sales manager of News Projection Corporation, charges that the defendants attempted to maintain a monopoly of news projection, ticker apparatus and service.

Approves Option Extension

United States Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton, Saturday, authorized Milton C. Weisman, receiver of the Fox Theatre Corporation and the William Fox Play Company, Inc., to extend the option of the Camelot Theatre Corporation to purchase the theatre it now operates in Springfield, Mass., until March 25, 1938.

File Condor Petition

Ben Pivar, Frank Gay and Albert Wentzel last week filed a petition for involuntary bankrutcy against Condor Pictures, Inc., in federal court in Los Angeles, listing claims of $1,000, $250 and $500, respectively. The case was referred to Federal Judge George Cosgrave for a hearing at an unnamed date, Paul Ziegler is attorney for the petitioners.

United States Leads In Imports to Greece

Of 338 pictures imported into Greece during the 1936-37 season the United States led with 241. Other countries imports were, German, 60; French, 25; Czechoslovak, five; British, three; other countries, four. The figures are from a report of Commercial Attache K. L. Rankin in Athens to the United States Department of Commerce.

"FORCED TO DO IT"

Special interest attaches to the subjoined letter discussing MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S recent presentation of a picture and caption about a presentation of a picture of "a real authentic Caesarian operation" at the Empress Theatre in downtown Kansas City, Mo., a former burlesque house. It is the contention of the writer of this letter that self-preservation justifies the policy concerned. That manner of contention can be made in behalf of many procedures, and one can readily think of any number of instances where the justification would not seem exactly adequate.—THE EDITOR.

To MOTION PICTURE HERALD:

YO HE HO, and the producers are at it again.

We have read with interest your comment page 21 of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, November 13, 1937. Everything you say is true. It's bad . . . very bad. Now let's hear the other side of the story.

Sprinkled throughout the United States—in practically every large city—are theatres of various seating capacities, some of them on location, some of them off location, most of them good, substantial buildings, reasonably well-equipped, now in the hands of independent theatre operators. If the "chains" had at a previous time controlled these theatres, they have long since disaffirmed their leases or have refused to renew them, being unwilling to bear the strain of paying rental on a dark house. In this category are also included some newer, more up-to-date houses also owned and controlled by individual independents.

I don't suppose, Mr. Quigley, you have ever been in the position of trying to buy pictures for such a theatre. First run, second run, fifth run or tenth run—it just seems as though the producers won't sell you. What then can be done by the operator to pay taxes on the building and make a living for himself but turn to the "sex" and "exploitation" pictures for at least a chance to survive?

I don't think Mr. Silverman gets any more enjoyment out of operating this particular policy than a pauper does of wearing cast-off clothing, but he is forced to do it, and a lot of credit is due him if he can "put it over." If the producers feel that this type of picture is a menace to the creation of good-will and esteem for the art of the motion picture, why not let them loosen up a bit and see that these energetic operators of theatres, such as the Empress in Kansas City, are availed at least enough product to permit them to operate a "low price" policy and stay in business.—RENO WILK, Berger Amusement Company, Minneapolis.

THEY'RE ABOUT "TOPS"

While hardly given to excitement over figures in theatre campaigns, your Chairman takes the liberty of gazing a bit wide-eyed at a set of statistics compiled in the recently completed Loew's Fall Festival celebration on behalf of the circuit's theatre in the New York division. Some 68 houses, mostly neighborhood and subsequent-run, participated during the six-weeks campaign, guided directly by the Doob-Emerling forces, and what the boys in the field did to draw boxoffice attention is indicated in the listing below. Broken down to exact numerals, tabulation of exploitation devices, newspaper breaks and other widespread advertising cooperations actually effected is offered by the Loew-men in evidence of the tidal wave of activity that accompanied the new season festivities. They tell an interesting story:

| Parades with bands | 361 |
| Auto parades | 130 |
| Bicycle parades | 53 |
| Special newspaper tieups, co-ops, etc. | 467 |
| Radio tieups | 757 |
| Banners | 738 |
| Special windows | 2,590 |
| Ballyhoos | 1,102 |
| Merchant tieups | 4,689 |
| School and library tieups | 1,134 |
| Pole cards | 158 |
| Miscellaneous | 881 |

Here are 68 houses registering over 7000 exploitations during a six week period—just 68 out of thousands where equally determined showmen are doing a similarly vital job of publicising their wares. The results accomplished by the Loew-men add further support to our contention that no other business can boast of anything near the record turned in by theatre-manpower in effective week-to-week selling.

Seems like the members up in Portland, Maine, have been staging a friendly battle on this question:

"If a theatre had a marquee capable of taking only one line, what should the manager do — list the cast or title?"

Well, it makes an interesting argument on a rainy afternoon and probably in the final analysis the answer depends upon where strength of the attraction lies — in story or in names.

Of course, it might make things a bit simpler if the theatre bought a new marquee.

WHAT, NO PASSES?

The two Warner Pleasantville, N. J., theatres depend upon a lot of business from the surrounding rural districts. To advise these patrons of his weekly programs at not too great a cost, Manager Howard Baker has worked out a printed cardboard poster, 7 inches by 10, headed "Weekly Theatre Guide" and containing the attractions and dates for the coming seven days. These are mailed out, at one cent each, to small rural stores, taverns, gas stations, etc.

"We find," writes Sid Blumenstock, zone publicity director, "that patrons of these merchants welcome the cards as a service. It does not require any passes to have the cards posted." (The italics are ours.)

And what's new about the Quigley Awards?

Lots — to be announced soon. But immediate and important has to do with H. C. Deacon Main, recently promoted to Supervisor of Theatres, of the Canadian Hanson Circuit, from manager of the Grand, Sudbury, Ontario.

Main, it is to be recalled, was voted the Quigley Silver Plaque for June.

Had his success in the Competitions any bearing on the promotion?

"Undoubtedly," says Mr. Main.

49 VALUABLE YEARS

The Chakeres folks out in Springfield, Ohio, recently sat down with Bill Nasses and a host of his other friends to celebrate the theatreman's twenty-sixth anniversary in showbusiness. And just about then glasses were lifted in Washington to honor Angie Ratto's twenty-third, most of them spent with the Loew organization.

The combined total of 49 years rolled up by the boys represents a lot of showbusiness, the kind of savvy you don't find in books and mighty handy to have around in the clutch.

More power to you both, gents.

A. Mike Rose

Display of Napoleonia was unusual feature of Manager Maurice Gable's lobby in advance of "Conquest" at the Boyd, Philadelphia. Collection included oil paintings, etchings, vases depicting battle scenes at Waterloo and one of the existent death masks cast in copper, all borrowed from art galleries, antique shops and private collectors.

Featured in football game parade at Centralia, Ill., was giant float in campaign on "High, Wide and Handsome" arranged by Manager H. M. Ferguson and Assistant Donald Smith for date at the Illinois. Oil derrick operation was animated to pump, giving impression of an oil well in operation. Float was also used at the theatre.

Round Table In Pictures

In keeping with the tenor of the attraction, a number of unusual window displays was arranged by Hazel Flynn's Radio City Music Hall department for date on "Victoria the Great". Among these was artistic exhibit in savings bank's window, tying in thrift copy to the picture.

Highly regarded at the RKO Albee, Brooklyn, N. Y., was an animated lobby display emphasizing the date on "Heidi" and arranged by Manager Solly Schwartz. Figure of Shirley Temple was constructed to play the miniature organ, organ music selections coming through dynamic speaker behind the pipes. Display is said to have attracted so much attention that prominent downtown stores requested use of it for windows.

Some of the reported 15,000 Cincinnatians who tied up traffic in the downtown area as a result of the "catch the Firefly" tiein made by E. V. "Dinny" Dinerman, RKO Midwest publicity director. Story on following page.

Star reading home-town paper was used recently by Abe Frank to build a date on Peter Lorre at the Hippodrome, Pottstown, Pa. Local daily made much of the photo, with a three-column reproduction and sizable story on the date.

Miniature house with cutouts from three-sheet on roof was used by Louie Fishkin to plug "Topper" in his lobby. Transparent windows and door were covered with gelatin. Painted background with blinking moon and cutout stars were used for a night effect for date at the Commodore, Brooklyn.

One of the top street parades in advance of the recent Loew Theatres Fall Festival in New York and arranged by Manager Archie Adelman, Loew's 175th Street, included 11 bands which participated in competition for prizes. Other Loew theatres included were the Paradise, Rio, Inwood, and Grand, represented by delegations carrying banners. . . . Below is illustrated unique manner in which Manager Hardie Meakin, RKO Keith's, Washington, D. C., advertised "Merry-Go-Round of 1938". Meakin blew up four of the newspaper teaser ads and set them one behind the other, each carrying check mark at top and headline, "Check this statement".

Free Trip

City Manager Moon Corker reports an effective contest originated by theatre publicist P. E. McCoy for the "Saratoga" date at the Georgia Theatre, Athens, Ga. Tying in with the Banner-Herald, all expense week's trip to Florida was awarded winner submitting five best reasons why she considered the picture Jean Harlow's best endeavor. Arrangements were further made for winner to airmail reports of trip to the paper for publication, day to day. Various merchants came through with wearing apparel, etc., plugging the stunt in ads, store windows and counter cards.

Artist

Arthur Krolick, Regent Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., for "Artists and Models" used two boys out on the street, one dressed in artist's smock and beret and the other in tux; latter carried overnight bag with copy plugging the show. Team would park on busy street corners where artist would set up his easel and draw sketches of passersby. Picture copy was also added to the drawing, which was then handed to those who had posed.

Regatta

Miniature sailboat regatta in nearby park lake was launched by Harry Brown, Loew's Century, Brooklyn, for "Captains Courageous" with seven schools vieing for the prizes. Police Athletic League cooperated by distributing entry blanks through departments of Junior Aid Bureaus. Radio cars were present to preserve order and special squad of policemen was detailed at lake to cooperate further. Newspaper coloring contest was planted and entire staff was dressed in sailor costumes ahead and during run.

Grows Beard

Bill Rast, Waco Theatre, Waco, Tex., for "Mountain Music" not only decked out his entire staff in mountaineer costumes, but even had his doorman grow a beard for the occasion. Special teaser ads were run in dailies and lobby was dressed with jugs, old guns, etc. Special Bob Burns coat hangers (nails) were distributed in imprinted envelopes at all downtown stores and parade was held, winding up at theatre, where local string band played hit tunes from picture.

LAST MONTH FOR 1937 AWARDS

December is the last month in the 1937 Competitions for the Quigley Awards.

Deadline for December is midnight of January 8, 1938.

Entrants are requested to make sure that campaigns for December judging arrive before deadline, so that they will be eligible for the Plaques, First and Honorable Mention Certificates.

Warner Tieins

Reported by Max Melincoff, Warner Theatres Boston zone chief, are activities from men in his zone, including Harold Cummings' tieup for the Warner Theatre, Lynn, Mass. Manager sold leading department store on donating $10 prize to the best dressed woman attending the opening performance of "Vogues of 1938." Store took a four-column by 15-inch ad plugging the tieup, theatre and picture.

In Lawrence, Harry Furst at the Palace Theatre had the Warner Studios take a picture of Pat O'Brien reading the Lawrence Tribune in connection with "Back in Circulation." Paper used three-column cut with story day before opening.

Miniature Trailer

From Bert Livermore, advertising manager, Roxy Theatre, Sydney, Australia, comes accounts of recent circuit activities among which is stunt used by Bert Watts, manager of the Sydney Theatre. Watts, with the aid of miniature talking machine, screens trailers in his lobby. At the Lyceum for "Elephant Boy," the jungle atmosphere was created by having dark-skinned man dressed as one of the characters in the film parade in front of theatre. And for the Pete Smith short "Wanted, a Master," Pat Parker, MGM Theatre, Brisbane, staged a street parade of approximately 100 pooches with dailies covering the event.

Lobby Display

Promoted for lobby display on "Big City" was a four foot high model of the Los Angeles City Hall, obtained from power company by Jack Cleland, Capitol Theatre, Glendale, Cal. Buildings were illuminated and entire cost of wiring and transportation from Los Angeles was met by the company in exchange for small credit card atop display.

Invites Relatives

Extra publicity was garnered by Harold Bishop, Capitol, Winnipeg, Canada, for "100 Men and a Girl" by inviting Deanna Durbin's grandmother and other relatives residing there to the opening night. Lt. Governor with the Mayor and other prominents also attended, photographer and reporter from local daily covering the party. Special screening was held for news, society, radio and music editors of papers, and magazine section editors were contacted well in advance of playdate for illustrated feature stories. Telegram received from the star was embodied in opening day ad, and reviews from other cities were blown up and mounted on illuminated board in lobby.

Leading store featured the Durbin dress and devoted large window on main street to display. Bumper strips were used on fleets of trucks of two cooperating companies and letters mailed to all musical club members. Cards were planted in libraries, announcements made in school classes and Stokowski recordings played in theatre in advance of showings.

Giant Valance

To usher in his Greater New Season at the Virginia Theatre, Harrisonburg, Va., Frank Shaffer placed a 165-foot silk valance under marquee, extending across entire front of theatre and covering frontage of adjoining buildings. Special heralds were distributed locally by billboys and mailed to regular out-of-town patrons, backs of which carried photos of stars to be found in forthcoming attractions. Stories were run in papers and merchants cooperated with ads in which title was used.

For "Topper" gag campaign was used, Frank planting bowl of invisible fish in jeweler's window, erecting a lobby display of trick gadgets and planting other trick stuff in store windows.

Aviation Issue

Planting of an aviation section in a recent issue of "Shopping Guide" to sell "Atlantic Flight" was promoted by Monogram. Front cover is devoted to the picture and stories scattered throughout the book are devoted to an advance synopsis, biographies of the players and fashion features. It is a reported first time for the magazine to tie in with a picture.

'COUNTY FAIR' FINE FOLKSY COMEDY-DRAMA

'COUNTY FAIR"
(Monogram)

This folksy tale of a motherless farm boy with a beloved racehorse, and a father whose bereavement has put him out of sympathy with his children, is first rate entertainment for small towns and neighborhoods. It is a simple story, well told, and has strong sympathy appeal and a wholesome atmosphere that will commend it.

The reconciliation of the father and his son and daughter is brought about by the entrance of a clean, young American jockey who sees the human and equine possibilities and manfully undertakes to cut the knot. In doing so he brings the horse to victory, foils a gang of crooked track followers, and wins the hand of the daughter.

The highly competent cast is headed by that attractive young juvenile, John Arledge, who wins admiration and sympathy. Playing opposite him is Mary Lou Lender, a newcomer who at once earns recognition for ability, sweetness of personality and a good measure of unassuming good looks. J. Farrell MacDonald is the hard-bitted father, whose grief is spoiling all their lives, but who melts convincingly when the youngsters defy him, and his boyish son, Jimmy Butler, rides a winning race.

Fuzzy Knight as Arledge's stable-boy companion, carries the comedy, making the happy-go-lucky roughneck a likable and amusing lad. The plotting opposition is tellingly headed by Harry Worth, whose tough aides are Lynton Brent, Matty Roubert and William Hunter. Minor but essential roles are well filled by Henry Hall, Edwin Mordant, Horace Murphy and Charles Murphy.

The story and script by John T. Neville is an excellent example of sound play-building, with every scene advancing the story, and it is dialoged with telling simplicity. Howard Bretherton has directed with excellent taste and judgment to capture human values without losing suspense, and Arthur Martinelli photographs well the characterful investiture provided by Producer E. B. Derr and his associate, Frank Melford, who raise their standing several notches with this pleasing piece of popular entertainment. Brisk musical trimmings by Abe Meyer add a final effective touch.

DAILY VARIETY

County Fair

The story, written by John T. Neville has sock, heart interest, suspense and a satisfactory audience conclusion, balanced with comedy and the mild thrills of horse racing sequences.

Howard Bretherton directs with effective stress on the tried hokum elements as well as the physical activities involved in the simple plot, keeping them well dovetailed and adequately paced to whip up tension. A competent cast does its chores with zest and conviction. Production is carefully handled to show best results for expenditures without skimping—a creditable effort for E. B. Derr and his associate producer, Frank Melford.

"County Fair"

with John Arledge, Mary Lou Lender, J. Farrell MacDonald

Monogram 73 mins.

(HOLLYWOOD PREVIEW)

HOMESPUN, WHOLESOME TALE SHOULD PROVE GOOD FAMILY AUDIENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

This is a homespun, wholesome tale that should prove good program fare. It is well cast, with John Arledge a convincing hero who outwits a gang of race track sharps who try to make killings at county fair tracks. Mary Lou Lender, a newcomer, is excellent in the role of a farm girl, whose tyrannical father, J. Farrell MacDonald, relents in the end. Fuzzy Knight supplies most of the comedy, while Jimmy Butler does good work as Mary Lou's brother.

MORE CHRISTMAS ACTIVITIES

Christmas Shoppers' Service Inaugurated by Perlberg

Annual reliable worked by Jones Perlberg, Miami Paramount Theatres publicity chief and Manager Al Weiss, Jr., is the "Shop and Mail Early" booth in the lobby of the Paramount. Cooperating department store is furnishing the lobby wrapping paper with such accessories as red and green tissue paper, seals, tape and shipping tags. Santa Claus cutouts are being planted around business sections, copy reading "Attend shoppers' matinee at the Paramount Theatre," with admission prices, attractions and institutional copy of the shoppers' service.

Perly is also erecting information booths in the downtown theatres for tourists spending the holidays there, supplying cards with views of the theatre and Miami supplied gratis. Tieup has also been effected with Sears, Roebuck to decorate the lobby with toys.

Famous Players Canadian Stresses Gift Tickets

Sale of individual tickets good up until July 2nd, 1938, will again be one of the strongest points in the Christmas campaign engineered by the Famous Players Canadian theatremen according to James Nairn, director of exploitation and publicity. Nairn explains that sale of individual tickets is stressed rather than books of tickets. Tickets are sold at full price, but a 10 per cent discount is offered to merchants such as cigar stores, druggists, etc., and the same offer is open to theatre staffs on tickets sold outside of theatre to friends and business contacts.

So successful has the idea been generally in the circuit that Nairn has prepared a manual for the information of managers, one of the highlights stressing special children's tickets in two colors designed Christmas style and numbered on both ends. Envelopes are also in two colors and contain space for addressing.

For convenience of managers who wish to get out special sales letters to commercial films and organizations, letterhead has been made up by the publicity department. Also available for the theatres is a variety of "drop-in" slugs in that form. Special standee for boxoffice windows, and store counters is another aid, standees approximately 12 inches high. Trailers have also been made up by Nairn's department with appropriate selling copy.

Last year, says Nairn, one manager reported that his best medium of selling tickets was through a young lady employed on the switchboard of a hospital in his town. She sold many tickets to nurses and doctors who wished to remember their friends with inexpensive gifts. Other slants included the stimulation of sale of tickets by not only offering the ushers 10 per cent on tickets sold outside the theatres, but by offering in addition, Christmas Day and several nights throughout the year free from duty, to usher who sold greatest number of tickets.

Another manager made a successful tieup with Junior League to sell tickets on a 10 per cent commission basis for their Christmas Fund. And it is further reported that he successfully sold local merchant on buying a number of tickets offering them as bonus to Christmas buyers. Scheme was worked out whereby the merchant advertised a certain number of tickets to be given free with every purchase of $15 or over. The same manager is trying out the idea of selling children's tickets for a tieup with the children's department in the store this year.

COHN INAUGURATES CANDID CAMERA NITE

Interesting manner of attracting candid camera devotees to the Queen, Wilmington, Del., is being tried by Artie Cohn. First four rows in orchestra are turned over to the amateurs. Entrants are at liberty to roam the theatre, orchestra pit and stage during presentation of stage shows to snap pictures. Promoted prizes later are presented to photographers submitting best pictures.

Wright Reports Loew Activities in New Haven

Plans for the holiday season as reported by advertising director Erle Wright, Loew's Theatres, New Haven, include monster parade heralding Santa's arrival in town. Plane will carry trailer with Kris Kringle in his sleigh and four reindeers in phosphorous paint, as ship flies through the sky at night; plane will not be discernible, only thing showing will be the deers, Santa and sleigh. Radio announcements will be made advising all to "watch the sky tonight at nine o'clock and see Santa Claus riding through the sky, arriving for tomorrow's parade."

In the parade, following day, band carries attractive banners with Christmas decorations plugging the show for entire month.

City Firemen Repair Toys For Wilmington Theatremen

The annual "Toy for Every Kiddie" campaign at Wilmington, Del., conducted by theatres throughout the city with the aid of city officials, firemen and police got off to an early start this year with theatremen reporting numerous old toys already arriving at the boxoffice. During the week of November 24 children were admitted to all city's theatres providing they donated an old toy.

Toys were piled up in lobbies under surveillance of patrolmen stationed there where they were later collected and repaired by firemen for distribution just before Christmas. The committee of Wilmington theatremen cooperating this year are Frank J. Murphy, Loew's; Lewis S. Black, Aldine; Joseph DeFiore, Park; Ben Shindler, Ace; Harry Orlow, Arcadia; A. J. Belair, Rialto; Earle Finney, Savoy; Paul Blaufox, Grand; Benjamin Seligman, Strand; Arthur Cohn, Queen, and John Hopkins, National.

Factory Parties Planned By Holland In Elkhart

Sid Holland, city manager Indiana-Illinois Theatres, Elkhart, Ind., is planning a week of morning Christmas factory parties. Owners of plants are sold on idea that for about 10 cents per head they can give a Christmas party to all employees and families. Holland reports that if a theatre has 1,500 seats, the factory pays $150 for the house which is his for the morning. Plant executives appear on stage to greet guests, distribute toys to the youngsters.

Another slant which this theatreman is planning is an award to the most popular football player on local high school team. Coupons run in the daily paper for two weeks of voting, are brought to the theatre for compilation and no one is aware of the winners' identity until the stage ceremonies are in progress at end of voting period. On designated night, winner is presented from stage with gold football properly engraved. Coach, school principal, local sports editor and others join in the stage ceremonies.

The usual old toy and food matinees will be held in addition to the giveaway of promoted electric range from local distributor, and special booths will be erected in lobby for convenience of patrons wishing to check packages.

Geisel Opens Christmas Program Day Ahead

Reported by Vic Geisel, Orpheum Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., as working successfully last year is opening his Christmas show day before the holiday. Comments from parents prompts him to repeat the plan, since occupying the children's time leaves them free for last minute shopping.

Another gag worth repeating says Geisel is presentation of new model car for giveaway, worked by an introduction trailer on screen announcing that in a few moments the car would be shown. At the close of this announcement and while appropriate music is played on the house p. a. system, the traveler curtain is opened, picture sheet and horn having been taken away and the automobile is presented.

An additional revenue-getter is the Christmas gift book or "happiness" books of theatre admission tickets plugged in programs, heralds and screen. Tieup has also been arranged with local department store's toy shop by having the store manager present their Santa Claus at a special children's show sponsored by merchant. Children secure free tickets from store. At the close of the program, Santa Claus is announced, during which time the stage is being set, then the traveler curtain is opened and a regular Santa work shop with as many toys operating as possible, is displayed on full stage. Sponsor receives plenty of publicity from the idea and his rental to the theatre is sufficient extra revenue to make it interesting for the theatre.

Three weeks prior to the holiday, Vic holds his broken toy matinee. Collection is then sent to fire, police department and vocational school for repair. Through cooperating merchant, toys are displayed in store.

MEMBERS DETAIL DECEMBER PLANS

Chakeres-Warner Theatres Stress December Bookings

Profitable grosses during December over a long period of years have been obtained by the theatres of the Chakeres-Warner circuit, Springfield, Ohio, through especial concentration upon bookings of all subjects, according to Kroger Babb, director of advertising. Personally supervised by Phil Chakeres, circuit head, who sets in everything from features to one-reelers, assisted by bookers Jonas Thomas and Mike Chakeres, the organization has analyzed the December problem finding that the usual opposition is at a minimum; that with the strongest opposition of course being Christmas shopping; the best prospective patrons are children, first; men, second, and last women.

Since the Chakeres theatremen find that dances, wrestling matches, high school and college activities, fraternal and civic club events are proportionately infrequent during December, it is concluded that the thousands usually attracted by these affairs are better theatre prospects in December than any other month. With this in mind, and since the women are busy with their shopping, preference is given to programs with direct appeal to children and men, such as action, adventure, football, wild animal, child-star and comedy pictures. These programs are sold in every way possible with special attention to displays in garages and parking lots.

December play-dates also include religious pictures on which large organizations can be obtained as sponsors for advance benefit sales. Popular radio acts such as hill billy bands and other personalities with distinct followings are employed. These have been found to draw well all over the circuit during the Yuletide season.

Managers are encouraged to promote theatre parties given by large industrial organizations for employees to be held at night a day or two ahead of Christmas, the performances of course being private and programs, stage and screen, furnished by the theatre.

Various "Guest Days" Planned

In certain situations, reports Babb, the circuit has found "Guest Day" of advantage during the pre-holiday weeks. One day a week is set aside during which each adult patron is permitted to bring along one other person without charge. Request days have also proven effective, with a re-issue of an older top-notch picture combined with a new release on one bill. A request card system is used in advance and patrons notified of the booking first by mail and on the morning of the date a personal call from the theatre cashier. Pre-holiday benefit or kid shows are given only when satisfactory sponsorship assures adequate publicity and good will.

For the Christmas Eve "fade-out," the Chakeres circuit has discovered that a co-operative giveaway plan involving an auto dealer or large retailer is a sure-fire box-office. Tickets for the draw are distributed by theatre and merchant all through December and winners must be present to qualify for prizes.

The circuit has also found that a careful selection of scene mats on December attractions placed with the local papers well in advance frequently find their way into print on a larger scale than anticipated. Since newspapers carry their greatest lineage during December, the heavy business creates a mechanical printing problem which often can be solved with good mats and snappy copy to take the place of additional "straight matter."

BOUCHER ARRANGES REVIVAL WEEK

Readying himself for his Revival Week to be held just before Christmas, Frank Boucher, Strand Theatre, Altoona, Pa., has arranged to distribute ballots asking patrons what pictures they wish brought back. Those getting most requests are included in the "week's" program.

Frank has planned giveaways for each week during December, including turkeys, radios and other promoted gifts. Blotters containing calendars with the giveaway nights lettered in red and carrying picture plugs are distributed, banner across top reading "a real Christmas treat in store for you."

"Christmas Cheer Club" Planned for Washington

Loew's division manager Carter Barron and press head Ray Bell, Washington, D. C., have worked out a campaign with the Washington Herald, Washington Times and Station WJSV for a "Christmas Cheer Club." Through these agencies residents of the district are being asked for old and new toys which will be distributed to underprivileged kiddies on Christmas Day by the D. C. Playground's Santa Claus. Old toys are to be repaired by the distributing charity.

Huge Christmas boxes are stationed currently in the lobbies of all Loew houses there, trailers requesting patrons to fill them. Radio stations are contributing daily plugs and newspapers, advertising and generous story breaks. The "Cheer Club" activities will be climaxed with a big matinee at the Capitol Theatre several days before Christmas, with toy serving as admission. In addition, large chain drug stores have been recruited and will display signs plugging the plan.

Further newspaper tieup has been made with the Washington Post for a new Christmas promotion in connection with that paper's Christmas Gift Guide. The paper daily publishes a two by 150 line ad carrying figure of Santa Claus and Charlie McCarthy with balloons. Persons offering best conversations between the two to fill balloons receive guest tickets to theatre, the attractions being prominently billed.

Jingles Contest Launched by Pollock

Manager Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, N. Y., is planning a "Kriss Kringle" jingles contest in classified page of local daily. Cash prizes, promoted gifts and tickets go to those submitting best rhymes using classified advertisers' name and business. Contest runs daily two weeks ahead, each ad containing cut of Santa, rules, etc. Similar tiein made last year clicked big, says Les.

Another idea Pollock will use is a doll Christmas party. Children five years and under are invited to bring their dolls to the theatre any time up to and including designated date few days before Christmas. Santa Claus will be there to judge the entries and award prizes for the largest doll, smallest, funniest, best rag doll and best home-made doll. Santa will also distribute gifts. All children will be admitted to this special morning matinee for ten cents.

Many Ideas Listed By Tom Davidson

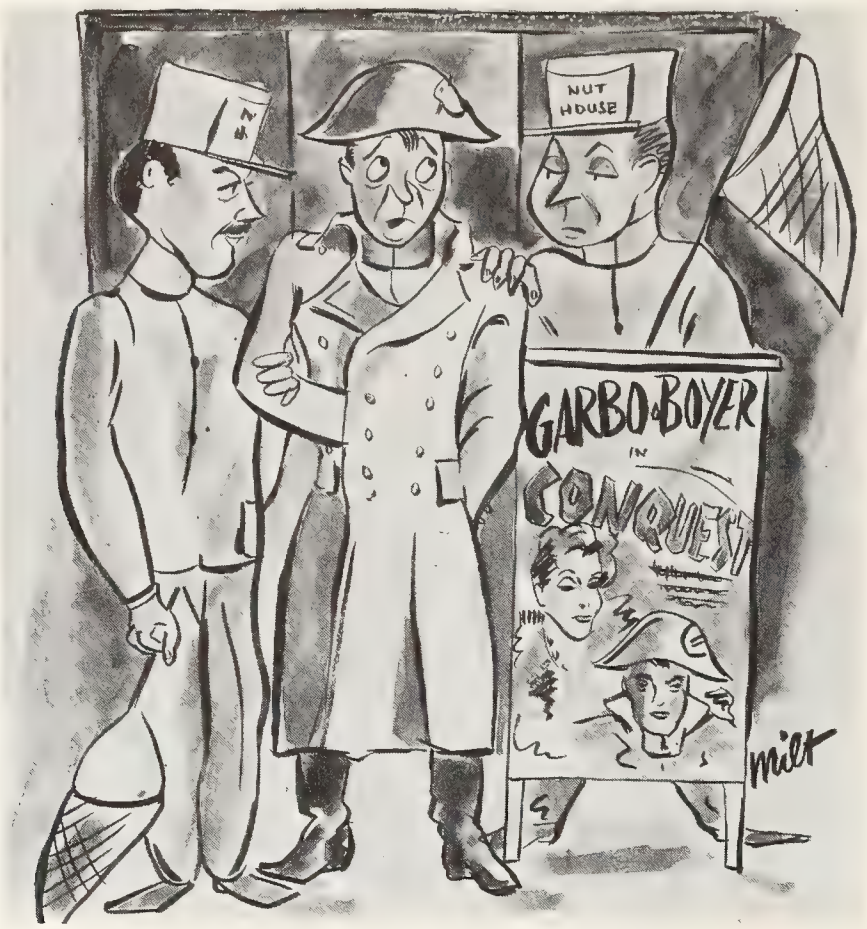
Another member who is planning on an old toy matinee is Tom B. Davidson, skipper of the Washita, Rialto and Ritz Theatres, Chickasha, Okla., with the aid of assistant Paul West. Collection is to be turned over to fire department for repair and then taken to the leading Civic club for distribution to the needy. Announcements will be made from theatre and schools. Bulletin boards will be placed in all postoffices week ahead and free publicity received from daily paper.

Other ideas in the December campaign include telephone calls by cashiers to names in directory telling them about the show. Pencils stamped "make a note to see" will be delivered to business offices and schools; combination blotters and bookmarks will be placed in libraries, schools, etc.; stickers containing title and playdates pasted on backs of passes, imprinted paper bags and conspicuous places in business districts.



Candid cameraman on street during rush hours, appears to snap pictures, but hands out cards with playdates, title, etc., instead, and old car dolled up with gag copy will be driven through streets reading "For sale—I need enough money to see," etc.

Christmas Broadcast Planned by Soriero

On Sunday, December 18, and to be repeated again on Chrisamts Day is broadcast from his stage arranged by Tom Soriero, United Artists Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal. The trained voices of the locally famed Westminster Group and theatre organ will be heard over Station KMPC in a presentation based on the story of the Nativity. Members of the audience will also participate in the singing of Christmas carols that will be picked up by overhead mikes and broadcast. Tom also plans to use movable mikes to pick out outstanding voices during the broadcast.

Soriero further reports that everyone attending the Christmas Day party will receive a promoted gift. Entire celebration is being put on at no cost to the theatre.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAUGHS

This Cartoon Was Created by Club Cartoonist Milt Rosenfeld

Conner Constructs Christmas Cave

Marlowe Conner, New Rhodes Theatre, Chicago, Ill., is planning a repeater this year in the form of "Santa's Toy Cave" to be erected in his lobby. Cave will be made of chicken wire covered with papier mache painted white and tinted with red, blue and green with flitter sprinkled overall. The interior to be filled with toys for giveaways at kid matinee, will be given greater depth by hanging crepe paper icicles ranging from white to dark blue and colored ball Christmas tree decorations.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Telegraph Tieup Effected by Rosenthal

Successful Western Union tieup was effected by Morris Rosenthal, Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., on "Lancer Spy." Company distributed 5,000 blanks carrying titles, playdates, cast and cut of Dolores Del Rio, George Sanders and Peter Lorre. Guest tickets were awarded those deciphering secret code conversation between the stars as shown in balloons.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Louie Inaugurates Third Theatre Broadcast

In addition to the broadcasts from the Capitol Theatre, Dallas, of his man-on-the-street and the Pepsi-Cola kid show, Louie Charninsky's third venture is called the "Barnyard Follies." Held every Friday night from 10:30 to 11 over Station KRLD, large cast of entertainers are recruited, including rhythm bands, hill billies, impersonators, comedians, etc. Louie reports the half hour of entertainment as proving highly successful.

Lykes Advertises For Live Elephant

Stories were run in local dailies on the flood of letters that poured in on Jack Lykes, Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, when he advertised for a live elephant to be used for street bally on "Elephant Boy," readers offering a variety of jade, ivory, paper mache pachyderms, etc., but nary a live one. Abandoning his original scheme, Jack hired an eight-foot paper model, but not without so advising the papers.

Man dressed in Hindu costume paraded streets four days ahead distributing teaser cards and newspaper contest was planted in Cleveland Plain Dealer, cash and tickets going to those submitting best letters on which Kipling tale reader preferred and why. For lobby Lykes constructed special display with jungle atmosphere using palm trees, stuffed animals, grass mats and animated papier mache elephant. Further newspaper space was garnered with stories on special matinee for kiddies from local orphanage.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Pooch Giveaway

Week ahead of opening of "Awful Truth" at Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., Les Pollock displayed a pedigreeded wire-haired terrier in lobby which was awarded to the patron writing the best review on the picture. Pooch was placed in special enclosure in foyer surrounded by gag copy and Pollock reports an almost continual audience before the display. Another snapper was distribution of pocket mirrors, other side carrying copy advising holders to see reverse side for the awful truth and go to the theatre for the picture.

Dinny Invites Cincinnati to "Catch Firefly"

Called one of the most successful exploitation tieins ever made in Cincinnati, was the hookup with the Post made by E. V. "Dinny" Dinerman, RKO Midwest ad head, for the benefit of "The Firefly" at the RKO Shubert. The idea was to "catch the firefly" and for five days the daily pounded the stunt on page one with the result that traffic was jammed by the thousands hunting the prize money offered as follows:

Masked girl was turned loose on the streets the first day, the paper reporting where she could be found and when, so that those interested could study her makeup, walk, shape of hands, etc. Next day the girl appeared in certain sections, also announced in advance, but without her mask. First one to touch the "firefly" with copy of the paper, saying "You are the Firefly from the Cincinnati Post and the Shubert Theatre," was to be awarded $25. If girl was not identified the first day, second day prize became $50, and if she still eluded recognition the third day prize became $75, the last day $100. Search ended on the day the picture opened when the girl was finally identified.

The town was reported to have gone properly "nuts" over the hunt, with the crowds growing every day of the stunt. When the girl was identified and hustled away in a cab, some 15,000 gathered round to look. Photo of some of the mob will be found in the Round Table photo section. It was an old-fashioned traffic block that tied up the main square for over an hour and it seems that the folks are still talking about it.

Chicago Features Pigeon Race

With popular-price engagements of the picture now breaking, an outline of the Chicago road show campaign for the date at the Erlanger is outlined, and in which was featured a "Firefly" pigeon contest effected with the Evening American. On five consecutive days ahead, homing pigeons were released from different points to arrive in Chicago at stated times. Each bird carried a coded message which was carried in the paper and to readers solving greatest number of messages, cash awards were made. All publicity indicated that clues could be found by seeing the picture.

Second newspaper contest, this with the Tribune, was tied in with editor of children's column, which carried stories for six days on page one of second section, inviting youngsters who wanted to see the show as her guests to write in and give their reasons. Children were awarded the free admission at a special matinee show.

Most important merchant tiein had to do with a replica of hat worn by star in picture. Hat was named after title and leading department store came in with full window displays and newspaper ads. Candy manufacturer turned out a special confection, also named after the picture and this was featured by many of the better downtown retail stores. Many ace windows were also promoted.

CONTESTS AND RALLIES FEATURE CAMPAIGNS FOR OCTOBER "FIRSTS"

Indiana-Illinois Theatres Share First Mention Honors With RKO Radio in Columbus; Holland, Rubin, Barcroft Winners

Leading merchants of Elkhart, Ind., underwrote entire cost of "Stella Dallas" campaign engineered by City Manager Sid Holland, Elco Theatre, highlight of which was a mother-and-daughter popularity contest carrying with it a one-week all-expense vacation trip to the Dallas Texas and Pan American Exposition. Trip was awarded to the mother and daughter who received the greatest number of votes accumulated over two week period which were obtained with each 25-cent purchase at stores.

Merchants were given screen credit, lobby announcement card, used window and counter displays. Entrants were urged not to accumulate votes, but deposit them in lobby box for daily compilation and newspaper breaks. Award to holder of greatest number of votes was made from stage with proper ceremonies, pictures and stories in paper. Cooperating stores devoted windows to contest and carried plugs and mention in all ads. Exposition officials in Dallas prepared reception for the winners.

Mother and Daughter Photos

Another contest arranged by Sid was tieup with local photographer, three, two and one-month passes going to those submitting most attractive mother-and-daughter picture (see photo below). Week was designated as National Photo Week, and photos of semi-finalists were projected on screen, audience applause deciding winner. Contest was also planted with high schools, students receiving passes for best 200-word essays on why they liked "Stella Dallas" and misspelled word contest was run on cooperative ad page of paper, six merchants paying entire cost.

LAST MONTH FOR 1937 AWARDS

Deadline for December is midnight of January 8, 1938.

Entrants are requested to make sure that campaigns for December judging arrive before deadline, so that they will be eligible for the Plaques, First and Honorable Mention Certificates.

Sid timed his prevue for local prominents to coincide with man-on-the-street broadcast, announcer catching guests as they left theatre for comments over the air. Comment cards had also been distributed to those attending, findings used for newspaper ads which contained two boxes one headed "Hollywood says" and the other "Elkhart says." Teaser ads were also run, serialization for six weeks, and various gratis publicity stories were garnered.

House to house canvass was made for testimonials, promoted use of bannered plane flying over city dropping heralds. Street slants included artist at work for 10 days painting billboard at no cost to theatre. Artist also painted giant lobby display while patrons watched. Another idea was bannered old horse shay in which characters dressed as Barbara Stanwyck and Alan Hale drove around town, alighting at busy corners to visit stores.

Live lobby stunt consisted of large wheel, directly above which was lettered disc. Guest tickets went to those spinning wheel provided it stopped in grove at disc. Little Theatre group gave "Dallas" dramatization over radio station, girl stationed in window of furniture store surrounded by stills and picture copy telephoned subscribers advising of the opening. Another effective window idea was girl assembling jig-saw puzzle of 24-sheet on the picture.

Musical pep-rally ushered in "Varsity Show" at the RKO Palace, Columbus, through the efforts of Johnny Barcroft, publicity director who promoted Ohio State football team for stage appearance at theatre send-off party on eve of the big game.

Cheer leaders did their stuff from stage, dailies picking up stories and photos of the event. Highlight of theatre rally was appearance of eight-year-old Tucker Smith, Jr., son of Ohio's trainer, leading the cheers (see photo.). Radio sports commentator interviewed captain of the team and acted as master of ceremonies for the occasion.

Rally was also held around town at leading night spots, with the cheer leading squad covering clubs to help build up box-office grosses. Special "Beat Purdue and Yeah, Ohio, let's go see 'Varsity Show'" ad was carried for two days in college daily, bulletin planted on every sorority and fraternity house selling the show and rally. Band leaders at ten clubs built up the show with advance announcements week ahead and set-pieces were planted in these spots.

Fraternities Cooperate

Letters were mailed to all fraternities and sororities at Ohio State inviting them to see their team off and sporting goods shops were also covered. Usherettes dressed in collegiate costumes week ahead with sweaters carrying large "O" in addition to title banners.

Since Fred Waring and his band are local favorites, Barcroft did an unusual job of publicizing their appearance in the picture. Starting a week ahead, he was successful in placing layouts of the band, feature stories, interviews, etc., that totaled far above the usual amount of lineage on any one engagement.

Mother-and-Daughter Slant Works Well for Rubin

Culminating in a style show on the opening night of "Stella Dallas" a three-day city-wide mother-and-daughter merchandising event inspired by the picture was one of Harry Rubin's top tieins for the date at the Tivoli, Michigan City, Ind. Each participating merchant was taxed $10 for the privilege of participating in the show and for trailer credit. In addition, stores used window displays, cooperated in a special full-page co-op and mentioned the date in all advertising. To encourage ace windows, Rubin offered term passes for the best displays and also for best individual co-op ads.

Tied in with the style show was another newspaper promotion for the selection of "Mother Michigan City," most typical mother, winner receiving complete outfit of wearing apparel, appearing on the stage during the show and making visits day ahead of picture opening at all stores in the tiein. Further publicity was obtained with a slogan contest wherein stores displayed individual letters of a pre-determined slogan. Prizes went to those assembling the entire slogan and noting the stores where letters were found. On tiein with popular ballroom, mother-and-daughter dance was staged, dance spot playing for heralds and ads. Prizes were given for the youngest, oldest and mother coming from farthest distance.

Advertising in the theatre was varied. Two weeks ahead title was attached to traveler, closed in after every feature showing. Backs of seats were sniped with cards reading "You'll enjoy sitting through," etc., and individual steps of stairways leading to mezzanine bannered, as were all sections of the house. Included in front display was a 24, water-glassed to sidewalk. Sidewalk stencils also were used.

Outdoor Advertising Profuse

Busses and cabs were bannered and co-op copy cards planted at prominently placed filling stations. Roadside signs adjacent to each other attracted attention of motorists, individual cards each carrying separate words of advertising, which made up title and theatre. Library posters publicized the date and newsboys wore armbands. Rubin even tied in the police to deliver the print in department cars bannered for the occasion and placed directional arrows all around town.

Novelty ballys were effective. Against historical stone on court-house lawn was placed card "The only thing in this town that won't be moved by," etc. Effective, too, was theatre seat placed in lobby (see photo below) with copy reading that the chair expected to be very tired after being sat on so often during the date. Passersby also stopped to gaze at young girl with "baby" in arms, seated next door to theatre and against sign asking if she should give up her daughter for happiness. And a man in hunting costume carrying rifle, made the downtown sector with sign to the effect that he was "hunting" the best show in town. Girl phoning from window to all mothers in town and giant invite to the Mayor were also listed.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Charlie Hartman, who operates two theatres in Carnegie, Okla., writes us and wants us to have his subscription to the HERALD extended. We remember going with Charlie and his wife and little girl to Oklahoma City once to attend a state convention of exhibitors, and it rained and rained, and then started in to pour and pour, and the roads were not paved, and that Oklahoma mud was something awful. We plowed mud for a while and finally Charlie stopped and asked a fellow how the road was on ahead and he said it would change about two miles farther on, and then he continued, "and gets a helluvasite worse."

We wish to make a correction. Some time ago we reported having seen the picture "Give Me Liberty," and by mistake we gave MGM credit for having produced it. We have just received a letter from our very good friend, E. A. Bell of the Warner Brothers office in Denver, Col., calling our attention to our report and saying that "Give Me Liberty" was a two-reel subject in color and was produced by Vitaphone. As we said then, it was an excellent short subject, and Mr. Litel, as Patrick Henry, made an enthusiastic plea for liberty, and if Vitaphone could spare Mr. Litel we'd like to see him in Congress. Thanks, Mr. Bell.

The first time we called on John Waller of Osceola, Iowa, he was operating a "store show" on the north side of the court house square. The last time we called on him he was operating his New Electric theatre on the west side of the square, and when you drive into the town you'd better drive on the west of the square and see this theatre. It is a dandy. John has been a lifelong member of the HERALD family and he sends us a check and asks us to have his subscription renewed. John considers the HERALD as important to him as ham and eggs and buckwheat cakes smothered in syrup are to his breakfast, and John has a pretty good appetite.

John thinks the reason we have so much dust from the dust bowl in this country is because of the wind caused by the politicians running for office. We have four pretty important bowls in this country, the "Hollywood Bowl," the "Rose Bowl," the "Dust Bowl" and the "Tom and Jerry Bowl." We have seen all of them, but we are not suggesting any preference.

Miss Grace Allen Robertson of the Joyo theatre at Coleridge, Neb., requests to have her subscription to the HERALD entered for a couple of years. She also encloses a pass for Gertrude. In case you don't think that was pretty doggone nice of Miss Robertson just ask us. Somehow these Nebraska exhibitors are about as nice folks as you will find anywhere.

Perhaps we shouldn't say anything about it, since we are not considered an authority on such matters, but we did like "Annapolis Salute." If your audience likes military parades with bands playing at the Annapolis Military Academy, with some darn good love stuff thrown it, they will like this one. It seems like all girls get stuck on uniforms. You can put a blue uniform on a bullfrog and they will fall for it. But we don't blame the girls for falling for these boys because they are pretty swell chaps, especially that boy Van Heflin, and if they don't go to headlining him pretty soon we are going to make a squawk about it.

Tonight we went and saw Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell and Margaret Lindsay in "Back in Circulation," a Warner-First National picture. The reason we went and saw it was because it was a newspaper story, and we like newspaper stories. And again we liked Pat O'Brien, always did. We not only like his acting but we like him because he is reported by a newspaper story as being a boyhood chum of Spencer Tracy, and anyone who was ever a chum of Spencer's is good enough for us. Then again we always aim to go and see Joan every time she plays, that's the way we feel about it, and Margaret Lindsay wasn't slow herself. We always liked Joan because of her excellent acting and the sincerity she puts in her work. There is no guesswork about her acting. Then again we like her because we think she is a very nice girl. We remember, however, when we were a boy back in Indiana we told Ann Kenyon what a nice girl we thought she was and we took her to an oyster supper one night, and some boys told her boy friend, and her boy friend told us about it, and the doctor told our mother to put raw beefsteak on our left eye, and since then we have been rather gunshy of these husbands and boy friends.

Bob Burns says Uncle Slug reminds us of the negro who was fishing. He baited his hook and threw it into the river and then tied the line around his ankle and lay down and went to sleep. Presently a big catfish came along and grabbed the hook and yanked the darkey into the river. A fellow asked what he was doing in the river and he replied, "Well, Ise tryin' to figure out whether dis Nigger am a fishin' or dis fish am a Niggerin'."

"FURTHER LEGISLATION"

WITHIN a week the citizens of the Republic have had three signal expressions and demonstrations of the progress of democracy in the States from official sources and authority in Washington:

THE TREASURY Department has asked persons of taxable income in the higher brackets to lay bare in sworn statements all of the facts of all their possessions, and costs, regardless of bearing on income.

THE NATIONAL Labor Relations Board has sought to call to account under subpoena a trade journal for discussing in its pages a labor matter in the steel industry which it serves.

A FEDERAL communications commissioner, in a deliberately considered and prepared public address, has charged the radio and the motion picture with stultifying the American mind and remarked that "further legislation may be necessary."

We are concerned here only with the implications involving the arts and industries of expression, the screen and radio, but those frank disclosures gather their larger significance from the general context and not-so-remote kinship with the dictatorialisms emanating from the other departments. They are all a piece of the same cloth.

An officialdom and federation of bureaucracies which can demand: "What did you pay for your home, boat, dinner service, wife's ring?" or "How come you write pieces about us disapproving what we did?" can not surprise us much with an announcement of a plan to inject education, uplift and culture or kultur into us through our media of entertainment by processes of law.

A TRIVIAL and apparently entirely factual dispatch about Mickey Mouse to the New York Times got its correspondent ordered out of a nervous European state the other day. The incident seemed preposterous—one of those things that "can't happen here" but only in the comic opera lands far across the sea. But the news from Washington tends to change, if not improve, the perspective.

It seems that "if wishes were horses" then some of our bureaucrats would be a regiment of Cossacks.

The arresting expression on the Government and the Arts came from Mr. George Henry Payne, federal communications commissioner (or should the title be commissar?), addressing the Second National Conference on Educational Broadcasting in Chicago.

The ideals of broadcasting, observed Mr. Payne, must be changed even "at the risk of a severe jolt to these gentlemen."

"Like the moving pictures," he continued, "the average program of the broadcasters is addressed to an intelligence possessed by a child of 12.

"It is important to raise this average to the adult age, otherwise there is the danger that radio will perpetuate mental immaturity in the grown-up.

"There is danger that radio and the movies will in time make us a nation of grown-up children. An intelligence which befits a child of 12 is a beautiful thing when found in a child of 12, but not in a child of 30."

Mr. Payne set forth that there was no good reason why educational programs could not be made entertaining enough to attract a large group of intelligent people, but he felt that progress in that direction would have to overcome "a distinct inertia on the part of broadcasters. But it can be done."

Mr. Payne said he hoped for higher standards under existing laws, but if they were not so attained "then further legislation may be necessary."

There is so far no indication from official sources of the point on the cultural and educational pressure gauge at which legislative enactment would be deemed necessary. Accurate judgment of that critical chord in the dumbbell carillon might perhaps call for a keen ear. Many delicate points might also be found at issue. Federal standards of education, intelligence and erudition could well make a charming issue for the city, county and state schools. Our also still almost free press might also be in trouble with the educational quality of its comic strips, sports pages and jumbled tenses in the news columns. Also what would be the relative status of an infinitive splitter of the Newspaper Guild, under union label, as opposed to an equally abandoned freelance radio script writer?

It would be a great deal funnier if there were not the fact of the official nature of the expressions involved, if the political possibilities were as remote as the facts are absurd.

IT IS pungently odoriferous that the art of the radio is in the uncomfortable position of being completely at the mercy of a federal commission which is far from content to be a traffic manager of the air—its sole justifiable function under any interpretation of the purposes of national government in these United States while there were states with rights. Editorship of the radio by a federal commission is an indirect inhibitive fact, but nonetheless as unreasonable as would be an editorial supervision of the press by Mr. James Farley of the United States Postoffice. Radio can not, in any discretion, seek to take the air in defense of its own rights and the rights of the people in radio. It also can not, what with its invasion of the advertising patronage of the newspaper and periodical press, expect, now anyway, vigorously enthusiastic championing of its cause in many powerful prints. Newspaper owned radio stations are protective experiments, not participations with a community of interest between press and antennæ.

Radio needs friends with external voices. And what can be done to the radio to make it servant of totalitarian dictation today can be done to the motion picture tomorrow. The day after that will be the newspapers' turn.

Processes of adjustment between the radio, the motion picture and the press, all partaking of sometimes identical and always kindred functions, are underway, with occasional frictions. That is their own business in applying themselves to their job of public service, answerable to the customers who are the People. He who would come between is taking for himself a very large assignment, without, one may suspect, one of those handy "mandates from the nation."

All of the media of expression have a common cause in their rights as the voices of the people and all the diverse thoughts and opinions that a whole people can hold. They

"Strike" Ended

Peaceful settlement of the exhibitors' "strike" against Paramount was negotiated this week by Allen Usher, Paramount district manager, and a committee representing the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Northern Michigan. Terms of the settlement were announced as similar to those agreed upon between the company and the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania.

Accepts, Refuses

The status of Robert H. Cochrane with Universal Pictures Corporation remained in doubt this week when he officially accepted the chairmanship of the executive committee and also announced, through his attorney, Saul Rogers, that he will not relinquish the position of president. The board of directors last week voted to remove Mr. Cochrane as president and place Nate J. Blumberg, vice-president in charge of theatre operations for RKO, in the post. Louis Weinberg, circuit sales contact for Columbia, was offered the position of assistant general sales manager but at his office Tuesday, it was announced that he had refused to accept the offer.

"FURTHER LEGISLATION"

are not to be legislated into subserviency to any boss or coterie of bosses. Or are they?

There would further be considerably less concern for the radio and the motion picture and the once free people which they serve if the expression under discussion came from an orator with an imported accent in Union Square. But this comes from the all-American George Henry Payne, born in the city of New York, journalist, editorial writer, critic of music and drama, historian of journalism, playwright, one time secretary of the Society for the Preservation of American Rights in the Panama Canal, and bearing the decoration of the Order of Danilo I, from Montenegro.

The preservation of some American rights, in the eye and ear, against totalitarian kultur, would appear to be a worthy cause now.

Legislation, Litigation

Abram F. Myers, general counsel for the national Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, expressed the keynote of the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio and the regional Allied conference in Columbus, Ohio, when he told delegates that independent exhibitors must press for greater cooperation between regional units and the national group and for industry reforms by "legislation and litigation."

Mr. Myers' speech is quoted and the convention doings reported on page 12.

Happy Days

The last fiscal year of Hoyts Theatres, Inc., in Australia, has been its best since 1930, the balance sheet shows, with trading profit one-third larger than in the previous year and expenses reduced. The circuit is in the midst of a general project of reconditioning and modernizing of its playhouses, writes Cliff Holt from Melbourne.

British Films Council

Efforts of British Labor, and the Conservatives as well, to saddle a State Commission upon the industry have been thwarted by Oliver Stanley's success in winning the approval of the Commons Committee for the principle of his amendment for an Advisory Council. As for a separate quota, American distributors have informed Mr. Stanley that they are not opposed to such a plan in princple but they do object to being penalized in the process. To that end, they said, they would be willing to agree to a 10 per cent quota on a diminishing scale.

RKO Reorganization

Developments of the week relating to the plan to be adopted for reorganization of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, a hearing of which will be held December 21st on special master George W. Alger's report, included the talk of construction of a new board of directors. The Wall Street firm of Hemphill, Noyes was reported to be considering joining Atlas Corporation and Lehman Brothers in the purchase of RCA's remaining RKO holdings, and the possibility of extending the option to purchase the holdings over a six-year period, was reported.

Better Understanding

"A better understanding between the United States and Italy" in the matter of motion picture production and distribution is the avowed goal of Giuseppe Domenico Musso, a Commendatore of Rome and president of Industrie Cinematografiche Italiane, who is now in New York.

Decisions Reserved

Two decisions of importance to the labor relations in the film industry were under consideration by legislative boards. In Washington the National Labor Relations Board heard arguments and agreed to study the petition of the Screen Writers' Guild for an election to determine the collective bargaining unit for writers. The petition was opposed by producers and by Screen Playwrights, Inc. In California a state legislative committee investigating labor relations in Hollywood gave no indication of resuming its inquiry, adjourned some weeks ago.

Labor developments are on page 16.

Propagandists

Speaking at the Silver Jubilee convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, informed members of the organization that the motion picture is the one great medium of expression that has escaped the blight of radical propaganda. He called upon the theatre men to form themselves into an alert, strong and vigorous organization to keep the alien influences away from the motion picture industry.

The text of Mr. Quigley's address and the highlights of the convention are recorded on page 17.

Erpi Deal Details

December 4th marked the end of the Telephone Company's activities in motion picture theatre sound activities, A. T. and T.'s Electrical Research Products on that date turning over the title to its reproducer servicing, installation and accessory sales to a new company, Altec Servicing, formed by former Erpi department heads and backed by an independent Wall Street group. Previously, Erpi had disposed of its sound reproducer manufacturing and sales rights to International Projector and Motiograph.

The story leading to the formation of Altec, and Altec's plans and policies, appear on page 29.

"Sane" Economies

The while some of the motion picture's biggest executives are now in Hollywood, or only recently returned to New York, on the matter of mounting production costs, Jack L. Warner, vice-president of Warner-First National, this week sounded a warning that economies must be effected sanely in order to assure a continuing flow of Hollywood's "best" films which alone, he said, bring revenues from all over the world.

Two a Month

"Some reductions" in studio costs, no depletions in the ranks of the executive producing personnel, and a promise of two "big" features a month at least until next September, were the announced results of the Hollywood conferences of Paramount executives in which Stanton Griffis and Barney Balaban took part. Mr. Griffis said attention had been given to methods of reducing studio costs to conform to currently lower receipts, but that no change would be made in the company's release schedule. Mr. Balaban made the two-a-month promise.

The conferences are reported on page 58.

16 mm. Newsreels

Herman A. DeVry, head of the Chicago corporation bearing his name, arrived in New York this week to arrange for Eastern representation for his plan to invade the newsreel field about the first of the year with a 16 mm. combination national and local newsreel. Coincident with the development in the DeVry plan, A. C. Lyles, continuity writer for a local Jacksonville newsreel, wrote a detailed story on the operation and success of the reel in the Florida city.

Accounts of both events are recorded on page 15.

UA Deal Off

International negotiations for the purchase by Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda of the interests in United Artists held by Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks ended Wednesday. A spokesman for Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda in Hollywood issued the following statement:

"Owing to insurmountable legal complications, we have decided not to exercise our option for the purchase of the three units of United Artists Corporation stock owned by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin and accordingly are returning the option today."

The statement was obtained while the directors' meeting was still in progress with all members of the United Artists board or their representatives present.

Dr. A. H. Giannini was reelected unanimously as president and chairman of the board, scotching rumors that he would resign. Other officers were reelected.

Present were Mr. Korda, Mr. Chaplin, Miss Pickford, David Rose, representing Mr. Goldwyn and C. E. Ericksen, representing Mr. Fairbanks.

Copyright Treaty

Insistence that the United States adhere to the International Copyright Treaty again was made in Congress this week by Senator Duffy, Wisconsin, who pointed out that motion pictures and radio, two of the greatest copyright users, would receive needed protection abroad by such adherence.

Senator Duffy's bill has resulted in a Senate Foreign Relations Committee report, which is discussed on page 60.

Held Responsible

Supreme Court Justice Hofstadter on Wednesday confirmed the report of George Brokaw Compton, referee, holding that Harry Sherman, former president of the Motion Picture Operators Union, Local 306, was responsible for an accounting of $150,000 in union funds. Mr. Sherman was indicted two years ago by a New York County grand jury, which had investigated his handling of the union's funds. Last week the district attorney consented to having the case dropped. Referee Compton's report said Mr. Sherman had taken $150,000 of the union funds in cash from a safety deposit box and had made no accounting. The court indicated it would issue a judgment for $150,000 plus $30,000 interest in favor of the union.

LEGISLATION AND LITIGATION URGED AT ALLIED COLUMBUS CONVENTION

Greater Cooperation Between Regional and National Groups Asked; Myers Calls Other Plans Too Tenuous for Success

by E. H. MAYER
in Columbus

Greater cooperation between the several regional associations and the national Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors and the determination to press for industry reforms by "legislation and litigation" were the keynotes of the fifth annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio in Columbus this week and of the Allied regional conference held in connection with the meeting.

Abram F. Myers, national Allied general counsel, in his address to the convention delegates on Tuesday declared that in view of the failure of past attempts for arbitration and of the present lack of any constructive plan independent exhibitors must unite under the Allied banner to further the present program for restrictive legislation which "is of necessity a long range program but is today the only one that offers reasonable prospects of success."

The Allied regional conference was closed to the press, but it was learned that the discussions included stronger central regional organization, closer cooperation with the national Allied, the instituting of a national sales survey, air shows which are being sponsored by various motion picture producers, and the effect they are having on theatre attendance, and a complete analysis of the national Allied movement to increase the federal admission tax exemption to 50 cents.

The following were in attendance at the conference: NATHAN YAMINS, ABRAM F. MYERS, SIDNEY SAMUELSON, W. A. STEFFES, MARTIN G. SMITH, Toledo, Ohio, regional vice-president; ARTHUR PRICE, Baltimore regional vice-president; JACK WHITTLE, Baltimore, director of the Maryland Allied; RAY HASTINGS, of Hastings, president of Michigan Allied; FRED HERRINGTON, Pittsburgh, secretary, Western Pennsylvania Allied; I. R. HOLYCROSS, Indianapolis, vice-president, and FRANK SANDERS, Indianapolis, treasurer, of Indiana Allied; ARTHUR HOWARD, Boston, secretary, New England Allied; ERNEST SCHWARTZ, president, Cleveland independent unit.

The following board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio also attended:

HENRY GREENBERGER, JOHN KALAFAT, Cleveland; NAT CHARNAS, Toledo; HAROLD BERNSTEIN and FRANK W. HUSS, JR., Cincinnati; MAX STEARN and J. REAL NETH, Columbus; ROBERT MENCHES, Akron; L. F. ELICK, Martins Ferry; R. E. MYERS, Chillicothe; JOHN PERKAS, Elyria; DWIGHT JONES, Jackson; J. W. TRUNK, Youngstown; SAM E. LIND, vice-president, Zanesville; CHARLES WEIGEL, vice-president, Cincinnati; M. B. HORWITZ, treasurer, Cleveland, and P. J. WOOD, secretary, Columbus.

Among the principal topics for discussion or action at the convention were the introduction of legislation to ban or restrict operations of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in Ohio, the Paramount sales policy, and the proposed earmarking by the state of admission tax receipts for poor relief. This measure is to be acted upon by a special session of the state legislature now under way. Exhibitors are opposed to it on the ground that it will make possible the progressive increase of the admission tax rate to correspond with any increase in relief fund requirements in the future.

MEETING HELD UNDER 'HURRICANE' BANNER

Whether by accident or design, deponent sayeth not, but the Exhibitors Poster Supply Company, of Cincinnati, spotted a banner advertising "Hurricane" immediately over the entrance to the Allied-ITO convention headquarters in Columbus.

The fact that the word "Hurricane" in unusually large letters was the first thing to meet the exhibitors' eye had no significance, P. J. Wood, secretary of the Ohio unit, insisted.

The meetings opened on Monday with the Allied regional conference and a meeting of the ITO board of directors. Martin G. Smith, president, opened the convention Tuesday afternoon, and introduced Mr. Myers, Ralph W. Wilkins, member of the tax commission of Ohio; Nathan Yamins, president of national Allied, and other guests. Mr. Yamins advocated federal film control. Mr. Wood talked on the trend toward admission increases.

Governor Martin L. Davey was unable to attend the convention banquet Tuesday evening and the main address was made by Supreme Court Justice Arthur H. Day. A special broadcast from Hollywood and an elaborate program of entertainment were arranged.

The entire Ohio legislative body was invited to attend the banquet and an extensive exhibition of theatre equipment, accessories and construction material was on view. A. E. Meyer, sales manager of International Projector Corporation, was among the theatre supply representatives present.

Martin G. Smith was reelected president of the association with Sam E. Lind, first vice-president; Frank W. Huss, Jr., second vice-president; M. B. Horwitz, treasurer, and P. J. Wood, secretary.

Directors reelected were: Henry Greenberger, John Kalafat, Robert Menches, Max Stearn, J. Real Neth, J. W. Trunk, L. F. Eick, Nat Charnas, Dwight Jones, and Harold Bernstein.

New directors are: Joseph Stern, Hoy Simons and Jerry Steele.

The association passed resolutions condemning Hollywood radio shows as "serious competition" and commending Twentieth Century-Fox for its film deliveries.

Scattered Efforts Hit

Mr. Myers began his address with references to the "ten point programs, six point programs —programs galore" to soothe the relationship between exhibitors and distributors.

"All this," he said, "tends to play into the hands of the Hays Office, enabling it to claim that the exhibitors do not have grievances, only bellyaches, and that they do not themselves know what they want. However, no criticism attaches to those who have hought by a stroke of the pen to produce a Magna Charta of exhibitor rights. The pastime is a safe and pleasant one, leads to gratifying notices in the trade press, and I only hope that more persons in all branches of the industry will take a hand. As more thought is given the subject, more good ideas will emerge; the more discussion had, the more likelihood that practical steps will be taken. Every such program, emanating from whatever source, is entitled to consideration. The authors must expect, however, that the enthusiasm engendered by their outpourings will depend on the practicability and universality of the measures they propose and on their own records in connection with past efforts of exhibitors to better their condition."

Continuing he said: "The Allied plan contemplates, first of all, the restoration of confidence and good feeling between the sellers and buyers of film, a recognition by each of the importance of the other in the successful conduct of all that is embraced in the motion picture business, and the setting up of proper machinery for the adjustment of difficulties by the bona fide representatives of the two branches. This machinery, as envisioned by Allied, contemplates local arbitration boards, freed of the abuses of the outlawed compulsory arbitration boards, and consisting of an equal number of distributors and independent exhibitors and a neutral third party to function in case of a tie. Also a National Appeal Board, similarly constituted, to entertain appeals from the local boards in contract cases, and to have original jurisdiction in matters of general importance.

"The problems to be dealt with as outlined in this early booklet and subsequently added are (a) compulsory block booking, (b) unreasonable protection, (c) undue theatre expansion, (d) the "right to buy," (e) contract revision, (f) designated playdates, (g) unfair allocations, (h) non-delivery of pictures, and (a recent innovation) (i) radio competition. A formidable list, some may say an impractical list, but at least not a new list."

Cites 1932 Negotiations

After touching briefly on each of the points and repeating the arguments set forth in the booklet and since amplified in public expression of the Allied program, Mr. Myers said:

"The formulation and adoption of a program acceptable to all or a majority of independent exhibitors, while an essential initial step, carries us only to the threshold of our problem. So far as I can observe a majority of the major companies are quite contented with existing conditions, feel secure in the power and privileges they enjoy and see no reason for making concessions to disaffected exhibitor groups. Some major executives undoubtedly feel that it would be better for the industry, and more agreeable to them, if obvious abuses could be remedied and a condition of harmony maintained."

The Allied leader referred to the negotiations conducted in 1932 by Sidney R. Kent which led to the Optional Standard License Agreement and concluded:

"Pending some such development there is only one course for exhibitors to pursue, and that is to press for industry reforms by legislation and litigation. This does not mean that it is not worth while to attempt to marshal nation-wide agrement on a program or to coordinate the efforts of all exhibitors in support thereof. But in pursuing what is at best a remote possibility, they should not in the slightest degree abate their efforts to secure relief by the only methods presently available. . . . The Allied legislative program is of necessity a long range program, but it is today the only one that offers reasonable prospects of success."

LABOR BOYCOTT OF 'GOSSIPERS' ASKED; RADIO DEFENDS BROADCASTS BY STARS

Screen Actors Guild Proposes Action Against Products; Fidler Charges Industry Seeks Control of Publicity

Hollywood's public attack on radio "gossipers," confined up until last week to sharp criticism such as that voiced by Darryl Zanuck and Cecil B. DeMille, acquired a more tangible program of action over the weekend when the Screen Actors' Guild voted to call upon the American Federation of Labor for a membership boycott on products advertised by air "columnists" who persist on delving into the private lives of film personalities.

The anti-"gossiper" campaign was further brought into the open Tuesday night when James Fidler, socalled "dean" of the commentators, came to the defense of his colleagues on his regular National Broadcasting Company broadcast for Procter and Gamble's "Drene" shampoo.

Mr. Fidler branded the campaign against "gossipers" as a determined effort by the film industry to control all comment about itself and to make "tin gods" of the stars.

The commentator, through his speech, served notice on the industry that he has no intention of eliminating his reports on the private lives of stars. He pointed to President Roosevelt and his family as examples of public figures subjected to criticism by both the press and the public. "Until the President of these United States yells 'quit' I can't see where any other individual in the public light has cause for complaint," Mr. Fidler declared.

On Wednesday, the morning after Mr. Fidler's broadcast, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced through advertisements in trade publications that it is releasing a short subject, "Jimmie Fidler's 'Personality Parade.'" The picture, with Mr. Fidler as commentator, is composed of shots of motion picture stars of a few years ago.

The radio columnist's broadcast on the anti-gossip campaign was given in the form of an editorial headed: "Is Hollywood Justified in Its Struggle to Suppress Radio and Press Criticism?"

"Here of late," Mr. Fidler said, "a few members of the film colony have been openly condemning columnists and reporters who are bold enough to voice unbiased opinions about pictures and stars. Hardly a day passes that some representative of the public press or radio is not denounced for failing to speak of the movies in terms of saccharine sweetness. All of which is part of the determined campaign of the film industry to control all comment about itself, a campaign to make tin gods of the stars and to suppress frank reviews of motion pictures.

"Those most active in this campaign claim that the public is not interested nor is it entitled to know about the personal lives of the stars. On this theory the industry is seeking to abolish open discussion of Hollywood. The theory is both stupid and opposed to actual fact.

"Let me answer it from my own experience. In addition to two weekly radio programs I write a column which appears in more than 100 newspapers. From readers and listeners I receive a steady stream of letters, interesting, constructive letters. It's only too evident from these letters that the public is very interested in the personal lives of stars. Furthermore, the bigger the star the more interest there is. Now, the public has learned to distinguish honest facts from press agentry. Also the public is demanding honest unbiased reviews of pictures. And no amount of artificial publicity can force that public to attend inferior pictures. Producers who claim otherwise are either deluding themselves or else they're talking simply to make a noise. Through press and radio, millions of words go out of Hollywood daily. Most of these words are news and opinions about the film industry.

"If all these words were sugar-coated the result would be nauseating and the public would lose interest in Hollywood. There must be excitement and there must be controversy because the industry and stars themselves are topics for excitement and discussion. The big trouble is Hollywood doesn't realize this fact. Most of Hollywood wants only the sweet without the bitter. It doesn't understand that it's a public property depending upon public interest for its livelihood.

"The industry would be wise to take a lesson from President Roosevelt. Public and press alike freely discuss and criticize the policies and actions of the Chief Executive. The personal lives of the President and his entire family are open to scrutiny and criticism.

"Until the President of these United States yells 'quit' I can't see where any other individual in the public light has cause for complaint. I personally take far more criticism than I dish out. When the day comes that I can't take it, that day I will cease to dish it out."

Last week Mr. DeMille, Paramount producer, described the commentators as "preying on defenseless people and poisoning the public mind," and Mr. Zanuck, production chief of Twentieth Century-Fox, warned that his company and most producers were prepared to take "swift and stern action" should commentators continue to "flaunt the tenets of decency." Mr. Zanuck's statement originally was believed to reflect the attitude of the Motion Picture Producers Association, Hollywood affiliate of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of

LOEW'S DIVIDENDS CITED AS EVIDENCE

W. B. Lewis, vice-president in charge of programs for the Columbia Broadcasting System, advanced a reason for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's active cooperation with radio programs from the studios, when he spoke at last week's Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' luncheon in New York.

"Loew's, Inc., as you know," Mr. Lewis said, "already has paid out $6 a share in dividends on its common stock this year, and this morning's papers announced that another will be paid before the year ends, bringing this year's total dividends to $7.50 a share.

"Do you suppose that here might lie, in part, the explanation of MGM's consistent refusal to get excited about how radio has cut into movies' box office?"

Vice-President of CBS Says Radio and Screen Can Help Each Other, Both Needing "Established Names"

A direct contradiction of the charges of various members of the motion picture industry that broadcasting by film stars is injurious to box office returns was voiced last Thursday by W. B. Lewis, vice-president of Columbia Broadcasting System, when he addressed 200 members and guests of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at a luncheon meeting in the International Casino, New York City.

"There has been a greater use of Hollywood talent on radio programs during the past year than ever before in the history of broadcasting," said Mr. Lewis, who has charge of programs for CBS. "And there has been greater activity on the part of box-office cashiers during this same 12 months than ever before in the history of moving pictures."

Mr. Lewis had been invited to speak on "Radio in Relation to Motion Pictures" but he prefaced his address with the declaration that he would confine his discussion "to what radio is doing and can do for you."

"You and I know," Mr. Lewis declared, "that all has not been sweetness and light in the relationship of our two industries insofar as it has concerned listener versus spectator interest. I have never been able to understand this feeling —this conviction, on the part of some exhibitors, that radio keeps people away from the movies. There is only one thing that can keep able bodied people away from the movies, or away from radio, and that is a bad program. 'What,' you may ask, 'would be the situation if all of us, movies and radio, were blessed with good programs?' My answer to that would be that 'there is a millenium devoutly to be desired.' Together, the radio and moving picture industries can cooperate to attain that end.

Potential Audience

"If every seat in every moving picture house in every community in the United States were occupied at the same time, less than one-eighth of the American radio audience would be 'at the movies,'" he said. "Whenever you hear an estimate as to the size of some specific radio audience, it is good to remember how big is the total of all radio owners before you decide that there aren't enough people left over to go to the movies. As long as people like variety in their entertainment, and they always will, and as long as people like to share excitement and pleasure together, and they always will, there will be no danger of radio—or television—supplanting your product in the hearts of our citizens."

Mr. Lewis pointed out that though the recent Yale-Dartmouth football game was broadcast, every seat in the Yale Bowl was occupied for the first time in several years. He also cited the fact that the recent tennis matches at Forest Hills attracted capacity crowds and this, he continued, was partly due to the fact that the events were broadcast.

Mr. Lewis next turned his attention to the oft repeated complaint that radio is dependent upon the stage and screen for its creative brains and talent.

"I have heard it said," Mr. Lewis declared,

INTERCHANGE OF TALENT ADVOCATED

Asks Cooperation of Radio and Film

"that the steady increase in our activities on the West Coast is proof that advertising agencies and broadcasters have failed to produce and direct successful programs; that radio has failed to develop talent of its own. I can't agree.

"Radio first went to Hollywood to keep up with its own artists, for whom it had developed a large enough popular following to make them sure-fire timber for movies. Each year finds more of them engaged in film work. Eddie Cantor is frank to admit that the success of his movies is the result of the nationwide following he attained through radio, and Burns' and Allen's nonsense was entertaining millions before Shirley Temple was out of her cradle.

"We are both in the business of providing popular, large scale entertainment. Beyond that, you cannot say we are in competitive business. Because we are engaged in the same general work, and because we are not competing in the sale of our products, we are in an ideal position to work together for the betterment of the particular entertainment each of us tries to produce. We want to continue to use Hollywood 'big names,' Hollywood stories and Hollywood music. On our part we are glad to see radio talent given a chance at the movies."

Experiments in Radio

One of the advantages which radio has over motion pictures, the CBS official said, is that radio can afford to experiment while Hollywood must be assured of the public's likes before it undertakes a production.

"But we also are faced with conditions under which we cannot afford to take chances in what we offer to our audience," he added. "We have commercial sponors spending thousands of dollars weekly to attract large nationwide audiences. When it comes to airing a big program at big cost for a sponsor, we are in the same position as your producers. We must use established names. That is where cooperation is most needed in the relationship of radio and movies, insofar as it concerns us."

Classical music, according to Mr. Lewis, was popularized by radio, making available to motion pictures such stars as Lily Pons, Grace Moore, Gladys Swarthout, Leopold Stokowski, Lawrence Tibbett, Nelson Eddy and Andre Kostelanetz.

Ted Husing Master of Ceremonies

Before Mr. Lewis spoke, a program of entertainment was presented by CBS artists. Ted Husing served as master of ceremonies and introduced Al Pierce, who in turn introduced the entertainers. They included the Symphonettes, with Hugh Marsh at the piano; Arline Harris, "the human chatterbox," and Buddy Clark, who sang and was accompanied on the piano by Walter Gross.

"Lord" Oliver Wakefield was introduced by Ralph Rolan, AMPA president, as Mr. Lewis and it was not until after he voiced several meaningless and complicated sentences that the audience realized he was an entertainer and not the CBS official.

Among the CBS officials and personnel present were L. W. Loman, vice-president in charge of operations; Hugh Kendall Boice, vice-president in charge of sales; Mefford R. Runyon, vice-president and director; Frederick A. Willis, assistant to the president; David Ross, announcer; Andre Baruch, announcer; Paul White, director of special events; Maurice Gaffney, trade editor; Bill Cohan and Davidson Taylor, music consultants; Frank White, network treasurer; Frank Stanton, manager of the research department; Helen Sioussat, assistant to Sterling Fisher of Columbia's talks and public affairs department; W. C. Gittinger, sales manager; J. J. Karol, director of research; William Ensign, assistant sales manager, and Vic Ratner, director of sales promotion.

Guests included Martin Quigley, president of Quigley Publishing Company; Ted Streibert, vice-president of the Mutual network; Fred Weber, general manager of the Mutual system; Arthur Samuels, of the WOR program department; Adolph Opfinger, of the Mutual program department; Bob Schmid, Mutual sales promotion director, and H. C. McLaughlin, sales manager of WKH-WCLE, Mutual affiliate in Cleveland.

AMPA's Thursday luncheon at the International Casino, this week was to have as guest of honor James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany during the World War and American representative at the coronation of King George.

Also scheduled to appear on the dais were Rudy Vallee, Rosalind Russell, Wallace Ford, of the "Mice and Men" cast, Al Shean of stage and screen; Nick Lucas, Alexander Kirkland and Flora Campbell, of "Many Mansions," Imogene Coca and June Sillman of the forthcoming stage musical "Who's Who," together with Leonard Hillman, the play's producer, and Arthur Kent and Ruth Bond, radio favorites.

OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON RADIO QUESTION

Ed Kuykendall, head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, and Walter Vincent, president of Republic Theatres, criticized the radio activities of the motion picture industry when they spoke at the convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina and, in New York, Frank Lloyd, Paramount director, partially agreed with their viewpoint but asserted the air medium is of assistance to the screen rather than a menace to it.

Both Mr. Kuykendall and Mr. Vincent declared the majority of motion picture stars appearing on radio programs are unsuited for the work. Mr. Lloyd agreed on this point, saying that the appearance on the air of established screen personalities, who were developed via the screen, does them no good.

However, in the sense that radio is educating the public to a liking for better things in entertainment, broadcasting aids the motion picture industry, Mr. Lloyd said.

As a means of using the radio as an advertising medium for pictures, Mr. Lloyd suggested that the program should be mostly music with brief interjections of comment. He added that such a plan is being discussed on the Coast.

Fidler Defends Air 'Gossipers'

America, but H. M. Warner, head of Warner Brothers, later issued a statement declaring Mr. Zanuck was not speaking for the Warner organization.

It was then that Mr. Zanuck qualified his denunciation of "gossipers" to be that of his company and "most producers." Simultaneous with the Screen Actors Guild's decision to appeal to the AFL, Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, sided with Mr. Zanuck in his controversy with Mr. Warner.

Mr. Thomson expressed amazement that "Harry Warner had seen fit to announce that the Producers Association does not speak for him."

"We hope," he continued, "that the Warner attitude is not influenced by the fact that he has one of these socalled commentators under contract. The attitude voiced by the association may not be that of Warner. However, we are certain that this campaign has the support not only of all actors but also of the great body of fair minded and decent people of these United States."

Strike Prediction Cited

It was pointed out Mr. Fidler irked the Guild about a year ago by saying erroneously that the Guild was going on strike against the producers. Now, Mr. Fidler is under contract to Warner Brothers for four pictures.

In announcing the Guild's stand on the matter, Mr. Thomson declared: "The time for words is over. Should attacks continue the Guild will act and ask for a national boycott of products of sponsors for these commentators."

The Guild, extremely cooperative in problems affecting other unions since its affiliation with the AFL, is strongly entrenched in labor circles on the Coast and, for this reason, there is little doubt but what the aid of other unions could be enlisted, say Hollywood reports.

Meanwhile, the MPPA's plans for issuing credential cards to accredited radio commentators and their assistants developed further. The large studios each appointed a man from its publicity department to handle all radio commentator contacts.

Contact Men Meet

The cards, similar to those issued to accredited newspaper correspondents, were decided upon some time ago when the MPPA discussed means of regulating the activities of air columnists.

The newly appointed studio contact men held their first meeting with Tom Pettey, press contact man for the MPPA, but no business was transacted, the session being merely a "get-together."

The Guild's statement, issued by the board of directors through Mr. Thomson, was signed by Robert Montgomery, president; James Cagney, Joan Crawford, Chester Morris, Boris Karloff, Noel Madison, Murray Kinnell, Edward Arnold, Humphrey Bogart, Dudley Digges, Lucille Gleason, Porter Hall, Paul Harvey, Jean Hersholt, Russell Hicks, Claude King, Fredric March, Frank Morgan, Ralph Morgan, Alan Mowbray, Jean Muir, Erin O'Brien Moore, Irving Pichel, Dick Powell, Elizabeth Risdon, Edward G. Robinson, Edwin Stanley, Gloria Stuart, Franchot Tone, Warren William, Donald Wood and Robert Young.

DE VRY IN NEW YORK FOR EASTERN INVASION BY HIS 16mm. NEWSREEL

Florida Theatre at Jacksonville Finds Local News More Than Sufficient for Material for Weekly Reel

Details of the operation and success of a local 16 mm. newsreel were disclosed by United Theatres, Inc., of Florida, this week coincident with the announcement by Herman A. DeVry that his staff has encountered no serious obstacles to a plan for issuance of a combined national and hometown 16 mm. reel about January 1st.

Mr. DeVry, head of Herman A. DeVry, Inc., arrived in New York from Chicago over the weekend to arrange for eastern representation for the plan. Although no contracts have been signed as yet, Mr. DeVry said, a staff of former newspapermen and showmen is engaged in "sounding out" and "lining up" exhibitors and newspapers throughout the country. Under the DeVry plan, newspapers will become co-sponsors of the reel and will handle the actual taking of pictures for the local reels.

The plan, outlined in detail in the November 20th issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, also provides that the exhibitors are to stand the cost of leasing the necessary equipment, such as projector, camera, exposure meter, reels and splicing machine. Mr. DeVry estimated the cost to each theatre will be about $10 a week.

Newspapers "Co-producers"

In return for cooperating in the plan, newspapers will be listed on the screen as co-producers and, Mr. DeVry continued, each local newsreel may be named after the newspaper. Although the film itself will be of the silent type, under Mr. DeVry's proposal the newspaper will assign a reporter to write a script for each reel and it will be read over the theatre's announcing system while the reel is shown.

Arrangements are to be made, Mr. De Vry said, for establishing offices similar to film exchange centers, and the developing and printing of films will be handled at these points, thus making it possible for exhibitors to get rapid service.

The DeVry company will keep the negatives and any shots used for national reel will be paid for, Mr. DeVry said.

The Florida Experiment

The story of the United Theatres' use of a 16 mm. reel at the Florida Theatre, Jacksonville, was written by A. C. Lyles, Jr., who summarized his account with the declaration:

"We think this local newsreel is a great idea and feel that eventually it will be featured in many theatres over the country."

The reel has been in use in Florida for 31 consecutive weeks, Mr. Lyles reported. The plan originated with Guy A. Kenimer, United Theatres district manager, and technical details were handled by B. A. Cawthon, supervisor of projection. The problem Mr. Cawthon faced was that the projection throw in the Florida Theatre is 140 feet and the screen image is 18 by 24 feet.

Equipment Changed

The projection room originally was equipped with three 35 mm. projectors and high intensity light sources. From one of these Mr. Cawthon removed the film mechanism, magazines and sound reproducer, and mounted a Holmes 16 mm. all sprocket sound on films projector on the pedestal. The 35 mm. high intensity arc was used as the light source. A 6½ inch condenser was fitted at the aperture to converge the 35 mm. lamp spot through the 16 mm. aperture. A special 2⅛ E. F. projection lens with a speed of F 1.6 was used as the objective. The film aperture and gate were revamped to meet the conditions imposed upon it by the intense heat.

A special oil chamber was added to the deciment movement to circulate the oil. The projector motor was converted into a high speed blower for the aperture.

An Electrical Research Products, Inc., motor was utilized to drive the projector. The motor gear box ratio was changed to 1440 rpm (equivalent to 24 frames per second, sound speed) and connected directly to the shutter shaft of the projector by a flexible cable. An ERPI turntable was coupled to the other end of the motor. Through this arrangement, sound on either film or disc could be used.

Disc Used for Sound

Use of the disc for sound was decided upon. The reproducing turntable was equipped with a Universal power recording head and the projection room amplifiers were used for the recording. A mixing panel and microphones were installed on the main floor near the organ.

The production staff for the reel is composed of Mr. Lyles, continuity writer; Frank Ingels, the company's radio announcer, commentator; James Knight, organist who scores the reel with music and effects, and T. R. Frierson and Mitchell Yeager, projectionists, who mix and record the sound.

Material covered by the newsreel included a murder, a city election and a taxi strike.

To exhibitors planning to undertake a local newsreel, Mr. Lyles offered the following suggestions:

"The thing to remember in getting your news pictures is to get as many people in the scenes as possible, that is, of course, if it is consistent with the subject.

"Everyone in the group will buy a ticket to see himself on the screen, as will his family and friends. Those in the pictures will be your best advertisers, telling everyone they see about their being in the local newsreel."

Material Available

Exhibitors have nothing to fear in connection with availability of material for a reel, said Mr. Lyles, who explained:

"At first, we were a bit skeptical whether there would be sufficient news for a weekly reel. Since then, we have discovered that each week we have to discard shots, not because there is no news attached to them, but because we have an overflow of subjects."

The Jacksonville Journal is co-producer of the Florida's reel. Mr. Lyles said it is "a good idea to tie in with your local papers; they can furnish you with the latest news the minute it comes into their offices."

PARLIAMENT SEES "MARCH OF TIME"

"The March of Time" penetrated last week into the innermost sanctums of the British House of Commons.

An issue containing an exposé of the present situation, industrial and domestic, in the Highlands of Scotland was screened in one of the Committee rooms of Westminster Hall to a party of members.

German Releases for Six Months at 1,019

In the first half of 1937, domestic and foreign pictures offered on the German market totaled 1,019, with a length of 466,515 meters. The figures are from a report of Assistant Commercial Attache R. M. Stevenson at Berlin to the United States Department of Commerce.

The pictures released of German origin amounted to 939 with a length of 356,827 meters, 80 (109,688 meters) of foreign origin, including 41 (62,162) from the United States. Of the German share, 653 were normal films and 286 were narrow gauge. Of the foreign pictures, 71 were of normal and nine of narrow gauge. The total of long and short films amounted to 123, with a length of 207,841 meters. Seventy-six were German, 47 foreign, including 23 American.

Equipment Exports Rise

Exports from the United States to foreign countries of photographic and projection equipment for the first 10 months of 1937 amounted to $18,963,000 compared with $17,305,000 for the same period in 1936, according to a report issued by the department of commerce of foreign trade statistics.

Develops Camera Device

Ernest Haller, Warner Brothers cameraman, is developing a new type of diffuser which automatically would adjust itself when the camera is moved from a closeup to a long shot, according to word from Hollywood. Under the present system, the diffuser must be removed when the dolly shots are made.

Clark Gable and Myrna Loy were chosen "Movie King and Queen of 1937" in an election conducted by the New York Daily News and newspapers in 52 other key cities in United States and Canada.

DECISIONS RESERVED ON FILM LABOR PROBLEMS

Labor Board Permits Additional Briefs in Writers' Guild Plea for Bargaining Election

Legislative boards having under consideration matters of immediate importance to labor relations in the motion picture industry were in adjournment this week with their decisions held in abeyance.

The National Labor Relations Board in Washington, studying the petition of the Screen Writers Guild for an election to determine a collective bargaining unit, granted opportunity for filing of further briefs and announced it would take the matter under consideration.

In California the state legislative committee, which some weeks ago opened a study of labor relations in Hollywood and adjourned after several hearings, gave no indication of resuming its inquiry. George Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, refused to discuss a meeting of the Alliance executive board held in Detroit. He intimated, however, that it concerned the California investigation.

Washington Hearing Held

Jurisdiction of the Labor Board over the relations between producers and screen writers was challenged by representatives of the producers at the Washington hearing which followed lengthy presentation of arguments in Hollywood before a regional board several weeks ago. Not only is the board without power to act in the matter, it was contended, but if it had such power the writers themselves could not be considered as employees under the terms of the Wagner Act.

Carrying the burden of the argument for the petitioners, Leonard S. Janofsky, counsel for the Screen Writers' Guild, said the question of jurisdiction had been settled by Supreme Court decision, holding that laws affecting interstate commerce could be extended to activities affecting such commerce and pointing out that were the writers to go on strike the production of film would slow down and the stream of interstate commerce diminish.

The Guild also took the position that writers were employees, contending that the terms of their employment were such as to bring their work under the control and supervision of the producers with relatively few exceptions, a position which later was rebutted by the producers, who declared the companies purchased the ideas of the writers rather than their work for so many hours a day.

Contending that there was no problem that could be helped by bargaining, Neil McCarthy, attorney for Screen Playwrights, Inc., said writers were not employees but rather persons who sold the product of their brains. Further, he told the board, "There is nothing to bargain about—nothing in their ralationship with producers that can be improved."

Citing the Schechter and Carter decisions, dealing with activities in the one instance after interstate movement had ceased and in the other before it began, counsel for the producers contended that production was in the same classification, as an industry which in itself was intrastate in character although producing for interstate commerce, and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of the board.

If the board held that the act applied in this instance, it was warned, it would have to assume jurisdiction over practically every activity in the country, since any cessation of any activity would lessen the flow of interstate commerce. Further, it was argued, even if the board had jurisdiction, the conditions under which writers work would exempt them from classification as employees under the act.

Actors to Meet

The first meeting of the Screen Writers' Guild since the session at which announcement was made of the signed contract with the major studios will be held December 17th in Hollywood. The questions to be discussed will deal exclusively, according to Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary, with problems affecting free lance and day players. A membership of the eastern branch of the Guild will be held December 13th at the Astor Hotel, New York.

A compromise agreement for the settlement of the Guild's dispute with March of Time over the producer's claim to a newsreel status which would exempt it from signing a Guild contract, was offered officials of the company this week. The proposed compromise included provisions for a supplementary agreement to the contract calling for definition of newsreel and theatrical material in March of Time releases, the newsreel material to be exempt from the agreement and the theatrical material to be subject to it.

Ohio Travelogues Campaign

B. A. Aughinbaugh, state director of visual education in Ohio, has issued a bulletin urging exhibitors to play the eight Ohio Travelogues issued and distributed by the state without charge or transportation costs. Each 850 to 1,000 foot film, with sound recording authorized by RCA, deals with some historical or similar scene, and is prefaced with a map showing the location. There is no propaganda of any kind, it is said, in the films.

Warners London Plays

Warner Brothers is interested in two London stage plays, "Hide and Seek," current at the Hippodrome, and "Blondie White," according to the home office. It is understood Warner Brothers have no definite commitments with any English theatrical producer and each play is partially financed by the company on an individual basis. No official decision has been made to bring the plays to Broadway.

Hummel Australia Bound

Joseph Hummel, foreign manager for Warner Brothers, sailed Wednesday from San Francisco on the Mariposa for Sydney, Australia. Mr. Hummel plans to be gone about five months and will visit Java, Singapore, New Zealand, China, India, Japan and Manila. While in Australia Mr. Hummel will discuss Warner product with Hoyts Greater Union circuit.

Carl Peterson Decorated

Carl Peterson, Paramount News cameraman, last week in New York was presented a Congressional Medal for recognition of his services with the second Admiral Byrd Exposition. The presentation was made by Mayor LaGuardia.

HOLLYWOOD ELYSIUM DOUBTED, AFFIRMED

Treatment accorded writers by the producers as described by company attorneys at the Washington hearing on the Screen Writers Guild petition before the National Labor Relations Board, elicited from J. Warren Madden, chairman, the comment that Hollywood must be an Elysium and an expressed doubt that such conditions could exist.

Donald W. Smith, a member of the board, however, said that from his experience as attorney for the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers he could say they did exist, at least with respect to composers, and no doubt to writers.

Ruling Withheld In Doubles Case

At a hearing held Tuesday in United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Philadelphia Judges J. Whitaker Thompson, J. Warren Davis and Joseph Buffington, reserved decision in the suit brought by six major producing companies to restrain Harry Pearlman, local independent exhibitor from showing of double features.

This has been a long contested suit. Three years ago Judge George A. Welsh ruled in favor of Mr. Pearlman. The Court of Appeals twice since has upheld the original ruling by Judge Welsh. Morris Wolf and Edward Weisel, attorneys for the companies, were granted the new hearing when they promised to bring forth two new points. The two points were that the double feature clause in the majors' contracts were reasonable and were necessary to protect the industry as a whole. They argued that double features were damaging to public morals and would lead to "cut-throat" competition. They also stressed the point that the six producing companies did not combine together to bring the duals prohibition against Mr. Pearlman and thus there was no violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

Ben Golder, who represented Mr. Pearlman, and acted as spokesman for the entire local exhibitor organization, argued that the companies did combine illegally against Pearlman. The companies are Vitagraph, Paramount, MGM Distributing, Fox Films, RKO and United Artists.

Bishop with National Supply

Edward W. Bishop, formerly with Electrical Research Products, Inc., in the Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin area, has joined National Theatre Supply Company. He will have supervision of Mirrophonic Sound Sales in the Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Milwaukee and Minneapolis branches with headquarters in the Chicago office.

Paramount has moved into its new exchange building in Seattle, Wash. The new quarters were built especially for the company and cost approximately $50,000. Paramount's former exchange is now occupied by National Screen Service.

SAVE INDUSTRY FROM PROPAGANDA, QUIGLEY TELLS CAROLINA EXHIBITORS

Silver Jubilee Convention Delegates Warned Against Pressure from "Alien Influences"; Stevenson Succeeds Picquet

Tracing the activities of radical propagandists on the stage, in newspapers and in radio, Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, informed members of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina that an alert, vigorous organization is needed to keep the motion picture free from alien influences seeking to infect the industry and the United States.

Mr. Quigley's declaration that the motion picture is the one medium of expression and the one influence upon public opinion that has escaped radical propagandists, was made during the course of his address on "Radicalism—An Industry Peril" at the Silver Jubilee convention of the Carolina theatremen at the Carolina Hotel, Pinehurst, Monday.

A warning was sounded by Mr. Quigley that the task of keeping the propagandists from gaining an influence over the production of motion pictures cannot be accomplished singlehandedly. "You are opposed," he declared, "by a determined cult whose members are actuated with the fervor and zeal of a crusader."

Charles W. Picquet, president, presided at the two-day convention and Robert E. Denny made the address of welcome.

Oppose Racial Intermingling

On the second day of the convention the theatremen aligned themselves with other southern exhibitors by adopting a resolution protesting against indiscriminate intermingling of the white and Negro races in motion pictures.

Montgomery S. Hill of Greensboro, N. C., proposed that more respect for southern traditions be shown in the handling of Negro presentations on the screen.

"We are glad to see Negroes portrayed in sympathetic roles," Mr. Hill explained, "but we object to showoff characters and wish heartily to condemn the scantily-clad Negro persons in dance scenes, especially with white performers. Sex appeal suggestions should be strictly taboo."

Stevenson Named President

After Mr. Picquet declined to stand for reelection as president, a position he had held for 14 consecutive years, S. S. Stevenson of Henderson, N. C., was chosen to succeed him. Other officers elected were: H. R. Berry, Hartsville, S. C., first vice-president, and Lyle Wilson, Roanoke Rapids, N. C., second vice-president. Directors chosen included H. C. Buchanan, Hendersonville; Albert Scottile, Charleston, S. C.; R. E. Bryant, Rockhill, S. C.; W. H. Hendrix, Reidsville; J. F. Miller, Hickory; H. F. Kincey, Charlotte; Mr. Picquet, Pinehurst; Roy L. Rowe, Burgaw; J. E. Masse, Waynesville; Boyd Brown, Winsboro, S. C.;

Radicalism— An Industry Peril

Following is the complete text of the address of Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, to the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, Inc., on Monday, at the annual convention in Pinehurst, N. C.

TWO years ago I had the privilege of addressing the members of this association.

On that occasion I availed myself of the opportunity to communicate to you certain profound apprehensions which I then entertained. These apprehensions were relative to dangers confronting the motion picture at the hands of those who would employ it for political, economic and social propaganda—for its usefulness to them in their giddy ambition to remodel men and affairs according to their own particular notions.

I am happy that I chose that subject for discussion with you men and women of North and South Carolina—you citizens of these states who are so thoroughly representative of those ideals of democracy upon which this nation became great.

I am anxious today to return to this subject because the events of the past two years have greatly emphasized the grounds for the apprehension which I expressed on the former occasion.

If next year and the year after we are not to be even more violently disturbed over the conditions that confront us, then it will be only because men and women such as you have taken the trouble correctly to inform yourselves upon the trend of the times and then proceeded to do something effective about it.

There remains in the eyes of the radical propagandists one medium of expression and one influence upon public opinion which thus far vainly excites their envy. That medium is the motion picture.

THEY are doing very well with the stage. The Federal Government, for instance, at a current cost to taxpayers of a million dollars a month has permitted the Federal Theatre Project, which was originally described as being for the relief of unemployed actors, to be dominated by political extremists who have produced and presented to great numbers of people plays such as "Injunction Granted" and "Power," each of which partakes of the essential character of Communistic propaganda.

They are doing very well with many of the newspapers, a fact we are reminded of when we note, for instance, that the Moscow correspondent of one of the great American press associations for six recent critical years is an enthusiastically professed Communist.

They are also doing very well even with certain segments of the church, a fact which is confirmed by the active assistance of several prominent churchmen to such an organization as the League Against War and Fascism, which is a league against war and fascism secondly, if at all, and is first and last a league for Communism.

And they have little to complain about relative to another great influence upon public opinion—Radio. Under the silly and unrealistic notion that Communism is just another political theory like state's sovereignty or woman's suffrage—and not a dream both delirious and vicious, the awakening from which would leave a ruined civilization—radio authorities lend their facilities to Red Propagandists.

These authorities accept the argument that under the American principle of freedom of speech these propagandists are entitled to be heard even though adoption of the philosophy they preach means sudden death to all free speech. Communists assert that those who are devoted to the ideals of democracy are stupid. Perhaps in this they are right.

AMONG the great media of expression and among the great influences upon public opinion there remains the motion picture, which thus far has escaped the blight of radical propaganda.

This has not been easily accomplished. It will not be easy to make good the escape in the months and years ahead. The attack is clever and determined.

For instance, they will tell you that the entertainment film has failed in its mission. They admit that the entertainment film has indeed entertained, but in keeping with their usual muddle-headed reasoning they still insist that it has failed in its mission.

FILMS INTERMINGLING RACES OPPOSED

George Parr, Lancaster, S. C.; F. H. Beddingfield, Charlotte; Fuller Sams, Stateville, and William Conn, Gastonia.

There was only one argument during the convention and that started when Milton C. Moore of Jacksonville, president of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, sought support for his organization's resolution favoring federal regulation by the appointment of boards to consider the complaints of exchange men and exhibitors.

Ed Levy, general counsel of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, outlined the national legislative situation and protested against any federal regulation. Mr. Kincey and Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, also spoke against regulation.

Walter Vincent, president of Republic Pictures, criticized Hollywood executives, declaring they will not listen to advice from the outside and that they do not know what the public wants.

"They build a Chinese Wall about themselves," he said. "They know only Hollywood, Palm Springs, Mexico, Honolulu and perhaps New York and London. This explains why so many pictures which do well in New York die like a dog in Painted Post, which spot is so important to exhibitors."

A. F. Sams, of Winston-Salem, a charter member of the organization, described the work done by the organization in protesting against enactment of bills in Washington and Raleigh which would have been unfair to theatre owners.

Both Mr. Vincent and Mr. Kuykendall criticized broadcasting by film stars and the producer-sponsored radio programs.

Mr. Kuykendall also spoke against Government regulation of any sort and explained that the industry is not opposed to labor. But, he continued, at present labor appears to be moving too fast and becoming too radical.

The organization's new president, Mr. Stevenson, operates theatres independently in Henderson and Rock Hill, S. C. In return for Mr. Picquet's service to the association, the delegates voted that a token of remembrance be presented to him.

Amkino President Leaves for Soviet

V. I. Verlinsky, president of Amkino Corporation, official distributors of Soviet films in the United States and Canada, sailed Wednesday on the Normandie for a two months business trip to Soviet Union.

While he is away, Mr. Verlinsky will consult with heads of Soviet motion picture industry, and select films for export to the States.

Amkino's highlight release of this season, the Paris Exposition prize-winner "Peter the First," will have its American premiere while Mr. Verlinsky is away. It opens day and date on December 24th in 10 key cities, said by Amkino to be a new record for foreign films.

failed to adopt their mission as its own. They are bitter in their criticism because the entertainment film does not presume to be an educational medium. Their quarrel with this is that they know if the film once undertook to teach they would then get their chance to dictate what it would teach.

They assert that film should deal with the vital subject of modern life—with schemes and dreams of a political, economic and social character. Obviously they do not wish the screen to deal with these subjects along the established lines of American democracy. What they are seeking is a chance to muscle in, gain an influence over the production of the motion picture and then use it for the propagation of their own notions of world reform.

They want the film to be realistic—to deal with the facts of life in the raw. They are unhappy because the people are made happy in the theatres. They want the screen to shock and embitter patrons so that the ranks of the discontented will be enlarged, giving to them recruits in greater numbers to flock to their magical cures for what's wrong with the world.

They are against religion, which they say is the opium of the people, meaning that it encourages people to be good citizens and not revolutionaries. They regard the entertainment film also as an opium because it generates contentment and happiness and not disorder and discontent.

THERE is here, gentlemen, a job for you to do—not only for the security and welfare of your business but for the security and welfare of the nation as well.

But you cannot do the job single-handedly. You are opposed by a determined cult whose members are actuated with the fervor and zeal of a crusader.

This twenty-fifth anniversary of your association is an appropriate occasion for a re-valuation of the needs and advantages of organization.

Within the industry for your protection and prosperity you need a strong, alert and vigorous organization—now and always. And only with that kind of an organization can you hope to render successful defense of the motion picture and the industry—and the nation itself—against those alien influences which would infect us, our industry and our country with a plague which has brought untold misery to millions of men, women and children in other lands.

Yale Drama Professor Filming Theatre Backstage Operations

Professor Allardyce Nicoll, director of the Department of Drama, Yale University, is supervising the production of a motion picture which will show the details of backstage operation of a theatre. A feature length film it is being produced coincidentally with the production of "Coronation," stage play by Zelick Segal, third year student of the university.

It is Professor Nicoll's belief that the picture "will further appreciation of the work backstage, performed by men whose tasks are little understood or suspected by the playgoing audiences, showing that the success of the play depends not only upon performers, but on the unseen workers as well."

Interstate to Build

Karl Hoblitzelle's Interstate Theatres, Inc., will build a sixth suburban theatre for the circuit in Houston, Tex. The house will cost approximately $100,000 and seat 1,200.

Museum of Modern Art Gets Documentary Films

The Museum of Modern Art Film Library, New York, has added 13 British documentary films, produced in England during the last three years, to its files. The films were brought here by Paul Rotha, a leader in the movement in England.

The films are, "Air Outpost," "Children at School," "Enough to Eat," "Eastern Valley," "For All Eternity," "Granton Trawler," "Housing Problems," "Night Mail," "Roadways," "The Smoke Menace," "Today We Live," "We Live in Two Worlds," and "Weather Forecast."

Skouras To Distribute Fox Product in Greece

Spyros Skouras, operating head of National Theatres, has arranged to handle the distribution of Twentieth Century-Fox pictures in Greece and Bulgaria. Mr. Skouras' nephew, also Spyros Skouras, will have charge of the foreign offices.

COCHRANE ACCEPTS COWDIN POST, BUT REFUSES TO GIVE UP PRESIDENCY

Grainger's Contract with Universal Is Settled; Paine Resigns; Weinberg Declines Post of Assistant General Sales Manager

R. H. Cochrane officially accepted the chairmanship of the executive committee of Universal Pictures Corporation this week but, at the same time, refused to relinquish the post of president, which, according to the edict of the board of directors last week, will be filled by Nate J. Blumberg, now of RKO, starting January 1st.

Mr. Cochrane's stand, taken on advice of his attorney, Saul Rogers, and Louis Weinberg's decision not to accept the position of assistant general sales manager thus presented the only two major unsettled questions in connection with the Universal upheaval last week.

Developments during the week included:

Settlement of James R. Grainger's contract with Universal as general sales manager, and his immediate withdrawal.

Resignation of Charles B. Paine, assistant to the president.

Return of Charles R. Rogers, vice-president in charge of production, from New York to the Coast, after the upheaval activities.

Announcement of the new personnel of the executive committee.

In revealing that Mr. Cochrane had accepted the chairmanship to which he was elected at the board meeting last week, Mr. Rogers stressed the point that he considered this phase of the board's action legal and valid, but, he added:

"The board's action in removing Mr. Cochrane as president, in my opinion, was not valid or legal."

Other than to say he has "the situation well in hand" and still considers Mr. Cochrane the president, Mr. Rogers declined to reveal his client's contemplated course of action.

"Under his contract," Mr. Rogers said, "Mr. Cochrane is the principal executive of the company and I consider him the most important executive in the company."

Paine Silent on Resignation

Mr. Paine served as assistant to Mr. Cochrane and was associated with Universal in an executive capacity for 14 years. He declined to comment on his resignation, which was tendered without announcement on Monday. Mr. Paine joined Universal in 1923 as a member of the export department and eight months later was made assistant to E. H. Goldstein, then treasurer of the company. Mr. Paine continued as assistant treasurer through two more treasurerships and was elected treasurer in 1928. He continued in this capacity until early this year when he was named Mr. Cochrane's assistant.

Named to the executive committee at a board meeting this week were J. Cheever Cowdin, Mr. Rogers, William Freiday, D. M. Sheaffer, Budd Rogers, and Mr. Blumberg, who is resigning as vice-president and general manager of theatre operations for RKO, to accept the Universal position.

Mr. Grainger's contract with Universal extended to next July, but, in severing his affiliation with the company, he announced that the commitment had been respected and met in every way. He will be succeeded by W. A. Scully, eastern district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who will take over the position January 3rd. In the meantime, Frank J. A. McCarthy is handling the general sales managership.

Weinberg Defers Decision

The post of assistant to Mr. Scully was offered to Mr. Weinberg, circuit sales contact for Columbia, but he deferred making a definite decision until after conferring with Abe Montague, general sales manager for Columbia. On Tuesday he announced that he declined the post.

On his return to the Coast, Mr. Rogers was accompanied by his wife, and his assistant, William Pierce. The company announced, in this connection, that it has seven pictures in work and six more awaiting casts and directors. "This," the announcement continued, "is the greatest number of pictures in production at this time of the year that Universal has had for some time."

When Mr. Blumberg joins Universal on the first of the year he will be accompanied by Larry Waterman, executive secretary, and Miss Mona Reilly, secretary. It was announced last week that Matthew Fox will resign from Skouras Theatres to become Mr. Blumberg's assistant.

New Financing Denied

In conjunction with the management changes it was reported that new financing for the corporation was being discussed, but Mr. Cowdin, chairman of the board of directors, denied this. The negotiations were said to involve Equity Investment Corporation, of which D. A. Milton is the head, and reputedly were being conducted with Ellery Huntington of the Wall Street law firm of Saterlee & Canfield, attorneys for Equity. Mr. Cowdin answered queries with the assertion:

"I have no such deal under way, neither have I discussed such a financial arrangement with the interests mentioned."

Meanwhile, interest was centered on the possible successors to Mr. Blumberg and Mr. Scully. Mr. Blumberg planned to discuss the question of his successor with Leo Spitz, RKO president, upon the latter's return to New York from the Coast within the next two weeks. The retiring vice-president is expected to recommend the appointment of John J. O'Connor, who is now chief buyer and booker for the circuit.

Mr. Scully, it was decided, will be succeeded as MGM eastern district manager, by E. K. O'Shea, former Buffalo branch manager. Mr. O'Shea, during the last few months, has been acting as temporary district manager in the midwest, while Jack Flynn, district manager with headquarters in Detroit, has been filling in for Sam Shirley, Chicago MGM manager.

Although no successor to Mr. Fox, film buyer and booker for Skouras Theatres, has been named, Jack Harris, district manager in Long Island, has been assigned to the booking department and may take over Mr. Fox's duties when he joins Universal as assistant to Mr. Blumberg.

Average Weekly Attendance in U.S. For 1937 Is Estimated 85,000,000

The average weekly attendance in the United States runs to 85,000,000 for 1937 on the basis of computations now being completed in the industry. The computations indicate little, if any, gain over 1936.

The Department of Commerce early this year estimated the average weekly attendance for 1936 at 88,000,0000. Industry estimates for last year were approximately 5,000,000 under the department's figures.

Industry computations are based on the known total of film rental, which is indicated for this year at approximately $300,000,000. Theatre receipts, on the average, are computed at between three and one-half and four times the film rental revenue, or approximately $1,100,000,000. With the average admission estimated at between 22½ and 25 cents the industry thus arrives at the figures which it commonly employs.

Attendance levels for the current year are estimated to have shown gains over those of 1936 up to and including September, but for the last two months have fallen behind the October and November gains of last year. No December gain is anticipated, with indications, as a result, that the 1937 increase will be evened off to little more than the industry's estimate of an 82,000,000 weekly average attendance for last year.

Broadcasting Study Off Until January

The hope in administration circles in Washington that Chairman Frank R. McNinch would be given an opportunity to reorganize the Federal Communications Commission without the interference of a Congressional investigation were met in part last week when Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., of Maine, agreed to delay his proposed probe of the broadcasting situation until the regular session in January.

The Senator's resolution for an investigation was favorably reported by the Interstate Commerce Committee last session and is at present on the Senate Calendar.

LAST OF PARAMOUNT "BOYCOTTS" IS ENDED

Wisconsin Exhibitors Settle Product "Strike"; Plans Completed to Appeal Interstate Ruling

Following the leadership of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania, acting several weeks back, exhibitors in the Milwaukee and adjoining areas this week settled their "strike" against Paramount over the reputed non-delivery of six features under the 1936-37 contracts.

Other developments in trade practice activities during the week included:

The planning to file an appeal this week from the decision against distributors in the Interstate trust case in Dallas;

A movement to form a buying pool in St. Louis to "freeze" the present clearance situation;

Announcement that the two-and-a-half-year-old action brought by the Ledirk Amusement Company of Orange, N. J., will be heard this month;

Suspension of deposition-taking in the Morse & Rothenberg Circuit's anti-trust suit against distributors;

Receipt by distributors of copies of complaints filed in a suit instituted by the Mosque theatre, Irvington, N. J.

Indefinite postponement of an action brought by George Fuller, Pensacola, Fla., exhibitor, against seven distributors.

Settlement of the Paramount "strike" in Milwaukee was announced by Charles Reagan, western division manager for Paramount, who said the negotiations were concluded by Allen Usher, district manager, and a committee representing the Independent Theatre Protective Association of Wisconsin and Northern Michigan.

Appeal Plan Completed

The appeal plans in the Dallas case were completed in New York last week and George Wright, Dallas, counsel for the defendants, left, over the weekend, with the announcement that he would file the appeal this week. The record of the case then will be sent to Washington and the appeal hearing docketed with the United States Supreme Court. It is expected to be reached for hearing in March or April.

No plans were made by the defendants to apply for a stay of the Dallas court's decree, pending the outcome of the appeal.

Independent St. Louis exhibitors started the movement for a buying pool primarily to keep clearance regulations from being changed. The pool also plans to purchase fire, windstorm use and occupancy and liability insurance; theatre accessories, and theatre supplies on a wholesale basis. It is understood that Clarence Kaimann, North St. Louis exhibitor, will head the new organization, and that about 50 other theatremen will join.

Ledirk Case Up in Newark

Hearing on the Ledirk case against Warner Brothers, Paramount, United Artists, Columbia and RKO groups, will be held in federal district court in Newark. The complaints are similar to those cited November 30th in an action filed in federal court, Newark, by the Mosque Theatre, which is asking $3,525,000 damages from 42 defendants. Copies of the Mosque complaints were served on attorneys for the distributing companies this week.

In the Ledirk case, damages totaling $1,060,000 are sought. It is contended that when the complaint was filed two-and-a-half years ago, the plaintiff was unable to obtain films for two suburban houses until after they had been exhibited in other theatres in Orange and vicinity.

Willard S. McKay, general counsel for Universal, and George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of United Artists, was queried by George Ryan, attorney for Morse & Rothenberg Circuit, before adjournment of the taking of depositions until December 14th. The plaintiff's action is against major distributors and two affiliated circuits.

Dixon and 'Birth' Return in January

By way of celebrating the development of the motion picture during the past 23 years, Columbia University's division of film study will present the original silent version of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" in its McMillan theatre, New York, on January 12. The first public showing of this picture in New York took place at the Liberty theatre on March 3, 1915, with a top admission price of two dollars that put the screen on box-office parity with the drama, price-wise.

Brief talks will be made by Ralph Henaberry, who created the role of Lincoln in the picture and who is now in charge of production at Brooklyn's Vitaphone Studio, and by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Leopard's Spots" and "The Clansman," the two novels upon which the Griffith picture was based.

In accepting the University's invitation to take part in the evening, Mr. Dixon wrote from his home in Raleigh, N. C.: "The darkest day of my life was one that turned out to be the most important. It was the day on which Daniel Frohman returned the manuscript of a play that for two long years had been rejected by every producer in the country. The tragedy proved to be a blessing in disguise. The rejection led the author to the newly-formed Majestic Motion Picture Company, which had no releases, but was headed by H. E. Aitken and D. W. Griffith. They had big ideas, but very little money . . . so little, in fact, they could only offer the author a royalty on the receipts. The royalty amounted in the end to a little over a million dollars!"

Mr. Dixon has been working during the past year on a sequel to the story of "The Birth of a Nation," to be called "The Flaming Sword."

MGM Sales Managers To Meet Saturday

A two-day meeting of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer district and division sales managers will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Palmer House, Chicago.

At the same time it is expected that E. K. O'Shea, former Buffalo branch manager, will be named to succeed William A. Scully as eastern district manager. Mr. Scully is joining Universal as general sales manager.

Frank Gillmore Resigns Position As Equity Leader

Frank Gillmore, associated with Actors Equity Association in an executive capacity since January, 1918, formally submitted his resignation as president of the organization at an executive council meeting in New York Tuesday.

Mr. Gillmore, who is president and executive director of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, cited ill health as the reason for his desire to quit the Equity presidency. The resignation is to become effective when a successor is named. The council will hold a special meeting December 17th to consider the appointment of a new president.

The retiring leader's term would have expired in 1940. He recently signed a five-year contract with the four A's to serve as executive director at an annual salary of $13,000, but he denied reports that his resignation was prompted by objections to his serving in both positions.

Mr. Gillmore, who is 70 years old, abandoned the stage in 1916 and as an Equity official rose to become one of the most influential leaders in the American theatre.

The AAAA is now looked upon as the parent of all actors' unions and is expected to be the nucleus of "one big" actors' union.

The letter of resignation submitted by Mr. Gillmore follows:

"Against my personal desire, and with much regret, I beg to inform you that my health has made it most difficult for me to fulfill the double duties of Equity's president and my new position in the Four A's. Therefore, in fairness to you, I want to resign the presidency of Equity as soon as you can conveniently let me go. Of course, your consent to this is necessary, but I do hope you will not withhold it.

"All who know me will recognize that this is a parting that holds too much of my life to find easy.

"I need hardly assure you that any service you wish from me will always be yours and to you, my dear council, I extend my admiration, affection and good wishes."

Fawcett, Paramount Tieup

The Fawcett Publications, publishers of the magazine, True Confessions, will join with Paramount in an exploitation campaign for the picture "True Confession," co-starring Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray. Playdates in local theatres throughout the country will be featured in Paramount exploitation material while simultaneously the Fawcett magazines will conduct an advance publicity campaign for the film, which will be released nationally during Christmas week.

Plans for a mass meeting of theatre managers and owners were discussed Wednesday when the motion picture and theatrical committee of the New York and Brooklyn Federations of United Jewish Charities held a luncheon meeting at Hotel Astor, New York. # ERPI TURNS OVER SOUND SERVICING TO FORMER HEADS IN NEW ALTEC

Gives Title to Reproducer Servicing, Installation and Accessory Sales Business; Conrow Introduces Executives, Bankers

Last Saturday midnight, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company formally stepped out of the theatre sound reproducing business in which it has been a dominating factor, along with Radio Corporation of America, since the advent of sound 10 years ago.

On Saturday, the Telephone Company's sound reproducing subsidiary, Electrical Research Products, Inc., gave title to its reproducer servicing, installation and accessory-sales business to a new company, Altec (from all-technical) Service Corporation.

Altec was formed by former Erpi department heads and is financed by a Wall Street group composed of Roswell C. Tripp, W. J. Alford and Matthew Robinson. Altec carries a Delaware charter. It is the first independent national equipment servicing system to be conducted for theatres by a non-manufacturer.

Erpi some four weeks earlier had turned over its domestic sound-reproducer manufacturing and equipment selling rights to International Projector and Motiograph, which, under Western Electric licenses, hereafter will manufacture Western's sound heads in conjunction with their respective projectors, both heretofore having been manufactured separately. International and Motiograph, therefore, will henceforth make and sell the sound reproducers exclusively and the new Altec will install and service them. Altec, in addition, will service and supervise installation of all other makes of equipment.

Companies Commissioned Agents

Working in close arrangement with the manufacturing International Projector and Motiograph companies, Altec has commissioned both companies to act as agents in the selling of Altec service to exhibitors.

The Altec service basically consists of a minimum number of 13 calls annually to be made by Altec engineers and field service men for purposes of checking and correcting the entire sound system in a theatre, from soundhead reproducer to projector and amplifier and on through to the backstage loudspeakers. Public address systems in theatres will also be included.

Later, it is expected that Altec will expand to embrace the servicing of other electrical equipments in theatres, which was impossible under the old conservative policies of the Telephone Company.

The charge under the service contract, also including full 24-hour emergency or breakdown service, will be standardized on the basis of size of equipment, size of theatre, number of service calls desired above the 13 minimum calls per year, and the number of hours of weekly operation of the house.

Not Making or Selling Equipment

Altec will "positively" refrain from the business of manufacturing or selling any equipment, now and in the future, according to its executives. This probably is part of the agreement through which Altec acquired the servicing business from Erpi, and, no doubt, was insisted upon by Erpi because of Erpi's disposition of its equipment manufacturing and selling business to International Projector and Motiograph.

SCREEN ACTORS GUILD ON FINGERPRINTING

The Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood last week offered to join a proposed industry-wide fingerprinting if producers promise to supply their prints, too.

"Guild officers will not permit extras or any other group to be singled out," said Aubrey Blair, Guild business manager.

The movement for fingerprinting started after the recent unsolved slaying of Hymie Miller, bit player and former New York fight manager.

At a press luncheon Monday at New York's Hotel Astor, L. W. (Mike) Conrow, former Erpi operating manager, and president of the new Altec (pronounced "all-tech"), announced the future plans of his company and introduced the officers, executives, board members and bankers.

Control and operation of the new company is vested entirely in former Erpi personnel, including, besides Mr. Conrow, George L. Carrington, who is to serve as vice-president and general manager; H. M. Bessey, secretary and treasurer; E. Z. Walters, comptroller; Bert Sanford, Jr., director of sales, and Stanley W. Hand, staff representative.

There is no Telephone company or Bell money in Altec. Mr. Conrow said that the financial backers—Messrs. Tripp, Alford and Robinson—"are investing in Altec strictly as individuals," adding that Altec, a closed corporation, will not engage in any public stock issue.

For Working Capital

It is understood that the principal financing was put up to give Altec working capital, and, furthermore, that its principal payments to Erpi will be for Erpi reproducer parts and accessories, purchased as they are used; also for technical information and analyses obtained from Erpi or its Telephone or Bell affiliates; and the monies obtained by Altec on collections on Erpi sound equipment in theatres which still is unpaid. Altec will, of course, become assignee of present Erpi servicing contracts with some 4,500 theatres. The financial arrangements with Erpi on these contracts are unknown. In any event, it is understood that Altec was required to pay little or nothing to Erpi at the outset for taking title to Erpi's servicing business. Full responsibility for the administration, of course, now rests with Altec.

Controlled by Management

While the Tripp-Alford-Robinson financiers are the lone backers, Mr. Conrow's announcement this week said that "Altec is controlled by the management, with the majority stock interested held by L. W. Conrow and G. L. Carrington."

The board of directors is comprised of Mr. Conrow, as chairman; Mr. Tripp, Mr. Alford and Mr. Robinson, and G. L. Carrington, H. M. Bessey and H. W. Dodge, formerly of Erpi, who will serve Altec as sales head on the west coast. The makeup of the board, then, shows four Erpi-Altec men and three financiers.

These past several weeks Erpi has worked steadily to dispose of its holdings and staffs not taken over by Altec, dozens of its field men going over to International Projector, Motiograph, National Theatre Supply or RCA Photophone, after Altec had selected its field appointees.

Altec plans an immediate expansion in anticipation of increased servicing business, possibly taking on the servicing of many of those large circuits which undertook their own servicing when their service contracts expired with Erpi.

Altec's present emergency stock points operated from eight branch offices, at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Detroit, Los Angeles, Chicago and Kansas City, will be increased to 42 and each stock—of parts and accessories—will be augmented to provide protection for emergencies arising in the particular area. A new laboratory with scientific facilities is under construction in East Newark, New Jersey. This is planned as a liaison between the technical field forces and Bell Laboratories. It is being staffed by a group of sound system "specialists who will not only seek the practical solutions to theatrical sound equipment field problems, but will continuously broadcast advanced current information, in regular bulletin form, to the entire field personnel," according to Mr. Conrow.

Follows U. S. Inquiry

The termination of the Telephone Company's actual operations in motion picture sound fields, conducted at all times through Western Electric, as the manufacturing branch, and Erpi, as the sales and servicing division, comes principally as a result of the United States Government's investigation into the Telephone Company's expansion into lines other than communications, and started some two years ago.

In the past several months a number of plans for divesting its Erpi holdings have been under consideration by A. T. and T. Major producer-distributors, various equipment manufacturers and equipment groups and even groups of exhibitors have been mentioned in connection with the purchase of the business now obtained by the new Altec.

While Erpi formally bows out from actual operations in sound reproducer equipment it will continue to function in studio recording operations and also as licensor for studio licensees and as the licensor for reproducer licensees, besides furnishing technical information to Altec, International Projector and Motiograph.

Erpi's top rank executive staff will, for the most part, continue with Electrical Research, or return to the Telephone or Western Electric ranks from which they were recruited variously since the advent of sound. These are Whitford Drake, president; H. G. Knox, vice-president; Fred Foster, treasurer; Daniel C. Collins, vice-president; E. S. Gregg, comptroller, and P. L. Palmerton, export manager. C. W. Bunn, Erpi general sales manager, resigned two weeks ago. He is reputedly interested in establishing a new national theatre supply dealers' system.

Continues Foreign Manufacture

Western Electric, however, will continue to manufacture and sell sound reproducers to theatres abroad, neither Altec, International Projector or Motiograph obtaining any of the export business or rights.

Altec officials made it clear that their company in no wise will conflict with the duties of projectionists or other labor in either the projection booth or elsewhere in the theatre, but that activities will be confined to consultation and inspection, besides the supplying of parts and accessories.

In charge at each of the eight main branches

Altec Announces Executive Family

in the field will be a division manager and a branch manager. When the remaining 34 subbranches are established, each will be in charge of an assistant branch manager.

The division and branch managers for the eight districts comprise: W. W. Simons, division manager, and A. J. Radamacher and A. F. Lyman, branch managers in New York-New Jersey; L. J. (Red) Hacking, division manager, and J. A. Cameron, branch manager, in Boston; E. O. Wilschke and Warren Connor, Philadelphia; A. Fiore and Henry Moog, Atlanta; F. C. Dickley and E. C. Shriver, Detroit; R. Hilton and D. L. Turner, Chicago; O. Hunt and C. J. Zern, Kansas City; H. W. Dodge and S. M. Pariseau, Los Angeles, with Walter W. Woodward in the southeast.

When the formal transfer was effected this week, in Erpi's former home offices in New York's Fisk Building, 250 West 57th Street—from where Altec will continue to function—Whitford Drake, Erpi president, issued a statement, which said, in part:

"Although Altec is a separate corporate entity in which Erpi has no financial interest, complete technical cooperation and engineering information will be extended by Erpi on a consulting basis.

"Under the arrangements, full responsibility for the administration of existing service agreements will pass to the new organization, including collections and furnishing of repair and replacements.

"All emergency stock inventories will be maintained complete and, under the arrangement, be under the jurisdiction of the new enterprise.

"Altec will be completely staffed by former Erpi personnel.

"The service function is vitally important to the motion picture industry and as Erpi is reducing its activity in the sale of sound reproducing equipment in this country, proper expansion of the servicing activity would be difficult, hence it is believed the best interests of both the industry and our employees are served by the creation of this new enterprise."

The Financial Advisers

Altec's financial advisers have achieved distinction in fiscal circles; Roswell Tripp, now retired, has been associated with the banking business since 1906. For the last 17 years he has been a partner in the banking house of Munds, Winslow and Potter, and its predecessor, Potter and Company. In addition, he is a director of many corporations both here and abroad, among them Liquid Carbonic and Montreal Aircraft.

W. J. Alford, after graduating from Yale in 1913, entered Continental Paper Company, Ridgefield, N. J., in which organization he is now secretary and general manager. In the paperboard industry he has been active in management of Thames River Specialties Company, New London, Conn., president of the Paperboard Association, and was vice-chairman of the Paperboard Authorities during the NRA. Further, he has served as director of the Bogota National Bank, Bogota, N. J.

Matthew Robinson was formerly vice-president of Pacific Eastern Corporation, but in recent years has been spending most of his time with Rathvon and Company as vice-president. He is also director of the Greyhound Company, the Mississippi Valley Barge Line Company, and Robert Gair Company.

Fitz Patrick Seen In Paramount Deal

James A. FitzPatrick, who recently completed 11 quota films for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in England, is understood to be negotiating a deal with John W. Hicks, Jr., Paramount foreign manager, to produce 10 pictures in color for Paramount in England.

When questioned Mr. FitzPatrick admitted having preliminary conferences with Mr. Hicks, but said no deal had been concluded. He will leave for Hollywood December 18th and while there presumably will talk with Adolph Zukor, chairman of the Paramount board.

Arrangements are understood to have been made by Mr. FitzPatrick for completely re-equipping Sound City Studios in England with Technicolor apparatus at a cost of approximately $250,000. Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president of Technicolor, is due from the coast next week for conferences with Mr. FitzPatrick on the English studio arrangement.

Seeking Law to Halt Damage Suits

A drive for legislation to prevent damage suits in use of trade names, names of persons and the like inadvertently by film studios was launched in Hollywood last week by Natalie Bucknall, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer research department head, in a talk before the Los Angeles Bar Association.

Miss Bucknell asked attorneys to sponsor legislation which would protect the film companies against legal difficulties if the actual name of a person, or company, is used in any connection with a story.

Arduous research is necessary, at present, Miss Bucknell said, to check every character or name in a book or manuscript purchased by a studio against the locale in which it is laid. To avert legal difficulties, names of studio employees are usually substituted as characters, she said.

"If a trademark is depicted on the screen," Miss Bucknell said, "it must be fictitious, or the camera shot must render it indiscernible. Studio lawyers are consulted if any question arises as to whether a name or commodity may be photographed. The use of royal mottoes, however ancient, always results in a flareback. To surmount this, the studios fabricate their own mottoes," she said.

Shanghai Deadline

Topical Melodrama

George Sanders and Dolores Del Rio, co-featured in "Lancer Spy," are the leading players in "Shanghai Deadline." Miss Del Rio's record is well known. Sander's earlier appearances were in "Lloyds of London," "Love Is News," "Slave Ship" and "The Lady Escapes." The supporting cast lists June Lang, presently in "Ali Baba Goes to Town" and "Wee Willie Winkie," Dick Baldwin, a stage recruit making his second screen appearance, Keye Luke, a fixture in the "Charlie Chan" series, John Carradine, now in "The Hurricane" and "Thank You, Mr. Moto," Ruth Terry, another newcomer, and Pedro de Cordoba, Leon Ames and Eddie Lee. The forthcoming film is listed in Sol M. Wurtzel's production schedule and is being directed by Eugene Forde, director of many "Chans."

Because of the attention Shanghai has and probably will continue to have in newspaper headlines, the picture is of timely significance. While it essentially is melodramatic, it also includes a romantic love story, and comedy contrast.

The yarn deals with four Americans ensnared in the maelstrom of war. As the Chinese and an alien invader battle in the streets and drop bombs from the skies, a grim melodrama of intrigue is waged for the control of a munitions fortune.

While the war atmosphere cannot be denied, concentration on establishing the feature as a melodramatic romance narrated against a background of war seems to be the way to exploit the feature.

Release date, Jan. 7, 1938.

The Mystery of Hunting's End

(Warner Bros.)

Mystery Melodrama

Although there will be love interest, much of which involves many persons in conflicting relationships, and comedy will not be overlooked as a necessary adjunct to a thrill picture, "The Mystery of Hunting's End" essentially is a mystery melodrama.

As the picture will feature a debonair screen detective who can solve crimes almost before they happen, it will not tell the story of a crime that has happened immediately. The crime that causes the action happened five years earlier. A girl suspects that her father was killed. She calls upon the detective. All who were present in the hunting lodge at the time of the death are reassembled. For a time it appears that any one of the group might have been the killer. But when two additional murders are committed, the detective arranges a trick that will cause the culprit to identify himself.

Based on an original story by Mignon G. Eberhart and adapted by Sherman Lowe, the picture is being directed by Noel Smith. It will feature Dick Purcell as the detective and Ann Sheridan and Ann Nagel as the most prominent supporting characters. Other players who will be seen include Elsneth Dudgeion, Ben Welden, Anthony Averill, William Hopper, Anderson Lawlor, Sheila Bromley, Hugh O'Connell, Trevor Bardette and the studio's new comedy sensation, Dennie Moore.

Release date, January 18, 1938.

The Mountains are My Kingdom

Action Adventure

With certain novel story and production twists inserted, this romance tinged outdoor action feature is being geared to an entertainment pattern, which over a long span of years has proved increasingly popular, the idea of virtue and love triumphing over the forces of viciousness.

A boy and his father live in an isolated canyon and devote their lives to raising horses. The father lives under a shadow which the boy cannot understand. When the boy brings a girl into the canyon, after saving her from a stampede of wild mustangs, a strange fear grips the father. He is killed before the boy can understand his father's panic. Left alone, the boy with the help of the girl, starts driving herds of horses to market. An accident befalling the girl, the animals are stolen and the boy discovers they have been rustled by the territory's most notorious bully. Ensues the customary thrill climax and romantic finish.

Based on a novel by Stuart Hardy and adapted by Wyndham Gittens, who also is directing, "The Mountains Are My Kingdom" will feature Noah Beery, Jr., who has appeared in several similar Universal pictures, Frances Robinson, Samuel S. Hinds, Fred Kohler, Sr., Robert Barrat, Stanley Andrews and William Lundigan.

Release date, January 17, 1938 (tentative).

The Black Doll

Mystery Melodrama

"The Westland Case" was the first number in Universal's "Crime Club" series. "The Black Doll" is a successor. Mystery melodramas are but slightly the junior of the "western," which of recent years has attained the dignity of an "outdoor adventure" classification.

Throughout the land, loosely held together, and by no means official, is a collection of doctors, dentists, undertakers and a varied assortment of professional technicians and amateur crime detectors, a nebulous "crime club." They are those whose pleasure it is to solve baffling crimes.

"The Black Doll," as it is being constructed, will not defy anyone to solve its mystery; it will invite him to be a witness to its solution. Under bewildering circumstances an important man is killed; several supporting characters suffer a like fate. The number of possible suspects is multiple.

Irving Starr, who produced Universal's first crime club picture, is functioning similarly in the present instance. William E. Hayes wrote the original story and Harold Buckley adapted it. Otis Garrett, heretofore, as Pandro S. Berman was once, a film editor, is directing.

For names "The Black Doll" will present Donald Woods, C. Henry Gordon, Nan Grey, William Lundigan, Doris Lloyd, Addison Richards, John Wray, Fred Malatesta, Holmes Herbert, Edgar Kennedy, Sid Saylor and Arthur Voight. But names are not looked upon by Universal as the most important consideration here; story and series continuation are.

Release date, January 15, 1938.

Jezebel

(Warner Bros.)

Triangle Romance

Among other definitions, the dictionary describes a Jezebel as a "Mischief Maker." The central character in Warners' version of the play by Owen Davis, Sr., is a mischief making woman, one who made it her selfish business to tamper with the laws of fate and destiny. It is the love story of a man and a woman; more directly it is the story of a woman who wanted much but had for reward only heartbreak and tragedy.

The setting is the Deep South as it was before the Civil War. As the screen play by Clements Ripley and Abem Finkle and production detail, under the supervision of Robert Hass, captures the beauty and glamor of the country and its people, the story of an undying, though not always ethical, love, has its climax in a historic episode hitherto untouched by motion pictures, the New Orleans yellow fever epidemic in 1853.

Henry Blanke, associate producer, has gathered an accomplished personnel to produce and interpret the story. With William Wyler directing, it will feature Bette Davis, Henry Fonda and George Brent in the principal roles. The supporting cast is studded with names taken from the studio roster and recruited from outside. Prominent in the action and delineation are Fay Bainter, Richard Cromwell, Henry O'Neill, Donald Crisp, Gordon Oliver, John Litel, Spring Byington, George Caine, Edward McWade and Stymie Beard.

It should be a point of showmanship knowledge to know that "Jezebel" will not be a war picture, but one which should be exploited as a moving love story.

Release date, Feb. 21, 1938 (tentative.)

Hawaiian Buckaroo

(20th Century - Fox - Lesser)

Romantic Adventure

The outdoor action picture has taken the western cowboy from the plains and the hills to all sorts of places, including New York, London and Hollywood. Here Hawaii is to serve as the background for a typical western story.

The story concerns an Arizonian who, when dust storms ruin the cattle business, goes to Hawaii to raise pineapples. When that also shows red he jumps back into the saddle. He finds that a smart girl is being swindled by a gang who are delaying cattle shipments. He traps the plotters only after a series of exciting incidents which include cafe brawls, shooting and fist fighting. The concluding sequence is a spectacular attempt of the factions to stampede herds of cattle against each other.

Being put together in the style which Sol Lesser gives to his outdoor films, "Hawaiian Buckaroo" will star Smith Ballew, supported by Evalyn Knapp, Benny Burt, Harry Woods, Pat O'Brien (not the Warner Bros. player), George Regas, Laura Treadwell, Carl Stockdale and Snowflake.

The story is an original by Don Jarrett, who also did the screen play. He and Ray Taylor, who is directing, have been the team behind several productions of Mr. Lesser.

Release date, Jan. 14, 1938.

NEW MOVES POINT TO RKO'S REORGANIZATION

Hearing Near, Establishment of New Board of Directors Is Reported Imminent

With final hearings approaching on the plan to be adopted for reorganization of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, the many and varied factors involved in consummation of the reorganization are beginning to move quickly.

Already talk is heard of establishment of a new board of directors; the Wall Street firm of Hemphill, Noyes & Company reportedly is considering going in with Atlas Corporation and Lehman Brothers in the purchase of RCA's remaining RKO stock holdings, and minority stockholders are beginning to file final objections to the existing Alger plan for reorganization. Regardless of whether Hemphill, Noyes participates, Atlas and Lehman are expected to obtain an extension on their option dates for picking up RCA's RKO stock.

Although there is no official indication of the manner in which representation on the new board will be apportioned, reports indicate that the bulk of the representation will go to Atlas Corporation, Lehman Brothers and Radio Corporation of America, which together control about 85 per cent of the outstanding common stock. A minimum of five of the nine board members is viewed as a possible representation for these interests.

Rockefeller Center, to which, under the plan, would be granted 460,000 shares of new RKO common in settlement of its $9,150,000 claim, is certain to have a representative on the board. On this basis, unsecured creditors other than Rockefeller Center, and minority security holders would receive a maximum representation on the board of three members.

A participation in the Atlas, Lehman Brothers option to acquire the remainder of RCA's holdings in RKO has been granted to Hemphill, Noyes and Company by the option holders, according to Wall Street reports.

Extension of Option Sought

Atlas, Lehman and Hemphill Noyes' representatives were said to be negotiating an extension of the option with RCA on the bulk of the RKO securities involved. A small amount of the securities, probably not more than one-third, will be purchased within the next few weeks and, if the current negotiations are successful, the option on the remainder will be extended for an undetermined period beyond December 31st, the expiration date.

However, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount, who is a partner in Hemphill, Noyes when questioned concerning a story published to the effect that the investment firm had been given a participation in an option held by Atlas and Lehman for the balance of RCA's holdings said, "Hemphill, Noyes has no interest in RKO securities."

Regardless of whether Hemphill, Noyes participates, negotiations for an extension of the option on the bulk of RCA's remaining debentures and stock of RKO may be concluded by Atlas and Lehman Brothers within the next week. The negotiations now in progress involve the acquisition of a small part of the RKO securities under option within the next few weeks and an extension of the option on the remainder for an as yet undetermined period.

Reports published in New York newspapers that the option would be extended for six years, with one-sixth of the securities being picked up annually, were described by principals as "pure conjecture." While insisting that details of the extension had not been formally agreed upon yet, these principals intimated that only a short term extension might be granted.

Atlas and Lehman two years ago acquired, together, $4,893,327 RKO debentures and 605,731 shares of RKO common from RCA for $5,000,000. At the same time, they obtained the option which expires at the end of this month to purchase for $6,000,000 like amounts of RKO debentures and common stock from RCA, comprising the balance of that company's RKO holdings.

The indicated failure of the option holders to exercise the agreement in full at this time means that RCA will be given representation on the new board of directors. This would not be the case if the option were exercised in full.

47 Objections Filed

Iva A. MacPherson and three other Boston stockholders have filed 47 objections in the United States district court in New York to the report of Special Master George W. Alger, who approved the RKO plan of reorganization with four amendments.

Mr. Alger recommended the rejection of the MacPherson petition as being "entirely without merit and any support of facts." The MacPherson objections state that 500,000 shares of Class B stock were illegally issued to RCA in 1928 and that 1,740,000 shares later issued in connection with a bond issue were also illegal. The objections stated that the special master should have decided that RCA "dominated" RKO, a contention which Mr. Alger specifically rejected. December 16th is the last day in which objections can be filed.

Federal Judge William Bondy will hold a hearing on December 21st to decide whether or not to approve the Alger report.

Appeal Planned in Copyright Case

An appeal from the Dominion court award of $1,046.35 granted Francis, Day & Hunter, Ltd., will be taken by Twentieth Century-Fox Corporation, Ltd., and Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Ltd., according to Edwin P. Kilroe, counsel for the defendant corporations.

The award was granted as a result of the use of the title "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monto Carlo," for a motion picture distributed in Canada. The court's opinion on the case stated: "This action was in the nature of a test case for an interpretation of the amendment to the Canadian Copyright Law made in 1931 which granted copyright protection to a title as part of the work if the title is original and distinctive."

Mr. Kilroe pointed out that the court's award was $46.35 more than an offer of settlement made by defendants.

Production in Cuba

INFLUENCE ON RADIO

To the Editor of the Herald:

In view of the recent arguments pro and con about the appearance of movie stars on radio programs and what effect this practice might have on the industry, thought you would be interested in the enclosed article which appeared in the Atlanta Journal, Sunday, November 28th and written by Ernest Rogers, radio editor.

This seems to give a different slant on the situation.—EARLE M. HOLDEN, Capitol Theatre, Atlanta, Ga.

"Are the movies exerting too great an influence on radio?

"This question must have turned over, at least once, in the mind of every conscientious radio fan of recent weeks. Rarely, it seems, do you tune in a radio program without hearing, sooner or later, some motion picture personality introduced as the guest artist or, as is becoming more frequently the case, the permanent star of the presentation.

"While we like to go our carefree way shedding sweetness and light, it seem from this chair that the radio stands in danger of being turned into a glorified movie trailer. Several highly important shows at the moment are being used directly for the exploitation of motion picture productions with the finish left off and the earnest radio fan torn with indecision whether to rush to a theatre the following day and see the completed film—with the majority of the story already in mind—or just forget the entire business.

"Your correspondent is such a person that when he sees the trailer (because they are always so exciting) in a movie house he wishes they would go ahead and show that film rather than the one he came expressly to see. And now, with radio tipping off most of the story in advance—well, we hardly know what to do.

"But there does seem to be definite danger to radio entertainment in the overflow of movie talent. For one thing, most of the movie folk are not so hot without being seen. And another thing, with most of the heavy sugar jobs held down by film people the simon-pure radio fellow is apt to grow discouraged.

"What do you think?"

Agfa High Speed Film Set for Production Use

C. King Charney, American distributor of Agfa film, said in Hollywood last week that a high-speed negative under the name of Agfa Supreme for production use will be introduced commercially the latter part of December. The Binghamton, N. Y., factory already has started production on the emulsion, Mr. Charney said.

Studio tests made with the negative, according to Mr. Charney, show the emulsion to be the highest sensitized ever introduced, and its use will allow reduction of lighting on sets in addition to permitting exterior work under adverse lighting conditions.

Thomas M. Kearns, former publicity and advertising head for Fanchon and Marco, opened an office in the International Building, Rockefeller Center, New York, this week. He will handle publicity.

An unsolicited letter from Charles W. Picquet, President of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina and noted Southern showman:

"We have given 'NAVY BLUE AND GOLD' the best booking possible and any further word of commendation from me is superfluous. However, I cannot refrain from stating that it is the finest college picture ever made. In fact, it is the only one which I have seen that measures up to what such a picture should be. That picture should certainly be shown in every theatre in America. I am sure every exhibitor who has had the fortune to have it dated will be grateful to you for making 'NAVY BLUE AND GOLD'!"

Wells Fargo

Historical Narrative

Some day, no doubt, Frank Lloyd will go too far. Shakespeare had his lesser moments and Babe Ruth occasionally struck out. It is not to be expected that any man shall go on interminably producing a sequence of masterpieces, each finer than its predecessor, and it is the lot of few to add to a "Cavalcade" and a "Mutiny on the Bounty" a third accomplishment of equal or greater dimensions.

Yet the poor houses are full of gamblers who backed this kind of reasoning in terms of wagers against Man O' War and, latterly, War Admiral. Which is a long and clumsy way of saying that no showman worthy of the name is likely to over look a chance to tell his customers that "Wells Fargo" is Frank Lloyd's third and possibly greatest venture into the realm of historical saga, where he seems to find himself so strikingly at home.

"Wells Fargo" is emphatically Frank Lloyd's picture. The billing is, with complete fitness, "Frank Lloyd's 'Wells Fargo'." The cast is filled with able players, crowds of them, with Joel McCrea, Bob Burns, Frances Dee, Mary Nash, Ralph Morgan, Henry O'Neill, John Mack Brown and several others picking up new personal laurels along the way, but the screen is dominated throughout the 115 minutes of the unveiling by the unseen but constantly felt personality of Lloyd the story teller, the historian, the weaver of vast tapestries and spinner of tremendous tales.

Mr. Lloyd's narrative is, of course, the story of the Wells Fargo express company. It starts in 1844 and ends in 1870. Just about none of the stirring events in American history occurring between those dates is ignored, and most of them are photographed. Yet the story is in simple the story of one "Ramsay MacKay," Wells Fargo agent, and this entirely credible young man's story is crowded with enough personal incidents to supply plots for half a dozen first grade feature length pictures. Buried somewhere beneath the fact that these spectacular personal adventures take place in the foreground, without for a moment taking attention from the great background story, is to be found, perhaps, a clue to Mr. Lloyd's acknowledged genius for imparting to a motion picture the thing that is called the epic quality.

The story—an original by Stuart N. Lake with screen play by Paul Schofield, Gerald Geraghty and Frederick Jackson—opens in Batavia, N. Y., with "MacKay" an express driver sharing Henry Wells' vision of extending the overland express service to St. Louis. Here he meets "Justine Pryor," whom he is to marry. From this point he presses on westward, extending the service, encountering assorted dangers and overcoming obstacles, finding well earned rest when the line has been completed to San Francisco. Then the Civil War breaks out, Wells Fargo takes the Union side and commits itself to the transportation of gold bullion. "MacKay" finds his expedition and his cause betrayed by a note of his wife's writing, and they become separated. Explanation and reunion come logically and without undue stimulation of the lachrymal reflexes, late in the lives of the characters.

This is not a time or place to catalogue the stirring incidents or list the impressive settings, natural and otherwise, employed. This may be a place to mention that the picture is episodic in the way that "Cavalcade" was episodic—so much so that a number of persons attending the preview started to leave at a point in mid-picture where it seemed that the story was indeed nearing natural end—and it may be added that the subject matter is divided, as was that of "Mutiny On the Bounty," into two chronologically separated segments. These circumstances detracted no whit from the pictures named, even added a somehow tremendous effectiveness, wherefore it would seem reasonable to chalk them up in the asset column.

Obviously the keynote of exploitation should be magnitude. It is a big picture in every sense of the word. Into it Lloyd has tucked the essence of "The Covered Wagon," "The Iron Horse" and quite a helping of "The Birth of a Nation," without permitting any or all of them to obscure or blur the spirit of Wells Fargo. Nor is it in any sense or for any portion of its length what might be called an omnibus production. Always it is, as remarked several paragraphs back, a Frank Lloyd picture, which seems to mean about the same vitally important thing in any set of phrases.

The matter of screen credits, important in connection with an enterprise of these proportions, is a little complicated. Although Mr. Lloyd is billed as producer and director, with unmistakable accuracy, Howard Estabrook is down as associate producer and John Boland as staff director. There is, however, ample evidence that all had plenty to keep them busy, and there is ample credit to be shared. Mentionable, too, is original music by Victor Young, musical direction by Boris Morros, and a song sung in incidental fashion by Bob Burns is from Burton Lane and Ralph Freed. Hans Dreier and John Goodman, art directors, did handsomely by the picture in point of fidelity to time and place.

Previewed at the Westwood Village theatre, Los Angeles. Hollywood had been bearing rosy reports of secret previews held up and down the Pacific slope as the picture came down from well above three hours to just under two. The turnout, therefore, was large, distinguished and, professionally, a little defiantly willing to be convinced. The defiance gave way at a point some two or three minutes into the narrative and the convincing appeared, at final fadeout, to have been prompt, positive and permanent.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

The River

U. S. Government

Documentary Film

In Washington Tuesday evening the Farm Security Administration presented The River, the government's new documentary film. The Rialto Theatre was the scene of Federal Government's second big venture in popular motion pictures. The national premiere was attended by a large audience invited by the Secretary of Agriculture. Many high government officials, a score of Senators, nearly a hundred Representatives and members of the Diplomatic Corps, were present. Arc lamps were set up at the entrance of the theatre and cameramen photographed the celebrities as they arrived. The only thing lacking to make it a complete imitation of a Hollywood or New York premiere was a microphone.

The audience waited impatiently to see The River, but the first film on the program was a British documentary picture, Air Outpost—propaganda for the Imperial Airways. The British film made by Strand Films was obviously introduced for comparison with the "U. S. Documentary Film," The River. A Donald Duck short in color afforded the government audience a few laughs and the stage was set for the Farm Security Administration's picture. The River is the successor, in general character as well as in time, of The Plow That Broke the Plains. Pare Lorentz wrote and directed both productions.

The River portrays the Mississippi from its sources to the Gulf, from pioneer days until the present. The film records how every drop that falls "on two-thirds of a continent" finds its way to the Mississippi. The path of the mighty river is shown from little rivulets, to brooks, to streams, to small rivers, to the main tributaries and finally down through the middle of the nation to the Gulf of Mexico.

The River deals first with the era when cotton was king and the Mississippi was the highway to the sea and thence to European markets. The Civil War comes and that, together with results of 50 years of overworking the soil, ruins the South and the cotton trade on the river. The next period of the country was of industrial expansion. The forests holding the soil on the hills in the northern states were ruthlessly cut down. And the rivers carried the wood to the mill. The next phase of river history is the modern period, the period of floods. The picture The River endeavors to show that the despoiling of land and forest removed Nature's own barrier against floods. The last part of the picture deals with the Tennessee Valley Authority and the New Deal's endeavor at solution of the river problems: chaining the rivers and making power.

The story of The River is clearly indicated in the title. The last few minutes dealing with the TVA impair the interesting and instructive aspects of the film. It is not primarily and directly entertainment. The political propaganda in the final sequences makes the film even less suited for theatre presentation.

The picture has its merits. Unlike its predecessor, The Plow That Broke the Plains, this film has very little of the human element—the river is the chief character—and consequently there is not the "Red" tint that had been noted in the first government popular motion picture. The photography is excellent and the editing is skillful. The musical score is good.

The picture teaches a lesson of conservation of natural resources. But The River belongs in the class room and lecture hall rather than in the motion picture theatre. It was enthusiastically received by the audience of Government workers. It will probably please most of those who go to see it; for only those will go who do not mind having education mixed with their entertainment. The picture seems best addressed at the small theatres in the large cities that specialize in foreign or out of the ordinary pictures. It is rather doubtful that The River will have wider distribution in the large theatres than The Plow That Broke the Plains, for which a circulation to 3,000 theatres has been claimed.

The running time is 31 minutes.

Larger Than Life

(Warner Bros. - F. N.)

Farce

Frank McHugh, after "Three Men on a Horse," maintains his stride in "Larger Than Life," which again places him in a Caspar Milquetoast role and affords him ample opportunity for that brand of humor for which his work is widely enjoyed. While the picture can be styled a farce, it does not range into the currently overloaded field of slapstick comedy and borderline gags and situations, but presents an entirely plausible story enacted by characters drawn almost flawlessly true to life.

The story apparently met with success in other mediums of entertainment; it first was presented as a published short story and then later as a play. The play, of the same name, was written by Joseph Schrank. A short story by Norman Matson gave the idea for the play. Schrank and Robertson White wrote the screenplay, which by virtue of the wider scope of the cinema presents more facets of the comedy than either other medium.

Supporting Mr. McHugh are Berton Churchill, Jane Wyman, Cora Witherspoon, Diana Lewis, Ferris Taylor, Raymond Hatton, William Haade, Tom Kennedy, Chester Clute, Rita Gould and Cliff Saum. Bryan Foy produced and Lew Seiler directed.

McHugh, as "Lambert Hunkins," a $30 a week clerk in a linoleum factory, has a secret love, a senator's daughter whom he has not met. Talked into a betrothal to "Violet Coney," he sets out to buy furniture but instead purchases at auction a statue resembling "Iris Mabby," his secret love. The senator attempts to buy back the statue, because of fear that his career would be ruined by the undraped condition of the figure for which his daughter had posed. Then gangsters attempt to steal the statue to blackmail the senator. But "Hunkins" eludes them, and wins the hand of the senator's daughter.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, where an audience, unhampered by a studio claque, gave all indications of thoroughly enjoying the presentation.—VANCE KING.

Checkers

(20th Century - Fox)

Turf Comedy

Following the screening of this picture at the Uptown theatre in Los Angeles Jane Withers was introduced from the stage as "the charming little lady who ranked eleventh among the screen's box office stars last year and has now moved up to ninth position—among the first ten." Jimmy Fidler recently told his radio listeners she had progressed even more spectacularly. Likewise uninformed columnists have been telling similar stories about her, all to the general effect that her popularity is greater than most casual observers suspect. Be this as it may (it will be a little while before the MOTION PICTURE HERALD settles the matter by publishing results of its annual exhibitor poll), all this publicity is to be counted among the exploitable assets of this or any picture bearing Miss Withers' name.

"Checkers" is a singularly appropriate vehicle for Miss Withers, from the showman's point of view. The title is ancient and honorable, symbol in many minds of race track melodrama in the pink. Linking of name and title would appear to constitute something in the nature of a box official natural. Adding the names of Stuart Erwin and Una Merkel, the principals most closely affiliated with the star, rounds out a nice piece of marquee copy.

It is not especially important to mention that this version of "Checkers," by Lynn Root and Frank Fenton with Robert Chapin and Karen De Wolf assisting on the screen play, is about as far removed from the original Drury Lane production in text as in time. This, in view of various disasters attendant upon recent attempts to reproduce old favorites without change, is distinctly for the better. This version of the picture complies with modern racing rules and today's manners, customs and circstances. It is as timely as tomorrow's tips in tonight's paper, and a good deal more dependable.

The story concerns a child, "Checkers," whose uncle "Edgar" owns a race horse which breaks its leg but is nursed back to health on the farm of "Mamie Appleby," who loves "Edgar" but won't marry him unless he gives up racing. There is another suitor, a fake oil discovery, an incidental juvenile love affair and, finally, a race to end all racing, for the group, with the outcome satisfactory all around.

John Stone, associate producer, and H. Bruce Humberstone, director, safeguarded the production against many pitfalls commonly encountered in pictures of the kind. The long arm of coincidence is exercised moderately, never pulled out of joint. The juvenile star is instrumental in making things happen as she wants them to, but resorts to none of the incredible precocities generally perpetrated in this connection—what she does a child of her years could do. Characters are underscored but not caricatured. Consequently, the film is as suitable for adults as children, possible more so.

Boy of the Streets

A Problem Play

It is a generally accepted fact that the productions most acceptable to average audiences and exhibitors are those that run the range of human emotions, films that combine orthodox themes in original manner. The "family experience" type of picture, whether it is treated lightly or seriously, has demonstrated the theory.

Basically "Boy of the Streets" is a "family experience" picture. Although it has comedy, and two or three musical interludes are included, the treatment is directed toward the theme as a problem play. A family which lives in, and those who come into, the tenement district of a big city are the characters.

The boy is leader of a gang of street hoodlums. Fighting, stealing and continually making trouble, he is always an object of police attention. His discouraged, disillusioned parents have little heart to continue the almost hopeless struggle to set the boy on the right path. He worships a gangster, becomes associated with him in an attempted robbery, and an officer is shot. Implicated in the crime, he gives one indication of uprighteousness when he discloses the gangster's identity. He shows that he wants to follow the right track when he joins the navy, where he knows that discipline and training will enable him to make something of himself.

The story is convincingly interpreted by a capable cast, which features Jackie Cooper as the boy and includes Maureen O'Connor, a promising juvenile who sings creditably; Marjorie Main, George Cleveland, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Gordon Elliott, Paul White, Matty Fain, Guy Usher and Kathleen Burke as principal supports. As they act the story, written by Rowland Brown, adapted by Gilson Brown and Scott Darling and directed by William Nigh, they focus attention on conditions and environments which all serious thinking persons realize are fraught with danger to a growing generation. So doing, they open the doors to a type of exploitation which, in permitting exhibitors to seek endorsements from character building agencies and sociological uplift groups, should attract considerable popular attention to the picture.

Previewed at Warners' Beverly theatre, Los Angeles. While the preview audience was quick to note that the picture carried a semblance of the "Dead End" motif, it gave "Boy of the Streets" respectful attention, several times in-

Young and Innocent

(Gaumont British)

Melodrama

Every Hitchcock film attracts immediate attention to its direction, and "Young and Innocent," based on Josephine Tey's quaintly titled "Shilling for Candles," is no exception.

Almost any other British director might have made but a sorry job of a story which, after all, is nothing more or less than the record of the adventures of a murder suspect, dodging the hands of the errant law. "Hitch," however, has taken his material, persuaded his cast—with exceptions—into flesh and blood characters, and set them against a canvas which is the authentic sleepy and comfortable England of today. But the ancient device of the innocent man dodging the law must have some outstanding quality to justify its exhumation, and though "Young and Innocent" has directorial slickness, flashes of humanity, and the truthfulness of an intimate photograph, one waits in vain for the resounding artillery of strong drama.

The picture opens with the sharp crack of melodrama, but too soon deviates into a story of escape and pursuit with a missing raincoat the vital clue, and the victim's at-first-unwilling ally, the chief constable's daughter, the boy hiding in a disused mill, being caught up by a children's party, risking his neck in a decrepit mine shaft, and, at last, to save his girl friend, giving himself up. Here the story at last rises above melodrama with a characteristic Hitchcock twist, and the murderer, disguised as a black face jazz drummer, is revealed by the twitching of his neurotic features.

Such a formula, for all its stereotype, might have been a thing of thrills and sensations, but it would seem that Hitchcock decided to handle his insufficient material on lines which would bring out the background against which it is set. Hence we get a vivid and indeed a faithful glimpse of the rustic England of today, with its sleepy platitudinous police courts, its unhurried constables, its righteous middle class homes and the rolling heathland and leafy lanes in which they are found.

In Derrick de Marney we have a hero who is winsome without being mature, and in Miss Pilbeam an intelligent and thin-lipped young woman, whose expressions on this occasion seem limited to one. That neither has the chance or the experience to arouse deep sympathy is to some extent compensated by the fact that there is hardly another player in the cast who has not a flavor of reality. Edward Rigby is a winning scamp of a hobo, Mary Clare is set perfectly in the middle class drawing room in which she holds her party. John Longden makes a convincing Scotland Yard man of the younger type—and there are others.

With its unpromising title "Young and Innocent" has a handicapped start. Whether foreign audiences who expect a punch in their pictures will find complete satisfaction in its essentially English flavor is a matter for speculation.

Previewed at the Phoenix theatre, London, to a characteristic trade show audience, the picture was received with complete attention and was accorded a moderate round of applause at the close. General opinion seemed to be that it was a Hitchcock salvage job.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

The Duke Comes Back

Love in the Ring

A heavyweight prizefighter, unusual in type in that he inclines to Shakespeare and culture, wins the title and immediately retires from the ring to marry the socialite daughter of a financier. That story, blazoned in newspaper headlines not many years ago, is more alive in the minds of the public than almost any other factual drama of the sport world of recent times, and although a title card note carefully disclaims any resemblance to actual facts or persons, "The Duke Comes Back" makes full and effectual use of the dramatic value of the situation.

The purely fictional climax to this story which so closely parallels fact, besides being a logical conclusion, is as valuable exploitation material as could have been supplied by newspaper headlines if it had actually taken place. The fighter, under pressure of a worthy purpose, breaks his promise to his bride not to return to pugilism and nearly loses her as a result, but wins his comeback fight in spite of the machinations of scheming gamblers who attempt assassination as a last resort.

The story thus fashioned directly for showmanship value is skillfully handled. The creation of suspense in the climactic scenes when the gamblers, having failed to force the fighter to throw the bout, kidnap his wife, son and father-in-law and send a gunman to the arena, errs slightly on the side of theatrics but hardly enough to mar the effect for audiences.

The cast names are not without value for billing, but they would be subordinated to the story and headline angles in a properly proportioned campaign. Allan Lane, a college athlete who has appeared recently in Twentieth Century-Fox pictures, is more than competent as the pugilist hero. Heather Angel, born in England and first raised to stardom there, is perhaps too restrained for audiences of the general class to which the picture appeals, but her performance as the fighter's wife is nevertheless adequate. Her restraint is balanced by excellent direction and by the effervescence of Genevieve Tobin, who plays as her sister. The supporting parts are uniformly good.

The production, not startlingly new either in idea or development, because of its basic proven value should attract in direct proportion to the effort expended in expansion of the obvious and easily exploitable possibilities.

Partners of the Plains

(Paramount-Sherman)

Romantic Adventure

The "Hopalong Cassidy" pictures have been around sufficiently long so that many theatregoers and practically every showman who specializes in presenting outdoor features are familiar with them. With variations and changes, all have been premised on the same entertainment idea. William Boyd has been starred in all of them.

"Partners of the Plains" makes the most radical departure that producer Sherman has attempted. While the stock ingredients of an action film have been preserved, this one focuses more attention on romance. Yet the film is not a love story. It is an unique expression of the "Taming of the Shrew" idea. "Lorna Drake," a somewhat snobbish English woman, comes west. She rides herd successfully on all with whom she comes in contact until she encounters "Hopalong." They clash and the sparks fly. In the exciting climax it is the man and not the woman who conquers.

Other than the inclusion of romantic love interest, another notable change is made in "Partners of the Plains." Harvey Clark replaces George Hayes, who has been William Boyd's comedy foil in all the pictures of both series. While Hayes is missed, Clark is competent in his role.

Previewed in studio projection room. Presented to a press audience, most of which has seen other "Hopalongs," the few to whom the series was new, particularly the well known commentator Welford Beason, were heard to wonder why the series had not come to their attention earlier. The combined reaction indicated that both those to whom the "Hopalongs" are old stuff and those to whom they are novel will find "Partners of the Plains" interesting.—G. M.

Sergeant Murphy

A Horse Story

Director B. Reeves Eason's specialty is action spectacle. He has been called upon to insert that element in many pictures. Directing "Sergeant Murphy" 100 per cent, he has included the quality twice, both times where it is most necessary and does the most good. Other than Mr. Eason's spectacle, "Sergeant Murphy" is a horse story, one which is embellished with several novel twists, but yet a horse story. It probably will receive greatest attention from the more juvenile contingents of audiences. While it suggests some good exploitation ideas, its relative unimportance in the scheme of things hardly justifies any unusual expense or effort.

The artillery, after being messed up a couple of times, wants none of "Sergeant Murphy" and the steed is transferred to the cavalry. His pal, "Private Murphy," the only one who can do anything with him, goes along. Both get another friend here in the person of "Mary Lou," the colonel's daughter. But after the Sergeant ruffles "Colonel Carruther's" dignity by running away and breaking up a review, while he is in and out of the saddle, the "Sergeant" is condemned and sold and it looks as if he will be destroyed.

But "Murphy," his enlistment up, buys him, trains him to be a jumper and the horse wins all the prizes American horse shows have to offer. Inspired by "Mary Lou," "Murphy" enters the "Sergeant" in the English National Steeplechase. Handicapped by having to travel with a shipload of mules and being forced to swim ashore, the horse wins the race. Mr. Eason makes good use of shots from newsreels in building the thrill action and suspense during the race.

West Point Visit

The United States Military Academy overlooking the Hudson River is the scene of this subject, which depicts the rigorous athletic curriculum of the corps of cadets. Calisthenic, parallel bar, fencing, boxing, lacrosse, football and riding scenes are shown with the cadet personnel the participants. Dialogue by Jack Kofoed. Narrated by Ford Bond. Running time, 9½ minutes.

The Mysterious Jug

Animation

Oswald the rabbit and Doxie, his dachshund, while out for a stroll come upon a junk yard and rummage about for what treasure they can find. A magician's discarded trunk provides the surprise for when Oswald and Doxie investigate its contents a genii appears with a magic wand. The genii waves the wand changing the inanimated objects into animated characters. The festive atmosphere is quickly dissipated when a devil appears and imprisons the genii in a hand bag. Oswald and Doxie fix matters by trapping the devil and releasing the genii. Running time, 7 minutes.

Silver Threads

Unhappy Romance

The unhappy romance of Hart and Happy Danks is detailed here by John Hix, the "strange as it may seem" chronicler. Hart Danks composed the song "Darling I Am Growing Old, Silver Threads Among the Gold," the inspiration for which he attributed to his wife, Happy. The instant success of the composition turns the composer's head. Neglected, Dank's wife runs away and when he tries to make amends she refuses to return. In the twilight of their lives Dank is an embittered and broken old man while his wife ekes out a bare living as a scrubwoman. Running time, 9½ minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction No. 44

Itemized

Seven items of interest have been included in this issue of the series. In a small town in Kansas two horses live off the fat of the land, the result of a trust fund left them by a grateful master. In Pennsylvania a once private and costly passenger coach is utilized as a home for a group of miners. An inmate of the Ohio State Penitentiary pays off the debts he incurred as a criminal by writing magazine stories. Again in Kansas a nine year old boy is the only pupil in a West Mineral school. An architect in New York City makes decoy ducks for a hobby. An Ontario exhibitionist makes a practice of hanging himself. And in Oakland, California, a candy store is run on an "honesty policy," with the children waiting on themselves and making their own change at the cash register. Running time, 9 minutes.

Screen Snapshots, No. 3

Seeing Stars

The camera reporter roving the highways and the byways of fableland has included another impressive group of stars, some two score, in the third issue of its seventeenth series. On a studio lot the reporter tarries whilst the camera roams about picking out doubles of their better known counterparts. The resemblance varies, some being exceptionally good, others somewhat miscast. At the Los Angeles Municipal Airport Police Chief Davis commissions James Dunn a Lieutenant in the city's aerial police. Anita Louise playing a harp renders a solo from "The Rosary." At the Santa Anita racetrack the camera finds itself hard pressed to record the arrival of the stars, so numerous are they. Running time, 10 minutes.

Going Places No. 41

Indian Frontier

This issue of the Going Places series concerns itself with what is described by Lowell Thomas, narrator, as the last frontier of the American Indian. The Quinault tribe in the State of Washington by virtue of a treaty between the state and a Quinault chief in 1855 hold the same land their forefathers did before them. But despite the hands off attitude of state officials the Indians are not unlike their brethren in other states in appearance or dress and if it weren't for the camera closeups that reveal facial characteristics the Quinaults could pass for a typical group of Washingtonians or any other state citizenry. Running time, 9 minutes.

Brokers' Follies

Variety Show

A broker's office serves as a setting here for the presentation of a variety program. Ebbing stock market quotations cause a corresponding falling off in customers' enthusiasm, whereupon the brokerage concern gathers a group of performers to brighten things up. Appearing are Campbell's Royalists, three girls and four men, who sing "Goona Goo"; Lewis and Van, dance team; the Loria Brothers, a Mexican band of six youngsters, and Martha Tilton, singing "Bob White." Running time, 10½ minutes.

The Dumb Cluck

Oswald Cartoon

In this animated cartoon Oswald the rabbit is merely a spectator as the Dumb Cluck demonstrates his latest invention, a fire department. This consists of a car with a mechanical ladder and an elephant on roller skates. As is to be expected more havoc is caused by the Dumb Cluck's invention than the good it does. After crashing into a house the elephant folds up like an accordion so the Dumb Cluck uses him as an exhibit on how to reduce without dieting. Running time, 7 minutes.

Community Sing

Old Favorites

The community singers backgrounded by the old-fashion barber shop but including a manicurist or two dig deep into the library of songs for some real old-timers. Led by Gene Morgan the singers reminisce with "Oh What a Gal Was Mary," "I Want a Girl Just Like the Girl That Married Dear Old Dad" and "Down By the Old Mill Stream." As a concession to the modern influence there is a solo by Robert Paige, "Ain't She Sweet," and one by Deane Janis, "Some of These Days," in today's version. Running time, 10½ minutes.

Going Places No. 42

Of Interest

The Going Places cameraman takes us, of all places, to Hollywood where three girls are shown wearing charms, bracelets with amulets, talisman and good luck pieces, which according to narrator Lowell Thomas is the new fad in the cinema city. After viewing the finished product a visit to the jewelry plant where the charms are made is accomplished. From Hollywood a long jump down to the Bahama Islands transpires and there we see the turtle fishermen of the Bahamas making their haul of turtles. Running time, 9½ minutes.

Rhapsody In Zoo

Variety Program

Reversing the customary procedure the denizens of the jungle here constitute the audience while various humans entertain them. Mark Plant, a Tarzan in physique, is master of ceremonies introducing the Negasake Tramp Band from Harlem, who provide novelty instrumentation; Ruth Daye, tap dancer; The Asburns, ballroom dancers; Evelyn Poe, night club singer, and The Kidoodlers, novelty quartet. Plant winds up the program by singing a song and the animal impersonators scatter as word gets around that Frank Buck is coming. Running time, 15½ minutes.

Normal

Turning into the first week of December, Hollywood started 10 new pictures and finished six. The change-over total was normal for the season, as was the total number of pictures in work, 42. The trend of new work was toward mystery and action melodrama. There were also a couple of romantic comedies and one out and out comedy film. No musicals were started during the period, nor are any of the pictures listed in the exceptional budget class.

Universal was the most active studio, and four productions went before the cameras. "The Black Doll," in the "Crime Club" series, will present Donald Woods, Nan Grey, C. Henry Gordon, William Lundigan, Doris Lloyd, Addison Richards, Edgar Kennedy, John Wray, Fred Malatesta, Holmes Herbert, Sid Saylor and Arthur Voight. Otis Garrett was assigned to direct under the production supervision of Irving Starr. "The Mountains Are My Kingdom," which combines outdoor action with love interest, will feature Noah Beery, Jr., and Frances Robinson, with Samuel S. Hinds, Fred Kohler, Sr., Robert Barrat, Stanley Andrews and William Lundigan. Wyndham Gittens is directing. The leading players in "Midnight Intruder," melodramatic romance, are Louis Hayward, Barbara Reed, Sheila Bromley and J. C. Nugent. It is a Trem Carr production being directed by Arthur Lubin.

Brown Comedy, Campus Mystery

Two productions were started at Columbia. The presence of Joe E. Brown in the topically titled "Wide Open Faces," a David Loew production, establishes it as a comedy. His supporting company will include Alison Skipworth, Lyda Roberti, Jane Wyman, Alan Baxter, Barbara Pepper, Stanley Fields, Berton Churchill and Lucien Littlefield. Kurt Newmann is the director. "Campus Mystery" will present Scott Colton, Mary Russell, Arthur Loft, Dick Lukats, Thurston Hall and Gene Morgan. Lambert Hillyer is directing.

MGM also started two pictures. "Test Pilot," the first aviation story which the studio has attempted in two or three years, will offer a strong cast, as Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy and Lionel Barrymore are listed for the feature roles, with many of the company's younger players, including Ted Pearson and Claudia Coleman as well as Arthur Aylesworth, penciled in for supporting roles. Victor Fleming, whose last picture was "Captains Courageous," is directing. The second film, "Love Is a Headache," which Richord Thorpe is directing, will follow the comedy romance idea. Principal players currently listed are Gladys George, Franchot Tone, both of whom were in "They Gave Him a Gun," Ted Healy, Mickey Rooney, Henry Kolker, Fay Holden, Barnett Parker and George Billings.

*Thousands of early Christmas shoppers who crowded Los Angeles' busiest street, Broadway, took a look at a modern Lady Godiva, mounted on a white charger (which walked slowly) ambling slowly down the street. Nobody went blind. dramatic romance with considerable comedy. Preston Foster and Whitney Bourne are teamed in the leads with Donald Meek, Samuel S. Hinds, William Corson, Maude Ebunne, Edith Elliott and George Irving listed in support. Lew Landers is directing.

At Republic "The Lone Ranger," a serial based on a radio program, went into work. With William Whitney and Jack English co-directing, the starting cast names Lee Powell, Herman Brix, Hal Taliaferro, George Litz, Lane Chandler, Lynn Roberts and Chief Thundercloud. Additional assignments will be made.

"Rosalie" Completed

Most important of the completed pictures is MGM's lavishly produced operetta "Rosalie." Adapted to screen play form and produced by William Anthony McGuire, with W. S. Van Dyke as director, it will offer Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Frank Morgan, Edna May Oliver, Ray Bolger, Ilona Massey, Billy Gilbert, Reginald Owen, Tom Rutherford, Clay Clement, Virginia Grey, George Zucco, Oscar O'Shea, Jerry Colonna and Janet Beecher. The familiar "Rosalie" music and eight new songs by Cole Porter will be featured. Dances were supervised by Albertina Rasch and Dave Gould.

Three of the finished pictures are credited to Columbia. "Penitentiary" features Walter Connolly with Jean Parker, John Howard, Robert Barrat, Marc Lawrence, Paul Fix, Ann Doran and Bill Lally. John Brahm directed. "The Lone Rider," an outdoor romance, includes Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Donald Grayson, Allen Brook and the instrumental and vocal musicians, The Pioneers. Sam Nelson was the director. The third film, "A Dangerous Affair," Larry Darmour production, is a semi-mystery melodrama romance. Jack Holt is starred in the company of Beverly Roberts, Craig Reynolds, Guy Usher, Spencer Charters, Maurice Cass, Marjorie Gateson, Tom Kennedy, Joseph Grehan and Tully Marshall. Lewis D. Collins directed.

Monogram finished "Telephone Operator," a comedy romance which Scott Pembroke directed. The cast includes Grant Withers, Alice White, Judith Allen, Pat Flaherty, William Haade, Cornelius Keefe and Dorothy Vaughan.

"Having a Wonderful Time" was finished by RKO-Radio. Ginger Rogers is the leading player, supported by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Richard Skelton, Peggy Conklin, Eve Arden and Louise Ball. Al Santell directed.

Short Subjects

Lew Harris, manager of the Alexander theatre, Glendale, says his patrons are demanding more and more short subjects. When we learned that the short, "Radium," had stolen the show from the feature program, we began to do a little investigating of the short subject situation. Checking several of the major studios we learned that Jack Chertok at MGM had produced more than 60 shorts in the 1937 calendar year.

When one studio is putting them out in such quantities there must be a reason. We sought out Mr. Chertok to discover what the reason is.

"Short subjects have grown up," he said. "Our main concern is to get ideas that will appeal to everyone.

"They must be unusual and they must be entertaining. They must be given the same attention as a feature. An examination of our main series of shorts will illustrate the point. The Pete Smith Specialties, the 'Crime Does Not Pay' series, Carey Wilson's miniatures based on psychic phenomena, and the historical mysteries are built on ideas that will interest the mature mind.

Formal Dignity

That, hereafter, they may labor under no inferiority complex, and that the stars whom they contact may be duly impressed with their importance in the scheme of things, members of the Warner Brothers' studio publicity department will be dressed in the height of fashion and style. Out go the bizarre sport suits, the fancy shirts always open at the neck, the suede shoes, the flaming sweaters. In comes the dignified attire. Tied neckties, plain shirts, soberly patterned and cut suits, hair meticulously combed and brushed, shoes shined, shaves every day and nails manicured, is the new order of things.

It's all being done to gain the confidence of the stars, to make them think they are talking to a lot of cultured gentlemen.

JACK WARNER CALLS FOR "SANITY" IN ECONOMIES

Costs Should Be "Leveled Off", but Not to Jeopardize Values, Says Production Executive

Out of the maze of stories emanating from Hollywood describing socalled "economy waves" reportedly sweeping various studios in order to control, if not actually lower, unprecedented mounting production costs, comes a warning from Jack L. Warner that economies must certainly be effected, but with sanity, so that there is no cessation, or jeopardization, of the supply of Hollywood's "best" films which alone bring revenue from all over the world.

Mixed with the speculation over the reputed ax-wielding presence of New York film executives at the studios, there is an expectation existing generally in Hollywood that major production activity will suspend for perhaps as long as 12 weeks in California after January 1st, due, it is said, to the present orders from New York to curtail expenditures. But Mr. Warner, although not advocating continued exorbitant spending, warns that, "while this is a time for thought about additional care in the production of motion pictures, and economy in so far as this is possible, it is no time to talk of eliminating the kind of pictures that have made Hollywood internationally famous."

Comment on production expenditures has been heard for weeks along Hollywood Boulevard and Broadway, and Wall Street, too, has had its ears to the ground. Some few weeks ago eastern home office executives started converging on the studios, ostensibly to look into the situation. The immediate result appears to be a wholesale cutting of actor, writer and director contract lists of "deadwood."

Jack Warner points out that, while "sane" economies should be the order of the day, "the industry really is in excellent shape." His remarks are particularly significant now in view of the strong silence prevailing in executive ranks over what is being done about conditions at the Hollywood studios. They were made by him for public consumption, in an interview with Edwin Shallert for the Los Angeles Times. Mr. Warner and his brothers, Harry M. and Major Albert Warner, control the Warner-First National-Vitagraph companies.

Costs Rising "Beyond All Reason"

Jack Warner concedes that "there should be a leveling-off point," what with present costs possibly rising "beyond all range and reason." He concedes that "a picture that would involve something like $2,800,000 in cost hasn't a chance of really showing any material profit, provided it even gets its money back," adding, "The industry can suffer through a costly failure or two better now than a year ago, but such failures nevertheless are dangerous to the business."

"Sanity in all departments of the film in respect to expenditures, and money in general, is dictated by the present situation," said Mr. Warner. "Hollywood can't go on independent of the world at large, completely disregarding a limit to expansion, and refusing to take cognizance of what people are thinking, doing and how they are living elsewhere.

"This place (Hollywood) happens to be a paradise, and happens also to be quite isolated," he continued, "but it will have to recognize that it depends on the world outside for its revenue."

Must Be World Films

The whole tenor of Mr. Warner's views, as reported by Mr. Shallert, is that costs have risen as much as they should rise, and that there are limits to what may be invested in a picture—but: "It is only our best films that appeal all over the world, and there should be no cessation of their production."

"So remarkable is the revenue normally gained by pictures that at our (Warner-First National) studio alone I can cite the fact that through the years there have been only six financial failures among the scores of films we have produced. That probably would seem like an extraordinary record to anyone who is not aware of the conditions in the business. Yet such is the case—where the depression really hit was never in motion picture production.

"But there is the danger always that such a record as this may be overthrown by the lack of complete cooperation. After the great upturn of the past few years, it would be regrettable to find ourselves face to face with such an outcome. The industry is in excellent shape, and should be kept on that course. Nor is there any reason why it shouldn't be, with the full interest and cooperation of everybody."

Making Short Subject With Brewster Process

The first commercial use of a new three-color process is under way with the starting of a short subject at the Biograph Studio, in the Bronx, N. Y. Bud Pollard is making the subject. The color process was developed by P. D. Brewster, head of Brewster Film Laboratories, Newark, N. J.

Advantages claimed by Mr. Brewster for his process are, a camera making three separate negatives rather than using the bi-pack system and one reflected image, the fact that its prints are made by a photographic process rather than a lithographic process, and the use of mazda light in the studio. The process uses three separate negative films recording simultaneously red, green and blue separations by means of two three-plated revolving mirrors operating between the lens and the film.

Mexican Province Pleads for Films

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Evidence that Mexicans in the provinces do want motion pictures is afforded by the most unique petition the federal government has received in moons. The plea is from a large group of citizens of Tlalnepantla, prosperous seat of a large agricultural municipality in the state of Mexico, about 20 miles out of the national capital.

The government has been asked to exercise its good offices toward inducing an exhibitor, or several of them, to establish cinemas or even halls where they can have their pictures at regular intervals. As matters now stand, the enterprising theatre-minded people of Tlalnepantla must trail all the way into Mexico City for their film fare.

Officials of staid Puebla City, Mexico's fourth largest town, are upset over a litigation suit brought by an exhibitor against the city. Eight years ago the municipality spent $100,000 to construct a cinema, giving Jesus Cienfuegos a concession to run the theatre, tax free for twenty years. Forgetting about the franchise the city demanded that Senor Cienfuegos pay imposts from 1929, some $40,000. The Puebla government built the theatre and granted the franchise as a means of providing the town with regular film entertainment.

Another long run record has been established in Mexico City by Universal. Its film, "The Road Back," ran for six straight weeks at the Cine Regis, a select cinema. This makes the second long run picture Universal has had this year in the Mexican capital. Its "Three Smart Girls" also played the Regis for six weeks last summer.

Mexico City exhibitors are obligated to provide three intermissions of five minutes each during every show by a law the munipal government has enacted which is designed to give the cinema public more comfort. The civic fathers were informed by the civic consultive board that cinema fans should be allowed to rest their eyes after viewing pictures for 90 consecutive minutes.

Forbidden by her husband, a wealthy and conservative young businessman, to attend motion pictures, Senora Margarita Jacome de Jimenez, 22 year old society matron of Jalpa, capital of Vera Cruz state, committed suicide. She had been married ten months.

The hat grabbing racket which long annoyed patrons of leading Mexico City cinemas has been stopped by the police with the arrest of the leader of a gang of thieves that snatched hats from under seats during shows.

"La Zandunga," a romantic drama of southern Mexico, starring Lupe Velez, has been started on location in Oaxaca state by Films Selectos, S.A. The picture is being directed by Fernando de Fuentes who made "All en el Rancho Grande" (Way Down on the Rancho Grande).

The Community Opticians, a national organization of American opticians, is out to correct the impression given in Hollywood movies that beauties never wear glasses, and also to knock down Dorothy Parker's assertion that "Men never make passes at girls who wear glasses." Frank Martin, Community Opticians' president, will hold a "beauty contest" to prove that bespectacled gals can be beautiful. The harm done by Hollywood and Miss Parker, he says, has frightened the ladies of the land into squints, red eyes and wrinkles. To say nothing of the serious effect on the income of opticians.

"I jess knowed you was a peckerwood salesman and a dam yankee that'd be trying to tell me how to run my show," the prospect announced.

"But you do need the HERALD's release chart," the salesman urged.

Sam Goldwyn may be the big king-pin in the purchase, control and operations of United Artists, and the motion picture trade, fan and daily press may praise his accomplishments to the sky, but, in Egypt, it's a different story.

As duly noted previously, Mr. Samuel Goldwyn caused the following telegram to be dispatched to Mr. Mohamed Amine Youssef, Minister from Egypt, in Washington, D. C.:

> "Press dispatches appearing in local newspapers report the Egyptian Government's plan to lease the sides of the Pyramids for advertising purposes. Would you write the rates to Samuel Goldwyn Productions, Hollywood. This company would consider utilizing this opportunity to announce the coming world release of 'The Adventures of Marco Polo', starring Gary Cooper." (Modestly, Mr. Goldwyn refrained from mentioning that "The Adventures of Marco Polo" was conceived, cinematically, by Samuel Goldwyn, was produced by Samuel Goldwyn Productions, supervised by Samuel Goldwyn, personally, and will be released by Samuel Goldwyn through Samuel Goldwyn's United Artists Pictures.)

Anyway, Mr. Goldwyn received an answer from the Royal Egyptian Legation, at Washington, as follows:

ANOTHER NEW TELEVISION SYSTEM EMERGES QUIETLY FROM LABORATORY

Television Not Many Months from Becoming Part of Everyday Life, Says Executive of Kolorama Laboratories, Inc.

Behind the closed—and locked—doors of a small brick building in Irvington, New Jersey, a half dozen young men have been working and experimenting with television, giving only slight indication to the outside world as to the results of their efforts.

This week, however, the cloak of secrecy was lifted long enough to permit a MOTION PICTURE HERALD representative to witness a demonstration which was both prefaced and followed by a prediction that television in a practical way is "not so far in the future."

Asked for a more definite prediction as to time, E. A. Kern, executive vice-president of the company, Kolorama Laboratories, Inc., amplified the forecast to the extent of saying that he and his associates refer to "months not years" when they speak of television being taken out of the laboratories and becoming part of the everyday life of America.

The demonstration was accompanied by little or no explanation of technical details. Mr. Kern and his co-workers explained that they are satisfied to rest their claim to finding the answer to television on results and, without any further ado, they led the way— with the use of pass keys—to a small projection room. Lights were extinguished and a few seconds later the familiar main title of the newsreel, Hearst-Metro News of the Day, flashed on the screen which was three by four feet. A ten minute program of "black and white" pictures followed.

Compared to present day motion picture screenings, the pictures concededly were inferior but they stood up favorably against theatre offerings of a few years ago and the average home motion pictures of today.

Slight Flicker

The televised pictures were accompanied by only a slight flicker and, on one or two occasions, horizontal lines were visible. One of the points which Mr. Kern and his staff declined to discuss was the number of lines used for the transmission.

"There has been too much talk about the number of lines in television," Frank Goldbach, chief engineer, declared. "This has resulted in the quality of pictures being judged on the number of lines used. We contend the number of lines used is unimportant; the important thing is the quality of the pictures. I'll answer the question as to the number of lines we use with a question: Did you notice many lines in the pictures?"

Among the newsreel shots shown were the victory smiles and speeches of Fiorello LaGuardia, recently reelected mayor of New York City, and Thomas E. Dewey, district attorney elect of New York County. Both men were seen in closeups. Their features were not sharp but, at the same time, they were not annoyingly blurred.

Distant Shots

To demonstrate the possibilities of using distant shots, pictures of major football games of a few weeks ago were shown. Details were sufficiently clear to follow the course of a football passed through the air from one player to another. It was in shots like these, where the white expanse of the sky served as a background, that the lines were noticeable.

Although most of the demonstration was conducted in a darkened room, Mr. Kent demonstrated that darkness is not a requisite by turning on dim ceiling lights. The pictures lost none of their qualities.

The transmission was from an adjoining room by wire. This is necessary, Mr. Kern said, because Kolorama has not yet been granted an experimental broadcasting license. The film was televised while moving at the standard sound film rate of 24 frames per second.

"None of the film," Mr. Kern pointed out, "was made for television purposes."

Limitation of Light

This is an important factor, he continued, because of lighting conditions. "Our only limitation," he said, "is the amount of light available. Television can be materially aided by a change in motion picture camera technique, particularly in regard to more suitable lighting."

Although not demonstrated, direct pickup also is part of Kolorama's experiments, Mr. Kern said, and it has been advanced to the point where it is equal to the film transmission.

"The prime consideration of Kolorama," Mr. Kern explained, "has always been large screen television. We do not believe that small pictures, measuring only a few inches on a side, will be acceptable even in the home. Such small pictures will certainly not be useful for commercial applications."

Eight by Ten Feet

With the laboratory's present equipment, without any changes, pictures can be projected on a screen eight by ten feet and even larger, according to Mr. Goldbach. The three by four size was used for the demonstration, he continued, merely because it is best suited for the size of the laboratory's demonstration room.

In a prepared statement the company announced:

"We wish to point out the fact that improvements in our system are constantly being made without appreciably increasing our frequency re- other systems. This is made possible by our mechanical scanning methods, particularly at the transmitter. Cathode ray reception of signals transmitted by our system may be utilized with excellent results except as to the size of the received picture. However, we use cathode ray tubes only for monitoring and experimental comparisons. We have a cathode ray cabinet receiver available and can produce very good 'black and white' pictures on the ten inch screen of the tube.

"Up to the present time transmission of film has sufficed in the development of our receiving apparatus. Now that our pictures have reached a point where subject matter plays an important part we have turned our attention to the direct pickup form of transmission. We are not yet ready to demonstrate our direct pickup transmission, but it is in actual operation and already compares favorably with our film transmission."

Subject Remains Identical

One of the chief advantages of working with film, it was pointed out, is that the subject remains identical and any increase or loss of details is immediately noticeable.

Mr. Kern and his staff, Mr. Goldbach; S. L. Clothier and H. C. Hogencamp, research engineers, and George Ruchstuhl, broadcast engineer, said they do not believe the matter of cost will hold back television. They conceded that home television sets will be more costly, when first introduced, than radio sets are at present, but added that the sets will not be out of the reach of families in average circumstances.

The Kolorama staff declined to discuss the distance they hope to be able to broadcast pictures but at the same time they announced that they believe covering of the country will be no deterrent to the advancement of television.

On the coast, Lewis Allen Weiss, Don Lee manager, announced that practical television to transmit sight and sound from studio audience programs will be started shortly after the first of the year.

Harry R. Lubcke, engineer, who has been sending television shows from his home since 1932, has devised methods of transmitting live talent programs directly from radio theatres to within a 20 mile radius, Mr. Weiss said.

Ralph R. Beal, supervisor of RCA's television field tests, has been named research director of the company, a newly created position. Mr. Beal will supervise the work of more than 550 engineers.

In London a television demonstration was staged, showing two men standing more than seven miles apart engaged in conversation.

John Gihon has been assigned to production and television work under John Royal, vice-president of National Broadcasting Company.

Gustave Schwab, European producer from 1910 to 1932, has signed a contract with Nordisk Films Kompagni of Copenhagen, Denmark, giving him the North and South American distribution rights of "Laila," the Girl from Lapland. The picture will have its American premiere in New York about the middle of December with "dubbed" English dialogue.

PUBLIC SEEN EAGER TO CONSTRUCT SETS

The developmental side of television will receive greater public attention than the program side of the new art when sight broadcasting is launched on a public participating basis, according to Joseph J. Weed, head of Weed and Company, radio station representatives.

"I am informed that many leading radio manufacturers will soon market complete television kits for home construction," Mr. Weed said. Not all of the pioneer look-and-listeners will have home-made sets, however, Complete models will be simultaneously offered the public at prices comparable to those of de luxe console sound receivers on the market today.

"Of course, the programs will eventually take leadership in public interest over the receivers themselves. But, at the start, even with the program scope limited, the public will respond in great numbers in buying kits and sets."

LEADERS AT TESTIMONIAL DINNERS FOR A. H. BLANK, IRA COHN, SI FABIAN

Event at Des Moines Observes 25th Anniversary of Blank Circuit Executive's Entry Into the Theatre Field

Two of the motion picture industry's favorite sons of the field, A. H. Blank, in exhibition, and Ira Cohn, in distribution, were honored this week at testimonial banquets at which large delegations attended from all branches. A third, Si Fabian, exhibitor, is to be similarly honored next Monday evening.

Mr. Blank's 25th anniversary in exhibition is sending well over 300 of his circuit colleagues and major film executives to Des Moines for a testimonial Thursday evening in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Fort, Des Moines, guests converging from western, midwestern and eastern cities.

Two special cars on the New York Central's Commodore Vanderbilt will carry the New York contingent, representing virtually every home office and headed by large groups from Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox.

From New York and Los Angeles will be Barney Balaban, Austin Keough, Adolph Zukor, Stanton Griffis, Y. Frank Freeman, Neil Agnew, Robert Gillham, John Fitzgibbons, Joe Unger, Charles Reagan and Leon Netter, Paramount; E. V. Richards, Paramount theatre partner in the South; Joseph Schenck, Darryl Zanuck, John D. Clark, W. J. Kupper, William Sussman, Harvey Day and William Gehring, Twentieth Century-Fox; Al Lichtman of Loew's, Inc.; N. L. Nathanson, Famous Players Canadian Corporation; Dr. A. H. Giannini, Samuel Goldwyn, A. W. Smith, George Schaefer, United Artists; Louis B. Mayer, Sam Katz, MGM; Herbert J. Yates, Republic; Leo Spitz, Ned Depinet, Nate Blumberg, Jules Levy, and Max Fellerman, RKO; H. M. Warner, Carl Leserman, Warner Brothers; Herman Robbins and Sam and George Dembow, National Screen Service; E. W. Hammons and Jack Skirball, Educational; Jack Cohn, Columbia; Sam Spring, attorney; A-Mike Vogel, MOTION PICTURE HERALD; W. Ray Johnston, Republic; and James R. Grainger, among others.

Other large delegations include 22 exchange managers from Omaha and Des Moines, 54 managers and assistants of Tri-States Circuit, 26 managers and workers from Central States Theatres, 55 Des Moines film executives, besides Governor R. L. Cochran of Nebraska and Governor Nels Kraschel of Iowa.

At the dinner prizes will be awarded to winners in the Tri-States managers' drive.

Bringing out the highlights of Abraham Harry Blank's 25 years in exhibition, his coworkers and competitors on the committee in charge of the testimonial will trace his activities from his arrival at Council Bluffs, Iowa, from Roumania, when eight years of age, to his first exhibition venture, in 1912, with Abe Frankel, at the old Casino theatre in Des Moines, down through his circuit-partnership with First National, to his sale of theatre holdings to Paramount, in 1926, for $2,000,000, and to his present 50 per cent-partnership in the same theatres with Paramount.

On the rostrum with him will be many of the theatre managers with whom he is in partnership in houses other than those of Paramount's; also, his nephew, Harry Weinberg, business manager for Central States; Mr. Blank's son, Myron, his purchasing agent; G. Ralph Branton, general manager of Tri-States, and general chairman of the testimonial; E. R. Cummings, Omaha exhibitor, and Joe Kinsky, of Davenport, committee members.

A. H. BLANK

A special article on Mr. Blank and his circuit appears in Better Theatres, second section of this issue.

Friends Give Trip to Cohn

Some 450 friends, co-workers, theatre and distribution managers and home office executives honored Ira H. Cohn at a testimonial banquet Monday night in Pittsburgh's William Penn hotel, on his completion of 20 years in motion pictures, all with Fox Film. Mr. Cohn at present manages the Pittsburgh exchange of Fox. At the banquet the honored guest was presented with a round-trip to Europe for his wife and himself, a gift from those attending the dinner. He will leave in two weeks and return in February.

Among those present were: Hon. Frank J. Harris and C. C. Kellenberg, chairman; George Roberts, Edgar Morse, William Sussman, William J. Kupper, John M. Harris, Martin Moskowitz, E. C. Grainger, William J. Clark, Harvey B. Day, Jack Bloom, Harry A. Mersay, Sam Gross, D. J. Schmerz, Sam N. Wheeler, J. J. Grady, Al Davis, Ed Bergman, Sam Lichter and Bert Stern.

This week Mr. Cohn's Pittsburgh Fox office established a new record in the short subject sales contest as part of the fifth S. R. Kent sales drive. The exchange also took fifth place on total delivery, marking a double event for Mr. Cohn and his associates.

Fabian Testimonial

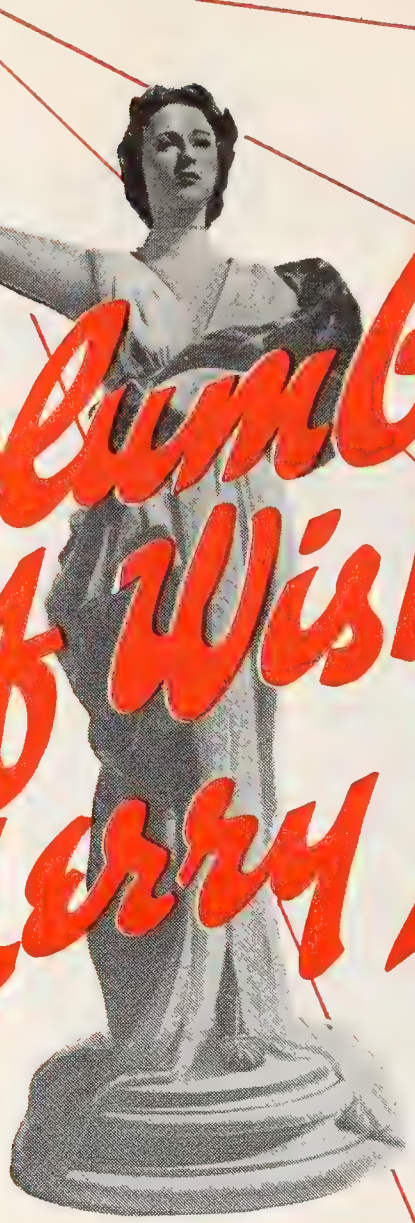
Reservations for the testimonial dinner to be accorded Si Fabian, upstate New York exhibitor, in the DeWitt Clinton hotel, Albany, December 13, passed the 250 mark Tuesday.

A band will serenade the delegation from New York when the "Si Fabian" special section of the Commodore Vanderbilt train arrives early next Monday night, with a march on the DeWitt Clinton under special police escort.

Chairmen of the various committees outlined their work in Tuesday's meeting at the offices of General Chairman Phil Fox of Columbia. Tony Ryan, transportation chairman, reported that the special section is already well filled and that four airplanes have been chartered.



Assisting Mr. Fox are M. N. Grassgreen, Twentieth Century-Fox, secretary; B. G. Kranze, RKO, chairman of seating arrangements; Artie Neuman, Grand National, chairman of the reception committee; Tony Ryan, in charge of transportation; Norman Ayres, Warner Brothers; Clayton Eastman, Paramount; Ralph Pielow, MGM; Bernard Mills, Republic, and Peter T. Dana of Universal Film Exchange. Mr. Dana is treasurer of the testimonial.

Booking Pictures For the Neighborhoods

Hard to Call Shots in Double Billing, Says Booker

by LOUIS MACHAT
Film Booker, Balaban and Katz

"Booking pictures for your house and mine" is the subject of the accompanying article sent in by Louis Machat, of the executive booking offices of the Balaban and Katz Corporation's circuit in Chicago. Since 1910 Mr. Machat has purchased, booked and exhibited motion pictures operated film exchanges in New York and Boston, was associated with Lewis J. Selznick's World Film Corporation in 1914, and operated theatres in the East starting in 1927. He built and operated several "little art theatres," exhibiting foreign pictures, including the Cinema and Punch and Judy theatres in Chicago. The article is written from the viewpoint of a booker in a large city.

There are no steadfast rules or formulas governing the booking of a theatre. We do, however, have a major responsibility as exhibitors, and that is to book our theatres to fit their own particular requirements.

There are a number of salient factors that an exhibitor should take into consideration in placing his bookings. They are:

Determining the value of a picture.

Judging a picture as to its reception in a particular neighborhood.

Careful observation of a picture's previous box-office activity.

Determining the playing time of a picture.

Fixing the ratio of playing as compared to the cost of the special priced pictures so that the theatre can make up for film extra cost.

Determining the best playing days for a picture.

Booking a picture for exploitation purposes, or as we commonly refer to it, spot booking.

Being on the alert for return bookings that already have proved their worth at the box office.

Let's go into each of these points more thoroughly.

Factors in determining a picture's value are these: View the picture personally; know its theme and type, the featured players, its directors, its author, and from what sources the film originated. Was it a stage hit, a successful novel, or was it a newspaper serial? How much publicity did the picture receive in its opening weeks? These few items, if carefully answered, give the exhibitor an opportunity to see into the picture's background.

Judging the Theme

Next I mentioned judging a picture from the neighborhood standpoint. In that I mean knowing the type of people that constitute a neighborhood, and knowing their preferences.

We all know that action dramas are more suitable in some neighborhood theatres than in others. By the same token, we know that an ultra sophisticated picture won't do half the gross in one neighborhood that it will do in another. Also, particular star favorites will draw big audiences in certain houses but would be a flop in others. Therefore, it is up to each of us individuals, as exhibitors, to know just what can go and what can't.

Another important point is to learn a picture's previous box-office activity. Pictures can't go on doing busines indefinitely; at some time or another down the line they lose their box-office lure. After a long-run loop house has taken its share of three healthy weeks, and other "A" and "B" houses likewise have enjoyed prosperous full weeks and weekends, it isn't always wise to place that picture into a "C" house on a Sunday for a three or four-day run. It might be a good deal better to use a clear program picture that hasn't had too much playing time. This isn't always a good idea, but it is worthy of consideration. Nevertheless, it is a question that exhibitors have to gamble on.

An old bugaboo closely related with what I have just mentioned is, "How many good days can I expect from this picture? How many days will it hold up? If placed on a Sunday, can I expect it to go through to Wednesday, or shall I pull it on Tuesday night and start a new program on Wednesday for the balance of the week?"

The box office alone holds the answer. I can speak only from my own experiences at the Maryland, and I can say in very certain terms that pictures are far between that can offer a good Sunday and a good Wednesday too.

Special Subjects

Away from the regular routine method of playing only regular product, we find ourselves confronted by independent producers offering special subject productions, such as, say, a war picture. A hurried spot booking may make a few extra dollars. We know these pictures don't click in every instance, but you were at least reaching patrons of a different type, patrons you hadn't seen for many months.

At the present time old pictures are much in evidence. These pictures, which years back were tremendous box office hits, may or may not be a solution to your problems on off weeks. I know that at the Maryland we were successful in most instances.

Now then, you've set up your month's bookings, you have taken into consideration all these points, and you are satisfied that you are correct in your judgment. Before the pictures start rolling in, review, check and double check them daily, using the latest information available, and be on the alert in making changes that may prove beneficial.

Watch your opening day, gentlemen, and don't stay with a "dog." If you find that your guess went wrong, and you think there is still a remedy use it. Never give your attraction a chance to double cross you. They have done so in the past; they will continue to do so in the future, if given the opportunity.

A captain on troubled waters must stay with his ship, but there is no place in show business for heroics. If you find your attraction giving away under you, send out your S.O.S. for a new vehicle.

Finally, we all know what constitutes well balanced entertainment, but in the era of double features it isn't very easy to call your shots.

Brazilian Unit Sets Two Films For New Studios

by L. S. MARINHO
in Rio de Janeiro

A new Brazilian production organization, Companhia Americana de Films S.A., has announced plans for two large scale productions, one of which has been started, and for the construction of extensive studios and laboratories in an effort to establish domestic production on a firm basis.

The company, capitalized at 10,000 centos of mil reis, has started construction at S. Paulo and has sent a unit of 14 people out on location to begin shooting its first production, "Eterna Esperanca." The picture, to star Sylvinha Mello and Sonia Veiga, is being directed by Leo Marten, of European note, and photographed by Sergio Usun.

Cinedia and Brazil Vita Films were hitherto the most promising domestic production organizations. Cinedia, owned and operated by Adhemar Gonzaga, was the central organization for a group of producers, one of them Oduvaldo Vianna, who produced the picture conceded the best in 1936, "Bonequinha de Seda." Brazil Vita has not produced a picture since "Cidada Mulher," although an historical feature is scheduled for next year entitled "Inconfidencia Mineira," in which Carmen Santos, president of the company, is to play the lead.

The studio and other buildings being erected in S. Paulo by the Companhia Americana cover an area of 90,000 square meters and will be ready for occupancy before the end of the year. Present plans call for the production of from eight to ten pictures a year.

After a disagreement with Cinedia, Oduvaldo Vianna has transferred production of his second film, "Alegria," to the new company.

Ufa, German organization which recently constructed a new theatre in S. Paulo, is planning another house in Recife, Pernambuco. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is also reported considering plans for theatres in both S. Paulo and Recife.

MAYER, MANNIX, KATZ, THAU CONTINUE AT MGM

Selznick - Metro Deal Will Be Signed in Few Days, Says Whitney, Home

All speculation over the future alignment of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's front-rank producing personnel in Culver City was set at rest this week with the completion of arrangements on the coast by Nicholas M. Schenck, president, for new contracts with Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production, and executive producers Edward J. Mannix, Sam Katz and Benjamin Thau.

The company's future product makeup will be further influenced by evidence that "no hitches" have developed in the transfer of David O. Selznick's producing unit from United Artists to Metro, and by the fact that Al Lichtman has returned to New York from Europe with word that he has lined up five more features for the company to be produced in England.

The contract signed by Mr. Mayer is for five years and will continue the producer's tenure through 1943. His current contract had a year to run. Mr. Mayer, in an official statement issued in Hollywood on Monday, said:

"I am happy to say that rumors of my contemplated resignation are untrue. After discussing with Mr. Schenck I have decided to remain with the organization of which I am so proud and to continue my very happy association with Mr. Schenck. At no time has there been any question of friction between myself and any member of the executive staff and rumors of the same are without foundation."

Conferred at Palm Springs

The rumors referred to had gained impetus in Hollywood Sunday following a reported conference between Mr. Mayer and Mr. Schenck at Palm Springs, Cal., Saturday night, in the course of which, according to intimate associates, Mr. Mayer had expressed dissatisfaction with the present setup and requested that he be released from his contract. Customarily reliable sources believed it was his intention, if released, to effect a purchase of Universal on terms which would give him complete charge of that company.

Mr. Schenck was reported to have offered to tear up the existing contract if the production head was insistent and, further, was said to have invited Mr. Mayer and a third party not officially associated with MGM affairs, to sit in upon discussions which were held in seclusion Sunday and resulted in the meeting indicated in Monday's announcement.

No Hitches, Says Whitney

It could not be ascertained from either company whether the renewal of Mr. Mayer's contract is to be taken as an assurance that the reported deal for the release of David O. Selznick productions will be consummated at once.

However, John Hay Whitney, chairman of the board of Selznick International, returned from Europe Monday and said, "There are no hitches in the Selznick deal with MGM and a contract will be signed in a few days." Under terms of the deal Selznick will make from seven to eight a year, each budgeted at $1,000,000.

Al Lichtman, vice-president, returned Monday from a seven week trip to London, Paris and Budapest, and said that MGM had lined up five more pictures for production in England. Mr. Lichtman said the reaction to the first production by the company there, "A Yank at Oxford," was excellent.

The next five productions will be "The Citadel," "So Victoria," "Good Bye, Mr. Chips," "Finishing School" and "Shadow on the Wing." Victor Saville will produce "The Citadel" with Elizabeth Allen in the leading role. "Finishing School" will have an all English cast. Hugh Walpole will do the screen adaptation for "So Victoria," and R. C. Sherrif has already completed the script for "Good Bye, Mr. Chips." The Royal Flying Corps is cooperating with MGM on "Shadow on the Wing," Mr. Lichtman said.

Mr. Lichtman said that only three retakes were necessary for "A Yank at Oxford." The picture was previewed at a theatre in Luton, England. It will be released in America the end of January and in Lodon in March, he said.

Ben Goetz, in charge of MGM production in England, will sail for New York December 18th to spend the Christmas holidays.

Warner-Luckies Radio Show Starts

The new Warner Brothers radio show, sponsored by Lucky Strike, and presented as "Your Hollywood Parade" over WEAF and the NBC Red network, was heard Wednesday for the first time at 10 p. m. for a full hour. It is the second move in the new radio-film relationship for the wholesale broadcasting of a studio's talent roster on an exclusive contractual arrangement with a national advertiser, following MGM's tie-up on the air with General Foods for Maxwell House Coffee.

A radio version of "It's Love I'm After," enacted by Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Patric Knowles and Eric Stanley was featured. Dick Powell is permanent master of ceremonies and vocalist on the weekly show.

Gary Cooper appeared on the first program in a dramatic sketch, and stars from other studios will make guest appearances on each show. Rufe Davis, comedian, has the comedy spot. Sharing the vocal spotlight with Dick Powell will be Rosemary Lane, Hollywood newcomer and radio singer.

Lehman Leaves B & K

Lawrence Lehman, associated with the theatre business for 30 years, resigned last week as manager of the Balaban & Katz's Newman, Kansas City, Mo., to become associated with the real estate business in that city.

Griffis, Balaban Back from Coast Studio Sessions

Stanton Griffis, Paramount executive committee chairman, returned this week from Hollywood studio-economy conferences with Barney Balaban, Neil Agnew, Adolph Zukor, Walter Cokell and William Le Baron. He brought back word that no depletions in the company's producing personnel are contemplated. Mr. Balaban, the president, asserted that two "big" features monthly will be forthcoming from now until September, 1938.

Promotions, however, were made in the Hollywood executive staff. Jeff Lazarus, story editor, and Harold Hurley were added to the producer roster. Mr. Lazarus will work in association with William LeBaron who continues as managing director of all production. Mr. Lazarus will continue to serve on the Paramount story board.

Coincidentally, Bogart Rogers and A. M. Botsford were named as personal assistants to Mr. LeBaron.

The only resignation was that of Henry Herzbrun, who quit as vice-president. He will open his own law office in Hollywood. Mr. Herzbrun had been with Paramount for 12 years and formerly was general manager of production. He will continue to represent the company at Motion Picture Producers Association meetings and serve as legal counsel.

Quinn Martin, for four years assistant to Mr. Lazarus, succeeds to the post of story editor.

Mr. Griffis reported that considerable study had been given in the course of the Hollywood sessions to methods of reducing studio costs to bring them more in line with currently lower receipts and that the study had resulted in "some reductions." He insisted, however, that no change would be made in the company's release schedule, as a result, and that none of the economies which has been instituted or was discussed involved a sacrifice of production quality.

Mr. Balaban said: "As the result of viewing pictures already completed or in work I am convinced Paramount is in the position to assure two box-office attractions every month during the balance of the 1937-38 season, ending September, 1938.

"Productions view are proof to me that Paramount's last half of its releasing season will be even stronger than the first half. Starting with "True Confessions" during Christmas Week, we will release a program that includes such sure fire attractions as 'Wells Fargo,' 'Every Day's a Holiday,' 'Thrill of a Lifetime,' 'The Buccaneer,' 'Romance in the Dark,' 'The Big Broadcast of 1938,' 'Doctor Rhythm,' 'You and Me,' and 'Professor Beware.'

"Mr. Zukor and Mr. LeBaron have planned a most ambitious program for 1938-39, and reviewing these plans with them, I was convinced that the 1938-39 program will enable Paramount to continue its upward progress in quality and box-office value."

NEW COPYRIGHT TREATY WOULD AID U.S. FILMS

Congress Hears Report Advising Adherence to International Copyright Treaty by U. S.

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The badly battered International Copyright Treaty again has been brought before the Senate for a ratification test with the submission of a report from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, recommending that the Senate ratify adherence of the United States to the international convention.

Presented by Senator F. Ryan Duffy, of Wisconsin, author of the copyright revision bill which was passed by the Senate last Congress but failed in the House, the report pointed out that, in order to give the various American copyright holding interests time to accommodate themselves to the new requirements which would follow entry into the convention, adherence of the United States should be deferred for a period of one year after the date of approval.

The report, which did not go into the question of copyright law revision, pointed out that the international convention has been kept up to date, and makes provision for motion pictures and broadcasting, probably the two most important users of copyrights. At present American pictures are without protection in a number of countries where copyright would be acknowledged under the treaty, it was said, and the provisions for automatic copyright especially would be valuable to American authors and composers.

Report Tells History

Under our adherence to the convention, it was contended, the distribution of American films would be increased abroad.

In a supplemental report, Senator Duffy outlined the history of the treaty, explaining that it was approved by the Senate, but ratification was withdrawn because of the failure of legislation revising the copyright laws.

Revival during this winter's regular session of Congress of the perennial controversy over copyright was practically assured this week with disclosure by Senator Duffy of plans to seek ratification of the copyright treaty by the Senate during the special session.

The Senator revealed that an agreement has been made among interested parties not to bring the treaty up for consideration before the special session disposes of the business it now has under consideration.

Hearings Expected

If, as anticipated, copyright revision is brought up during the coming session, lengthy hearings may be expected at which all of the old arguments for and against revision will be re-submitted.

In the consideration of copyright legislation, the Senate has an edge over the House, having passed a copyright revision bill last Congress. Accordingly, proponents of revision believe they will have little difficulty in securing favorable action on a measure in the Upper Chamber.

In the House, however, copyright has been under the control of Representative William I. Sirovich (Dem., N. Y.), as chairman of the Patents Committee. Sirovich has never been able to weld his committee into a cohesive unit on copyright, and controversy among committee members not only resulted in the failure of the bill passed by the Senate but also in the inability of any copyright measure to pass the House.

Sonotone, CBS, Technicolor, GTE Declare Dividends

Dividends were declared by Sonotone Corporation, Columbia Broadcasting, Technicolor, and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and two Canadian units of Loew's reported increased nets for the year as compared to last year.

Technicolor declared a 25-cent dividend on common stock, payable December 23rd to stock of record on December 16th. General Theatres' dividend, also for 25 cents, was the final for the year, and Cinecolor's was for two and one-half cents, payable on Friday.

The Sonotone dividend is 25 cents and is payable December 20th to common stockholders of record December 10th. The CBS dividend is 50 cents per share on the present Class A and Class B stock of $2.50 par value. It is payable December 13th to stockholders of record at the close of business December 6th. The Westinghouse dividend of $2 par share on the preferred and common stock is payable December 21st to stockholders of record at the close of business December 7th.

Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., reported a net of $111,730 for the year ending August 26th, compared with a net of $81,795 for the previous year. This year's net equals $8.79 per share on the common stock after the preferred dividends. Loew's London Theatres, Ltd., reported a net of $15,597, equal to 46 cents a share on the preferred stock. The 1936 net was $1,105.

Invents Ticket Chopper

Ralph W. Budd, director of personnel for Warner Brothers, has invented a ticket chopper, which is being manufactured by Newman Brothers of Cincinnati. It has compartments which ring a buzzer in the cashier's office at intervals, and the cashier can check with her numbers to keep a record of tickets sold up to that time.

Montreal Circuit Increases

United Amusement, Ltd., of Montreal, subsidiary of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has added three theatres.

Leo Carrillo, actor, and a native son of California, last week announced his candidacy for the office of Governor.

Italian Producer On Amity Visit

Giuseppe Domenico Musso, a Commendatore of Rome and president of Industrie Cinematografiche Italiane, now in New York for the purpose of arranging distribution with Universal, will also seek to bring about "a better understanding between the United States and Italy," according to Edward Fenton, managing director of the company, who accompanied Commendatore Musso to America.

Mr. Fenton, in the absence of Commendatore Musso who is recuperating from an illness in Doctor's Hospital, New York, said that "incidents that have recently occurred are not to the best interests of a working arrangement between the United States and Italy but that the visit of Commendatore Musso would open up a new field of thought." He said that Premier Mussolini "is desirous of establishing a close working arrangement with America."

Toward this end Commendatore Musso will confer with Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the MPPDA, Mr. Fenton said.

ICI has completed three pictures which will be released in the United States with superimposed English titles, "Cavallieri," "Countess Dei Parma," and "Doctor Antonio," which stars Maria Gambarelli, dancer and former premiere Danseuse for the late Roxy at the Capitol theatre in New York. In "Doctor Antonio," Miss Gambarelli plays a straight dramatic role without recourse to her dancing ability. The picture has opened in Rome and according to Mr. Fenton the "first five days broke all records in Italy."

Mr. Fenton said that the three pictures have nothing to do with a quota arrangement and that they were "devoid of propaganda, strictly entertainment." While in America Commendatore Musso plans to buy up to twenty American films, Mr. Fenton said.

The managing director of ICI feels that eventually Italy will be making pictures on a par with Hollywood. He said that Italy now needs technical equipment and looks to America to provide it. Italy, he said, "is now making 186 pictures a year." On the subject of the recent visit to this country of Vittorio Mussolini, son of the Premier, Mr. Fenton said, that "he knew nothing about it."

Guaranteed Handling "China"

Guaranteed Pictures, New York, this week acquired the American rights to Leon Wechsler's documentary film, "This Is China." Mr. Wechsler, who previously had produced "Wings Over Ethiopa," also controlled in America by Guaranteed, sailed Friday for his home in Switzerland where he plans to start production on a winter sports picture.

Finkelstein Plans Office

Martin Finkelstein, of Globe Pictures Corporation, arrived in New York this week from the coast. He plans to open an office in New York for the handling of "Spirit of Youth."

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Paramount Active

Far from inactive, even in the face of changing legislation, is British Paramount, whose quota pictures are constantly on the floor. At the moment of writing no less than three are either in production or due to start.

Shooting now is the George King production "Silver Top," from a story by Evadne Price, at Sound City.

The Sino-Japanese war provides the background of a new British Paramount production started at Pinewood. Tentatively titled "Incident in Shanghai," with John Paddy Carstairs directing, the picture deals with the emotions and adventures of a small group of Europeans trapped in a Chinese hotel in the fighting area. Patrick Barr and Janet Johnson play the leads. Carstairs wrote the story.

Donovan Pedelty will start about the 19th of December on "Murder Tomorrow" by Frank Harvey, from the stage play. The picture will be made at the Stoll Studios at Cricklewood, with Jack Livesey and Gwenllian Gill.

Francis Roberts will play the detective and the cast will include Molly Hanley-Clifford and Jonathon Field.

Merle Oberon as Leslie and Binnie Barnes as Lady Mere in Alexander Korda's London Films production, "The Divorce of Lady X". Tim Whelan is directing.

"Agony Column"

Directing the Fox British picture "Agony Column" at the Wembley Studios is Bernerd Mainwaring, one of the British industry's most original directorial minds, a personality with a long literary record to his credit as well as many films.

The players include Frank Birch, Edward Ashley, Evelyn Ankers, Liam Gaffney, Leslie Harcourt, Margaret Davidge, Julie Suedo, Sybil Brooke and Billy Shine.

The story has an unusual angle. A collector of valuable stones invites a group to his country house, selecting his 'guests' from the Agony Column of a newspaper. He then stages a robbery, intending to claim compensation from his insurance company, and implicate one of his guests.

Star Finances Film

Thanks to the personal intervention of its star, Arthur Tracy, the first Belgrave film, "Follow Your Star," is underway at Pinewood.

Set for production a few days back under the direction of Sinclair Hill, the film came to a halt before it had started. On the day shooting was due to open, backers demanded postponement of production to a later date pending a more settled state in the industry.

Tracy, due to return to the United States on December 18th, contacted his business representatives in New York and within twenty-four hours had secured financial guarantees which were placed at the company's disposal.

"Follow Your Star" is the Street Singer's fourth film in Britain, and has an autobiographical flavor, backgrounds however, being changed from the U. S. to Britain.

Belle Chrystal is the leading woman.

Ice Comedy

George Formby, one of Britain's top line screen and radio comedians, is nearing completion of his latest comedy, "I See Ice," which he is making for Associated Talking Pictures at the Ealing studios.

Formby's film exploits the current popularity of ice rinks and in one scene he plays the part of referee at an ice hockey match.

Anthony Kimmins is directing the film, which is under the charge of producer Basil Dean. Kay Walsh, who already has appeared in other Formby films, has the feminine lead.

Two Warner Films

Evidence of the sustained activity at the Warner First National plant at Teddington is contained in the news that two pictures are in production there, four are in the cutting room, and three await trade show.

On the floor at the moment are the Claude Hulbert-Reginald Purdell comedy, "Simply Terrific," directed by Roy William Neill, from a story by Basil Woon, and "Love Insurance," a Gene Gerrard comedy which Arthur Woods is directing from an original screenplay by John Meehan, Jr., and Thomas Phipps, with Basil Emmott at the camera. On this film Buster Collier is in charge of production.

In the cutting rooms are Thistledown with Aino Bergo and Keith Falkner; Director, Arthur Woods: The Viper with Claude Hulbert and Betty Lynne; director, Roy William Neill: Thank Evans, a Max Miller comedy, directed by Roy William Neill: Mr. Satan, with James Stephenson, Chili Bouchier and Skeets Gallagher.

Awaiting trade show are Quiet Please, Reginald Purdell and Wally Patch; directed by Roy William Neill: The Singing Cop, Keith Falkner, Marta Labarr, Chili Bouchier and Ivy St. Helier; directed by Arthur Woods: It's in the Blood, Claude Hulbert, Lesley Brook and James Stephenson; directed by Gene Gerrard.

Wilcox's Next

Back from his tour of the United States and Canada, Herbert Wilcox, producer director of "Victoria the Great," says that he is to make six pictures a year commencing in 1938. Two of these will star Anna Neagle and will be for world release by RKO Radio. The first will be a modern story.

Mr. Wilcox opposes the quota and claims it has hurt the industry.

His new films will be all-British in subject and content, no American stars or staff being employed.

His statement that he will produce for RKO Radio is not confirmed by that organization.

Egyptian and Palestine authorities have purchased 50 Gaumont British Instructional films for showing in schools and colleges.

STANLEY'S ADVISORY COUNCIL PLAN WINS OVER RIGID CONTROL DEMANDS

Principle Affirmed by Quota Committee of Parliament Despite Efforts of Labor and Conservatives to Saddle Trade

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Despite the strenuous efforts of both Labor and Conservatives to saddle the trade with a State Commission, in the face of a daily changing demand from various branches of the industry, Oliver Stanley, spokesman for the Government and sponsor of the new Films Bill, has succeeded in pushing his Films Council into the sphere of practical politics.

After two long sessions the committee has voted its approval of Mr. Stanley's amendment, or rather of its principle, the Board of Trade chief promising to consider amendments regarding details which would make the ultimate Council acceptable to the whole Parliamentary Committee.

Though the Council may be opposed when the Bill goes to the full Chamber for its third reading, this is not very likely, and the trade is now settling down to the more than probable fact that its affairs and the administration of new legislation will be watched by a Council of independent nominees and representatives of the trade.

As HERALD readers already know, the Stanley council, on paper, has duties which might be termed advisory and consultative. Labor opposition for the most part has been based on the thesis that they are insufficient. At least one Commons member called for a Dictator.

Nevertheless Mr. Stanley made it plain that whatever might be its terms or form, its powers and privileges would be so wide that criticism of inadequacy would be misguided. Exhibitors in particular are completely satisfied that if a Council, as originally outlined by Stanley, comes into being, foreign trade domination will be impossible.

They are convinced, to quote an exhibitor spokesman, that "there is nothing in the Council which exhibitor, renter or producer need fear, if he observes the letter of the law, but nonetheless it has the status of a policeman standing on the corner."

Changing Front

Mr. Stanley's task has been an unenviable one, for not only has he had a changing front from his parliamentary critics, but likewise from the trade itself.

In committee last week he said that certain Labor representatives had come to him expressing their determination to support his Council and had straightaway gone elsewhere to get support for a Commission. Also John Maxwell, who had led the deputation which had asked for a Council such as he had proposed, subsequently wrote to the Times demanding a full Commission.

Separate Quota Debate

Meanmhile, pending discussion and agreement on the details of a Council, on its powers and functions, the trade once again is wrapped up in fiery debate on the separate quota proposals of the Federation of British Industries, the proposal from which John Maxwell and the Ostrers dissociated themselves.

The F.B.I. have now secured a surprise ally, though on principle rather than on detail, in the American renters here.

The Americans have cast a thunderbolt into the exhibitors' camp by writing to Mr. Stanley telling him that they are not opposed to the separate quota in principle, though they are critical of the London scheme in detail.

It is their contention that the scheme is based on a fundamental truth, that it is the duty of the British producer to provide the British exhibitor with films, and the duty of new legislation to assist that process. They object, nonetheless, to being penalized in the process. The ultimate effect of the separate quota plan, it is alleged, is to place the production industry on a self supporting basis.

That being so, they would be willing to agree to a ten per cent quota on a diminishing scale, diminishing, that is, as there came no further need for it.

The first step, they insist, is the reduction of renters' quota during the transition period, with its ultimate abolition.

It is, however, dubious whether a separate quota clause would pass the Stanley Committee; certainly it is not likely that it would have his approval, which in the long run amounts to the same thing. That the President of the Board of Trade is greatly persuaded by the exhibitor point of view is obvious.

In a form deliberately similar to the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association memorandum opposing separate quotas, the FBI have circularized members of Parliament and of course members of the Films Bill Committee, with a new statement of their case.

Answer Exhibitors

The memorandum signed also by the labor unions, answers the exhibitors point by point. They claim that the plan

1. Will not increase quickies because the cost clause prevents this.
2. Will encourage production because there will be a protected market.
3. Does not interfere with reciprocity, which is already covered in the Act.
4. Is opposed only by producers with exhibitor interests.
5. Mathematically ensures that exhibitors would have plenty of films to choose from.
6. Is important because it has labor backing as well as their own.

Rallying now, in a penultimate attempt to obtain protection for their efforts, are the producers of documentary shorts and educationals. A deputation representative of these interests, and including members of teachers' trade unions, and producers of church films, lectured the Strabolgi group last week and claimed that they needed protection just as badly as the makers of entertainment pictures.

Ask Equal Treatment

A memorandum presented by Bruce Woolfe, chief of Gaumont British Instructional, and John Grierson, local documentary producer, pointed out that unless there were profits made on documentary films there would be no money to make films for the schoolroom. They asked for equal quota treatment to be given to long films and short.

An increasing body of opinion in financial circles, some of which have the ear of the Government, insists in the daily press that without American cooperation there is little future for the British production industry. The Financial Times, leading city organ in Britain, concluded a sane and serious series of articles by insisting that the industry alone can save itself, and not Parliament.

The question of the relations of the Dominions with new quota legislation was raised by Labor member Harry Day in the House.

Mr. Day sought to discover whether the Dominions had been consulted, and if so, what were their views.

It transpired, however, in the answer given by the Government spokesman, Mr. Macdonald, that the White Paper on new legislation as well as report of the Moyne Committee had been sent to the Dominions, but no observation had been received from them on either document.

Dominion legislation, of course, is no concern of the British Parliament.

The Amendments to the Bill already tabled now covers 200 pages of closely printed foolscap.

Charity Tax

During July, August and September exhibitors in the Middlesex area yielded £5,111 ($25,555) in the shape of a charity tax on the Sunday opening of cinemas in the county. This shows an increase of £30 over the same period last year.

Command Show Issue

The question of the Command Performance, which this year, as already recorded in the HERALD, seriously affected box office takings, is to be discussed by the General Council of the CEA.

Since the Royal variety show was held numerous calls for action have been heard in the G.H.Q. of the Assaciation, from branches all over the country.

shadows, many believe, an ultimate national agreement on wages and hours in picture houses.

The statement issued by the CEA made it clear that the Association only recognized the labor union as the legitimate one with which exhibitors should conduct negotiations and conclude agreements. Local districts are under no obligation to follow any particular policy. But provision has been made, the statement adds, for local and national conciliation machinery to be set up.

Recent round tables over the quota act have doubtlessly hastened the expression of goodwill.

Indicates Reorganization

Reorganization of Capitol Film Corp., Ltd., of which Max Schach is the chief figure and managing director, is foreshadowed in changes in the board of directors.

S. Bayliss Smith has replaced Major H. A. Proctor as chairman of the board and Mr. Schach has been named as director of all production. Mr. Smith is a prominent figure in Aldgate Trustees, a financial group which was instrumental in financing Capitol Film.

News Theatre Finance

Following the revolt of shareholders at the recent meeting of Capital and Provincial Theatres, British news theatre circuit, an offer for the purchase of 51 per cent of the shares has been made.

The offer comes from a business man, John Diamond of Shell Mex House, who is willing to pay 1/3 for the 5/— shares, and will, in return, provide working capital to the extent of £10,000.

At the annual meeting the shareholders had refused to adopt the report and accounts, pending investigation by an independent committee of shareholders.

The offer is conditional upon acceptance by holders in respect of at least 35 per cent of the issued capital.

French To Produce 150 Films Next Year

About 150 pictures will be produced in France next year as compared to 125 this year, according to Paul Graetz, president of Paris Export Film. There are about thirty independent companies working in France, he said, and the tendency is to make quality rather than quantity pictures.

Nesbitt Signed by MGM

John Nesbitt, radio commentator, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to write and narrate a series of short subjects based on material used in his radio broadcast. The first release, "The Man Who Would Not Die," will be produced by Jack Chertok and directed by Jacques Tourneur. The contract with Mr. Nesbit gives MGM complete screen rights to about 7,000,000 words of story material used by Mr. Nesbitt is more than 500 broadcasts.

Arthur Loew, foreign head for Loew's, will sail on the Normandie December 26th for a five-month trip through Europe.

Joan Castle, a child actress in motion pictures eight years ago, was signed last week to a long term contract by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Manitoba Censor Board To Review 16mm. Films

In response to the protests of film exchanges and theatre owners who had encountered opposition from a fresh source in performances at churches and other places of film programs made up of amateur and other films of the 16mm. size, the board of motion picture censors of Manitoba, Canada, has put into effect a regulation requiring the censorship of all films secured from photographic stores as is the case for all standard theatre prints. The regular censor fee of $2 per reel has been tacked on as well, except in the case of pictures taken by an amateur with his own camera which are exempt from censorship.

The result is that photographic supply houses in Winnepeg have closed their so called film rental libraries which boasted as many as 300 subjects in the 16 mm. size, including a considerable number of reissues of standard productions.

French Censorship Rigidity Increased

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

A decided increase in the rigidity of French censorhip regulations has been made effective by the Ministry of National Education and transmitted to the French Syndical Chamber of Film Producers through the director of the censor board, Edmond See.

Approval will be denied without question to films: having a tendency to ridicule the army or damaging to its prestige; liable to shock the national sentiments of foreigners, thus possibly leading to diplomatic incidents; showing armed attacks and any similar criminal action which might have a harmful influence on youth.

In exceptional cases approval will be granted to war films, which have been on the increase recently, and all films based on military or police activities. It will be necessary for producers to submit scripts before production on all films planned which have reference to national institutions, defense and like subject matter.

American interests fear a considerable increase in the number of imported films will be banned, while French producers are particularly disturbed by the new regulations, in the sense that they may have the effect of requiring pre-production censorship.

Reorganize Avramenko

Avramenko Film Productions, Inc., has been reorganized and the name changed to Ukrafilm Corporation. The company plans to produce musicals in this country for the European market and the schedule calls for three features, "Katerina," "Christmas Eve" and the opera "Mazepa." The pictures are to be made at the Producers' Service Studios, Ridgefield, N. J., under the supervision of Michael J. Gann.

Rocky Mount Dance Set

The Rocky Mountain Screen Club will hold a dinner dance December 28th, at the Cosmopolitan Hotel, Denver. Chet Bell, Dave Cockrill and Ross Bluck are in charge of the arrangements.

Legion Reviews 1,271 Features

A total of 1,271 domestic and foreign films have been reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in the period from February, 1936, to November, 1937 inclusive. The compiled list is to be issued in booklet form this week.

Under the Motion Picture Bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, of which Mrs. James F. Looram is chairman, 780, or 61% of the number of pictures seen were rated Class A or "unobjectionable for general patronage consideration." Some 380, or 30% of the total, were found to be suitable for the Class A, Section II category, as "unobjectionable for adults." Films found to be "objectionable in part" and placed in Class B category numbered 98, or 8%, while 13, or 1%, were "condemned" under Class C section. In all, 1,043 domestic and 228 foreign productions, in 13 foreign languages were seen. The compilation of the results was made under the direction of the Rev. John J. McClafferty, Executive Secretary for the Legion.

Six domestic and seven foreign features were in the Class C group, all released by independent distributors. The "condemned" pictures were, for the most part, so called "sex" or "clinical" films.

Of 11 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week seven were approved for general patronage, three for adults, and classed one as objectionable in part. The new pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Aus Liebe zum Vaterland" (German), "Beg, Borrow or Steal," "45 Fathers," "Frontier Town," "Jalisco Nunca Pierde" (Spanish), "Mr. Boggs Steps Out," "The Singing Outlaw." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Big Town Girl," "Meet Miss Mozart," "Nothing Sacred." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "El Baul Macabro" (Spanish).

Brylawski Club Barker

A. Julian Brylawski, Warner Brothers, last week was elected chief barker of the Washington Variety Club for 1938. Mr. Brylawski succeeds Carter Barron. Others elected were: A. L. Lichtman, Lichtman circuit, first assistant chief barker; Sidney B. Lust, Lust Theatres, second assistant chief barker; Arthur De Titta, Fox Movietone News, secretary, and Sam Galanty, Columbia, reelected for the fourth successive year as treasurer.

Republic Deal Closed

Morris Goodman, Republic vice-president in charge of foreign sales, has closed a deal with British Empire Films, Ltd., Sydney, for distribution of Republic product in Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania. The company is a subsidiary of Greater Union Theatres of Australia.

Bans Lobby Material

The Denver Fire Department has banned all inflammable easles and displays in lobbies and foyers, and all silk banners flying from marquees in all Denver houses.

Express Company To Boost "Fargo"

A comprehensive exploitation tie-up for the Frank Lloyd production, "Wells Fargo," based on the modern descendant of the picture's subject has been arranged by Paramount with the Railway Express Agency. The picture is based on the pioneer days of express service.

Arrangements for the tie-up were made by Hal Danson, under the supervision of Alec Moss, of the Paramount Pictures home office advertising and exploitation department. For Railway Express, N. P. Ballou, assistant to the president, and K. N. Merritt, general sales manager, handled details.

Starting the day after Christmas, the Railway Express Company will unfurl a national poster campaign on its fleet of 10,000 trucks. This poster, in full color, will be exhibited in two and four-sheet sizes. In addition, special 25 x 33-inch window cards in color carrying a picture of a pony express rider and modern Railway Express service and bearing copy on "Wells Fargo" have been prepared for Railway Express offices and for displays in front of theatres.

Special giveaway folders, selling "Wells Fargo" with copy and art, are to be had at all Paramount Picture Exchanges where they will be available to theatre men free of charge for local playdate imprinting. Distribution is partly through Railway Express offices and by all delivering and pick-up calls.

Railway Express, operating spot radio programs in many key cities, will broadcast information regarding the picture and theatres playing the picture in these cities will receive full credit.

In all of its national newspaper advertising, Railway Express will make mention of "Wells Fargo." Full publicity with attractive art will appear in issues of "The Express Messenger," Railway Express house organ and the January issue of this publication will feature a special cover design dedicated to the film.

National Board Names 2 Members

The Rev. John F. Kelly of the Church of the Transfiguration, Brooklyn, and John M. Loughran, principal of the Samuel J. Tildon High School, have been elected as members of the general committee of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

"The board welcomes Father Kelly to its membership," Wilton A. Barrett, executive secretary of the board, said, "because of his wide background and experience, which includes an interest in motion pictures, particularly as they are regarded by young people. Mr. Loughran's election follows his sponsoring in the Samuel J. Tildon High School last year of a parent-teacher study course in motion pictures in which the National Board of Review assisted."

Talent Studios Formed

Associated Talent Studios, Inc., has been formed in Seattle. The studio plans the establishment of a school for instruction in broadcasting and public address work, motion picture sound recording, and radio program preparation. Facilities are available for production of short subjects for advertising and publicity purposes.

BEST YEAR SINCE 1930, HOYTS CIRCUIT REPORTS

Trading Profit Increases One-Third, While Expenses Drop; Theatres Modernized

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

The best financial year for Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., since 1930 is reflected by the company's balance sheet of June 30th, as announced this week. After providing for all taxation and depreciation and other charges the company's surplus stands at £81,305 ($406,525), compared with £61,088 in the previous year.

Trading profit shows an increase of £20,217, or approximately 33.5 per cent by comparison with 1935-36. Expenses and taxation show a reduction from £339,650 to £330,690. The sum of £46,500 was required for dividends of 6 per cent on "A" preference shares and 5 per cent on "B" preference shares.

The report says that the policy of expansion and consolidation of the company has been continued. New theatres were erected in Albury, New South Wales, and in conjunction with affiliated companies in Hartwell, Victoria, and Goulburn, N. S. W., all of which have shown satisfactory results. Since July 1, additional new theatres have been opened at Brunswick, Victoria, and Balmain, N. S. W., and in each case gratifying returns are being achieved, the directors report.

Directors have undertaken expensive modernizing plans in conformity with their policy of keeping the theatres comfortable and uptodate. Much of this work has been completed, but there still remains a number of theatres where renovations are to be made. It is proposed to continue this work in the current financial year. A complete reconditioning program is being carried out in the Olympic Theatre Circuit, Bondi, N. S. W., in which the company is interested.

The company does not at present propose to fill the vacancy on the board created by the decision of Stanley S. Crick, chairman of directors, not to be a candidate for re-election.

Epidemic Still Halts Matinees

The infantile paralysis epidemic continues to average seven or eight cases a day in Melbourne suburban areas. Meanwhile theatre business is suffering its most serious reverse since the bubonic plague of 1920 caused a complete shutdown of theatres for several weeks.

If accompanied by adults, children now are permitted to attend either city or suburban theatres, but Saturday afternoon suburban matinees are still cancelled and there is no saying when they will be resumed. A decision by the Exhibitors Association to resume them in suburbs where schools had been reopened, and where no cases had been reported for at least four weeks, met with a strong protest by the Consultive Council on the disease and the association had no option but to rescind its decision.

In its statement the council said that it regarded the gathering of young children at matinees a very real source of danger of spreading infection. Unless theatre proprietors altered their decision, the council said it would be forced to consider a recommendation to the Government that matinees be prohibited by an order-in-council.

Replying to this statement, the association said it had no desire to defy the council, but it pointed out that matinees in all suburbs had been suspended for nine weeks and in some for nearly 12 weeks. The association therefore again emphasized its claim for compensation on behalf of its members, since they had directly suffered far more than any other section of the business community.

Subsequently the Victorian premier (Mr. Dunstan) said the Government had no intention of compensating exhibitors who had been forced to close their matinees during the epidemic.

Publications Merge

Announcement is made of the immediate unification of forces of the two Australian trade journals, Everyones and The Film Weekly. The board of directors of Film Weekly has been reconstituted to allow for representation of shareholders of Everyones, and the staff of Everyones will combine with Film Weekly in producing a new and enlarged publication.

Everyones has been a vigorous force in the affairs of the motion picture industry here for the last 15 years. Its contemporary, Film Weekly, has had a younger life, but one filled with promise. The other medium in the trade newspaper field in Australia is Exhibitors' Monthly, the official mouthpiece of the various independent exhibitors' associations throughout the Commonwealth.

After 21 years with the company, Arthur Gregory, general sales manager, has tendered his resignation from Twentieth Century-Fox for reasons of ill health. Ernest Turnbull, formerly in charge of the activities of British Dominion Films here and now with Gaumont British, is reported likely to succeed to the post.

Labor Boycott Threatened

Threats to boycott theatres which employ non-union labor have been made in Adelaide by the Theatrical Employees Association. Unless an amicable settlement soon is reached with the employers, the Union declares it will ask the public not to patronize theatres which have been blacklisted. Union spokesmen say that some suburban theatre-owners are employing non-unionists at wages far below award rates. It is their intention to apply to the Arbitration Court for application of the award to all theatre proprietors.

Vaudeville Return Indicated

Reintroduction of overseas headline vaudeville acts in picture houses is seen as a major development here for 1938. The Snider and Dean management has been experimenting successfully, though spasmodically, with "big-time" acts in its first-release theatres for some time and is now on the lookout for suitable acts with which to extend the policy. Hoyts also is dickering for overseas talent, and Greater Union Theatres is unofficially interested.

Opinion among the circuit executives is that acts must be really top notch to mean anything at the box office. This belief is strengthened by the statement made by Charles E. Munro, managing director of Hoyts, who says that his company is not interested in a cut-and-dried "combination" policy, but is ready to play genuine headliners.

"My company is anxious to play the big stars," he said, "and we have already made quite a lot of progress in this regard as far as future bookings are concerned, but we are not interested in the ordinary routine acts. This is not a departure from our present policy, for we have been negotiating during the past four months for some important people.

"Next year will see the appearance of quite a number of international stars on our circuit. It is my belief the combination of screen attractions and personalities of world-wide reputation will give added impetus, from time to time, to our business. The people who will be coming from abroad will be heralded by Australian-wide publicity campaigns."

Paramount Distributing "Camino"

Paramount Pictures Corporation last week announced that it has taken for world distribution, Mexico and the United States excepted, the Grovas-Mexican production, "Amapola del Camino," starring Tito Guizar. Paramount also signed Guizar for a role in "Big Broadcast of 1938."

Court Expedites Roxy Fee Action

In an effort to speed final adjustment of fees for attorneys and committees in the Roxy theatre reorganization Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey announced that he was issuing a series of opinions dealing with each application for a fee, as he decided it. Two opinions rendered Monday revealed that Judge Caffey "would resort to apportionment" because applications for allowances were more than double the amount available.

Exact figures were revealed Monday were $636,788 in applications with $287,000 on hand. The claim of Carl Erikson for brokerage fees amounting to $50,952 was formally expunged. Clarence Bonynge, official stenographer, was allowed $5,063 and Barrow, Wade and Guthrie, accountants, were allowed $6,934.

Decision was reserved on a request for an additional $6,500 by the accountants. A number of attorneys for bondholders' committees were allowed $1,763 as disbursements.

Hart $185,000 Suit Against UA Dismissed

An action brought by William S. Hart and Mary Hart, operating under the name William S. Hart Company against United Artists for alleged withholding by the latter of $185,000, alleged to be due them as their share of the gross accrued from the distribution of the film "Tumbleweed," was dismissed last week by Federal Judge John W. Clancy in New York.

The Harts had claimed that United Artists had blockbooked their picture with "Wild Justice," and, as a result, the revenue they claim was due them was cut down. The Harts still have another suit pending in the amount of $500,000 against United Artists in supreme court, which is not affected by Judge Clancy's ruling.

MGM, Fox Awarded $6,750 In Short Subject Action

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer Corporation, MGM Distributing Corporation, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, together with three of the latter's subsidiaries, were award $6,750 in an action against Benjamin M. Rossassy, president of C and F Amusement Corporation, operators of the Adelphi theatre, Brooklyn. The defendant was charged with showing short subjects during extra time for which they had not been contracted in violation of the copyright law.

Twentieth Century-Fox received $4,500 and MGM $2,250 from two juries before which the cases were tried, in Federal court in New York. Mr. Rossassy, according to the plaintiffs, exhibited Terry-Toons on eighteen occasions without having contracted for them and Happy Harmonies on six occasions. The defendant, it was said, could have rented the films for some $9 for the extra time showings.

B & K Employees Elect Bruder

Roy Bruder, manager of the Chicago theatre, Chicago, is the newly elected president of the Balaban and Katz Employees Association. R. C. McMullen, Granada theatre, is vice-president in charge of welfare activities. Ben Bloomfield of the Oriental is vice-president in charge of entertainment and Earl Truelich of the Century is vice-president in charge of athletics. E. C. Trunk of the headquarters staff was reelected treasurer, and Mabel Meyers, secretary.

9 'Stella Dallas' Campaigns Picked By U.A., Herald

Nine theatre exploitation men shared the $1,025 in prizes offered by United Artists, in association with the Motion Picture Herald, for the best local publicity campaign on Samuel Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas." The final judging was completed Monday by a committee composed of George J. Schaefer, A. W. Smith, Jr., and Monroe Greenthal, of United Artists; Ben Washer, representing Mr. Goldwyn; Terry Ramsaye, editor of Motion Picture Herald, and A-Mike Vogel, editor of the Herald's Managers' Round Table Club.

Ray Bell, of the Palace Theatre, Washington, D. C., won first prize of $500, Marsline K. Moore, of the Hollywood Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, took second prize of $200, and Charles Schlaifer, of the United Artists and Embassy theatres, San Francisco, Calif., was awarded third prize of $100.

Other winners were Ray O'Connell, Capitol Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., fourth; Joseph A. Di Pesa, of Loew's State, and Orpheum theatres, Boston, Mass., fifth; and Harry MacDonald, of the Warner Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., sixth, each of whom won $50. Harry Rubin, of the Tivoli Theatre, Michigan City, Ind., won the $25 seventh prize.

Because the campaigns of Bill Saxton, of Loew's Century, Baltimore, and Sidney Gates, of the Gates Theatre, Portsmouth, Va., were considered of equal calibre by the judges, they were declared tied for eighth place and an extra prize was added, each receiving $25.

Theatre men from all parts of the country competed in the contest, a total of 568 entries having been received and considered by the judges.

Meyer Returns to Coast

Dr. Herbert Meyer of C. King Charney, Inc., returned to Hollywood last week from the Agfa factory in Binghamton, N. Y., where he spent several weeks preparing for distribution of a new Superspeed negative.

Film Gets Added Bookings

"Green Fields," first Yiddish motion picture produced by Collective Film Producers, Inc., has been booked into six Loew's houses in the New York area in addition to the five in which it already has been shown.

The picture also has been booked by RKO for the Yorktown, Midtown and Empire.

OBITUARIES

Ralph Lewis Dead on Coast

Ralph Lewis, pioneer actor of the silent screen, died Saturday in Los Angeles from injuries suffered in an automobile accident on October 24th. He was 65. Mr. Lewis was injured when his automobile collided with a car driven by Abdul Maljan, valet and trainer for Jack Warner, vice-president in charge of production for Warner Brothers.

Mr. Lewis started in motion pictures in 1912 and three years later achieved recognition as the club-footed statesman, Stoneman, in "The Birth of a Nation."

Other pictures in which he appeared were "The Avenging Conscience," "Conquering Power," "The Girl in the Glass Cage," "Sucker Money," "Riot Squad," "Mystery Liner," "The Lost City" and "Behind the Green Lights."

He is survived by his widow, Vera Lewis.

Sues on Koster Contract

A suit for $30,000 agent's commission against Henry Koster, Universal director, brought by Ernest Wiesenberg, a Viennese agent, was revealed in New York supreme court Saturday when Justice Peter Schmuck directed Mr. Koster to furnish a bill of particulars. The agent claims 10 per cent of Mr. Koster's salary up to 1941 and estimates the director's present earnings at $60,000 annually. Mr. Wiesenberg stated his contract with Mr. Koster was made in February, 1936.

Playwright Seeks $610,000

Charging plagiarism of her play, "Little Boy Blew In," in the Hal Roach picture "Nobody's Baby," Maud Clement Peddell has instituted suit in Los Angeles against Hal Roach, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox West Coast and a number of John Does, representing writers. She has asked for $10,000 damages and $600,000, which, she charges, is the profit of the picture.

Roach Demurrer Overruled

W. Turney Fox, superior court judge in Los Angeles, overruled a demurrer filed by Hal Roach in the $30,000 damage action instituted against him by Dr. Renato Senise. The plaintiff charges he contracted with Mr. Roach to act as his agent in Italy to form a company to produce films. No date has been set for trial.

Vocafilm Suit Delayed

Trial of the anti-trust suit of Vocafilm Corporation of America against American Telephone and Telegraph, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., in United States district court in New York has been adjourned to February 7th. Vocafilm asks $65,953,125 damages.

Hico Theatres, Inc., has been incorporated at Cincinnati with 250 no-par shares by A. B. Chrisholm, M. J. Yost and K. Wordeman. The company will take over the Lyric and Rand, at Greenfield, Ohio.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Ambassador

THANKS FOR LISTENING: Pinky Tomlin—Race horse tipsters tell you to string along with their selection and you will win. I have been stringing along with Pinky and he is not going over so I am taking Pinky off a pension. This one drives more out of the theatre than it brings in.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Columbia

COUNSEL FOR CRIME: Otto Kruger, Jacqueline Wells—A fair picture and a fair business. Played November 17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace, Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

END OF THE TRAIL: Jack Holt, Louise Henry—We ran into the heaviest early winter snow storm in years, so business was correspondingly affected. Our patrons enjoy Jack Holt, but they did not like the ending of this feature. Played November 20.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HEROES OF THE RANGE: Ken Maynard—Another western, but no such following as in "Strawberry Roan." They still like Ken.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman—One of the biggest and best pictures that has ever come out of Hollywood, with a near perfect cast and directing. The picture is not a small-town picture, consequently business is just fair, but I am not sorry that I ran it, and if you can get them in, you can rest assured that they will come out satisfied. Running time, 118 minutes. Played November 21-23.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman—Hit this hard with plenty of advertising and the box office will show the results. If Columbia could give us more like this one what a grand thing it would be. No call for double features if they would. Running time, 118 minutes. Played November 14-16.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

RANGER COURAGE: Bob Allen, Martha Tibbetts—Good enough western, and if it wasn't for these, we couldn't pay the rent.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHEN YOU'RE IN LOVE: Grace Moore, Cary Grant, Aline MacMahon—Excellent, but owing to bad weather our business was disappointing. Played November 17-18.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—This is Joan's picture and she's swell in the part. It resulted in fair business. Played November 20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—Pat O'Brien, a typical newspaper editor who answers nine phones at once and slams around the office yelling a hundred orders to the minute, as the he-man, and Joan Blondell, as the he-woman crack reporteress who can knock a man down with her tough little fists; both rush around and bellow at each other in a hackneyed newspaper story of little merit. No one raved, no one growled. Business average.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien.—Plenty of action and comedy and the folks liked it. It is noisy, but it is the kind that most of the small towns like.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Joan Blondell, Pat O'Brien—Good newspaper story with good stars and suspense. Running time, 85 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CONFESSION: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter—The same sordid pictures which Kay Francis seems to specialize in. Being a Catholic town we played up the confession angle and enjoyed increased business, bringing in divided opinions.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

> Rockefeller Center, New York

DANCE, CHARLIE, DANCE: Stuart Erwin, Jean Muir—I double featured this one, but it is plenty good for a single bill. Stuart Erwin, as the small town rube who takes the city slickers to the cleaners, is a scream. Then, entire cast is good, good story and an all around good feature. Running time, 64 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

EVER SINCE EVE: Marion Davies, Robert Montgomery, Patsy Kelly—This is a fair show, but it took a nose dive here that left me gasping for breath. Marion Davies and Bob Montgomery are both washed up here. They give a fair performance, but for some reason do not click. Patsy Kelly and Allen Jenkins are both good. Don't quite know what was the reason, but it certainly flopped. Running time, 79 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PENROD AND SAM: Billy Mauch, Henry Watson—Booth Tarkington's story is here given an ultra-modern aspect. We doubt he would recognize the characters so changed are their surroundings. Except for the kid trade, this was a poor drawing card. Played November 20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell—It is a natural. Plenty of clever stuff and Flynn and Blondell good in the roles of the perfect man and the gal that knows what is good for him.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TALENT SCOUT: Donald Woods, Jeanne Madden—Just a programer that will get by. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THAT CERTAIN WOMAN: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda—Played this on bargain night and it drew extra business. It is a good show.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

Grand National

ARIZONA DAYS: Tex Ritter, Eleanor Stewart—A very good western with plenty of action and a story that pleased all. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BETWEEN TWO WOMEN: Franchot Tone, Maureen O'Sullivan, Virginia Bruce—The picture is O. K., but it did not draw.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—What else can you hope for but a swell show with these two as leads and being supported by as carefully selected a cast as MGM put in this one. It is tops in anybody's language. The final scenes with the old time fighters and wrestlers bring back fond memories. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BIG CITY: Luise Rainer, Spencer Tracy—The first Metro I have played for several years. Had heard that "Big City" wasn't so hot.. Was pleasantly surprised as this is a really fine production and entertainment all the way. Many fine comments. Here is a Sunday show with plenty of action and suitable for all classes.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

BRIDE WORE RED, THE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone—Joan Crawford is no bet here and at the rental Metro gets for this, the engagement was a washout for us. Why don't they forget this star and make pictures with pretty girls who can act, then sell them for what they are worth at the box office, not on what they did when business was business. Played November 14-16.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BRIDE WORE RED, THE: Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone, Robert Young—An awfully poor title for a pretty fair picture. The audience isn't convinced of the affection between Crawford and Tone upon which the picture depends for its denouement. A changed title would probably help it to do better business. Played November 21-23.—R. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Robert Taylor, Eleanor Powell, Buddy Ebsen, Judy Garland—Good musical. Did extra business and pleased.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Ind. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor—Eleanor Powell's first picture put Frances Langford and Buddy Ebsen in pictures, and this one puts Judy Garland in for sure. This "Broadway Melody" won't do as much business as the previous ones, but it is still a good enough picture. Played October 31-November 1-2.—R. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore—A swell picture to extra poor business. Any story of the sea is a bad bet for my town. We have had so little rain out here, I guess folks are afraid of getting sea sick.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

EMPEROR'S CANDLESTICKS, THE: William Powell, Luise Rainer—Two great stars cast in a fine story. The flaw is that the cash customers do not like costume pictures and it is hard to get them out. However, this picture pleased very well on a Bank Night. Played October 27.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

EMPEROR'S CANDLESTICKS, THE: William Powell, Luise Rainer—Good show of its kind, but the worst Saturday business I have had for a year. No draw at all for me.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

FAMILY AFFAIR, A: Lionel Barrymore, Cecilia Parker—These are another Jones family series being developed by Metro and think they are going to be very popular for double bills if they continue to be as good as this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Alan Jones, Jeanette MacDonald—The action is far too slow and as a result the picture is far too long. The picture obviously cost a lot to produce, but probably won't get it all back.—R. B. Hipple, Biju Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

MAYTIME: Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald—Swell picture. No complaints. Give us more musicals like this one and musicals will be back on top as a drawing card. Running time, 132 minutes. Played November 21-23.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

NOBODY'S BABY: Patsy Kelly, Lyda Roberti, Lynne Overman—Double featured this one and it kept them laughing from start to finish. Lyda Roberti is very good Not much of a story, but it handed them a good laugh and that's what they want. Running time, 67 minutes. Played November 13-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—Good entertainment. Seemed to please everyone as there was no knockers. Running time, 88 minutes. Played November 12-13.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

ROMEO AND JULIET: Leslie Howard, Norma

Shearer—Swell picture but too heavy for a small town. Got local study club to sponsor it. Everything came out O. K Running time, 124 minutes. Played November 17-18.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

SARATOGA: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow—This is not the great production that it is supposed to be. The race track story does not merit the great stars in the cast. The editing of the picture and photography of the substitute star is very good. Played October 25-26.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Cary Grant—They don't make them much more crazy than this, but there are plenty of laughs and the picture pleased. Did not draw very well.—W. H Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BLONDE TROUBLE: Johnny Downs, Eleanore Whitney—A very good team, Johnny Downs and Eleanore Whitney, are wasted in this cheap production. Miss Whitney, who dances so well, was only seen briefly throughout the picture. Nor did she dance or did Johnny sing except for a song he wasn't supposed to be able to really sing. Very disappointing. Played November 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BLONDE TROUBLE: Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs—Played it on a double bill. It will get by, but is not very good.—W. H Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND COMES BACK: John Howard, John Barrymore—A good picture to poor results. Played November 16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—The best so far this year from Paramount. Played to nice business and everyone seemed more than satisfied.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—If this picture cost Paramount what they say it did, all that I can say is that they were gypped. It is just a super colossal picture that has too much length and one of those that reaches for heroics. The running of the pipe line had too many shots in it and slowed the picture down at that point. The action that went with the picture saved it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—We always try to comment on a picture on our own reaction and not box office receipts. We have had several picture that were knockouts, but did not draw to our audiences. This picture's audience reaction was only fair. The box office was no better than a program picture. Personally, we think it is the worst ever put out by a producer for an "A" picture. The story was nothing and the editing was worse. How Miss Dunne could drive from Harrisburg to Titusville in a horse and buggy in twelve hours is beyond all comprehension, and then have the circus arrive on the same day caused a laugh from the audience. It would have made a good western fifteen years ago, but with the public movie-wise, it does not go at this date. Cannot suggest where to play it, but think if your audiences like action pictures, a Friday-Saturday date is best as there is not enough "high-brow" entertainment to hurt it. Running time, 105 minutes.—A J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young—We played this rather late, but it is a most satisfactory production. Everybody pleased. Business fair. Played November 24-25.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LAST TRAIN FROM MADRID: Dorothy Lamour, Lew Ayres—Although the Spanish war is not as popular with the people, we enjoyed very satisfactory business, but would like to see Dorothy Lamour in another "Jungle Princess."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE: William Boyd, George Hayes—A good western but only fair gross. Played November 13.—L. A Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SHE ASKED FOR IT: William Gargan, Orien Heyward—It's hard to get excited over this unimportant little picture. At the box office it registered poor. While we got no complaints, we did at the same time feel that maybe we'd gypped a small number of our patrons, for this isn't the sort of thing they are glad to pay money to see. Played November 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SOPHIE LANG GOES WEST: Gertrude Michael—A very minor effort in what should have been a good series of detective yarns. On its own, it had nothing to attract the cash customers, but our other attractions turned in a fair gross. Played November 10.—L. A Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SOPHIE LANG GOES WEST: Gertrude Michael, Larry Crabbe—An out and out "Dog." Poorest picture I have played in my new theatre to date. If you have to play it, be out of town at the time.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft, Frances Dee—Undoubtedly a fine production, but the brutality of several scenes is far from pleasing to most women patrons. Most of the men will, however, thoroughly enjoy this. Did not do quite average Sunday business.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

THIS WAY PLEASE: Charles Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable, Mary Livingstone—Mary Livingstone will not disappoint your patrons. At least she pleased mine. Her gags went over on the screen just as well as on the radio. She does a good job and the only regrets my patrons had were: Why wasn't Jack in it with her? Of course that is something to look forward to Box office was tops along with Paramount's biggest.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

THUNDER TRAIL: Gilbert Roland, Marsha Hunt—Better than usual western. Strong production. Running time, 53 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WILD MONEY: Edward Everett Horton—It did all right as the other half of a double bill, but much too weak for anything but a bargain night. Played November 20.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small time patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA GUNFIGHTER: Bob Steele, Jean Carmen—Bob Steele is a favorite with our patrons He always draws well and this one pleased above average. Bob's pictures seem to pack more action than some western stars and that is what the Saturday fans want. Played October 23.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

GUN RANGER, THE: Bob Steele, Eleanor Stewart—Good western. Steele popular.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GUNS AND GUITARS: Gene Autry, Dorothy Dix, Smiley Burnette—Fine. I wish Republic would put Lew Childre, "The Boy from Alabam'," in one of these Autrys. He'd be fiine for western fans. What about it, Republic? Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PARADISE EXPRESS: Grant Withers, Dorothy Appleby—Good picture for my town on Bargain Night. —Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

ROARIN' LEAD: Robert Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune—Fine series. What happened to Syd Saylor? He was good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RKO-Radio

BREAKFAST FOR TWO: Barbara Stanwyck, Herbert Marshall—Some came on the strength of Stanwyck's "Stella Dallas." A non-consequental and minor farce (often bordering on the slapstick) with Herbert Marshall ruthlessly miscast and the talented Miss Stanwyck wasted and powerless in a lean role. Eric Blore, with the aid of a Great Dane, not only steals the show, but managed to keep potential walkouts in their seats for its fortunately brief duration. Business average.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

FLIGHT FROM GLORY: Chester Morris, Whitney Bourne—Just a programer that gets by nicely. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Joe Penner, Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard, Victor Moore, Helen Broderick—A number of walkouts kept me scurrying for the haven of shadows, but what I saw and heard of the film and the audience reaction made me marvel at what little humor it takes to make the public laugh. Joe Penner and Parkyakarkus fought a losing battle to save an ironically titled story from being a decidedly mediocre piece of work. Victor Moore, instead of (as he has been) funny and lovable, being pathetic, was pathetic being funny; and the rest of the cast (definitely including Gene Raymond) were unconvincing and annoying in their flimsy roles. Business below average.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—A little above normal business helped materially by good weather. Joe E. Brown's pictures always please the family trade and this was no exception. Played November 27.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SHALL WE DANCE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Edward Everett Horton—Not quite up to previous attractions by this pair. However, should rate a little above average screen fare. The big mystery to me is why this holds my low gross, with weather and other conditions ideal for good business. Also checked nine walkouts on the two nights we played this. Played the week following "Sophie Lang Goes West," same days, and this did even less than "Sophie."—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, Tony Martin, Roland Young, June Lang—Good show, but didn't pull enough to show a profit. Fox gets plenty of dough for their product, which is head and shoulders above any other producers, but if they cost too much, why run them? If you can get them in, they'll get a lot of laughs, but we didn't get them in and I don't know why. Played November 10-12.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronge.

ANGEL'S HOLIDAY: Jane Withers, Robert Kent—Jane Withers really goes to town in this one. She has a chance to do some real acting, and certainly makes good. Fair story and good cast, especially "Gramp," played by Al Lydell. Pleased. Running time, 71 minutes. Played November 10-11.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

HANDY ANDY (Re-Issue): Will Rogers—Will Rogers repeat, and went good.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

HANDY ANDY (Re-Issue): Will Rogers—Did considerably above average mid-week business with this and pleased everyone. A dandy story with the greatest of all characters at the helm.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple—The best this little star has made for a long, long time and it satisfied, but the drawing power of other Temple pictures was lacking and in a big way. Fox collects much too much rental for these, and while the picture pleased those that saw it, I would not advise paying a big rental to get it, because the picture won't pay rental and running expenses. Played November 17-19.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers, Joan Davis, Tony Martin, Nat Pendleton—As may be expected with these maniacs, nothing makes sense. A slim story for the antics of the Ritzs'. About fifty per cent thought it a knockout and the others were not so sure. They just have about one line and the songs may be different, but they are typed too strong to last, in my opinion. In medium doses, in support, it may be a different story, but to carry a feature with them headed, I think not. I may be wrong, but I am judging from the audience reaction of being so divided. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—This picture is a gooey love story of divorce and the reunion that did not have a single idea in the press sheet to put over a picture like this that is whipped from the start. The mats had nothing but "Their Love is News Again," and that line of guff for a hard-bitten rural town. That stuff like this gags them, and take it from me, it will take some selling to get any business which was lacking here.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—Swell picture. Pleased all and did a little extra business.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Joan Davis—Used this mid-week instead of on a Sunday change, as I wanted an early date. Many said better than "One in a Million." Anyway, they just don't come better. In spite of a midweek booking, I broke the house record for this.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

THINK FAST, MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Virginia Field—Good show on the "Charlie Chan" order and will do all right on the other half of your double feature.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Ritz Brothers, Don Ameche, Joan Davis—We thought this one of the best musicals we have played this season. It seemed to please those who saw it. Business not up to par, but not the fault of picture. I believe we have had too many productions of above caliber recently. The public is becoming tired of same. Played October 21-22.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Louise Hovick—Good show, but it did not do so well at the box office.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Joan Davis—Not quite as good as I thought it was going to be. And certainly no particular draw at the B. O. Just about average. Too many pictures of this type are being produced.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers, Walter Brennan—Extra good business. The picture is O. K., and the cash customers like Jane Withers.—W. H. Hardmann, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers—The answer to this small town exhibitors' prayer, giving us nice weekend business, with everybody happy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

United Artists

CALL OF THE WILD: Clark Gable, Loretta Young, Jack Oakie—I picked up this more than two years' old show and gave my Saturday night a high gross that still holds for the two months we have been open here. I have always favored a good old show over a current release that is just another 8,000 feet of film.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney—A superb picture that was less than satisfactory from a business standpoint. Played November 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea, Humphrey Bogart—Exceptional show; one of the best this year. Played to better than average business. Should have played later to get benefit of advertising in larger nearby cities that played after I did.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT: Charles Boyer, Jean Arthur—On the strength of Jimmy Fidler's radio comment on "Vogues of 1938," I played this as a substitute for "Vogues." This proved to be a satisfactory exchange, as "History" is a fine show that seemed to go over very well. No kicks even from the low-brows."—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

ROMAN SCANDALS: Eddie Cantor—Never having used this we rather expected better than average business, but it disappointed. Those who came enjoyed it. Played November 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson—Words cannot express the greatness of this feature. When the Academy Awards are given at the end of the year 1937, I believe that Janet Gaynor for her superb acting in this picture should merit the deepest consideration. Filmed in color, this is an exhibitor's dream come true. Box Office in capital letters. Thanks, United Artists. Running time, 110 minutes. Played November 25.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—Excellent and a good attraction at our house. The whole cast plays superbly. Played November 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WALTER WANGER'S VOGUES OF 1938: Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett—Another gorgeous color picture wasted on a far too trivial story. Only fair business. Played November 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

BLACK ACES: Buck Jones—A plumb good western that the chewers and spitters just eat up, the kind that make the big hat boys lay their shekels on the line. Buck Jones is a draw here and we look forward to each new release. Played November 20.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

100 MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Leopold Stokowski, Adolphe Menjou—If Hollywood can get Stokowski and his band for one picture a year like this one the future of symphonic music is secure. A picture you will be proud to play and which will pay for itself. Played November 14-6.—R. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS: Deanna Durbin, Binnie Barnes, Alice Brady, Ray Milland—Universal's find, Deanna Durbin, sure won a place in the hearts of the boys here. A pleasant little picture that is down-to-earth entertainment, with comedy, tears and music. Just the thing for any theatre. The three smart girls, Nan Grey, Barbara Read and Deanna Durbin, stole the picture and turned in stellar performances. This is worth a place in any spot and should be shown by every theatre owner in the country. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 27.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Warner Brothers

GO GETTER, THE: George Brent, Anita Louise, Charles Winninger—I picked this up as a sub for a current release and can say it is a honey. One of the best we have played for some time. Many stopped at the ticket window on the way out with compliments for this unusually fine offering. If you haven't played it, be sure to pick it up.—L. V. Bergtold, New Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

SINGING MARINE, THE: Dick Powell, Doris Weston—Dick Powell and his new partner, Doris Weston, give a very good performance in this one. Story not quite so good as "Flirtation Walk" and "Shipmates Forever," but plenty good at that. A good floor show and dance numbers by Busby Berkeley pep up the show. Larry Adler, champ harmonica player, gives some good numbers and Hugh Herbert gets the usual number of laughs. Running time, 105 minutes. Played November 19-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHITE BONDAGE: Jean Muir, Gordon Oliver—Better than usual programmer. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WINE, WOMEN AND HORSES: Barton MacLane, Ann Sheridan—Not much to it. Was not liked very well.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

Wilcox

THIS'LL MAKE YOU WHISTLE: Jack Buchanan—These English productions will make any exhibitor "whistle," because that's all there is left to do when the people start at you about English pictures.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Columbia

BACK TO THE WOODS: 3 stooges—The best we've seen yet from this trio of favorites.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CANINE CAPERS: Scrappy Cartoons—If there is any excuse for these "Scrappy Cartoons" I cannot decide what it is. They are all terrible.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

CANINE CAPERS: Scrappy Cartoon—Fair cartoon.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

CLOCK GOES 'ROUND AND 'ROUND: Scrappy Cartoons—Just a bit different, but not too good.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: Well, we got the crowd going on this one, and broke the ice. They ate it up.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DRUG STORE FOLLIES: Broadway Follies—Pretty good short that nobody kicked or commented on.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

PLAYING THE PONIES: 3 Stooges—Columbia always comes through with their two-reelers. This is not as good as some of the "Stooges" comedies, but they are still tops.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Educational

BASHFUL BALLERINA: Imogene Coca—Terrible, and that doesn't half describe it.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

GIFTS IN RHYTHM: The Cabin Kids—Great entertainment. The Cabin Kids are very good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Labanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

OZZIE OSTRICH COMES TO TOWN: Terry-Toons—Fair cartoon. Heard a few giggles during the run of this cartoon.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SLACKS APPEAL: Two-Reel Comedies—Good comedy.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLOTTO (RE-ISSUE): Laurel and Hardy—Just as funny as it ever was and worth a playdate. A good comedy is so rare, that these old reissues are a sort of novelty.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

BOSKO AND THE CANNIBALS: Harman-Ising—An excellent color cartoon continuing the "Straight to Grandma's Here I Go" idea that was so effective when Bosko met the Pirates.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CARNIVAL IN PARIS: Musical Comedies—As good as this series has produced to date. Rather than being comedy, though, it would best balance a comedy feature. Ann Rutherford is lovely and looks promising.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang—Good comedy; pleased all.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

GOLF MISTAKES: Pete Smith Specialties—This is okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GRAND BOUNCE, THE: Pete Smith Specialties—This is a good novelty reel. Tells the story of a bad check.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HEARTS ARE THUMPS: Our Gang—If you can hold it off that long, it's a natural for Valentine's Day and it's very acceptable comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JUNGLE JUVENILES: Pete Smith Specialties—A great short that the adults as well as the kids enjoyed. The monkeys drew plenty of laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE JUVENILES: Pete Smith Specialties—Good, as are all of Pete Smith's specialties.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

OLD MILL POND: Harman-Ising—Here's our vote for the best cartoon of the year. If you have not played this one, do so without fail.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

OLYMPIC SKI CHAMPIONS: Pete Smith Specialties—A fine action short.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PENNY WISDOM: Pete Smith Specialties—A very interesting color short, especially for the women, since it presents cooking hints they will best appreciate.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF RADIUM: Pete Smith Specialties—Fine. An educational reel. The history of the discovery of radium climaxed by actual movies of the dangerous and priceless substance. Done with a sense for the dramatic. This short subject combines all the qualities of a feature and is a complete little play in itself.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF RADIUM: Pete Smith Specialties—Very interesting subject.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

SOAK THE POOR: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—As we have always contended, this series of "Crime Doesn't Pay" is the best series put out by any producer, and after seeing this one, we cannot change our opinion. The plot and acting is carefully worked out and is certainly appreciated by the audiences. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOME TIME SOON: Musical Comedies—We sure hope the "Some Time" won't be long coming when Metro decides to drop these socalled musical comedies and produces some real ones. These are flat and dull.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

F. H. RICHARDSON'S BLUEBOOK OF PROJECTION

The sixth edition of F. H. Richardson's Bluebook is now in its second printing, for which it has been extensively revised. In addition to revisions in text, it contains a supplementary chapter devoted to developments which have become important in projection room technique and servicing methods since the first printing.

The revised edition includes 736 pages of up-to-the-minute text, charts and data with detailed description of assembly, wiring and functioning of all modern sound and projection apparatus. It is a practical "trouble shooter," cross indexed for immediate reference in any projection room emergency.

SUNDAY NIGHT AT THE TROCADERO: Musical Comedies—A fair short that could have been much better with some more acts and less Reginald Denny, who certainly isn't funny.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

SWING WEDDING: Happy Harmonies—Good comedy. Seemed to please. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

THREE SMART BOYS: Our Gang—A good comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

BE HUMAN: Betty Boop—Just fair. There are lots better.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FROM THE MINUET TO THE BIG APPLE: Headliners—Ordinary.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 2: (New Series)—Mildly interesting. David Ross tells briefly of the sea pounding on the shores of Nova Scotia, for the highlight of the reel.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

PEEPING PENGUINS: Color Classics—A fair color cartoon. Not up to standard, however.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

QUEENS OF HARMONY: Phil Spitalny and Girl Orchestra—One of the best musicals we have had.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

STRAIGHT AS AN ARROW: Paragraphics—A very interesting short subject on archery. Play it. Advise your hunters to see this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SWING, HUTTON, SWING: Ina Ray Hutton and Orchestra—The young folks like her. Personally think there is too much Hutton and changing of dresses and not enough music.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YOU CAME TO MY RESCUE: Shep Fields and Orchestra—A good Screen Song with the cartoon part that drew plenty of laughs. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO-Radio

GOLF TIMING: Sports with Bill Corum—Interesting to all golfers.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TRAMP TROUBLE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—An excellent domestic comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BONE BENDER PARADE: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Lots of fun and very interesting.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

MOTOR MANIACS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Plenty of thrills in these Adventures.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: Just about the best on the market, and the odd issue is full of football scenes and plenty of sports events.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

MICKEY'S MOVING DAY: Mickey Mouse—A screamingly funny Mickey Mouse, featuring Donald Duck, strange as it seems. Running time, nine minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WOODLAND CAFE: Silly Symphonies—Seemed to please all. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

Universal

HOLLYWOOD SCREEN TEST: Universal Special—Very good, and it will enlighten your patrons in a big way. The steps necessary for a screen test, the test, and the finished shot. Date it on your best night; it will satisfy.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

LOVE SICK: Oswald Cartoons—Not so hot.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MARINE FOLLIES: Mentone Musical Comedies—A good vaudeville reel featuring some top-notch acts in a novel setting. With the exception of the girl singer, these acts all went over in good style. A worthwhile addition to any program. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

REST RESORT: Meany-Miny-Moe Cartoons—Excellent entertainment. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

STEEL WORKERS: Meany-Miny-Moe Cartoons—Best monkey cartoon we have run to date. Running time, nine minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

TEDDY BERGMAN'S INTERNATIONAL BROADCAST: Mentone Musical Comedies—Another Mentone Musical that is tops in entertainment. Every act is excellent and deserves extra advertising by any theatre that plays it. Book it. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Vitaphone

DAY AT SANTA ANITA: Sybil Jason—Had expected a lot in this short and was disappointed. The poorest of this series. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE TALK: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—My patrons, young and old, like these "Charlie McCarthy" shorts and this is one of the best of the series. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

EGGHEAD RIDES AGAIN: Merrie Melodies—A fair cartoon taken from the comic strips that goes over fair for the kiddies. Not as good as some put out by this company. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EGGHEAD RIDES AGAIN: Merrie Melodies—You can't go wrong on the color cartoons. Running time, two minutes.—R. W. Crickmore, Rainbow Theatre, Newport, Wash. Small town patronage.

JAM SESSION, THE: Clyde McCoy and Orchestra—A grand orchestra reel in the modern "swing manner." Clyde has one of the most popular orchestras on the screen today. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LENNIE HAYTON AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—As good a band short as we have seen this season. Play it any day of the week. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE RED WALKING HOOD: Merrie Melodies—An interesting Merrie Melody.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

PICTORIAL REVIEWS, NO. 2 (New Series)—Too much table tennis for a reel as short as this one. Very poor. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

POSTAL UNION: Broadway Brevities—George Price is through for small town audiences. They do not seem to grasp the cosmopolitan idea of humor. One of the poor ones put out by this company.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PUPPET LOVE: Vitaphone Varieties—A swell short that will please all. This was more than we bargained for and were agreeably surprised. Let us have more of these. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

VAUDEVILLE HITS: Elaine Arden—Okay vaudeville acts performed entertainingly in this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

UNDER SOUTHERN STARS: Broadway Brevities—The movies often neglect the fact that great men of all types lived before the first camera started to grind. Not only were moments in the lives of these immortal people crowded with drama, but the things they wrote and said often are more gripping, more powerful and thrilling, and more universal in appeal than the verbose efforts of Hollywood's directors and scenarists. Typical of the above profound statement is the comparison between Warners' grand "Give Me Liberty" and "Under Southern Stars." Resting on Patrick Henry's earned laurels, Vitagraph proceeded to turn out another color featurette based on nothing in particular, building up to no climix; a two-reeler that fails to disguise, by beautiful color and settings, an empty little bit that does neither justice to Stonewall Jackson nor the capable producers.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage. General patronage.

Serials

Universal

RADIO PATROL: Grant Withers, Catherine Hughes—We have run seven chapters of this serial, and it is doing a fair job of holding its following.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

IT'S ALL WRONG, SEZ HE

He rears right back on his heels, does Maxwell Weinberg, writing in the November issue of Grover Jones' magazine. It seems the manager of Baltimore's "art" theatre, the Little, is concerned with the lack of progress made in selling screen entertainment to the public. Opines the theatreman from Maryland:

"If the production of motion pictures has advanced to the status of an almost adult art form, the merchandising methods of its purveyors has remained back where it started in the dear, dead nickelodeon days. For the selling of motion pictures to Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public is founded on a basis of elemental appeal and directed at the mean intelligence level of a not too bright 12 year old."

Publicity and exploitation stunts are distinguished by their "utter lack of originality and repetition," Weinberg laments. He also finds pictures more intelligent but not the advertising and doesn't care for contests, tieups, or co-op ads, either.

Gosh, the boy's agin' everything.

Well, if Maxwell wants to kid himself about that adult art form business, that's all well and good, but since the boys in the field seem to be digging up returns with the kind of stunts and contests the Baltimorean deplores, we'd like to take the floor and discuss that angle.

Art form or no, the primary purpose of the motion picture is to entertain. The most profitable picture is the one that entertains the most people, right? And since most of the people being the kind of people they are react quickest to elemental appeal, you can't throw a manager in the can because he aims at the broadest target.

That the "oldies" are still in use makes them no less effective. As has been noted here before, age has little to do with it. What Weinberg fails to bring out is the success of a tiein depends upon the skill with which it is handled by the individual. One theatreman can take a run-of-the mill idea used previously by 400 others and make it sound like a brand-new model. Another will bungle a natural exploitation, and so there you are.

No one ever said every newspaper contest, co-op ad or tiein returns its full weight in boxoffice gold. But hardboiled editors still go for contests as do conservative merchants for tieins. And we doubt if even the indignant Weinberg will say that the theatremen, editors and businessmen concerned are all plain dopes.

Repetition of publicity and exploitation devices is really nothing to cause finger pointing, especially since national advertisers find it profitable to spend fabulous amounts on the same manner of contests and endorsements (co-op ads?) which are hardly original. In fact, should Weinberg care to check, wouldn't be at all surprised if he found these national advertisers plugging their contests and sichlike in magazines read regularly by the intelligensia who patronize his theatre.

The Quigley Competitions are the show windows for displays of theatre managers' talents. Theatre managers who fail to display their ability are neglecting an opportunity to acquaint the industry with their value. The merchandising activities that the Competitions encourage are responsible for increased grosses and therefore increase the manager's value. — LARRY GRABURN, Manager, Capitol Theatre, Halifax, N. S.

PROFITABLE PARTICIPATION

Since he has been very active from the beginning in the affairs of the local Detroit-West 117 Street section businessmen's association and responsible for the power behind many neighborhood campaigns, it is no surprise to read in five Cleveland papers that Round Tabler J. G. Newkirk has been elected unanimously to the post of president of this important community organization. The announcement also cracked the editorial pages, and no small honor, too. "Not only does it bring the theatre closer to the public," writes the Loew Granada manager in reporting the election, "but it is a source of creating and spreading goodwill unheard of before."

For the man who knows his way around, the time spent on communal activities often brings in a lot of returns that otherwise might be lost in the shuffle.

If this keeps up, producers might better watch those titles. Seems that a patron up in New England last week wanted his money back after seeing "The Great Garrick." When asked his reason, said he was misinformed. Thought the picture was about Lou Gehrig, the Yankee first-baseman.

A. Mike Pagel

Round Table in Pictures

Unique advertising for the date on "Conquest" was accomplished by Manager George Hunt at Loew's, Louisville who managed to plant banner where it could be seen by all witnessing the local Armistice Day parade. Poster was attached to the Legionnaires' 40-and-eight boxcar, which had taken à leading part in the national convention in New York.

Among the most effective street stunts utilized by Manager J. G. Newkirk for the date on "Topper" at Loew's Granada, Cleveland: Man carrying giant top hat as illustrated not only made all parts of the town, but was also featured in a fire prevention parade held by the City of Lakewood, the suburb in which Newkirk's theatre is situated. Bally was spotted prominently in the parade.

The spectacular John J. Baker clicks again with this highly effective setpiece on "Dead End" at the Fox, Hackensack, N. J. Scene-still enlargements with tiein copy were used on panels as shown with quotes from the New York reviews on the base below. In addition Baker tied in with local community chest drive in which picture was plugged to obtain further contributions.

Highly realistic was the "Stage Door" lobby conceived by Bill Brown for display on the date at the RKO Albee in Providence. Dummy wall and door were actual size and all props included even to the mail box and keyboard. Listed on rehearsal call board were names of entire cast with posters on each side carrying further picture credits.

For his tiein on "Double Wedding" at the Rodgers, Cairo, Ill., Manager Charles T. Lehning had no difficulty in promoting a de luxe trailer cruiser for a bally on the date. The reason: trailer was owned by I. W. Rodgers, head of the I. W. Theatres Circuit of which the Rodgers is a unit. Bally was also used to plug rest of the program.

Distinctive wall decorations expressing Manager J. J. Scholer's appreciation for coming good product were utilized by the theatreman at the Ohio, Sandusky for a Thanksgiving message. Copy reads "The Ohio Theatre is thankful that moving picture lovers of Sandusky have expressed a desire for superior pictures and that we have been able to satisfy this desire, etc., etc." Message was tied in directly with coming date on "It's Love I'm After," poster on picture being planted against background of giant gobbler.

Reported by Max Melincoff, Warner New England Theatres zone chief as highly effective was song shop window tiein for "Varsity Show" at the Palace, Lawrence, Mass., arranged by Manager Harry Furst. Song hits from the picture were rendered as illustrated via p.a. system promoted by theatreman who also utilized a collegiate lobby.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Cab Parade

Courteous Drivers' Week was launched in Boston by Joe DiPesa, publicity head, Loew's State and Orpheum Theatres, and Manager Fred Greenway in connection with the opening of "Big City," with cup awarded to motorist judged most courteous driver during that week. Parade of cabs were held opening day, marching to theatre, where presentation was made.

For "Bride Wore Red" Joe promoted large window display of red hats from leading department store, display including numerous scene still with title, etc.

Stage Door Lobby

Highlight of Bill Brown's "Stage Door" campaign at the RKO Albee, Providence, R. I., was lobby display of life-size dummy wall and doorway replica of stage door, even to mail box and key board. Listed in white chalk on call board was entire cast and two three-sheets on the outside walls. (See picture in Round Table photo section.)

Tieup was also effected with leading department store which devoted four windows to picture display and sent out booklets to charge customers. Superintendent of Schools agreed to distribute study guides to all English teachers and letters and guides were also mailed to heads of the 25 amateur dramatic societies in the state.

Street Bally

To sell "Toast of New York," R. H. Shaffer, Palace, Canton, Ohio, promoted use of old Victorian carriage for street bally, drawn by two horses and driven by an old negro; seated inside was young lady dressed to represent Josie Mansfield. Bookmarks were distributed at libraries and theatre credit cards were displayed, jumbo telegrams were handed out and various merchants came through with co-op ads.

Benefit Show

On opening day of "Dead End" at the State Theatre in Oklahoma City, Okla., T. B. Noble, Jr., invited 1,000 underprivileged children to see the picture free under the auspices of the Good Neighbor Club at a morning show. The story made local newspapers accompanied by three-column cut showing the large crowd waiting to get in.

"SACRED" STAR OPENS CHRISTMAS SEASON

Neat buildup for his date on "Nothing Sacred" at Warner's Strand, Albany, was obtained by Andy Roy, who promoted Hollywood call from Carole Lombard, to Mayor J. B. Thacher, wherein the star inaugurated the local Christmas shopping season.

Mayor received the call at his City Hall office in the presence of presidents of local Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis and Rotary clubs, Fire Commissioner and local picture critics.

Issues Newspaper

In advance of "Thin Ice," Pearce Parkhurst, Brandon Theatre, Brandon, Vt., printed his own Brandon Theatre News, a colored four page paper entirely devoted to the film and his forthcoming attractions. Cost was met by merchants' ads. Copies were distributed to all patrons leaving theatre and were also circulated in surrounding towns. Pearce also distributed tinted photos of the star and for front, constructed huge cutout title letters which were planted atop marquee.

Camera Night

Two competitive papers, the Dayton Daily News and the Dayton Herald, have cooperated with Nathan Wise, RKO Keith Theatre, on a special candid camera night. One night a week is set aside by the theatre on which patrons are invited to bring their cameras and shoot pictures of the stage entertainers. Judges from the papers select the best picture, winner receiving cash award from theatre with tickets going to runners-up. Winners' pictures are run in papers.

Fun Show

What he advertised as a Mammoth Fun Show was the highlight of George Dowdle's "Mountain Music" campaign at the Luna Theatre, Deming, New Mexico. Prizes were given to the best dressed male and female hillbilly attending show, audience acting as judges. Second contest was old time fiddler's stunt held on stage night before opening. Dilapidated car, properly bannered, toured streets, and George decorated his marquee with imprinted jugs and cutouts of Bob Burns and Martha Raye.

Double Truck

Through cooperation of leading daily and local merchants Jack Campbell, Capitol Theatre, Brampton, Ontario, promoted a double truck in connection with a "missing letter contest." In all ads appearing in the spread certain letters were missing with entrants required to find the missing letters, rearrange them until they spelled out current attractions.

Kid Stuff

In Medina, N. Y., Russell J. Waldo, at the Warner Dana Theatre for "Sounding the Alarm" secured the cooperation of local fire department officials, who distributed tickets to school children for a special matinee. Parade led by the Medina High School Band and followed by fire department equipment marched through streets to theatre, where photos were taken for the newspapers.

Columnist

Another member who recently "guested" for vacationing columnist is Frank Boyle, Sam Torgan's assistant at the RKO Keith Theatre, Lowell, Mass. Boyle conducted column in the Lowell Evening Leader in the absence of its editor. In addition to general motion picture material, Boyle managed to inject plenty of plugs for theatre's coming attractions.

Set Piece

For "Lost Horizon" Manager Floyd Wesp, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis., reports lobby display created by his artist, Stanley Gere, measuring 18 by 10 feet. Title was done in oversize cutout flittered letters with cast, playdates, etc. Postcards announcing opening were mailed to all rural districts, window displays were spotted about town and entire staff wore imprinted sashes during run.

Puzzle

In a last run house M. A. Ruscher, Plaza Theatre, Secaucus, N. J., for "Star Is Born," through the cooperation of local daily ran cross word puzzle in paper, center of which carried photo of Janet Gaynor and tied in with the picture. Boys on bannered scooters covered downtown areas and Martin planted scene stills and picture copy in empty store windows.

Local Newspaper Says "No", So Shaffer Prints His Own

Virginia Manager Sponsors Theatre Publication; Outside Ads Cover Cost

Casting about for ways and means to draw added attention to his theatre and programs, Manager Frank Shaffer, of Warners' Virginia Theatre, in Harrisonburg, Va., struck upon the idea of a monthly publication carrying outside advertising and in October of 1936 launched the first issue of Movie Chatter, a tabloid-size four-page sheet. It has been coming out regularly since that date, is growing in popularity, and in October of this year Shaffer was pleased to announce the month's issue as his first anniversary edition.

The present publication is not the first one the theatreman has used in this manner for a number of years ago he found occasion to sponsor a similar sheet, and equally successful, while serving in Frostburg, Maryland, a community without a daily. The reason for the monthly's rebirth in Harrisonburg was due to the attitude of the local paper, which runs no general picture news or art, and allows each of the theatres only one story a week. Additional publicity must be paid for as advertising.

Other than the daily, there are four weekly college and high school papers, none, however, carrying regular picture material. Shaffer finds his publication read eagerly by residents as well as students.

Printer Publishes Paper

The theatre does not publish the monthly. From the very beginning, Frank was able to secure the cooperation of a printer to undertake the cost, who in turn and with the manager's assistance was able to secure a sufficient number of merchants' ads to take care of the print bill for 2,500 copies printed monthly, which Shaffer receives free of charge and distributes as he sees fit. Ads are contracted for on a yearly basis wherever possible and advertisers allowed so many changes in copy. The theatre is not responsible for the cost of any advertising, since the printer takes it upon himself to collect on all contracts. Frank digs up the leads and aids the good cause generally. The only cost to the house is the mailing list.

Standard size of each page is 12 by 18 inches. In number, the outside advertisements run from 18 to 23 in each issue, mostly small sized and one-column. Eighty-five per cent of these insertions are on yearly contract and the prices vary, according to copy changes, from $1.50 to $3.50. All ads are local and no preferred position is guaranteed, though exclusive ads bring in more revenue than the others.

Mailing List Doubled

Methods of distribution are various. The monthly's mailing list includes names which go mostly to out-of-town patrons. Others are stuffed in Sunday edition of Washington papers, prior to opening date of attraction featured on front page of Chatter. Remainder is distributed at the local state teacher's college for girls and in other strategic spots. The mailing list has doubled in a year's time and a blank on the back page is run regularly to invite added names. Publication of each issue is also called to patrons' attention by trailer copy.

What's your choice for the 1937 Award

IT'S THE NEW SHOW SEASON and here are some highlights from the new 1937-38 movies as glimpsed by Hollywood's ace cameramen! Every year at this time the Motion Picture Industry launches the New Season with a series of their proudest new films. This year the New Show Season brings the attractions on this page to the VIRGINIA THEATRE in NOVEMBER. Look them over. Anyone may be a prize winning film.

TWO OF THE MASTHEADS CREATED BY SHAFFER

Picture material is obtained from various sources. Through Frank La Falce, Warner Washington zone advertising director, Shaffer secures special features and are on Warner and other productions. The theatre is also on the mailing list for RKO Radio's weekly editor's service which includes gratis mats. News matter and mats are also forwarded regularly from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's publicity department. In addition, Frank picks up extra copy from the drama pages of the New York, Washington and Baltimore papers; from various motion picture publications.

In layout, Chatter's front page is confined mostly to the first big coming show of the month or, as in the case of the November issue, to a number of cuts and captions on top pictures booked for that month. Ads are also carried on this page. Inside spread carries publicity on individual dates to come later in the month, features, cartoons, etc., plus advertising which also is spotted on back page.

Major productions from the different companies are given an equal break in stories and mats. And since Shaffer is able to secure special material from the above sources he is in a position to run features not usualy contained in press books and mats that do not appear in other publications.

Chatter features two mastheads, both created by Shaffer and which he alternates with each issue. Mastheads and front page heads of recent issues are reproduced on this page.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Candid Camera

On "Stand In" at the State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla., T. B. Noble, Jr., promoted candid camera from local drug store and sent usher out each day to snap pedestrians. Pictures were displayed in lobby, card announcing that those identifying themselves would be admitted free. By giving photo developing company and druggist mention on board, service and camera were secured gratis.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Good-Will

When Joe Rosenfield, Modjeska Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., discovered that he had a supply of tablets left over from his preschool opening giveaway, he contacted local hospital. Story and photo ran in dailies showing the manager presenting the pads to the medical social service matron for use of convalescent youngsters.

Declares Theatre Offers More Than Just Picture Fare

The place of institutional advertising in the theatre, discussed editorially in the Round Table some weeks back, is the subject of the following letter from Manager E. N. Olsen, of the Time Theatre, Sioux Falls, So. Dakota, a unit of the Minnesota Amusement Co. Mr. Olsen feels that this particular type of advertising is being neglected by theatremen throughout the country. It is his opinion that every theatre offers something in addition to the entertainment on the screen.

The newspaper ads referred to by the Round Tabler and reproduced on this page are two-column and run about five inches deep.

DEAR MIKE:

Feeling that a definite purpose can be served at this time by a radical departure in theatre advertising, I enclose herewith some institutional ads which attempt to present the theatre and its merchandise in a different light. Perhaps this angle isn't radical. An editorial in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD cited the need for it, as well as our Minneapolis advertising department.

The ultimate objective is to induce people to attend the theatres for reasons other than those we ordinarily employ. From an advertising standpoint the emotions which these layouts attempt to appeal to are well tested and fundamentally sound. These same emotions are subject to attack by every type and kind of merchandizer, from annuity companies to automobile manufacturers. It is logical to assume that the methods tested and proven sound by other advertisers can be used to an advantage by us.

The vulnerable human weaknesses through which these layouts work by no means exhaust the mediums of appeal. There are as many mediums of approach as there are personal and sympathetic affections and moral sentiments. It must be noted, however, that regardless of the approach the objective remains the same. The copy should be so arranged that the opening wedge leads smoothly and effectively to the main objective—that of presenting the theatre or the idea of attending the theatre in a light that is original to the reader.

These ads do not supplant the regular forms of advertising. Individual pictures must receive their usual relative attention. Looking at these from the standpoint of an auxiliary or supplementary campaign, I am sure you will realize their true worth. —E. N. OLSEN, Manager, Time Theatre, Sioux Falls, So. Dak.

Pirate Stuff

Made up to represent a ferocious looking pirate was man used for street bally on "Pirate" at the Globe, New York City. Hands manacled, ball and chain attached to both legs and wearing sweater to which were appliqued skull and cross bones, man stood in front of theatre where a steady stream of curiosity-seekers stopped, sizeable crowd entering to witness the picture.

ANNUAL "MOREAU WEEK" CAMPAIGNS BRING PRIZES TO M & P MANAGERS

Theatremen in Vermont Zone Compete in Celebration to Honor District Head; Circuit Executives Aid Yearly Drive

In celebration of the annual competition to honor their sectional chief, the M & P theatremen in the Vermont district have recently completed the third annual A. J. Moreau Week, participated in by all houses in the zone. Four prizes were given, the winners selected by a committee of home office executives, as follows:

First prize was awarded M. P. Morrison, Strand, Dover, N. H.; second to J. P. Hassett, Paramount, Barre, Vt.; third to Harry Botwick, State, Portland, Maine, and fourth to C. J. Russell, Jr., Opera House, Bangor, Maine.

To aid the competing theatremen, a drive manual was prepared by Morrison and Botwick, who did a lot of the work behind the scenes. Bookings were handled by C. W. Dovan of the Boston home office. Further details were handled by Miss Barbara Casey, secretary to Mr. Moreau.

A. J. MOREAU, IN WHOSE HONOR DRIVE WAS HELD

Morrison Titles Drive 'Blue Ribbon Week'

Special activities heading the winner's entry included a big high school night held during the showing of "Big City," at the Strand, Dover, N. H. Local columnist was promoted to act as em see to present gold footballs to individual members of the team. Cheer leading and band selections were also scheduled. Second gridiron idea that clicked was tiein with leading clothing company to present free trip to the Harvard-Army game. Students only were eligible, entire student body voting for their choice on specially prepared heralds that carried theatre copy. School officials cooperated by allowing blanks to be passed out in classes and gave permission for posters on the bulletin boards. A further Morrison activity was a special morning show for children where gift boxes of ice cream were distributed.

All advertising for a month ahead stressed the Blue Ribbon Week, and all individual picture bookings during the week were tied in with it. This was stressed in all newspaper advertising and publicity, with Morrison landing stories in important out-of-town papers as well as the local sheets. Tieins included classified ad contest wherein individual names were run in the want ad columns for guest tickets, in return for which the paper contributed some 200 inches of free space.

Lucky number herald gag was worked with local daily which netted further free displays. Morrison also found occasion to promote a co-op page on "Bride Wore Red," one of the attractions, copy further stressing the entire drive. Winner also promoted Woolworth store to stuff all outgoing packages with advertising and tied in with Western Union to display blowup wire from Joan Crawford. Smart window showings were obtained in the better spots.

Radio dramatizations were also found of benefit, heralds distributed at filling stations, and among other ideas that benefited was the assistance of phone operators in spots outside the city to plug attractions at the Strand while completing calls.

Hassett Ties Week To Anniversary

Since the Moreau testimonial came during his anniversary week, J. P. Hassett at the Paramount, Barre, Vt., was able to put a lot of extra steam behind the celebration. Ably assisted by suggestions from the home office birthday manual, Hassett executed a number of ideas including a mammoth birthday cake which he promoted and used in a weight-guessing contest. Daily fresh floral displays for the lobby was another promotion, and to engage attention of children theatremen worked out tieins to distribute free photos of Shirley Temple in conjunction with his showing of "Heidi." Newspapers reported tough on theatre publicity used a number of effective stories on the occasion and Hassett was also able to promote co-op ads for further buildup.

Radio station contributed to the cause by daily announcements of the week's features and highlights of the celebration and to encourage further attendance on "Heidi" Hassett contacted teachers of all rural schools within a wide area to bring children in to see the picture at a special Saturday matinee.

Newspaper Publicity Stressed By Botwick and Russell

That the picture itself and the players had received an unusual amount of newspaper publicity and radio mention led Harry Botwick to build up his campaign on "This Way Please" around the leading players, the results of which earned for him the third "Moreau Week" prize. Botwick concentrated on the four names in the picture, Mary Livingston, Fibber McGee and Molly, Betty Grable and Buddy Rogers, figuring that their appearances on the air and in the news would bring the curious to see what they looked like on the screen.

Radio tieups included 15-minute transcription of "This Way Please" used twice over WCSH, records were also furnished the station in advance of playdates, theatre credit given and on Botwick's sidewalk broadcasts, picture was plugged heavily. Standees of the team Fibber McGee and Molly were spotted in city's largest furniture stores by Johnson's Wax salesmen and special tieup stills of Mary Livingston and Betty Grable were placed in jewelry store windows.

Ties In Gang Shooting

Discovering that the owner of the store held up by the Brady gang in the recent Bangor shooting possessed a lot of newsreel shots of the fracas, Manager C. J. Russell, Jr., of the Opera House, in that spot, succeeded in borrowing the film from the merchant for showings at the theatre. Russell also secured permission to plant poster in window covering bullet hole made during the shooting, card copy calling attention to the reel at the theatre.

Numerous window displays were secured on "Stella Dallas," including cutout of John Boles endorsing typewriter, 40 by 60's in libraries tying up the book with Mrs. Olive Higgins Prouty, cards placed in all Postal Telegraph windows and stills of Anne Shirley riding bicycle used in leading toy window. All employees called to meeting week ahead were explained importance of the week and urged each to try to bring in extra admissions. Cashier called up selected list, plugging the opening, special announcements, stories and stills were planted in papers in advance and during the week and special attention was also paid to short subjects. Campaign won the fourth prize.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk() immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.*

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska
"Gateway to the West"

Dear Herald:

A fellow broadcasting from Phoenix, Arizona, says that the nation has its back up against its own goal line and he thinks it time for the administration to call in God and see if He can't punt us out of danger. That sounds like something to us. The coach has a game on his hands and a good punter might get us an invitation to the Rose Bowl game. We were out there to the Rose Bowl game once and we noticed that a good punter helped save the day.

George L. March, of the March Brothers theatres at Vermilion, South Dakota, writes us that he wants the HERALD, and he says that while we are about it we better have it sent to him for three years. That's just what we are going to do, for we don't want him to be in fear of missing a copy. The March Brothers have two theatres at Vermillion, two at Le Mars, one at Haywarden and one at Akron, Iowa, and these theatres are located in about as fine an agricultural country as there is on earth, and we understand that all of them are doing a very satisfactory business. Thanks, Mr. March.

There now, John Piller of Valley City has sent another North Dakota snow storm down here. John always did have it in for us Nebraska folks, and there is no doggone sense in his acting like that, just because he has one of the nicest theatres in North Dakota. But then some people are like that.

If your folks like wild animals and jungle pictures, there is "Elephant Boy." They will not necessarily rave about it, but we will guarantee they won't want to shoot you. You have probably seen "Bring 'Em Back Alive" and other wild animal pictures that were very interesting, and we believe that "Elephant Boy" will compare very favorably with any of them.

Bob Smith of the Mission theatre at Mission, Texas, raises the nicest grape fruit of any place on earth, not even excepting Florida, and if Bob in one of his weak moments should sent us a basket of his Duncans or Pink grape fruit for Christmas, and send them collect, we'd agree not to throw rocks at his Angora kitten the next time we were down there. But speaking of Christmas, we wish to remind you that it will come this year on the 25th day of December, and we might also remind those stars out in Hollywood that if they would send us an autographed photo of themselves we wouldn't get sore about it; that is if they autographed them themselves.

We have received another jolt under the ear. This one comes from "Maxey" (that is, if we can make it out) of Seattle, and we hasten again to correct our mistake. "Give Me Liberty" was a Vitaphone rather than an MGM picture.

Next Sunday the Moon theatre here is playing "Good Earth," with Paul Muni and Luise Rainer. All the reports we have seen give this one an excellent rating, and we presume it is, for we can't imagine a producing company putting these two excellent stars in a poor story. We expect to go and see it and we are expecting something above the ordinary.

If J. C. Janning of the Brownsville theatres at Brownsville, Texas, would go down to the ship canal and catch us a big redfish and send it up here for Christmas we'd guarantee to support him for President of the United States. Come to think about it, he wouldn't make such bad timber at that.

We'd like awfully well to see our friend Shine Mason of the McAllen theatres of McAllen, Texas, but there is no use of Shine inviting us down there to go with him over to Reynosa, Mexico, to see another bull fight.

This snow we are having reminds us of the snow we used to have back in Indiana when we youngsters used to go out and track rabbits into a hollow log and then twist them out with a forked stick. It was fun for us youngsters but we doubt if the rabbits were very crazy about it. 'Member those times Cedric?

If the people would use an infinitesimal part of the life-giving nostrums that are mentioned over the radio today we would all want to push Methuselah around in a baby buggy. The radio can furnish more horseradish than all the Japs in California.

Last night we saw an RKO airplane picture in which Von Heferen and his wife flew to an isolated radio camp in a desert in Arizona. Von had a contract to fly for a mining company. He started out one day to fly to the mining camp and he took John Barleycorn with him and he flew into a mountain and he and John were killed.

The next day, seemingly, Mrs. Von married another pilot and they left for California. It always seemed to us that a widow should wait at least a couple of days after her husband's funeral before marrying some other guy, but then you know some of these widows are pretty fast movers. We knew a widow back in Indiana once who married a Missourian three days before her husband died. But then nobody can keep up with us Hoosiers anyhow.

"Then we found Westby and got busy."

PICTURED HERE IS THE RESULT, OWNED BY Mr. and Mrs. L. V. BERGTOLD, Mr. and Mrs. CLARENCE SATTRE and Mr. and Mrs. J. J. CHRISTIE

Below: The auditorium, neatly finished in modern materials and seating 300.

■ Westby, Wis., is a town of 1500 located near the western edge of the state, not far from the sizeable city of Lacrosse. It had no theatre when Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Bergtold found it—never had had one. "We operated a theatre in Kasson, Minn.," explains Mr. Bergtold, "for the past nine years, but when circuit opposition came, we decided to look elsewhere. Then we found Westby and got busy." An entirely new building was erected for a modern motion picture theatre seating 300. Called the Westby, it was opened two months ago. And, reports Mr. Bergtold, who is in charge of operation, "our patronage has been so fine that we feel the venture is going to prove decidedly profitable." The Westby represents a total investment, including lot and equipment, of less than $20,000, part of the needed capital coming from the Bergtold's and from Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sattre and Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Christie of Kasson, the rest from a loan association. Plans were drawn by Boyum, Schubert & Sorenson of Lacrosse, but Mr. Bergtold handled the contracts and supervision himself. The front is of architectural brick, with a tower motif and windows of glass blocks. The tower is lighted in neon, as is the marquee. Neon also illuminates the attraction boards, which carry Adler silhouette letters. The auditorium ceiling is finished in Blendtex gypsum board, the walls in Nu-Wood and Celotex. There is a "cry-room," and a smoking room, both glassed-in.

Local and Trouping Amateurs Return The Cinema Stage to Occasional Use

REGULAR USE of the stage in motion picture theatres, which gradually became practically non-existent after the establishment of sound pictures, shows no signs of any substantial revival, but picture house stages are being brought increasingly into use in many sections of the country for special attractions, frequently employing home talent, to give the box office an occasional extra nudge.

These conclusions appear to be justified by the current practices noted in a nation-wide survey, in part suggested by recent insistence in booking circles—what is left of them — that vaudeville is gathering strength to climb back into the picture houses. Most motion picture theatre managers laugh at that, and excepting certain super-deluxe screen theatres or long-established combination houses in the large cities, a negligible quantity of vaudeville and so-called presentation acts are being regularly used.

The local talent show, however, and "Amateur Nights" with or without professionals, and song and comedy acts in radio style, usually performed by "artists" from a radio station, preferably local, are quite another thing. For these the stage is being occasionally used, on holidays or to bolster up off-nights.

A few representative instances to indicate the trend:

Home Talent and Amateurs Featured

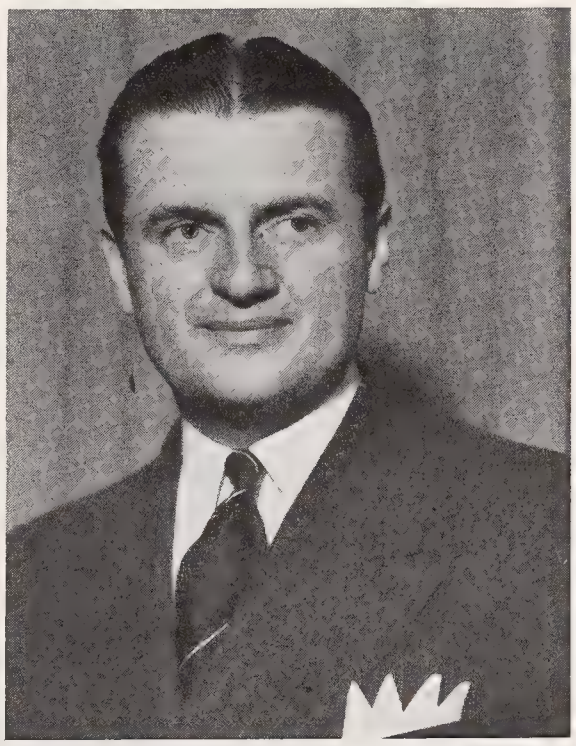
In Spokane, Wash., for example, use of the stage in picture houses has increased since a year ago, reports show, yet only one theatre regularly presents professional vaudeville — the People's Post Street. Occasional stage shows, however, are offered by both the Orpheum and the Fox, using the Major Bowes units and similar troupes, local dancing school pupils, contests, entertainments featuring victorious school teams, etc.

In Northern California, according to George A. Mann of Redwood Theatres and affiliated circuits, fewer acts are being shown now than previously, but a number of the theatres erected during the past year have been equipped for small musical interludes in the screen program.

The situation is similar in Southern California. In Los Angeles, however, an independent exhibitor (who asked that his name be withheld) declared that the use of personal appearances and cash award games indicates that the public frequently must be given special stimulation of some kind, which point of view found support among a number of managers questioned.

While use of the stage in downtown theatres of Wilmington is rare today, independent neighborhood and small town theatres in many parts of Delaware are presenting stage shows quite frequently, especially where week-end performances draw well from surrounding rural sections. Stage facilities have been provided in many of the new and remodeled theatres in these districts.



In the Cincinnati area some of the smaller houses are playing one-day dates of stage shows; others are doing so sporadically. The Rialto, for example, plays units and pictures on Sundays only, while the Knickerbocker adds a few acts to its Sunday bill.

Use of screen theatre stages in Iowa is almost entirely confined to the smaller towns, reports indicate. The entertainment consists principally in local talent performances, spelling bees, beauty contests and "radio acts."

While none of the larger motion picture theatres in downtown New Orleans now have stage presentations, small outlying houses and those in surrounding small towns are offering "amateur" troupes and home talent shows more or less regularly.

Stage Use Extended in Omaha

At Tri-States Orpheum in Omaha stage shows have been booked about nine times for one-week stands during 1937, and according to William Miskell, manager, this number will be increased to about one show a month during 1938. The Corby, also in Omaha (Continued on next page)

The newly formed Altec Service Corporation got officially underway December 6, with a luncheon at the Hotel Astor in New York at which policies were announced. Altec will service sound equipment only for the time being, later all theatre equipment. Shown above are (left) L. W. Conrow, who heads the corporation, and Bert Sanford, Jr., director of sales, both members of the Erpi organization which, in a sense, the new company succeeds (details are given in a news story in accompanying Motion Picture Herald). Mr. Conrow joined Erpi in 1927, and latterly has been general operating manager. Mr. Sanford's latest post with Erpi has been that of Eastern sales manager.

has been having a weekly "Amateur Night" with local talent, and Ralph D. Goldberg will begin a weekly "Amateur Night" after January 1, in his Town theatre near Omaha's business section.

In Denver—though the Tivoli recently added a line of girls for a brief musical and dancing number—the regular professional stage presentation is definitely abandoned. The Denver and Denham theatres, however, occasionally present small stage acts in conjunction with first-run pictures.

As elsewhere, the local talent show and "radio act" have proved popular special attractions in the Kansas City area, where a "Kiddie Revue" from Station WHB has been particularly welcome to exhibitors.

Throughout New England "Amateur Nights" and travelling amateur troupes have occasionally brought the stage equipment back into use, but a straight picture policy is seldom disturbed.

250 S. Calif. Theatres Remodeled Since April

DURING the last six months approximately 250 theatres in Southern California have been partially or wholly remodeled. Modernization of existing houses, using the new materials in functional designs, has been general.

This is probably due, first, to proximity to studios and resulting intimate exchange of ideas; second, steady growth of suburban areas; and, third, the wealth of reliable service locally available from theatre equipment manufacturers, architects and decorators, in forecasting trends in theatre design and operation.

An analysis of fifteen of the most recently constructed or completely remodeled theatres in Southern California and Arizona present a picture of the trend. These theatres are:

|---|---|
| Rivoli, Long Beach, Calif. | New |
| Tower, Compton, Calif. | New |
| Strand, Phoenix, Arizona. | Remodeled |
| Fontana, Fontana, Calif. | New |
| Studio, San Bernardino, Calif. | New |
| Lido, Beverly Hills, Calif. | New |
| State, Tucson, Arizona. | Remodeled |
| Plaza, Palm Springs, Calif. | New |
| Uptown, Pasadena, Calif. | Remodeled |
| El Rey, Los Angeles, Calif. | New |
| Esquire, Los Angeles, Calif. | New |
| Uptown, Superior, Arizona. | Remodeled |
| Cabart, Long Beach, Calif. | New |
| New Walker's, Santa Ana, Calif. | New |
| Ritz, Inglewood, Calif. | New |

With one exception, all new construction above cited is without balcony, and with main floor seating having fourteen-seat center sections, and seven-seat side sections, with wide aisles.

Liberal Spacing in Seating

The seating capacities of the theatres being remodeled or constructed range from seven to eleven hundred, with seat widths from 21 to 23 inches, and back-to-back spacing from 34 to 38 inches.

It is noted that projection room modernization has most importantly included the installation of suprex carbon high-intensity projection arc equipment with either dry type rectifiers or the new flexible types of motor-generators; and also heavier, rock-steady projector pedestals to eliminate vibration inimical to sound as well as image quality.

Certain characteristics seem to be general throughout recent modernization. First, splay-sided marquees, instead of rectangular shapes, were installed, usually with three rows of interchangeable, ten-inch silhouette letters; and in vestibules and lobbies, 40x60-inch poster panels were added, with display case illumination employing 60-watt lumiline lamps.

Another notable characteristic is the installation of concealed lighting fixtures and the elimination of all old-fashioned fixtures. Also general is the adoption of modern furniture, commonly of metallic construction. All modernization reflects more attention to lounges.

Circuit Executive Gives Trend

The chief engineer of one of the large West Coast circuits with headquarters in Los Angeles (who has asked, for organizational reasons, that his name be withheld), sums up the trend thus:

"Building repair, modernization and the construction of new theatres have reached an amount that assures the realization of a vast transformation in the physical plant of motion picture exhibition by the end of this year. Among most frequent equipment improvements are the replacing of seats, installation of new sound apparatus, and suprex-carbon arc projection lamps, and air-conditioning. New marquees also hold a high place in current modernization.

"Improvements to buildings emphasize the substitution of new fronts for those of obsolete style, redecoration of interior with attendant improvement in acoustic conditions and interior construction to provide better lounge facilities. Replacement of old carpeting and the installation of modern foyer and lounge furniture are rather prominent. Roof insulation is getting more attention than formerly.

"We have been getting plenty of light under the marquee in all front remodeling, and animation in sign work and marquee trim, using neon of various colors. Provision for poster display has been conservative, the modern trend being toward the elimination of too much advertising paper, both inside and outside the theatre. Remodeling has also eliminated the old-style curved or rectangular, extremely deep entrance lobby with ticket booth at the inner wall or at one side. The ticket booth has been brought right up to the property line so as to be immediately accessible to patrons."—F. T. Hyskell, Los Angeles.

Sees No Water Shortage From Air-Conditioning

STATING THAT there is no reason why authorities should fear that general use of air-conditioning will bring about water shortage and impose any burden upon sewerage facilities, William B. Henderson, executive vice president of the Air-Conditioning Manufacturers' Association, has announced that the equipment makers are prepared to supply apparatus that cuts the use of water 90% to 95%.

"Cities now discovering that they have not kept their water facilities' expansion anywhere near their increases in requirements," he said, "undoubtedly will soon formulate improvement programs on a comprehensive basis."

Meanwhile, he added, the air-conditioning industry will work with those cities where no shortage of water yet has been felt, to supply equipment "which is already available" and suited to the demand that may come.

He also pointed out that the increase in air-conditioning "has dramatized" the lack of modern water facilities in many cities.

● Glass blocks provide a new means of creating eye-fetching theatres. With modern tricks in lighting, they add color, sparkle, life. Here are ideas.

By FRANCIS M. FALGE

ONE OF THE most interesting of the new structural materials is the glass block. Everywhere, we see them being applied in new ways, to store and theatre fronts, to cocktail bars, to window areas, and for decorative effects in lounges, lobbies, foyers, and auditoriums. In many cases lighting can be used with the blocks to transform them into sparkling colorful forms to produce unusual decorative effect.

Because of the configurations of the two surfaces of the block, light is transmitted in a multitude of patterns, depending upon the kind and color of the light sources used, their placement, and the background.

In general, the small delicate patterns are suited for close viewing, while the wide bold patterns are best for distant viewing. Blocks are available in 4x4, 4x8, 6x6, 8x8, and 12x12-inch sizes to suit the requirements of any particular problem.

Block applications can be divided into two classes—(1) those in which no background is desired, and (2) those with backgrounds.

Due to appearance limitations, the use of blocks without backgrounds is limited. A means of providing general lighting for either method is to conceal polished concentrating reflectors at the top, bottom or sides of the block design and direct the beams over the blocks. By alternating colors in reflectors, or providing varying colors upon the different sides, color patterns can be produced.

Individual reflectors can be used, or a parabolic cylindrical trough reflector, which throws a fan-shaped beam of light, is satisfactory. In the latter case, the light may be colored by covering the lamps with color hoods; the clear bulbs with their visible filament produce much more sparkle than the inside frosted ones.

Reflectors Placed Behind the Blocks

ANOTHER METHOD for both open and closed panels is to place reflectors in back of the blocks so as to project the light directly to the blocks; the reflectors conceal the view of the lamps and appear as silhouette spots. With a suitable framing and symmetrical placing of the units, a pleasing effect can be created.

If large reflectors are used, they should be placed back from the blocks a considerable distance, [Continued on next page] depending on space. Generally, units should be spaced a distance apart equal to the distance of the lamp filament from the glass.

The photograph on this page shows a decorative panel illustrative of one interesting method of lighting glass blocks. Lumiline lamps of one tint are located along the upper edges of the blocks, and lamps of another color are set vertically at the right edges. Sparkle is provided by the use of natural-colored lamps at opposite corners.

Small reflectors, such as the Climax type, are quite adaptable and can be arranged so that one or two are used for each block. They can be used also for color accent with light tinted general lighting from the edges or from in back of the blocks as previously discussed.

Facade of the Cine theatre, new Balaban & Katz house in Chicago, in which masterful use is made of glass blocks as a luminous architectural form. The huge pylon constructed of Insulux blocks continues beneath the marquee as a box office and is illuminated with several circuits of mazda lamps inside, so placed as to light all the blocks and at the same time retain the desired sparkle and brilliance. The attraction boards, which are illuminated by mazda lamps, carry Wagner silhouette letters. The vertical sign is of the exposed lamp type with a flasher to produce "sparkling" letters. Architects were Rapp & Rapp.

In places where backgrounds have not been provided, practice has often resulted in a change to some kind of background. In such cases, draped materials have been used, thus giving much the same effect as with a background. In other cases, Venetian blinds have been hung in back of the blocks. If these are painted a light color, preferably metallic, the floodlights can be projected on the blinds from either the front or the rear by properly mounting the blinds so as to produce an effect of considerably greater sparkle and of interesting pattern.

Lamping for Color and Other Effects

Where the block panels also can be backed, the methods already discussed can be applied, and many pattern variations can also be obtained. Individually, the blocks can be lighted in a variety of ways. In general, clear lamps, color hoods, or reflectors are preferable to sprayed lamps due to their greater color efficiency and sparkle. They may be used, one per block, in the center or at a corner. Two per block, in contrasting colors, lend interest to the treatment.

Other combinations can be had by using Lumiline lamps with accents of A-bulb lamps or reflectors. By placing a row of Lumiline lamps along one edge of a row of blocks, then adding a single concentrated source at one of the opposite corners, an attractive lighting result may be obtained. Lumiline lamps along two edges at right angles to each other and accented by single concentrated sources, provide a more elaborate effect; yellow might be used at one edge and surprise pink at the other, with natural colored green for the accents. However, other combinations are possible. For instance, if tubular lamps are placed diagonally in back of the block, a broken pattern is produced.

Where Brightness is Needed

Where light output is a primary consideration, a white background is recommended, the sparkle being softened by the reduction in contrast. Where it is desired to heighten contrast, a metallic background can be used; in the case of polished corrugated metal, a definite contribution is made to the sparkle and pattern. Reflectors should be concealed at an edge, paralleling the corrugations. With a fairly narrow panel of blocks, the corrugated metal can be curved at the top to better reflect the light.

Effects for Wall and Ceiling Surfaces

IN PLANNING the lighting for large ceiling or wall surfaces, a combination of these various methods of lighting can be used to obtain almost any desired pattern or result. The fluted blocks may be alternated with those having less pattern, or they may be turned at right angles to each other. Special designs, such as letters, can be laid into the panel by providing separate light boxes behind the blocks of the patterns, by using blocks of a different design, or using blocks with colored faces.

Static or mobile patterns can be created by varying the color of lamps, using a floodlighted background, or block lighting of one predominant color with overall or figured designs made up of other colors. Squares, diamonds, lines of color and more complicated patterns are all possible. By providing two or three color circuits in the patterns or line and using a flasher or dimmer, sparkling changing patterns are produced.

Lettering with Glass Blocks

Regarding the use of silhouette lettering with glass blocks, such lettering is not satisfactorily legible against patterned surfaces of this kind, although it may be used when decorative value alone is desired. It is preferable to combine the glass blocks with a luminous element of diffusing glass, such as flashed opal, to obtain lettering having good legibility.

Many luminous forms, such as panels, columns and pylons, can be made with glass blocks. These are best lighted by exposed lamps mounted on troughs so as to send their light in all directions. Several strips of light may be necessary to obtain coverage, and the lamps should be spaced a distance apart equal to their distance to the blocks. General lighting can also be had by the use of reflectors at the open end of the element.

Glass Blocks a Product of Modern Industrial Science

GLASS blocks for use in architecture and decoration form one of the remarkable types of modern materials developed by the glass industry. Glass has always been considered one of the most fragile of substances. Today it is being used as once stone and marble alone were employed. In glass blocks we have an actual structural material, laid as bricks are laid, strong and readily adaptable to design, yet of glass, with all the advantages of glass.

Aisle markers, Belgrade theatre, Philadelphia.

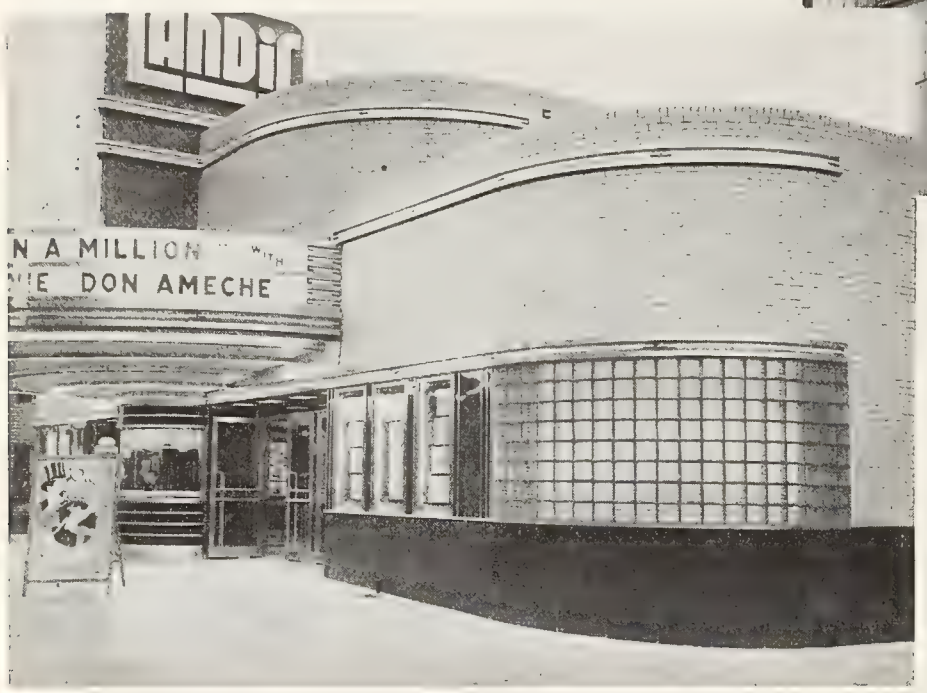
These masonry units, which are $3\frac{7}{8}$ inches thick and vary in size from $3\frac{7}{8}$x$4\frac{7}{8}$, to 12 inches square, are made of pressed glass, formed in halves which are then welded together. A bonding coat of gritty, adhesive substance forms the necessary adhesion between the block and the mortar so that the blocks may be laid by a mason using regular masonry mortar and common masonry tools.

Various patterns are impressed in the inner and outer faces of the block which serve to break up the transmitted light, giving it a diffused quality, and providing interesting and decorative effects. Such blocks are translucent, but not transparent. They readily transmit light, as much as 86.5% with some patterns, and thus with colored lights behind the block beautiful creations of illuminated architecture may be developed. The cost of decorative lighting with glass blocks is comparatively favorable because such a high percentage of the full value of the light energy is available.



Because of these unusual properties of light transmission, and architectural beauty glass blocks have found many applications for theatre fronts, big towers of blazing light, box office fronts, standee rails, lounge partitions, etc. A few small panels wisely placed may be very effective almost anywhere.

Glass block is not only decorative but provide insulation equivalent to a 20-inch brick wall; it has a distinctive deadening effect on sound, comparing favorably with the usual type of plaster partitions used in fireproof construction; and it is definitely a fire retardant, for glass will not burn or contribute to the spreading of fire.

Glass blocks have gone a long way since the first experimental applications. They are now accepted for almost every type of modernization, approved under building codes, and carried in stock by building supply dealers in almost every major building materials market throughout the country.

Ways to Use Glass Blocks In Theatres

• Forming curved windows at front corners of the Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J., designed by William S. Lee, glass blocks provide natural light and decoration in lounges, and smart exterior design.

• Making standee rail a decorative element and supplying illumination to rear auditorium traffic area with glass blocks backed by lamps, as in (below), the Ritz, Philadelphia.

• Fountain in the foyer of the Mayfair theatre, Philadelphia, elaborated with glass block panels glowing with light from lamps behind.

"What color scheme would you suggest?" is a question Better Theatres is frequently asked to answer. It is always a hard one to answer from a distance. Here, then, are an expert's practical hints on

How to Select a Good Color Scheme Yourself

By HAROLD W. RAMBUSCH

THE POSSIBILITIES in the color layout of the theatre today present an interesting challenge to the theatre owner and manager. They must produce something attractive, something modern, something which appeals to the public, and it becomes their problem to sound and plumb the depths and intricacies of our contemporary audiences. These are, after all, composed of the man on the street, the woman in the home, and the child at school. We must discover a method of learning their inclinations and tastes.

There are two fields that relate indirectly to the theatre in which the American public really makes an investment. One is the automobile; the second is color advertising. They do not apply fully to our problem of theatre decoration, but we may get some hints. Consider automobiles: In one year the public may swing toward green, in another year toward red; at least, we are certain that the blacks and grays are not as popular as they used to be. Such trends are important indices of public opinion.

Go by How People React

It is hopeless to ask an individual or a group what colors or scheme it likes best. People do not consciously know. What they say they like, and what they actually and instinctively prefer, are often totally different things. If you note the color of the car milady picks out, or the ties your friends wear (which they have selected quite unconsciously), you get some inkling of their true preferences.

Passing on to the field of advertising: We do know that enormous sums are spent; that there is a terriffically large collection of talent employed in art research and creation. All this effort is directed toward public appeal, toward engaging and pleasing the eyes of people. The degree of success can be clearly read on the barometer of sales. The effectiveness of one type of color or illustration as against another immediately reflects itself in orders. We can, therefore, by making a careful analysis of the colored illustrations seen so widely in our national publications, arrive at a fair evaluation of the likes of the public.

Now, how to use this information? There is no perfect recipe, but we do know that designers in the past have built their color schemes on a beautiful piece of damask or tapestry selected for its delicate shades or rich tones. It is quite usual to see a Fifth Avenue decorator pick up a Paisley shawl and say, "This is my cue for the library. I will take some of this red, some of this blue with a dash of this yellow, and I have my scheme." With care and thought we can use a modern colored illustration, an advertisement, and be reasonably sure that we have something that is in vogue. Transposing it, taking a particular blue for the ceiling, the delicate shades of red for the walls, and the yellow for the curtains, we have at least, a start.

How Quantity and Texture Affect Choice

THE QUESTION of color composition, however, has more dimensions and more qualities than just colors themselves. It has textures and, above all, it has the problem of quantity. While a certain blue with a small amount of gold may look very pleasing, it does not follow that when you alter the proportions, the result will be as pleasing; it probably will not. It remains for the person transposing or applying the color scheme of, say, the

SELECTING COLORS TO GET HARMONY AND "MOOD"

IN APPLYING color it is important to understand proper mixing for color harmony, which is a science in itself. Briefly, colors live by contrast; a single color—for example, an all-blue auditorium—soon becomes monotonous and fatiguing, until the eyes fail to discriminate the color. By adding accents or highlights in another color, the contrast will heighten each of the colors.

Combinations of colors should be applied in an orderly arrangement, as a hodge-podge of colors, either inside or outside of the theatre, spell an amateurish effect. Adhering to predominant single colors, with accents in contrasting color, establishes definite architectural character and is a good principle for many treatments.

Complimentary colors—yellow and blue, red and green, blue-green and orange—form the most striking and pleasing combinations, the contrast being greatest when the contrasting colors are close to each other. Closely associated colors—blue and blue-green, orange and yellow, etc.—are also harmonious and effective.

Color preference is a factor in the selection of color. In general, when selecting color for itself alone, pure red and pure blue are safe choices. In large amounts, however, pure red is not desirable, pure blue is better, and tints are still more preferable when only a single color is used in a room like a lounge or fairly small, well lighted foyer.

Through many years of association with certain colors in nature, man has developed a definite psychology of color. Some of the colors—the yellows, oranges and reds—are "warm" and confining. Blues and greens are cooler colors, receding, and seem to provide depth and spaciousness. Most colors have certain idea associations—red: blood, heat, anger, etc.; orange: harvest, fruition; yellow: gaiety, light, splendor; green: vigor, faith, youth; blue: dignity, hope, purity. Applying these associations, cooler colors in warm weather, warm colors in cold weather, colors suited to special presentations or occasions, and for special stage shows or musical numbers, the entertainment will be enhanced and the full value of color realized.

Then, too, color has an effect on the appearance of people, a selection of flattering mellow tints being preferable. Then there is the psychology of "bright lights." For a comedy presentation, for example, ample light in the auditorium contributes to a spirit of gaiety and makes merriment more contagious.

COLORED LIGHT'S AFFECT ON COLORED MATERIALS

[This article presents data compiled by the General Electric Company, Nela Park.]

PROBABLY NO single factor exercises so definite an influence upon the atmosphere of every part of the theatre as does the manner in which color, both in lighting and other decorative media, is used. The lighting technician uses color to create atmosphere and moods. The theatre manager sees in color a means of attracting attention, holding interest, and creating advertising value in the midst of surroundings of competitive eye appeal. The architect and decorator uses color to achieve the decorative emphasis he is striving for. Color, though one of the most interesting aspects of theatre lighting, is often misapplied.

White light, from the sun or an incandescent lamp, is composed of several colors: red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet, and all of the intermediate hues. Mixed together these colors make white light. Actually, by mixing only the three primaries of light, red, green and blue in proper proportions, white light results. However, by mixing the three primaries of paint—red, yellow and blue—a black pigment results.

Colored light may be created by gaseous discharge sources, such as mercury, sodium and neon, and by applying ultra-violet radiation to fluorescent material.

White light sources contain all colors, and any color or tint may be obtained at will by the use of colored transmitting filters. The resulting color output is, of course, dependent on the proportion of that color generated by the particular light source. From incandescent lamps, for example, about 5% is red, 5% green, and 1% to 2% blue.

A rose tint, on the other hand, is produced at about 40% of the total light output. Similarly the other tints, and certain pure colors—yellow, orange, and "daylight white"—comprise 50% or more of the normal white light. Tints or combinations of tints and lighter colors utilize the light from a mazda lamp to much greater advantage and at a considerably lower cost than is possible with pure reds, greens or blues.

In general, some type of natural-colored glass filter, either in the lamp bulb or as an accessory, is more efficient and in most cases more effective than obtaining color by a colored coating or spray on the lamp. Initial output is better, and this advantage is strengthened as the lamp ages. It is especially desirable to use natural-colored glass filters in obtaining green and blue. The following chart summarizes some of the factors that influence the method of obtaining color from mazda lamps:

EFFECT OF COLORED LIGHT ON APPEARANCE OF COLORED OBJECTS

|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | Red | Orange | Yellow | Green | Blue | Violet |
| Black | Red Black | Orange Black | Yellow Black | Green Black | Blue Black | Violet Black |
| White | Red | Orange | Yellow | Green | Blue | Violet |
| Gray | Red Shade | Orange Shade | Yellow Shade | Green Shade | Blue Shade | Violet Shade |
| Red | Red | Scarlet | Orange | Brown | Purplish Black | Reddish Black |
| Orange | Red | Orange | Yellow Orange | Greenish Yellow | Black | Black |
| Yellow | Orange Red | Yellow Orange | Yellow | Yellowish Green | Greenish Black | Black |

advertisement, to the theatre interior to consider well the relative quantities of each color. If he has a successful print, he will get a successful theatre only when, in transposing the scheme, he uses similar areas of color.

To attack the matter from another angle of color composition: When we have three colors—say, a blue, a henna, and a yellow—in the rotation mentioned—that is, the henna between the blue and the yellow—we can be reasonably certain that a pleasant effect will at least be minimized if we attempt to change the positions of the colors. They probably will not flatter each other. Art in color requires fully as much taste and individual discernment as art in sound; that is, music. The results will be only as good as the refinement and circumspection used in making the application.

A Guide to Current Taste

It certainly is not contended here that one can arbitrarily take a successful color print, or advertisement, and apply it directly to the walls of a theatre, but it is contended that as we have in the past used our textiles to indicate and suggest the schemes for our domestic decorations, it is possible to use our modern color prints for our theatre decorations. As in the past we knew that certain damasks and textiles represented the collective good taste of those people who had their homes decorated, we now know that in the majority of the colored advertisements, for example, we see reflected current opinion and preference.

Let us suppose for a moment that we have succeeded in arriving at a delightful combination of colors and tones in our carpets, chair coverings, wall hangings, painted decoration and lighting fixtures: The theatre still presents a problem vastly more complicated than the printed picture which its maker expects to be viewed in daylight or, at the worst, in artificial light of a reasonably constant white tone. For the most part, the theatre is seen in semi-darkness, and on this point it must be borne in mind as an axiom, as a proven fact, that dark colors do better in dim light than the more delicate tints. The tints are good in bright light on porches, on beaches and on yachts, while in the more dimly-lighted rooms the rich and deep blues, reds, hennas and oranges are at their best.

Lighting a Prime Factor in Color Scheme

FOR AUDITORIUMS, at least, rich colors should be selected. But then we add another factor—colored light. Most theatres are arranged so that the lighting can be changed. Some times an amber is used, or a blue, or even a red, and it must be realized that under each light all the colors change and take on different complexions. Given a blue light, all the blues are intensified; given a yellow light, the yellows are lightened, the reds become full and the blues non-existent. Not only do they change in these different directions but, under unfortunate lighting, some of them become positively ugly. The relationships vary and they cease to be pleasing compositions. Different chemicals found in various colors used in their making react differently under various qualities of light. It is often found that two materials identical in color under one light are quite different under another light.

Our case, however, is by no manner of

Classic Shading of Modern for Suburban Folk

● Rocky River, Ohio, is a pretty residential suburb of Cleveland, populated for the most part by people of average means. For them Albert E. Ptak, James E. Scoville, John D. Kalafat and Howard Reif have built the Beach Cliff theatre. Seating 1,000 on a single floor, the Beach Cliff has been designed by Paul Matzinger, Cleveland architect, in a modern treatment having a slight but persistent classic "feeling" (the architect identifies this element as Pompeian). This theme is carried, in modern materials, throughout the theatre, with a general color scheme of tan and blue for ceiling, tan, blue and red for walls, and red predominantly characterizing carpeting and draperies. All lighting is indirect, wired in the auditorium for five colors.

The front (shown above with plenty of evidence of the community's interest in its new theatre) is finished in white, red and blue structural glass (by Libby-Owens-Ford), with porcelain enamel metal trim. The marquee (by Gustav Hirsch) is of porcelain enamel finish in blue, gray and red, luminously decorated in neon, with a white baked enamel soffit studded with 230 mazda lamps, and carrying lamp-illuminated attraction panels employing Adler silhouette letters. The vestibule leads into a medium-sized lobby, which in turn gives access directly to the auditorium and also to toilet facilities adjoining lobby.

The auditorium (below), with the tan-blue-red color scheme in blended tones, has walls of figured velour laid over mineral wool blanket at side walls and across the rear. The ceiling is of common plaster, painted. Seating (by American) is of modern lines with spring-edge seats and upholstering covered in rust-colored mohair. Air supply is by a blower system with evaporative cooling. Projection equipment includes Simplex mechanisms, RCA sound, Peerless Magnarc lamps and General Electric copper oxide rectifiers. The screen traveller curtain is of tan plush with stencil design matching the pattern of wall fabrics.

Foyer area extends across the rear of the auditorium, reached directly from the lobby. The lobby has walls done in red and blue leather with stainless steel strips, cowled ceiling with indirect lighting, and a floor of terrazzo. The foyer area (shown above) is carpeted in Crestwood Velvet having an abstract plant pattern dominantly blue and red with splashes of yellow, this carpeting continuing down aisles. Standee rail is of wood, stained dark oak and varnished. Though really the rear of auditorium, end sections are furnished as lounges.

Up from Nothing but a Vision of the

• It's an American story, that of the career of A. H. Blank, who was going to retire in 1929, but carried on to round out, in 1937, a quarter of a century as an exhibitor

1914

The first "moving picture" exhibition establishment owned by A. H. Blank — the Garden theatre in Des Moines, Iowa — in which he gambled all his hard-earned savings on the new amusement device.

REMEMBER ALADDIN, who rubbed his wonderful lamp, whereupon the genii appeared to do his bidding? Somehow that classic example of glorified magic came to mind upon interviewing A. H. Blank, theatre magnate of the Midwest, who this month is celebrating his Silver Anniversary as a motion picture exhibitor.

It was probably the lamps—studio and projection arc—by which the photoplay comes into being, that brought on the notion about Aladdin, but the idea got nowhere fast with Mr. Blank. The magic genii in his case has been, it soon appeared, simply WORK.

"Spelled in capital letters," added Mr. Blank. "There is nothing magic about my success in the business. It came, after a while, from hard, nerve-racking work. Chances taken and hard places crossed in every career are the things that produce the wrinkles and spoil one's sleep, but are the only things that get you where you want to go."

Mr. Blank's life story is similar to many others in America, who, born with faith in their own capacities and with the gift of vision enabling them to grasp opportunities while the grasping is good, have climbed from lowly beginnings to high places in their chosen fields.

Born in Roumania, Abe Blank came to America when eight years old, with his mother and three sisters, to join his father, who had preceded them to Council Bluffs, Iowa. The theatre seems to have put a finger on him pretty early, and perhaps the free, expansive spirit of Midwestern America nurtured those leanings. At any rate, he recalled:

"The spirit of a fair or theatre got into my blood when I was just a tiny boy. I was always looking for a chance to work with some amusement company."

'Way Back When— Starting as Bottle Washer

SUCH OPPORTUNITIES were few, and when family finances compelled him to go to work, he got a job as bottle washer in a factory. He was but twelve years old then. The pay was $3 a week, and he worked 14 hours a day. He spent $1.50 of his wages for board, used 50c for other expenses, and saved one dollar each week.

In telling this, Mr. Blank interrupted himself to comment, "If one does not save a little all the time, he will not have the means to grasp an opportunity when it comes along."

And the chance he had been waiting for —that is, to get into the amusement business—soon came and he was ready for it. At the Trans-Mississippi Exposition in Omaha in 1898, he sold toy balloons along the Midway and ran a little concession so successfully that both his pocketbook and his imagination swelled considerably.

His Next Interest: The Good Earth

However, he held those dreams in abeyance, going to Des Moines, Iowa, where with his savings of six years, he became associated with his brother in a soda water bottling plant. This work did not appeal to him and he went into the real estate business. (And in Des Moines, they tell you that Abe Blank made the dirt fly around there as long as he dealt in it.)

A. H. Blank visioned the future growth of films when the five-cent "flickers" made their appearance. Abandoning his real estate business in 1912 he entered into a partnership with Abe Frankel, leasing a small store room and opening a nickelodeon, extravagantly called the Casino. It was something of a "deluxe" theatre at that—it had camp chairs so the audience could be seated while watching the pictures!

This business flourished, and two years later, in 1914, Mr. Blank sold his share of the Casino to Mr. Frankel, and putting everything that he owned into the venture, opened the Garden theatre in Des Moines, a veritable palace at that time, with 700 seats and an admission price of 10 cents. The Garden was the first "dime house" west of the Mississippi.

The Des Moines theatre, built in 1919 at a cost said to have been $1,000,000, and with a seating capacity of 2,500, was his first big venture in theatre building. In 1926, Paramount's Publix Theatres, formed that year, bought a half interest in 22 A. H. Blank theatres in Iowa and Nebraska, at a consideration of approximately $2,500,000.

Decided to Retire — But

In theatre circles at that time this was considered a mighty transaction. Then in 1929 Publix bought the second half of A. H. Blank's theatres, and Mr. Blank had thoughts of retiring. But in 1933 he took the receivership of the theatres sold to Paramount in 1929, Paramount retaining 50 per cent of the stock with a buy-back clause in the contract. This was the beginning of Mr. Blank's Tri-State circuit.

He had retained a number of theatres when first selling to Paramount, and with Harry Weinberg and J. W. Denman, who were associated with him in the business, continued to build up the circuit that is now the Central States Theatre Corporation, with over 50 theatres.

The newest of the A. H. Blank theatre properties, the Capitol in Burlington, Iowa, opened in July of this year.

In July of this year Mr. Blank entered into a permanent partnership with Paramount Theatres, and under the new agreement Paramount obtained a half interest in Mr. Blank's Central States circuit, relinquishing their option to repurchase Mr. Blank's 50 per cent interest in the Tri-State circuit. The two circuits remain separate organizations with Mr. Blank as president of both organizations. Together these circuits comprise approximately 100 theatres.

"I think the greater measure of this success has come from making a certainty in my own mind out of what some other people might consider a risk," reflected Mr. Blank.

His Policy: Deal With The Public Generously

HIS RULES of theatre proprietorship and the methods he employs in attaining and maintaining the patronage and confidence of communities are clear and simple: He gives the public what they want in good honest measure with a little extra thrown in. He handles motion picture operations exactly as any good merchant handles his merchandise business.

"Profits are figured out on the basis of a fair and reasonable percentage," he pointed out, "keeping within and not trespassing beyond, this definite percentage."

And the position of Abe Blank in a vast industry today may well be looked upon as profit based on a fair and reasonable percentage of the WORK—capitalized—that he put into it. Vision, of course, and dreams—backed up by work.

And So It's Time To Celebrate

So now, 25 years after taking that "flyer" with Abe Frankel, he is well prepared to celebrate in the grand manner. More than 300 of his friends in and outside the motion picture industry have been invited to gather with him (and Mrs. Blank and their two sons, Raymond and Myron, who are associated with their Dad in the business) at the Hotel Fort Des Moines for some super-colossal dining, entertainment—and recollections.

"Helping people have a good time," remarked Mr. Blank, "is one of the most exhilarating things in the world."

He ought to know!

NEWS OF THEIR ACTIVITIES REPORTED FROM ALL SECTIONS AND BRIEFLY TOLD

Contract for the construction of the Rio theatre at Pearsall, Texas, to cost about $8,000, has been awarded to Charles Huie, local contractor, and work on the project will get under way immediately, according to Mrs. Viola Hubbard, owner.

Earl Kerr, who operates the Broadway theatre in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and three theatres in Missouri, has leased the Princess theatre at Oskaloosa, Iowa, from the W. I. Neagle estate. Plans for remodeling call for an increase in the seating capacity, redecoration, a new front, and installation of an RCA sound system. Ernest Kammerer, associated with the Kerr house in Council Bluffs for seven years, will manage the Princess.

Cliff Jarrett has been appointed assistant manager of Isador M. Rappaport's Hippodrome theatre in Baltimore.

Charles Robinson, who owns the Savoy theatre in Detroit, is the father of a daughter, born on Thanksgiving Day.

A. E. Jarbee has started extensive remodeling of his theatre. Plans were drawn by Robert O. Boller, Kansas City architect. Proposed improvements include a brick, steel and concrete rear addition to the theatre to measure 50 by 40 feet, and general interior alterations.

The Royal, Commonwealth circuit house in Trenton, Mo., is being remodeled and re-equipped with upholstered seats and RCA sound. Lee James is director of the Commonwealth theatres around Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Cassidy, who own houses in Midland and Saginaw, Mich., have been spending the last two months in Hollywood.

William F. Youngclaus plans to increase the seating capacity of his Empress theatre in Grand Island, Neb., from 400 to 750 seats.

Ed Mason, formerly of Des Moines, who recently purchased the old Colonial theatre in Osage, Iowa, from George Schwenneker, has reopened the house under the name of Osage theatre, following remodeling. A new front was erected in structural glass in ivory and grey.

Bruce F. Barton of Clayton, Mo., has prepared plans for the alterations to be made in the new Shenandoah theatre, St. Louis, Mo. The house is owned and operated by Sam Komm.

Walter McNeill has redecorated the lobby of the Apollo in Baltimore. Robert Ashbroft is the house manager.

Peter Laudati, G. T. Mann and M. Gordon have been named directors of the Miami Drive-In Theatre, Inc., which has been chartered with 100 shares at no-par.

The Balka Corporation has been incorporated in St. Louis, Mo., to engage in a theatre business, with 500 shares of $100 par value stock. Clarence H. Kaimann, William J. Kaimann, Francis S. Kaimann and Howard E. Ballman are the incorporators.

Rex Sanders, formerly associated with his father in the theatre business at Sanborn, Iowa, has bought and opened a motion picture house located in George, Iowa.

The Carroll Amusement Company, of which G. A. Richardson and Leo H. Homand are directors, has opened a new house, the Carroll, in Westminster, Md. M. Dohme has been named manager, with Roy Palmore appointed as supervising director.

Robert Helms and R. D. Muxen, who are operators of theatres in the northern part of California, have widened their field of operation by taking over the lease of the Old Mission theatre at Arroyo Grande in the southern section of the state.

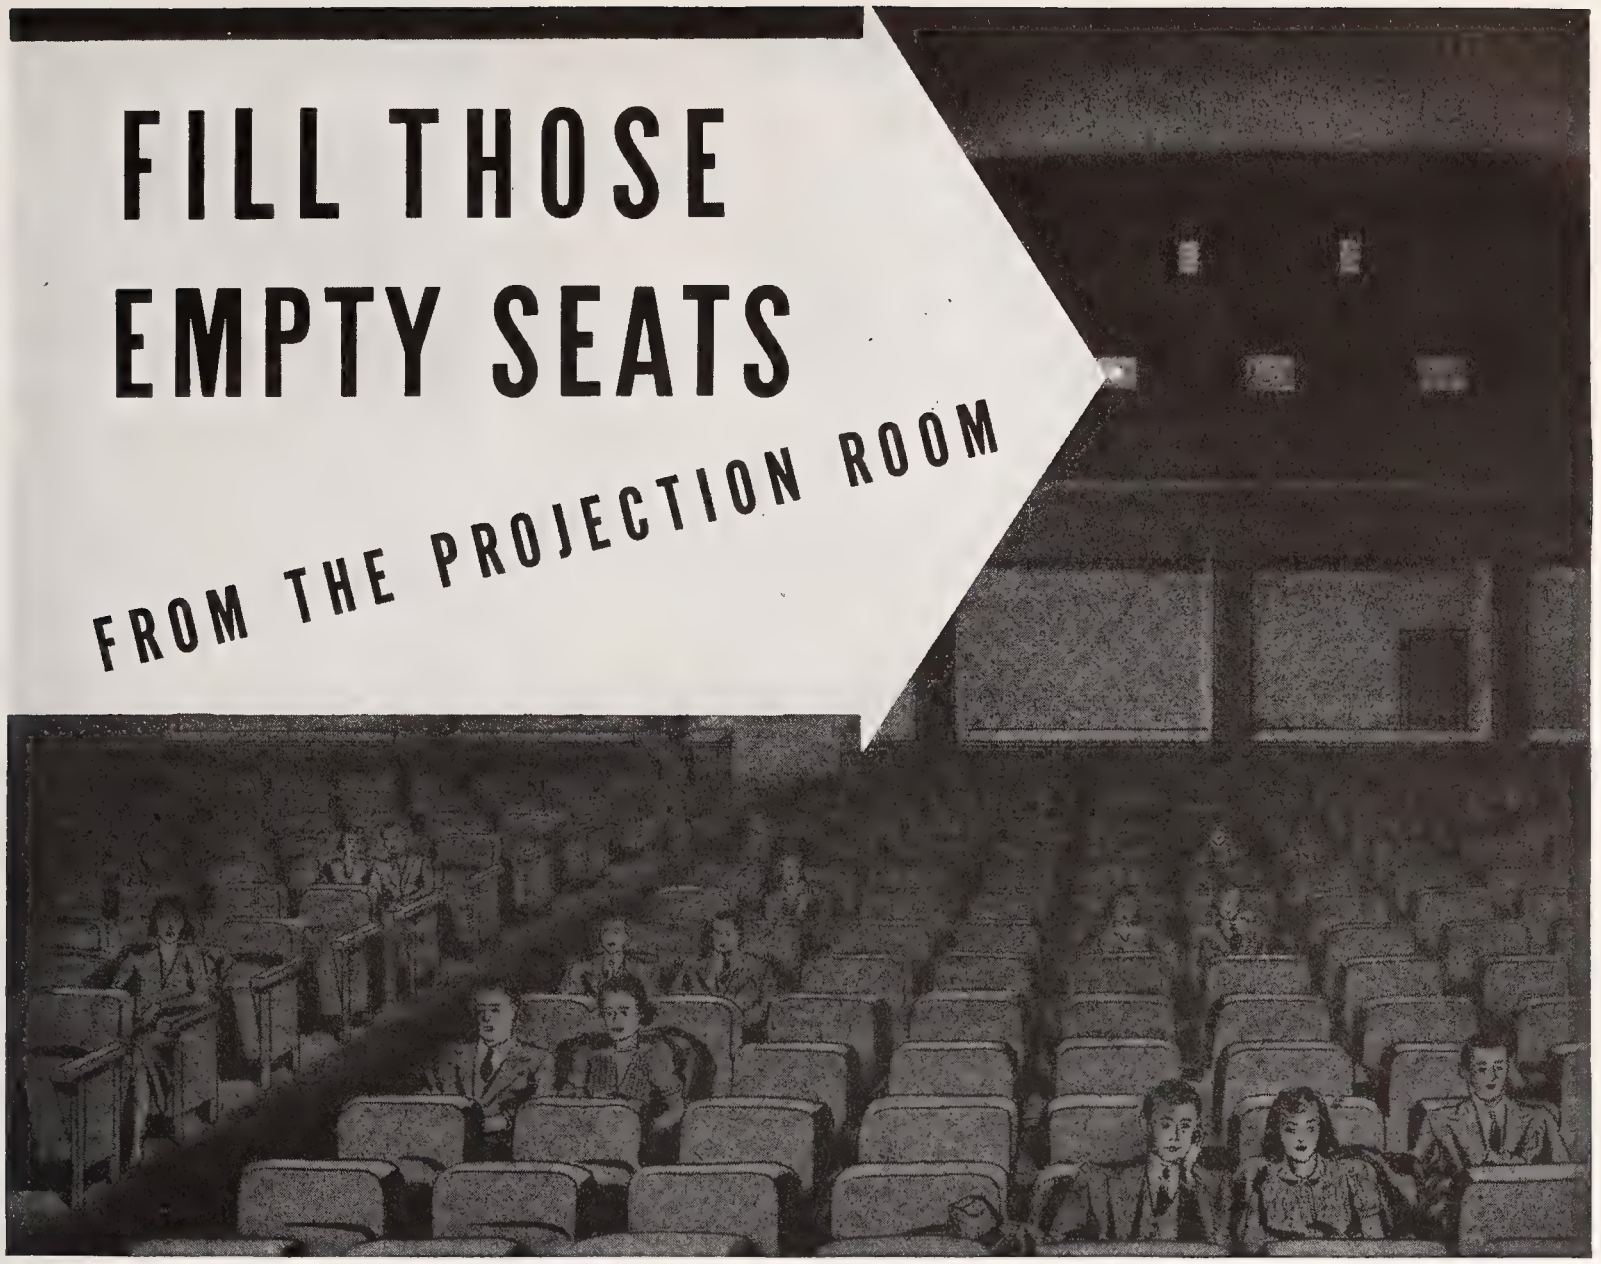
Wil-Kin Theatre Supply Inc., has been incorporated at Dover, Del., to deal in costumes, scenery, seats and theatre equipment of all kinds. The company lists a capital of 200 shares with no par value. Arthur Israel, Jr., C. Alen Hollomon and Samuel Boverman, all of New York, were listed as incorporators.

Roy Palmer has purchased the Peter Pan theatre at Cloverdale, Calif., and has renamed the house the Del Rio.

According to Glen W. Dickinson, a sum amounting to $40,000 will have been expended by January 1 in remodeling theatres of his circuit during the last six months especially in Macon, Mo., and Parsons, Olathe and Manhattan, Kansas.

Herbert Barrett is managing the new 500-seat Uptown at Fort Atkinson, Wis. The house is operated by I. J. Craite and John Mayles.



The State theatre in Pawhuska, Okla., is being remodeled. Acoustical board is being applied to walls and ceiling, in a panel effect, with brown walls and tan ceiling. The lobby of the house will be redone in black and white panels. A. B. Momand

J. Frank, Jr., who has been appointed by Walter E. Green, president of National Theatre Supply Company, to that concern's sales department to be in charge of the promotion of reproducing and projector equipment. In taking his new post, Mr. Frank leaves the position of assistant sales manager of the International Projector Corporation, with which he became associated in 1936 following eight years with RCA. Mr. Frank is secretary of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

FROM THE PROJECTION ROOM

The heart of your business is the projection room. You deliver from there what the patrons pay for, the thing you are selling, the picture on the screen.

Audiences today are much more critical. They get around. In 5000 theaters high intensity projection is giving movie goers a new standard of picture quality which they will expect to see in your theater.

If you want to build steady patronage, to fill your house regularly, here is the quickest, surest way to do it.

With SIMPLIFIED HIGH INTENSITY projection you can have two to three times as much light on the screen as you get from low intensity — yet at a price you can easily afford. This greatly improved lighting and projection can be covered by only one more admission per show.

Checking Up on Just What Part The Condenser Plays in Cooling

● To keep tab on refrigeration costs, certain processes should be clearly understood, and one notes some confusion. This is an attempt to clear it up.

CONDENSERS are a part of of every mechanical refrigeration system, yet for some reason few theatre managers really know just what takes places in the condensers, or exactly what part they play in the whole system. I have noted some confusion concerning them for some time.

In order to understand just what a condenser is, let us for a moment review the refrigeration cycle. The entire pipe work of an air-conditioning plant is a completely enclosed system of pipes, it is a closed "circuit" of pipes through which a liquid or gas may flow—there is no free opening to the air. Into this closed "circuit" is connected, in "series," the compressor, the condenser, the cooling oil (I am assuming for this description a system of one compressor, one condenser, one coil) and certain valves, strainers (or filters), etc. So the whole system is like a circle, continuous and endless.

This system is thoroughly evacuated (all air and other gases removed, made as complete and as perfect a vacuum as possible). Then it is charged with a quantity of gas known as Freon (Freon is just a name, sometimes referred to as F-12, sometimes referred to as Kinetic No. 12, and actually is dichloro-difluoro-methane, C $Cl_2$ $F_2$). Now in this closed "circuit" or circle we can start at any point, so let us start at the compressor.

The Compressor And What It Does

THE COMPRESSOR sucks the Freon into the cylinder through the suction valve, compresses it by the action of the piston, and discharges it into the discharge pipe through the discharge valve. The Freon is now under high pressure and, we believe, in the form of very heavy dense vapor. It is forced into the condenser where it is cooled, and because it is cooled it condenses to a liquid. The liquid is then forced on to the expansion valve, which is just ahead of the coil. It is called an expansion valve because, as the liquid passes through it, the liquid expands so rapidly that it vaporizes (becomes a gas). From this point the Freon, now a gas, is sucked or drawn back to the suction valve and passes into the cylinder again for compression. The process is continued over and over again with each stroke of the piston, and consequently it is called a cycle.

If the refrigeration cycle is analyzed it can be seen that the high-pressure portion of the closed "circuit" is from the discharge valve on the cylinder to the expansion valve on the coil. The low pressure portion is from the expansion valve on the coil to the suction valve on the cylinder. From the discharge valve on the cylinder to the condenser (high pressure) the gas is very hot —this can be ascertained by the touch of the hand, consequently this portion of the "circuit" is referred to as the "hot pipe." From the condenser to the expansion valve on the coil the Freon is in liquid form, so this portion is frequently referred to as the "liquid, or liquor line." The portion from the coil to the suction valve on the cylinder is called the suction line.

The Freon in the form of a heavy dense gas or vapor arrives at the condenser under high pressure and is hot. The condenser cools the gas sufficiently so that it condenses to a liquid. This is an all important step and definitely establishes the practical capacity of the machine. It is at this point that the heat picked up by the system is removed, generally by the transfer of the heat to water, then the water again gives it up to the atmosphere (the heat is right back again outdoors where it was in the

Boiler Room Located On the Second Floor

In the Cine theatre, new Balaban & Katz house in Chicago, the boiler room has an unusual location—on the second floor, over the lobby. Difficulty in waterproofing the basement was the reason for locating it there. Use of oil for fuel and forced draft in the boilers made a stack unnecessary.

The fan room and mechanical refrigeration units are located on the third floor over the boiler room. Cooling equipment consists in three 25-ton condensers with gas-cooled Westinghouse motors. The system, designed by the Kroeschell Engineering Company of Chicago, brings conditioned air into the auditorium along the ceiling and exhausts spent air at the stage and on the balcony.

Types of Condensers; How They Function

THERE are several types of condensers (sometimes called heat exchangers, because actually that is all they do). The three types most generally found in the theatres are the double pipe (on the older $CO_2$ plants), the shell and tube, and the evaporative condenser. There is no use discussing the double pipe—there probably will not be any more of them installed in theatres, and those that have them now undoubtedly know their weak points.

Shell and Tube Condensers

Shell and tube condensers may be either vertical or horizontal (I have never run across any vertical shell and tube con-

CARPET MAINTENANCE: The maintenance of carpets in theatres has always been a problem, and probably always will be, but proper care will go a long way toward helping matters. A good vacuum cleaner is indispensable for the daily care of carpets. Years ago when vacuum cleaners were first introduced it was considered detrimental to the carpet for it to be vacuumed every day. Today, however, the daily use of the cleaner does no damage.

It is a well-known fact that a pile fabric which is allowed to retain dirt will not wear as well as one kept free from dirt and dust. Soiled carpet is frequently mistaken for worn carpet, or fading or crushed pile. When carpets appear to be worn, examine them closely to see whether they are really worn or whether they are merely soiled. Carpets that are frequently shampooed on the floor usually come to look worn or faded, or both.

LIFE OF SCREENS: All screens deteriorate with age. This deterioration is most noticeable in the reduced reflective value of the screen. The gradual reduction of the reflective value means the picture gets darker as time goes on. This deterioration of reflective value begins immediately upon the installation of the screen. Some recent check readings were as follows:

| Age of Screen | Reflective Value |
|---|---|
| New | 100% |
| 3 months, 1 week | 89% |
| 10 months | 70% |
| 13 months, 2 weeks | 61% |

In just 6 weeks more than one year there had been a gradual loss in picture brilliance of 39%. Two years is really about the economic life of any screen.

DEGREE DAY: This is a term coming more and more into use. It is used to express the demand made on the heating plant during any one year as compared to any other year. It explains whether the weather of this year properly should have required more coal, oil or gas to be burned in the boiler to maintain 70° inside.

The degree-day is a value arrived at by subtracting the mean average temperature for 24 hours from 65°. For instance, let's assume that the mean average temperature for 24 hours to be 40°, then 65–40=25, therefore in that one day there were 26 degree-days.

If this is figured for each day during the heating season, the total will represent the degree days for the whole season. By comparing this total with the total for the year previous, you can tell whether one season required the burning of more or less coal. This method affords an excellent check on the fuel bills. It has long been used by the American Gas Association.

DEGREE-HOUR: For some years the air-conditioning engineers who have been charged with the operating of plants have been trying to develop some method for the comparison of the climatic load conditions as they vary from season to season in order to get a check on the performance of each plant. This past summer one of the leading publications in the air-conditioning field has put out the term "degree-hour." The claim is that that part of the air-conditioning load which is dependent upon the outside dry bulb temperature, is proportional to the number of hours that the outside temperature is above 85° F.

For example, if during any day the temperature was 86°, 91°, 93°, 95°, 87°, for five hours; then 86–85=1, 91–85=6, 93–85=8, 95–85=10, and 87–85=2, and 1+6+8+10+2=27, or 27 degree-hours in that day.

The sum of the degree-hours in any month would give the total for the month, and so on for the season. By comparison with previous months or seasons one can judge whether the sensible load has been greater or less. It would be well to institute some such check as this for the coming season.

densers in theatres). The usual shell and tube condenser is a multi-press condenser—that is, the water for cooling the gas makes more than one passage from end to end of the condenser. The general construction is a large cylinder of steel or other metal with a series of tubes extending through the large cylinder. These smaller tubes terminate in tube sheets, and the joining of the tubes to the tube sheets must be at all times both gas-tight and liquid-tight.

At the end of the large cylinder the tube sheets form a water compartment, or a series of water compartments. Water is pumped into the compartment at one end and flows through the small tubes to the water box at the other end, at the same time the high pressure gas is forced into the large cylinder or shell and occupies the space around the small pipe. As the gas comes in contact with the pipes or tubes it cools and condenses. The hot water is drawn off and forced over a cooling tower where it (the water) is cooled by evaporation through exposure to the atmosphere.

There is a variation of the shell and tube condenser used on many of the smaller Freon compressors. The shell is of heavy metal and the tubing is of copper in a continuous spiral.

The Evaporative Condenser

The high cost of water for condensing purposes has led to the development of the so-called evaporative condenser. This type uses a minimum amount of water sprayed over a series of finned tubes, through which the hot gas is forced, and at the same time a blower forces air over the finned tubes. By this method the hot gas provides the heat for evaporating the water on the outer surfaces of the finned tubes, and the blower forces the air against the tubes to pick up the water vapor thus formed. The effect may be demonstrated by dipping your hand into water on a warm day then swinging it vigorously in a large circle from the shoulder. Your hand cools rapidly.

Generally speaking, the wet bulb of the air used by the blower will establish the cooling that takes place in this type of condenser. Many times the efficiency of this type of condenser has been materially improved by using some of the spill air from the conditioned space because that air generally will have a substantially lower wet bulb than the outside atmosphere.

Also generally speaking (this does not apply directly to evaporative condensers), the amount and the temperature of the condensing water determines the temperature, and consequently the pressure of the liquid going to the expansion valve; and it follows that it directly affects the capacity of the compressor; also, indirectly it affects the power required to drive the compressor, and it affects the efficiency of the system.

Dirty Condensers Boost Costs

Consequently there is no more important part of a refrigeration system than the condensers. Dirty condensers will retard the flow of water and therefore reduce the quantity. Dirt will retard the rate of heat exchange in the condenser between the hot gas and the water. Dirt will reduce efficiency of the whole system, therefore dirty condensers will run up your operating costs.

Make it a point to know the particular type of condenser used on your plant, if you have mechanical refrigeration, and inquire from the manufacturers just how they should be kept clean. This shut-down season is the time to overhaul condensers.

Reducing Lighting Costs By Proper Maintenance

● Simple, inexpensive methods which, if consistently followed, keep illumination charges at their lowest, are here reviewed

PROPER installation and maintenance of lighting equipment can reduce illumination costs at least one-third of the amount commonly met with today, declares Samuel G. Hibben, director of applied lighting for the Westinghouse Lamp Division. In a recent discussion of economical maintenance of illumination facilities, he urges methodical measures to guard against "insidious losses" from low voltage, improper or old lamps, dusty reflectors, dirty walls and ceiling surfaces, and unused sockets. Each of these factors are dealt with in turn in a paper entitled "Light Housekeeping Pays," liberal amounts of which are present below.

Although the cost of regularly washing lamps and reflectors is relatively low, Mr. Hibben has found neglect to be a common cause of light loss and hence an important cost factor. It is, moreover, one that begins early in the life of an installation. Mr. Hibben states:

First Dirt the Costliest

"One must expect a continuous depreciation due to the continuing deposits of dust on reflectors and the continual aging of lamps. However, this falling off in efficiency is not a straight line function. Usually the greatest losses occur in the first month or six weeks (some 15% in the first month is perhaps a fair average). Dust deposited upon old dust is not so costly as is the first thin layer. The loss of light from the normal and unavoidable depreciation of the lamp bulb itself from internal blackening seldom brings the final output of that lamp below 90% of its initial efficiency. However, blackening does continue as almost a straight-line slope, hence a very aged lamp bulb can economically be removed and replaced by a new one should it be found to live much beyond its rated life.

How Bulbs Should Be Cleaned

"In any discussion of economics one naturally asks the question, 'How should lighting equipment be cleaned and what does it cost?' In general the experience of past years has shown that bulbs and reflectors should be wiped free of dust at least once each month. Except in unusually dirty locations, they should be washed at least once every 60 days. It is not a bad plan to alternate dry and wet cleaning . . .

"Stubborn cases of encrusted, greasy dirt require warm water and soap, or a mild grease solvent. Extreme cases of hardened sooty deposits, particularly on surfaces outdoors, may require a dilute solution of oxalic acid. After the common washing with soapy water, and to avoid the soap film that will hold the next deposit of dust, wipe and dry the reflector carefully, or preferably rinse in ammonia water.

Cleaning Costs And Methods

CLEANING costs vary, but they seem to average in the neighborhood of 4% of the total operating costs of a lighting installation. If, as seems evident, such cleaning will in itself increase the illumination 20% or 25%, then the results pay for the expenditure four or five times . . .

"What we have discussed about dirt on the reflector applies in principle to grimy or discolored interior surfaces. Neglecting for a moment the efficiency differences of different colors of painted surfaces, we may consider merely the losses due to neglect thereof. In an enclosed space such as a small room any change in the light reflected by the walls and ceiling will change the light available at work level almost in the same proportion.

"Individual studies must be made to ascertain how frequently an interior may be repainted, but it seems common practice to find it economical to wash most painted interiors once annually. How much the reflection coefficient may be increased by washing is impossible to answer definitely, but many studies indicate that an increase on the order of 10% is not to be considered uncommon.

Lamp Efficiency

"Our third item of neglected maintenance has to do with lamps of poor quality. The cost of the lamp bulb is merely a small 'down payment' on the cost of lighting. It usually represents less than 10% of the total, and a few cents difference in the cost of the bulb is really negligible, whereas a few per cent difference in output efficiency is vitally important. If we evaluate lighting costs properly we find that a deficiency of 6% in the lamp efficiency is about equal to the average first cost of the lamp. Hence inefficient lamps are not cheap at any cost, and if the poor lamp is 7% less efficient than a reputable good one, then the purchaser thereof should really be given a bonus to compensate him for his lighting losses.

Empty Sockets

"Empty sockets and unobserved burnouts take their toll of lighting efficiency. Fixed charges, as cost of installation and investment, continue whether the socket is empty or full.

"Obviously the unobserved burnout is doubly to be avoided because if the unit appears ready for service and yet fails to function in an emergency or need, it represents a definite loss, sometimes an accident hazard. If an installation of a plurality of sockets can be found satisfactory when a considerable number of the lamps are burned out or removed, then the prima facie evidence is that the lighting plan was at fault. Surplus dead sockets cost something as standby investments and one would conclude that the most economical installation should have been based upon the minimum number of sockets, but each lamped, and doing its full share of duty.

Old Lamps Should Be Replaced

"We have previously remarked that aged lamps in a properly maintained system should be removed even though still capable of burning. Happily, the American-made lamps of high standing infrequently blacken seriously enough to necessitate removal before burnout, but there are cases on record where lamps may live much beyond the designed life and degenerate into electric heaters. They become like the hose-nozzle that might gradually be allowed to have its orifice reduced in size and from which less and less water flows. Consequently the up-to-date user in many instances finds it economical to remove lamps which have burned beyond their normal period, and have become darkened.

"A moment's calculation will disclose the very slight cost of this perfection of service. For example, consider the 100-watt Mazda lamp which the reasonably large user will purchase for 20c. During its rated 750-hour life it will consume 75 kilowatt hours of energy at 3c per kilowatt hour, which will cost $2.25. A 9% average loss of efficiency during such a burning time (say the second 750 hours) would be equivalent to 20c, or the cost of a new lamp.

Correct Voltage

"Another pocketbook problem in connection with the economics of maintenance is the under-voltage burning of the lamp.

LOSS OF LIGHT FROM MAINTENANCE NEGLECT

The general features of wiring and voltage have been discussed previously, but under our present consideration comes the matter of voltage as affected strictly by maintenance. To a minor degree, there may be some loss in voltage due to any corroded contacts throughout the system. To a greater degree, there is a voltage loss resulting from haphazardly extending or overloading branch circuits, a temptation that exists through practicing the false economy of saving a little copper at the cost of lumens.

Voltage Drop Should Not Exceed 2%

"The voltage drop in any system should not exceed 2%. In the main this is counter-balanced by providing a slightly excess voltage at the service entrance or the distribution panel. The cost evaluated in units of light amounts to approximately a 3% diminution of illumination for a 1% drop in voltage. Consequently the highest economy dictates that there must be the closest possible agreement between the designed and rated voltage of the lamp and the actual socket voltage, or that the latter be not less than the former. By overvoltage burning, one gains light at the cost of life, but as lamp bulbs have been and are in general constantly decreasing in first cost, this feature of operating costs deserves much careful study.

Maintenance and Inspection Routine

"IN ORDER to strengthen each link, and to secure the most seeing ability for our dollar, we must direct our generated light to its point of usefulness. If the glass reflector be broken, the light is wasted sidewise since the proper reflector usually increases the usable light from two to three times over that from the bare lamp. If the metal reflector becomes tarnished or bent much the same thing occurs. If—and this is an important point—the wrong size of lamp bulb be inserted in the reflector, then the emitted beam is changed and the combination loses effectiveness. For example, a 200-watt size of RLM reflector and corresponding wattage of lamp will emit light with an output efficiency of about 70%. If a 150-watt lamp is inserted in this same reflector, the output efficiency drops to about 62%. One of the best checks on this loss is to guard against the careless interchange of bulbs and accessories.

Inspection Schedule

"The whole secret of an efficient lighting installation after it has once been properly installed lies in planned periodic attention. Frequently sight meter surveys are recommended in order to detect depreciation. Above all, the maintenance must be made the regular duty of a reliable employee who appreciates the worth of his job. He should receive credit for doing a good job. Neglect that is quite common today has been proved to reduce the possible illumination by an estimated amount of easily one-third."

Two-Amplifier Rack Designed for Single Or Dual Operation

A TWO-AMPLIFIER rack with connections through the changeover panel so arranged that the amplifiers may be operated singly or together, for the purpose of serving either a small or large theatre with film-sound or public address amplification, has been developed by Herman A. DeVry, Inc., of Chicago. The equipment consists in two 15-watt amplifiers, two exciter lamp rectifiers, and the changeover switch panel.

Changeover is accomplished by means of a relay in the changeover panel controlled by switches mounted on the wall near the projectors. Signal lamps indicate when either or both amplifiers are operating.

No field supply is provided, the equipment being designed for permanent magnet speakers and high-frequency units.

Tubes employed are two 6C6's, one 42, two 6A3's and one 523. Exciter lamp rectifiers also supply filament current for the pre-amplifier. Input and output impedance is 500 ohms.

Advantages of the New Methods Of Servicing Sound Equipment

● Cumbersome and rather costly were many maintenance practices once followed. They've been simplified, and examined here are notable changes

By AARON NADELL

THE FINE ART of keeping sound equipment up to par now incorporates extensive improvements over the practices of two or three years ago; refinements recently built into the apparatus itself have been fully matched by advances in the technique of servicing.

A number of changes were imposed by the advent of modern sound systems; methods that were good enough for the earlier, more limited models were found to be inadequate. But servicing has also followed its own, independent line of progress, elaborating new techniques and taking advantage of new facilities as fast as they became available.

A most valuable improvement which is not as widely known as it should be relates to the breaking down of the familiar "gain run" into a number of successive runs applied to individual portions of equipment. The earlier practice has been encountered by almost everyone; a volume meter calibrated in decibels is connected to the loudspeaker circuit and used to check the system response to a standard frequency film. The volume at which different pitches of sound are reproduced is thus measured, and any frequency discrimination that may exist becomes visibly evident. All that remains to be done is find out which component of the system is causing the trouble! To be blunt about it, the procedure formerly involved "fooling around" with exciter lamp focus, amplifier tubes, and this and that, until in the course of time and persistence the gain run gave better results.

Separate Gain Runs Method Used Today

THE MORE modern practice is sufficiently logical—apply separate gain runs to each system component, and find the faulty unit at once. It is done today, but not because engineers have become more logical—merely because they have output meters that can do it. The older meters were insufficiently sensitive; the full amplification of the system was needed to make them work. Correspondingly inexpensive meters can now read the output of a voltage amplifier as readily as that of a power amplifier.

Seek Out Each Fault in Time

The greater part of the sound system can be checked piecemeal, and small flaws that add up to a conspicuously defective result can be caught and corrected one at a time. But the practice is still not as widespread as it should be, for no other reason than that too much servicing is still being done with the old meters.

Where exceptional occasion requires, modern servicing reads the output of the photocell directly. Cathode ray oscilloscopes capable of such measurements are on the open market, and not costly.

Using Audio-Frequency Oscillator

Conversely, it is now possible to measure all of the system, exclusive of the photocell, by means of an audio-frequency oscillator which can be bought for as little as $30. In the past, when measured sound was put into a system to check performance, it was necessary to thread up a test reel. The amplifiers and speakers could be examined only with sound that had come through, and perhaps been distorted by, the photocell and its associated apparatus. Today the desired frequency is electrically generated in a small, portable gadget and applied to the amplifiers direct.

The oscillator has the further advantage that its output frequency can be made anything desired, can be changed instantly to any other, and can be controlled accurately as to volume. It provides a particularly handy and effective check in dealing with modern multiple-speaker systems, their filter networks and their separate high-frequency and low-frequency amplifiers.

Practices That Save Time and Money

NEW PRACTICES have kept pace with new facilities. For example, the writer recently had occasion to look for trouble in a small theatre amplifier. At one time, running down the fault to a given amplifier of the system was all that would have been required in the way of servicing. A new amplifier would have been put in and the faulty one sent back to its maker at a charge to the theatre for factory overhaul and for transportation both ways. But nearly all internal troubles are now fixed on the spot. It's cheaper; and the testing facilities and replacement parts are available anywhere.

Until still more recently, however, it would have been good practice to look through the amplifier and find the flaw, then come back next day with the needed replacement. In the present case, the amplifier was examined only so far as to make sure that the transformers (which are still expensive) were not at fault. When this was ascertained, work stopped, and an immediate purchase was made of replacements for every resistor and condenser the apparatus contained. Those parts would once have cost so many dollars as to make that course impracticable; under current conditions the price of the whole lot was 65c! Work was then resumed with every replacement that could be needed right at hand.

For Example, a 9-Cent Condenser

A condenser which once cost much more than 65c all by itself was found to be defective. It was rated at about 135 volts and had broken down, in the course of time, under 100 volts. It was replaced with a 9c article of 500-volt rating that will last in that amplifier until the crack of doom. The balance of the purchase increased the resources of the spare parts cabinet.

Repairing in the theatre, rather than returning to manufacturer; keeping ample stocks of spare parts, which are now so inexpensive; and replacement of faulty components, not with identical duplicates that can be expected to cause trouble again, but with inexpensive modern equivalents of much greater safety factor—these are three of the features of present-day servicing that distinguish it from the methods used in the past.

Locating Amplifier Defects

A comparable modern practice is that of tackling amplifier trouble, first of all, by replacing every tube in the unit. A great deal of time may be saved, very little will be lost (just enough for the new tubes to heat up) and the cost is small. Subsequently, whenever the requirements of operation allow, tubes that function singly can be replaced one at a time until the defective one has been found.

But tubes that operate in pairs or groups, as in push-pull or full-wave circuits, are not replaced one at a time, only as groups. If one of a group is at fault, the other or others are not used unless they can be tested and suitably matched. Some tube manufacturers will make such tests for their customers. Many tubes, however, including modern power tubes, are not worth enough to justify sending them anywhere for test, and comparatively few cost enough to justify using them without proper matching.

This method of dealing with possible tube troubles of course requires a reasonably stocked spare parts cabinet—yet many parts are not carried as lavishly as in the past. Spare parts inventories are entirely different. Many items (or thoroughly suitable equivalents) are available everywhere. On the other hand, special parts, once supplied promptly by sound system manufacturers and servicing organizations, now are sometimes hard to get. Deliveries even in the large cities may be held up for weeks, and there is an increasing tendency to order reserves of such parts whenever wear or past trouble indicates a possible need for them.

Panoramic Projection With Two Synchronized Projectors

The panoramic screen as erected on the Pavilion of Light.

• Describing the mechanical arrangement and screen employed to present gigantic motion picture image at the Paris Exposition

ONE OF THE most impressive demonstrations at the Paris Exposition of what man can do today with his machines, is that conducted regularly for the delight and amazement of thousands of visitors by the Brockliss-Simplex organization, French subsidiary of J. Frank Brockliss, Ltd., of London, prominent distributor of motion picture equipment in Europe. With equipment especially developed for the purpose, panoramic motion pictures, with sound, are presented on a huge screen attached to the exterior of the Pavilion of Light.

A brief news account of this feature of the fair appeared in a previous issue of BETTER THEATRES. Given here are the

THE MAGNET THAT PULLS THEM IN

Todays critical audiences' demand for quality projection can best be met with Peerless Magnarc High Intensity Lamps.

In no other lamp is it possible to obtain so much value for first cost expenditure and such a great degree of purchase satisfaction after installation. The proof of this lies in the fact that Peerless Magnarc outsell all others two to one.

High intensity projection has been found an absolute necessity by one-third of all theatres in the United States — and these theatres have 75 per cent of the total seating capacity of the country.

This modernizing of projection has been brought about mainly by Peerless Magnarc's ability to produce 200 to 300 per cent more light on the screen for the same current cost of low intensity lamps. Think what this means in better picture quality, audience satisfaction, competitive advantage. Then write for the new folder, "Get A Seat On The Bandwagon."

essential technical details, which have been supplied by A. Gillet of the Brockliss-Simplex organization, the engineers of which collaborated in the development of the necessary projection and camera equipment, assisted by Professor Chrétien, noted French physicist, and Jean Tedesco, film director.

Screen 197 Feet Wide, 33 Feet High

A year of study, experiment and construction work was required to present the panoramic motion pictures. Two projectors are used, operated in synchronization, each projecting only half of the image. The screen is 60 meters (approximately 197 feet) wide and 10 meters (approximately 33 feet) high.

In order to obtain sufficient illumination of the projected images, it was necessary to provide arc lamps of great power, and it was also necessary to study the question of the reflective power of screens.

Screen Has Glass Bead Surface

After several tests, the best results were given by a screen made of cloth on which extremely small, exactly spherical glass beads were affixed. This screen has as its base a composition, a few centimeters thick, made of limestone and sand perfectly blended. After this mixture was thoroughly dry, it was covered with many coats of insulating varnish. This varnish was afterwards covered with six coatings of white lead, and these coatings were in turn coated with an adhesive varnish, on which the beads were projected by means of a special small compressed air gun. The resulting screen surface is directional, having maximum reflection within an angle of 43°.

Outside of this angle, the reflective power diminishes to about one-half its maximum. Nevertheless, at least 4,000 people can view the picture to good effect.

Third Projector for Synchronization

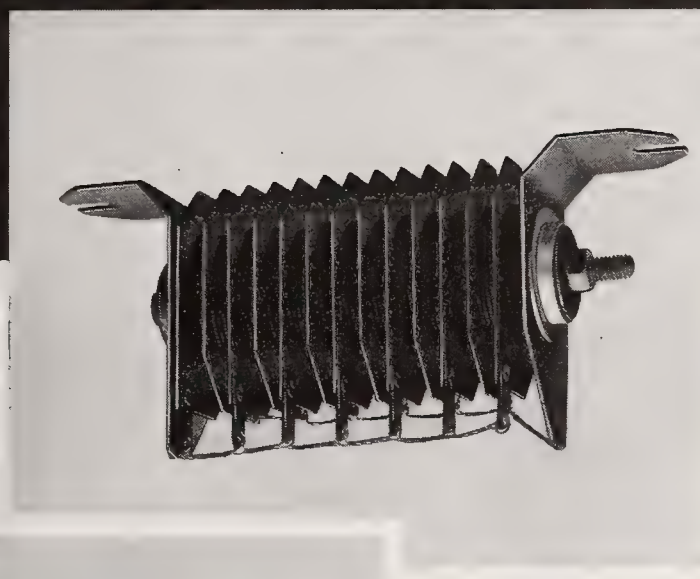
In projection, two standard Simplex projectors with rear shutters are employed. They are synchronized by means of a third Simplex mechanism, identical with the other two, attached through a mechanical coupling connected by two axles. The central projector is operated by a motor of 1½ h. p.

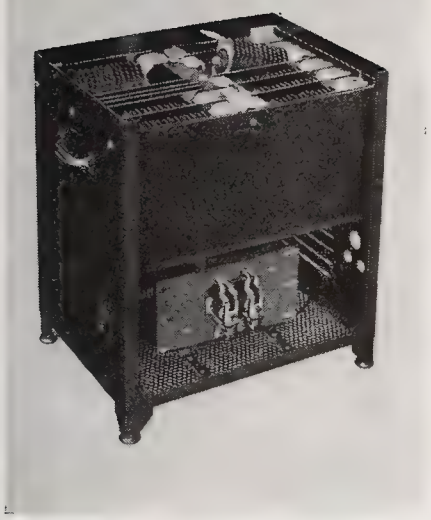
Each of the image projecting mechanisms is equipped with Taylor Hobson objective lenses with an extra illuminating focus of 120 mm., and an aperture of F.2/O. Before each of these objectives there is an optical system designed by Professor Chrétien, Paris physicist, which properly spreads the beam to give a panoramic image of constant illumination.



The projectors, with the synchronizing mechanism in the middle.

The films used have been photographed with two cameras, each taking one-half of the image to be projected, and these halves are united in the process described.

Projection light sources are Hall & Connolly reflector arcs with thermostatic control, operated at 250 amperes, 70 volts. The arcs are fed by special equipment at 800 amperes, 110 volts.



Concerning the third projector mechanism, through which the image projecting mechanisms are synchronized, M. Gillet states, "This apparatus permits the sound system to render synchronized music, and also provides the filing off of the images, which are projected on a central screen of 300 square meteres, and during this time the projection of the two extreme projectors has been shut off by using an opaque film."

G-E COPPER OXIDE RECTIFIERS-

G-E COPPER OXIDE STACKS

These copper oxide stacks are the heart of G-E Copper Oxide Rectifiers for Projection Service. Extensive research in copper . . . exacting methods of oxidation and manufacture . . . test after test insure superior operating characteristics and long life. No other type of dry rectifier can perform as long and efficiently as a General Electric Copper Oxide.

G-E COPPER OXIDE UNIT ASSEMBLY

Notice the assembly of these copper oxide stacks in the case. It is compact and built to last. Heavy steel brackets support units at each end. They also serve as electrical connections. Heavy copper bus bars interconnect the stacks. This method of mounting copper oxide units eliminates the usual multiplicity of connecting wires and soldered joints.

THE COMPLETE UNIT

The G-E Copper Oxide Rectifiers for Projection Service can be installed wherever convenient. They are so cool and quiet in operation that many installations are made in the projection booth. The exterior is free from switches and controls. By connecting a pair of the G-E Copper Oxides in series, a spotlight may be operated.

TWO-PIECE CONSTRUCTION

To make handling and installation easier, the G-E Copper Oxide Rectifier is made in two sections. The bottom section contains the stacks, control relays and patented blower system. The top section contains the transformer section and control panel. Primary and secondary taps permit a wide range of adjustments. The output is exceptionally smooth.

• General view of the projection room of the Gem theatre in Kannapolis, N. C., and at right, Eugene Corbin, who presides over it. The Gem, opened early in 1937, is modern throughout, as may be gleaned from the views of the entrance and auditorium, with box-spring seating (by American), Crestwood Velvet carpeting in all traffic areas, and three-color lighting in the auditorium.

Unique City

• Many a projectionist yearns for such provisions as those of the Gem theatre in Kannapolis, N. C.—and perhaps for precisely such a town, for there are neither taxes nor politicians

AMONG projection layouts which have been widely commented upon for their convenience and completeness is that of the Gem theatre in unique Kannapolis, N. C., which has neither taxes nor politicians! The Gem is owned and operated by the Cannon Mills Company, towel manufacturers, which concern, indeed, owns most of the commercial and residential buildings, and maintains all services in this unincorporated city of 18,000. The company operates the Gem, a new house, and the YMCA theatre not as mere employe recreational establishments, however, but for the entire community, which, with the area immediately surrounding Kannapolis proper, has a population estimated to approach 30,000. Both theatres are operated under the supervision of John Yandle. W. A. Powell manages the Gem.

The Gem projection room is 28 feet wide, 13 feet deep, and 10 feet high, and has a rubber composition tile floor. The projection angle is 12°, the throw, 112 feet. Distance from the last row of seats to the screen is 123 feet, and the screen image is 14x19.

Projection and Sound Equipment

Projection equipment consists in Simplex mechanisms and Brenkert Enarc light sources on Simplex bases. The theatre has a fully equipped stage, and projection room equipment includes a Brenkert spot and a Golde effect machine. The projection arcs are operated at 60 amperes, the spot at 100. All arc rectification is by Hertner 80-160 ampere motor-generators, operated in conjunction with Brenkert rheostats and located in an adjoining room measuring 8x15 feet.

The sound system is of the latest type RCA Photophone with push-pull, rotary stabilizer heads. The main amplifier rack, of 50-watt type, is located at the rear wall centered on a median line between the projectors. The monitor speaker is controlled from a separate amplifier.

Projection accessory equipment includes a Goldberg automatic rewinder, Neumade waste container and carbon cabinet; Griswold film splicer, Weaver changeover dowsers, and RCA non-sync apparatus. Equipment (except sound and air supply) and accessories were installed by the National Theatre Supply Company. Installation of sound equipment was under the supervision of R. W. Ramsey, RCA engineer.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

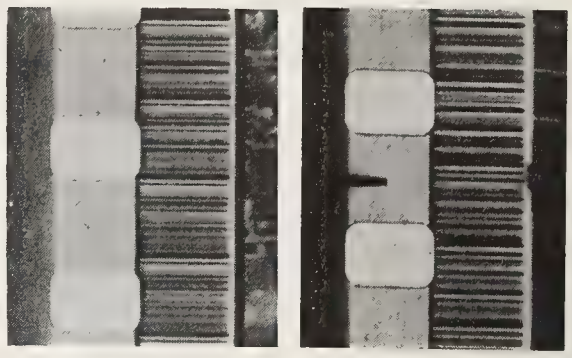
and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

VIOLATIONS OF STANDARD SPACING IN RELEASE PRINTS

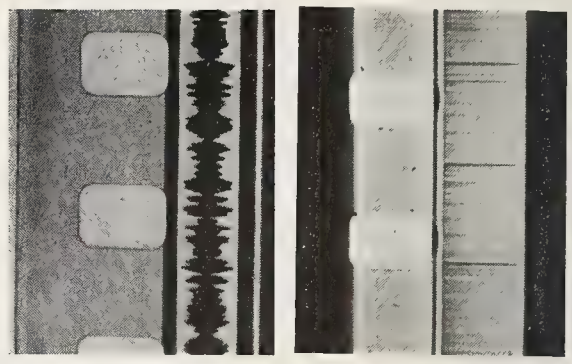
A LETTER received from Irl Gordon, projectionist of Akron, Ohio, presents a complaint which merits attention because of the intelligent manner in which it sets forth a menace to good projection, and which is especially interesting at this time because of the recent proposals to revise the present aperture standards. Mr. Gordon writes:

"Herewith I hand you a brief survey of a film condition I have had trouble with for many months. True, it is not a major fault, but it is nevertheless annoying and inconvenient. With a little foresight in the printing labs it would seem it might be eliminated, but for one lone projectionist to knock at the doors of the producers would be futile.



"I have talked with projectionists both here and elsewhere. They have all had the same experience, and while it may be nothing to get excited about because of the small sequences in which the fault is present, still there seems no good reason why it should be in them, and its presence does work harm.

"In the study of your new Bluebook of Projection one is impressed with the number of mil measurements given in the layout of film and of camera and projector aperture measurements. It is presumed these represent a standard which all should follow and that from these standards all films, including test loops, are made. It also may be presumed that proper positioning of these standards upon film will enable the proper setting of guide rollers so that the slit will be positioned exactly in the center of the sound track area of all release prints, so that there will be no interference by either frame lines or sprocket holes.

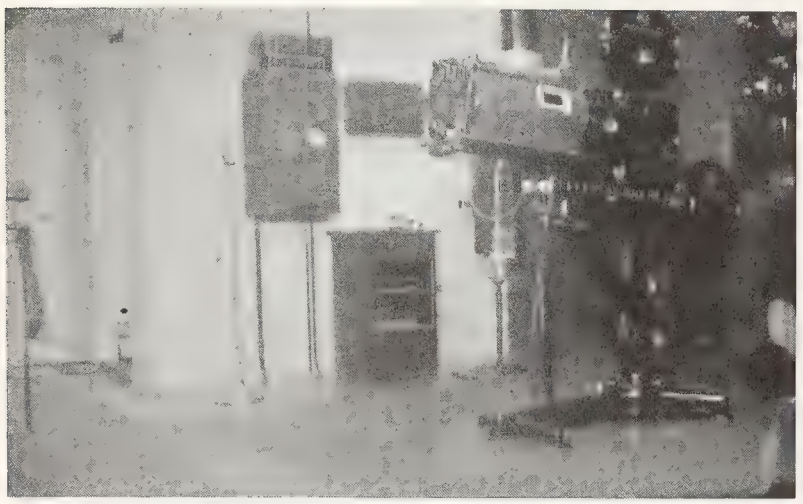


"But for some reason there exists a deviation from these standards in the finished product, or a part of it, at any rate, and I, for one, would like to know why. The condition has become quite prevalent. Critical examination shows misalignment in printing of the sound track and picture at frequent intervals. Observation extending over eight months shows the trouble to be intermittent, but that it occurs at constant and frequent intervals, usually occurring in three or four portions of the feature.

"The trouble and its extent may be surveyed in accompanying prints, all photographed in the projection room. These particular faults occurred in one producer's prints. Other producer's products went through the projectors okay, hence the fault could not possibly be charged to the projectors. Anyhow, the enclosed prints are convincing evidence of its presence in the prints.

"Examining the standard specifications, one can see that no sound track should be printed right up against the sprocket holes, but that there should be a space of substantial width between the two (a trifle in excess of 0.025 of an inch.—F.H.R.). But in Print 1 we see the sound track is not only printed up to the holes, but actually infringes upon their area, thus shifting the whole track over until a white line is left between the track and the picture. This is not so bad (Nor so good.—F.H.R.), but it does permit picking up some surface noise, especially when the sound is low or a high fader setting is necessary.

Print 1 Print 2



Print 3 Print 4

Cases Affecting Sound or Image

"In print, 2, however, the condition is aggravated. The white line between track and picture areas contain the ends of frame lines, and that sets up a nice buzz background that is quite noticeable. In fact, the soundhead guide rollers must be held over when this condition appears in order to cause these lines to miss the slit beam.

"In Print 3 will be seen that instead of printing the 8-mil boundary line between the sound track and picture black, it is for some unknown reason transparent. Many times when shifting from one scene to another with this print, this line also shifted over, frequently far enough to show as a broad, white line on the screen, which appeared and vanished as the scenes changed. I recall this happened three times in one reel—always in the darkest scenes. Were this line black, a slight shift in the scene itself would pass almost unnoticed. It would seem we projectionists have the right to demand protection from having our work thus emasculated.

These snapshots were sent in by John R. Cooney, proud owner (with plenty of reason) of the Waldo theatre in Waldoboro, Me., a fine small theatre opened about a year ago. Mr. Cooney's accompanying letter shows that he is as proud of his projection facilities as he is of the rest of the theatre, which is exactly as it should be (but too often isn't the case). The projection room is finished in acoustic plaster. The front wall is painted black, the floor painted green. Lighting is from a cove in the ceiling illuminating only the rear half of the room, though the entire room may be brilliantly lighted. Projectors are RCA unit mechanisms including soundheads. The arcs, which pull 45 amperes, are supplied by General Electric copper oxide rectifiers. The Waldo, which seats 450, also has public address and hearing aid equipment. The right-hand picture is of Projectionist Harold Perry.

"Print 4 shows the opposite extreme, where the edge of the sound track shows on the screen due to total absence of any dividing space or line whatever. All of which is submitted in proof that something is haywire in the matter of positioning sound track and picture in printing."

With all of which I most thoroughly agree. As Gordon says, certain necessary standards are provided. They have been adopted by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and approved by all producers. They provide for sufficient tolerance, and it can became very serious when the limits of such tolerance are over-reached. Gordon's well documented findings merely are representative of complaints received by a sizeable number of projectionists, particularly during the past year.

TYPE AND SIZE OF PROJECTION ROOM VENTS

FROM NO matter where comes this communication: "Had a rather bad projection room fire and would like information as to whether or not it is advisable to open a projector magazine in case the fire gets inside it. Of course, if a fire extinguisher is to be used, the magazine must be opened. Have heard this matter discussed, some favoring leaving the magazine closed, others arguing for its opening and use of fire extinguisher.

"My projection room offers difficulties in the matter of installing a better ventilating system, as it is my wish to do. Due to an upper floor, it is impossible to run a duct straight up unless it runs 6 to 8 feet horizontal first. Can reach open air by a 12-foot-long horizontal run, but the projection room ceiling is so low that a large vent pipe would not be practical. Then, too, the opening would face north, from which direction our prevailing winter winds come and would largely offset the effect of the fan. Would it serve to run this pipe, and over its end, outside the building, attach a circular cowl of generous dimensions, with perhaps one foot of clearance between the end of the pipe and the apex of the cowl, the latter to be a sheet of suitable iron bent to a half-round, its ends open?

"I have planned to install a sort of hood similar to those employed for blacksmith forges over each projector. What size would you recommend, remembering the low ceiling and that the room itself is small? Also, what size of fan would you recommend? Is there any device on the market that will cut the film and close the fire valve of upper magazine (Powers projectors)?"

This is a problem that reaches me every little while. It has been dealt with in the past, but seems to require further detailed consideration.

Never Open Magazine If Fire Reaches It

It may be stated as an absolute rule that under no circumstances should a projector magazine ever be opened in case fire reaches its interior. In the event little film remains therein, no good purpose will be served by attempting to open it and squirt fire extinguisher liquid on the blaze. With open air in contact with the film the fluid would accomplish little if any good, even if the operator of the device could get close enough (very doubtful) to work effectively. On the other hand, if there is plenty of film in the magazine and its door is opened, the projectionist will be lucky to get outside the room alive. As to extinguishing the blaze, it could not be done—and don't let any person tell you it ever was done. The answer is: If the fire gets into a projector magazine, under no circumstances ever open the magazine door.

A Suitable Vent System

And now as to the vent system: There is little if any objection to a right angle turn in the vent duct provided it be made in the form of a not-too-sharp curve. Under the conditions you name it would seem best to run the pipe outside the wall and up above the roof, with a suitable cowl over it, preferably one of the type that swings in such manner that the opening always points away from the wind. They are available.

However, it may be possible to run a square duct to the north wall, or one perhaps 6 inches deep by a suitable width, locating it in the upper rear corner of the room, its opening protected by some such cowl as suggested. The roof duct I would however, regard as best for several reasons.

As to size of duct and fan, that would necessarily be a problem for a local ventilation man who can personally examine the premises—too many if's and and's involved for long distance analysis. The problem is to provide a fan for ordinary ventilation, but of such size that when it is operated at capacity, it will pump out air, smoke and gases fast enough to create a slight vacuum in the room, thus preventing any possibility of smoke entering the projection room. The fan should be so arranged that dropping of the fire shutters will automatically cut it into maximum capacity operation. A vent pipe to carry its maximum capacity without undue resistance should be supplied by the fan manufacturer. The fan may be located in the vent pipe opening, its motor suitably protected from a blaze. The vent pipe should be insulated from all inflammable material. The end of the vent pipe and its fan apparently cannot be located in the center of the ceiling, hence should be in the

IMAGE DEFINITION AND PROJECTION ANGLE

JACK R. PRATER, projectionist of Palouse, Wash., writes, "May I offer a few personal views regarding poor screen image definition due to projection angle? Thus far very little has been done to correct this glaring fault, which the modern wide-diameter projection lenses have served to aggravate because depth of focus must inevitably suffer as lens speed is increased.

"As you know, it is wholly impossible to have a perfectly flat field even when the screen surface is perpendicular to the optical axis of projection. The best projection lens ever made cannot produce a critically sharp focus over the entire screen area under any possible condition found in a theatre. With the screen surface perpendicular to the optical axis of projection, the lack of critically sharp focus all over the screen surface increases as (a) screen image dimensions are increased, projection distance remaining the same, or (b) projection distance is decreased, screen image dimensions remaining unaltered. All projectionists recognize that fact.

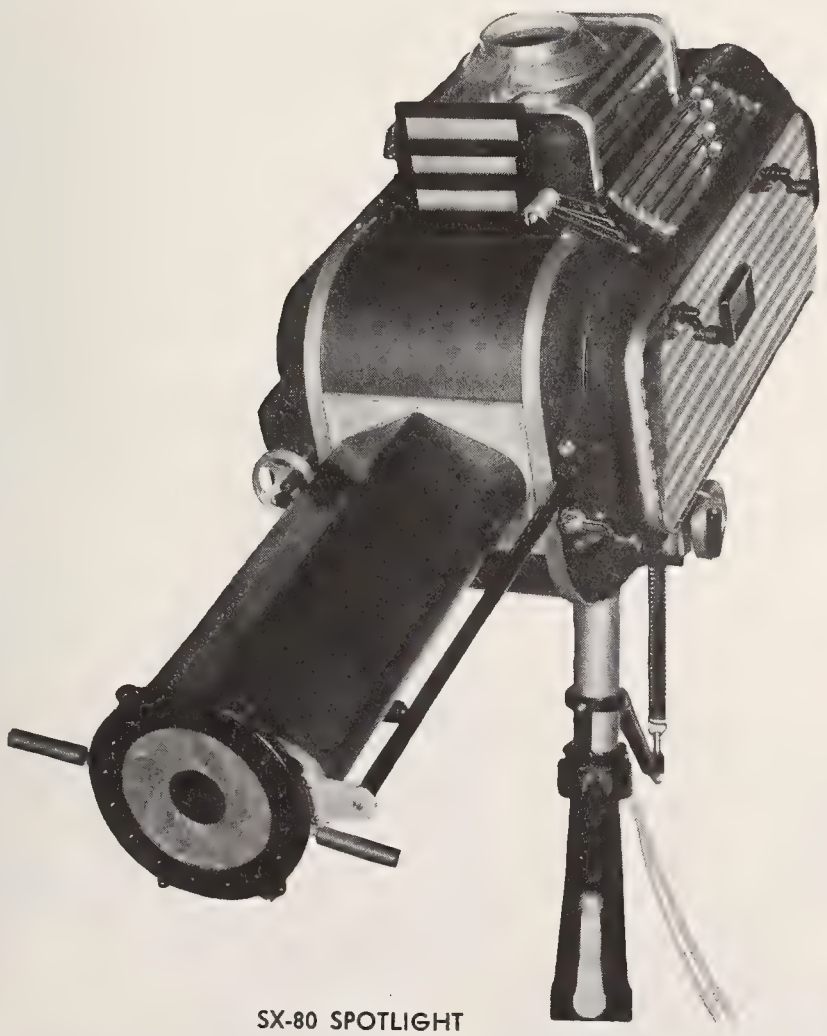
"In other words, any variation in distance from the point of critically sharp focus causes the definition to be less sharp. It then follows, if there is projection angle, the top of screen surface being closer to the lens than its lower edge, that when the central portion of the image is focused sharply, both top and bottom cannot possibly be critically sharp; or if either top or bottom is focused sharply, the edge opposite will be very poorly focused. The best we now are able to do is to sharpen the center and let the top and bottom take care of themselves.

"Now, if it were possible to alter the angle of the projector aperture plate so that compensation might be effected, and the point of critical focus be made equal to that where there is no projection angle, the projectionist then would be able to eliminate the evil described merely by adjustment of the aperture plate.

"This would require that the film gate assembly be made adjustable to fit the requirements of each theatre, which, insofar as has to do with present day projectors, presents a considerable, but by no means impossible, problem. However, the change could be incorporated in the design of new model projectors with but little difficulty.

"True, the sidewise distortion would remain, but that fault does not set up any appreciable eye strain, as does the out-of-focus effect, and the side lines of the screen image could be paralleled then as now.

"I am of the opinion that such an improvement would result in a very noticeable improvement in screen images, especially in cases where the projection angle is great, and considerable where the angle is only a few degrees. Thousands of dollars are spent to secure the last word in sound equipments. Projector parts are fitted to the ten-thousandth of an inch in in order to secure rock steadiness of the screen image as a whole. But the fact that nine out of ten theatres have projection angle, with resultant injury to screen image definition at either top or bottom, or both, seems to receive almost no attention at all. What is your opinion of this matter?"



My opinion is that you are correct at all points, and that this improvement could be made quite readily.

GOSH, THAT'S SAYING A WHOLE LOT, I GUESS

E. W. PATRICK, projectionist of Great Bend, Kans., makes the following pertinent remarks in a letter of recent date:

"Dear Dad: Three problems in projection have been bothering me. I had intended consulting you concerning them, but finally hauled your latest Bluebook of Projection off the shelf and started really getting acquainted with it.

"Sure enough, I found my troubles all solved. Also, I made note of the many other things of high value therein contained. Believe you me, Dad, when some one named your Bluebook the 'Bible of Projection,' he really said something!"

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

THE QUESTION:

I HAVE AN auditorium that has pilasters on each side with brackets. The capacity is 730. What color scheme would you suggest.—A. E. J.

THE ANSWER:

I DO NOT know your preferences in color combinations, but I suggest as one scheme, coral for pilasters, brackets, and ceiling beams; the wall surfaces in blue in four or five different shaded horizontal layers, divided by 1-inch wide silver stripes, starting at the bottom of the wall with the darkest shade, fading out to the lightest shade at ceiling.

As another suggestion, use a deep ivory for walls and ceiling with Pompeian red for pilasters, brackets and beams—or carry the color scheme out in different shades of a soft pea green. Tangerine, citron yellow with blue for trimming is also very effective, but more daring.

THE QUESTION:

PLEASE ADVISE whether or not a stadium type of seating plan would be feasible for our theatre, as our slope is not enough, and owing to water trouble we could not go any deeper, and our floor is concrete. We could change our doors, and have same go to the extreme sides and have the aisle down the side in place of where they are now. It is our desire to make this change if same is at all possible. The auditorium is 91 feet deep and 35 feet wide.—J. B.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer inquiries pertaining to preliminary considerations in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticisms. Working plans, however, cannot be supplied. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification of the person inquiring.

THE ANSWER:

THERE ARE no reasons why a stadium plan should not be feasible for your theatre. I believe that using wall aisles on each side of stadium will be preferable and will give the maximum seating capacity. The cross-aisle should be at least 5 feet wide, and the first row of the stadium should not be less than 2 feet, 4 inches above the cross-aisle, so as not to have interefrence with good vision created by patrons walking in cross-aisle.

Each successive row of the stadium should have a 6-inch rise. The first row of the stadium is to be wide enough to take care of the steps required to reach same from cross-aisle, and some kind of a railing should be provided between first row and cross-aisle.

THE QUESTION:

I HAVE your reply with many thanks to you. I should, however, like to ask you a few more questions. In the first place, I have decided to use one steam boiler for everything. As coal is cheap, I believe it will prove better in the long run, and much cleaner, whether I use the radiators or the duct system, with fan from boilers. The questions that I should like to ask you are as follows:

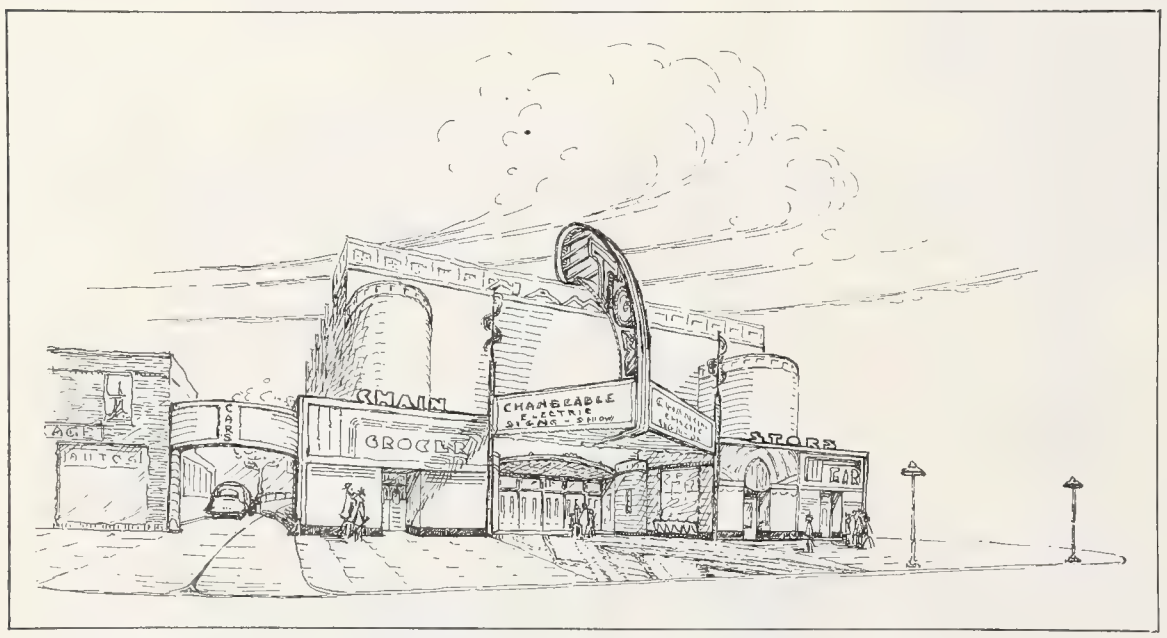
(1) What size fan room would you recommend? Over exit stage.

(2) What is your idea of air-conditioning and ventilation in space between rafters and ceiling joists? Is one pipe along ceiling auditorium sufficient for air-conditioning, or one center and one each side? Do you approve of outside wall ducts? If so, how far is entrance from floor?

(3) Using the cold water from fans on each side of the exit along stage front, how would you carry this cool air down to the auditorium? If by ducts, what construction? If floor level, plate, or if in wall, what height for ducts?

(4) Would metal lath and plaster serve for fan room?

(5) Do you approve of cinders and cement for projection room with good concrete floor?



(6) Would you approve of stucco wire reinforced over building paper, and rubberoid, for stucco, without any strips? Dimensions of the theatre are 37 feet outside width, 36 inside; length overall, 100 feet; stores in front, 14-foot depth; thence foyer, 8 feet, stage 12 feet.—C. L.

THE ANSWER:

BEFORE ANSWERING your questions, I suggest that you consult a heating and air-conditioning engineer as, after they have familiarized themselves with existing conditions, they will be more capable of giving you the required information for the best solution of your problem. Answering your questions:

1. If fan rooms are to be located over exits on each side of stage, they should not be less than 8x12 feet.

2. If there is enough space between

Eichenlaub, architect of Erie, Pa. The front of the theatre proper, which adjoins stores, is designed for enameled steel finish in colors, for architectural glass, one of the plastic materials, or terra cotta. ceiling and roof, the duct for air-conditioning can be located in that space. The deflectors can then be located in the center of the ceiling; in that case it would be well to locate the fan room on top of roof. If the fan rooms are to be located on each side, then wall ducts should be provided; however, the center duct would prove to be the least expensive.

3. Grilles should be located under stage or platform apron. These grilles should be connected with a duct which would return the air to fan rooms, making a recirculating system. Ducts may be constructed of galvanized iron or Celotex.

4. Fan rooms in auditorium should be of fireproof construction. Metal lath and plaster on steel studding would be satisfactory. If fan room is located above roof, it may be constructed of corrugated iron.

5. I presume you mean cinder blocks. If so, yes.

6. I prefer metal lath on strips.

For your theatre, I suggest that you place fan rooms on top of roof so that single units can be used. It would be a great deal less expensive, for, if fan rooms are used on each side of stage, two smaller units would be required, and that would not only increase cost of installation, but the cost of parts as well.

Color Schemes

means hopeless. We have brought forth some of the problems. The moral is that we must try our color schemes under the various lighting conditions in which we intend using them. It is perfectly hopeless to decorate a theatre and select the drapes, carpets and furnishings in daylight and expect them to look well in artificial light.

Light First, Colors Afterward

It is very dangerous to select colors before the definite lighting installations and effects are set. Without light, colors are invisible. Light comes first and colors afterward—unless this sequence is borne in mind, many a bad fall will be encountered.

It is not quite so easy to claim immunity from the laws of good taste as it used to be. The present public is a more discerning and critical one than it was in the years past. Before the motion picture came along, it was only the "upper class"—the wealthier people—who really pretended to have good taste. The cinema has created its own problem! It has brought to the most remote corners of the earth the finest pictures, on which the ultimate in professional training in all art, including design, has been freely expended. The "movies" have educated their own audiences and must supply the demands of the good taste they have created.

RCA Photophone Recording of Musical Numbers in "100 Men and a Girl" called a new high in sound recording perfection!

EDITORIAL COMMENT . . . HOLLYWOOD REPORTER, Sept. 17, 1937 . . . "The chief topic in Hollywood, where there's talk about '100 Men and a Girl' (and there's plenty) is regarding the recording of the show's big musical numbers. Everyone will tell everyone else: 'That's the best sound we have ever heard.' And they are right. No music has ever been given such perfect treatment on a sound track. All the big numbers in the picture were recorded in the east at the Camden plant of the Victor Company, an RCA subsidiary.

"This column has always yelled the praise of the technical advance in pictures . . . this achievement at Camden is something else to yell about.

"Music is becoming an even greater asset to the box-office than our producers or distributors ever dreamed of, so its proper recording in the effort to give audiences the full benefit of its fine qualities, should be given instant and serious consideration."

NEW CREED OF THEATRE OPERATION STIRS TRADE

Before leaving for Miami Beach for the holidays, George Spelvin, ace exhibitor, said when interviewed: "This industry has been criticized for a lavish and indiscriminate use of superlatives. Be careful of the use of adjectives unless your attraction will support them. But if you have a great picture, tell the world in the strongest possible language.

"For an excellent example of what I mean, see this issue of Motion Picture Herald, pages 23-26."

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 129, No. 12 — December 18, 1937

MR. KENNEDY TO ST. JAMES'S

AS Mr. Martin Quigley thoughtfully observed in an expression in Motion Picture Daily the other day, the motion picture industry of these United States with so many long continued problems and concerns in its relations with the British market has occasion to regard with comforting anticipation the impending appointment of Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy to the post of ambassador to Great Britain.

There is a general awareness that the motion picture industry of America is likely to fare rather better in a broadly comprehensive trade agreement between the nations than alone on its own in the arrangements to be expected of an intra-industry There and Here rivalry expressed in quotas. Those larger concerns of international trade now appear to be promised Mr. Kennedy's skilled attentions.

While Mr. Kennedy's interests since his entry into the arena of larger affairs have been as diverse as building ships during the World War and dealing in the heather-scented output of Scotch distillers in sequel to Repeal, with attentions internal and external, to Wall street, now and then, with also incidental attentions to some important operations in radio and journalism, it is still the tendency of the motion picture community to think possessively of him.

The limelight of a national attention first began to play on this blithe and freckled son of Boston when he emerged into the Broadway scene in F.B.O., seeking with marked success to sort the tangled heritages of that collection of corporate spare and used parts into a mechanism and an asset. Obviously enough he had what it takes to get along before he began to demonstrate in the motion picture industry, but it was the well near inescapable quality of exposition which pervades this industry that let the world know he had it.

And this motion picture industry, in which there is so much application of the art of public relations, will be viewing with appreciation, too, the demonstrations of special skill which have, again, accompanied the "breaking of the story." It has been no accident, for instance, that the first story was a scoop, in this day when scoops are so rare, for the paper which is at once the nation's greatest, the most international in character and, also, importantly the most Anglophile of them all—the New York Times.

It is pleasantly entertaining that from Boston goes the American to sit in the world's greatest "tea party"—in London.

IN TRADE, SIR

FOR some this is still a world of wonders. Viscount Coverdale, otherwise, Mr. Oliver Baldwin, speaking at Southport in England recently revealed to his audience that "one of the great curses of the film industry is commercialism," according to Today's Cinema. He also seems to have discovered that commercialism is not so prevalent in Russia, Germany, Italy and France, as in America and Great Britain.

If the Viscount will reflect on the comparisons he may perhaps discover that there are many manifestations "not so prevalent" in those countries as in England and America.

Another thing, which explains everything: thus, as Cinema records: "Film companies in this country (Great Britain), he contended, were out to make money. They were controlled by men who entered the business to make money, carried it on to make money, and who would leave it when they had enough."

Obviously our friends overseas, even as the American motion picture, have a large array of lay critics with an extraordinary capacity and facility for displaying their presumptuous ignorance.

ASSOCIATION

REGARDING again that "Brewers' Code of Practice," mentioned here recently, there appears to be merit in "We pledge our support to the duly constituted authorities for the elimination of anti-social conditions wherever they may surround the sale of beer to the consumer . . . morally to support and encourage the great body of retailers who sell beer as law-abiding citizens and who operate legal, respectable premises."

That brings one to dallying with the notion that if the pseudo-reformed burlesque theatres and the shady street motion picture theatres which constitute the outlet for the alleged prophylactic productions, the white slave traffic fantasies and kindred "shooting gallery" attractions were also unable to get film service from the makers of the decent general film output, the repute of the industry would gain considerably thereby.

The brewers' code idea, incidentally, is not new. Way back before the world war a Milwaukee brewer contrived a distinction for one of the best beers of that city by a campaign to make it impossible to buy in any questionable establishment. It was his notion that he wanted no bagnio suggestion carried to the family trade by his bottlings.

The notion is just as effective pertaining to products in cans as well as bottles.

ON STAYING PUT

SCREENLAND has just had its semi-occasional "report" that Mr. Louis M. Mayer was going to leave M-G-M, with the customary sequel of arrangements quite to the contrary, this time in terms of a new five-year contract. It is periodically normal to hear that Mr. Mayer is going to leave and it is equally normal to learn that he is going to stay. In that connection one is reminded of the accustomed periodical report that either John Doe or Richard Roe is to take the post at the head of the industry occupied by Mr. Will H. Hays, the sequel to such reports being always the unperturbed continuance of Mr. Hays. In an industry which sometimes sighs: "All passes, Art alone endures," it is a satisfaction that a reasonable proportion of its important leaders tend to stay put. Even the business of the fleeting movies can well do with some aspects of permanence.

Selznick's Plans

The future releasing plans of David O. Selznick became the chief topic of discussion in regard to United Artists affairs this week as the result of the collapse of the purchase by Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda of the controlling interest in the company. Mr. Selznick's reputed deal under which he would join Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was reported as having failed to materialize. Following this, the head of Selznick International was said to be being considered as an owner-member of United Artists.

The latest developments in connection with United Artists are recorded on page 41.

Federal Investigation

On complaint of a Savannah exhibitor that he was forced to abandon plans for construction of a neighborhood house because he could not obtain product, the Attorney General's office has ordered an investigation into the case, according to the theatre owner, Fred G. Weis. A notice of appeal from the anti-trust decision handed down in Dallas against distributors and the Interstate Circuit has been filed by the defendants' counsel, and a hearing will be held next Monday.

These and other trade practice developments are explained in an article on page 28.

Drug Store Movies

Mickey Mouse and Betty Boop have found their way into thousands of homes on eight millimeter film and sale of the reels over drug and ten cent store counters has opened the way for the extensive development of home motion pictures based on the large scale manufacture and sale of the narrow gauge cameras and projectors. Equipment and film in the eight millimeter field cuts the cost of home movies almost in half and manufacturers are taking advantage of this fact to exploit the field.

The story on page 12 recounts the salient facts in the new development.

Testimonials

Si Fabian, head of the Fabian theatres, was guest of honor Monday night at a testimonial dinner held in Albany in celebration of his completion of 20 years as an exhibitor. Motion picture executives and city and state officials were among the 350 friends who turned out to praise Mr. Fabian. A similar banquet was held in Des Moines last Thursday in honor of A. H. Blank, head of the Central States and Tri States Theatres, who observed his 25th anniversary in the film industry.

Accounts of both banquets are given on page 31.

48 Story Purchases

Story purchases, of which there were 48 by 16 producers, showed an increase of seven in November as compared to the previous month of October. Original material continued as the greatest source of supply, 50 per cent of the 48 literary properties coming from this classification. Metro Goldwyn Mayer took the leadership in the number of stories purchased by acquiring the rights to 15 properties.

The titles of the 48 stories, with all available production credits, are included in an article on page 22.

U. S. Films in Sweden

American producers provided more than one-half of the features released in Sweden in the last motion picture year. Of the American product, 42 of the 189 pictures were from Paramount. Melodrama led in types of productions exhibited. Comedy was second, and in this group Sweden itself was the source of 17 pictures.

Details appear in the article on page 58.

Cameramen in China

Norman Alley, Universal Newsreel cameraman who was aboard the United States gunboat, Panay, when she was bombed and sunk by Japanese fliers, escaped without injury, according to word received in the New York office of Universal Wednesday. Mr. Alley, together with Eric Mayell, Fox Movietone News cameraman, were reported on board the American gunboat Oahu, en route to Shanghai. Both were said to have lost their clothes, money and cameras when the Panay was sunk. A third newsreel man, Arthur Menken of Paramount, who remained in Nanking to film the seizure of the city was placed under arrest by Japanese officials and his camera and films seized, according to word received at the Paramount office in New York.

Atlas and RKO

Atlas Corporation's holdings in RKO Radio are cited as one of two "principal special situations in which the investment company is interested at the present time," it is recorded in the annual report submitted to stockholders by Floyd B. Odlum, president. The company's RKO holdings include $2,222,597 face amount of debentures and 278,393 shares of common stock, representing a gain of $94,000 face amount of debentures and 14,900 shares of common stock since January 31, 1937.

No Reprisals

No industry-wide ban on films in protest against the appearance of film stars on radio programs is possible or warranted, Walter Vincent, chairman of the radio committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said Wednesday. He declared that his committee does not plan to intervene in connection with the increasing number of Hollywood personalities and programs on the air.

P. D. Cochrane Resigns

Philip Dakin (P. D.) Cochrane, in charge of publicity, advertising and exploitation for Universal, announced his resignation on Wednesday to take effect this week. Mr. Cochrane, who was born in Wheeling, West Va., December 23, 1876, joined Universal in 1914. Previously he had served as a reporter on a Toledo, Ohio, newspaper the Bee, and had been in the advertising business with his brother, R. H. Cochrane and Witt K. Cochrane in Chicago. John Joseph, advertising and publicity supervisor for RKO Theatres in the middle west, was mentioned as a possible successor to Mr. Cochrane.

Seeing Red

Hollywood screen stars, west coast labor leaders and Government officials were charged with hatching a deep laid plot to place the western half of the United States under Communist domination in a damage suit for $5,100,000 filed by the deposed secretary-treasurer of a San Francisco longshoreman's union. Ivan F. Cox, the ousted official, named Fredric March as leader of the conspiracy and alleged that his deposition under the cloud of a $774 shortage in accounts was part of the plot.

Named as co-defendants were Franchot Tone, Mary Astor, James Cagney, Lionel Stander and Jean Muir, actors, William Dieterle, director. Also included in the sweeping charge were officials of the National Labor Relations Board, union officers, university professors, a state senator and a secretary to a state supreme court justice.

Mr. Cox asserted the defendants deprived him of the right to earn his living and blackened his character. Mr. March, the complaint said, devoted a large part of his earnings to advance "by guile and subterfuge" the cause of Communism and to interest national celebrities in it.

Full Crew Sought

A campaign in the New York State legislature for passage of a law to require, in first-class cities, the presence of two competent motion picture machine operators in theatre projection booths at all times was indicated by the approval of a resolution to that effect by the executive council of the state Federation of Labor. Also important in labor news of the week was the announcement of the dropping of its two per cent assessment by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and the settlement of a dispute over a closed shop contract between March of Time and the Screen Actors' Guild.

Longer Newsreel

Basing his prediction on the observation that the public appetite for presentation of news on motion picture screens has been sharpening for the last five years, A. J. Richard, editor of Paramount News, forecast that "the newsreel industry soon will find its 10-minute screen limitation breaking down." With this as a key for a general forecast for newsreels in 1938 he touched on further details, including the matter of attacks by partisans of this or that. Concerning this he said: "If the industry keeps clearly in mind that the great bulk of moviegoers appreciate and applaud fairness, I hold that unjustified attacks . . . will evaporate for lack of support."

French Censorship

New censorship regulations promulgated by the French Government's board of cinema review warn specifically that films tending to diminish the prestige of the army or other Government institutions or those likely to offend foreign countries will be banned, but the clauses of most interest to the industry are those which pronounce against crime pictures of all kinds and which provide for the review of scripts before production starts.

Pierre Autre describes the present state of censorship in France in the story starting on page 42.

VOGEL TO "DAILY"

Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief, announces the appointment of A-Mike Vogel as editor of Motion Picture Daily, succeeding Maurice Kann, resigned. Mr. Vogel, who immediately will assume his new duties under the continuing chief editorship of Mr. Quigley, has been a member of the staff of Quigley Publications for five years. He is an experienced showman and journalist, with a wide acquaintance throughout the industry and an intimate knowledge of the industry and its problems gained in first-hand contact.

Legion of Decency

Congregations in Catholic Churches throughout the country last week renewed their pledge against attendance at "indecent and immoral motion pictures." While there has been no notice from the Catholic Bishops of the United States, who established the Legion of Decency, that that body is to be concerned regularly with matters other than motion pictures, the 3,000 persons in New York who attended the 11 o'clock mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral were urged to include objectionable stage productions in the Legion boycott. The Catholic Theatre Movement issued a list of twenty-three current Broadway productions of which only seven were classed as "wholly unobjectionable." Of the remaining sixteen, eight were listed as wholly objectionable and eight as objectionable in part.

The titles of the plays and the text of the Legion of Decency pledge are included in a story on page 32.

Decrease in Earnings

Warner Brothers and Loew's, Inc., showed decreased earnings for the quarter ended in November as compared to a similar quarter last year, it was revealed this week when estimates of the earnings were announced. The Warner Brothers earnings, it was announced at the stockholders meeting in Wilmington, will exceed $1,600,000 as compared to the 1936 income of $2,047,000. Loew's earnings for the quarter were estimated at from $1.70 to $1.75 a share as compared to $2.14 a share earned in the corresponding 1936 quarter.

More data on the estimates and other financial news are included in a story on page 34.

PHOTOGRAPH BY BACHRACH

"CROWN PRINCE OF THE NEW DEAL" as the columnists of Washington call him, we see here the latest picture of Joseph P. Kennedy, (left) with Mrs. Kennedy (right) and their children. Mr. Kennedy was off to Florida, on an interlude in his labors as head of the Maritime Commission, this week-end, while official announcement of his appointment as Ambassador of the United States to the historic and all-important Court of St. James's impended, awaiting, as usual, the deliberate circumlocutions of international diplomatic etiquette. Mr. Kennedy first came to the limelight of national attention with FBO, ancestor of today's RKO, and successively impinged upon Pathe Exchange, Inc., First National Pictures Corporation, and, not so long ago upon Paramount Pictures Corporation, with a report made famous because it was not published. Through most of the present administration he has been an intimate at the White House and much the friend of the President's family.

Home Market Expands as 8mm. Cuts Costs and Offers Stars

Wider Use of Home Movies Forecast in Rapid Spread of Low Cost 8 mm. Pictures

by EDWARD HARRISON

WE might have known it—they are selling movies in the drug stores now.

For home use one can get a Mickey Mouse of a Chaplin comedy now, and in fact a whole film library at the corner drug store, most of the chain stores or by mail from Montgomery Ward.

The 8 millimeter film is, by reason of price in part, opening the home field for which the 16 millimeter picture was first designed, while the 16 millimeter film is becoming more the especial servant of industry, advertising and the general non-theatrical field.

The use of mass outlets—an estimate puts the number of sales depots at 50,000—is a feature of the rapid expansion of the 8 mm. field. Other factors are the marketing of 150,000 low-cost projectors during the past year and the sale of Hollywood films at phenomenally low prices. One company has been offering 200-foot 8 mm. subjects, equivalent in length to a 1,000-foot 35 mm. reel, for $3.75, and 30 and 50-foot Betty Boop and Mickey Mouse films for 50 and 90 cents respectively.

The development of the 8 mm. field is a by-product of the amateur's interest in photography. This interest was never greater than today. Soon movies in the home may be as common as cameras in the home, for it is believed that a large percentage of the 16,500,000 still camera owners in the United States will become owners of motion picture cameras.

The amateur who buys an 8 mm. camera must acquire a projector to show the pictures he has taken. Every 8 mm. projector owner is a potential customer for 8 mm. professional film.

Most of the 8 mm. film used for sales and rentals is old silent stuff. There is, however, an increasing use of more or less recent 35 mm. material. Pathegrams, a Pathe Film Company subsidiary, has obtained the rights to all Pathe News material for the 8 mm. and 16 mm. field. Castle Films is using considerable current newsreel material. Star Safety Film Company has a Shirley Temple picture and some Silly Symphonies. Univex has some of the Educational Terry-Toons and is negotiating with a major company for its product. There is a demand in some quarters for sound material with popular stars because the 8 mm. public, like the general public, buys star names.

This demand may become intensified shortly for it is probable that an 8 mm. sound projector will soon be on the market. The sales manager of a raw stock company told the writer that he has already seen several models of sound projectors. He believes it is entirely feasible to put out 8 mm. sound films. At least two companies now active in the 8 mm. field plan to manufacture sound projectors in this size.

Because 8 mm. pictures are best projected on a screen about three feet by four feet, 16 mm. films will continue in wide use for schools and other places where fairly large audiences are on hand, but it is believed that 8 mm. equipment and films will far outsell 16 mm. for home use because of the much lower price.

The films are marketed through drug stores, department stores, chain stores like Woolworth's and Kresge's, radio, credit jewelry and sporting goods stores, mail order firms, stationery stores, camera and photo shops and film libraries.

A conservative estimate of the total number of projectors in the field puts the figure at 200,000. Another estimate places the number at around 500,000. There is equal disparity in the figures on the total amount of raw stock used in 1937. One estimate is 30,000,000 feet, another 65,000,000 feet.

First Tried in 1930

Eight mm. film was first put out by Eastman Kodak in 1930. Pathe had earlier attempted to popularize 9½ mm. film in the United States without success. It has now abandoned any idea of pushing 9½ mm film here. Considerable 9½ film is sold abroad where many 9½ mm. projectors are in the hands of the public. But its popularity there is beginning to wane because 8 mm. film and projectors are cheaper.

Kodascope established the first 8 mm. rental and sale library in 1932, after a number of projectors manufactured by Eastman Kodak were in the hands of the public. A number of other projector manufacturers are in the field but it is significant that there was vast increase in popular demand for 8 mm. cameras and projectors when the low-priced Univex models and the cheaper Univex 8 mm. film were put on sale. They are manufactured by the Universal Camera Company. Univex is said to have sold 150,000 8 mm. cameras and an equal number of projectors in the year that it has been manufacturing 8 mm. equipment.

Univex began building a library of 8 mm. subjects three months ago. Selling films at the lowest prices to date the company has shown that owners of 8 mm. projectors will buy 8 mm. professional films. The company is now using pictures obtained from Educational Films, Pathegrams and Hollywood Film Enterprises of Hollywood and is negotiating with a major company for its product.

Univex expects to put out an 8 mm. sound projector and will offer color film produced by Gevaert soon after Jan. 1. Reproduction will be possible from the Gevaert film.

The other principal factors in the 8 mm. field are Kodascope Libraries, Star Safety Film Co., Castle Films, Pathegrams, Hollywood Film Enterprises, Excel Company of Chicago, Keystone Projector Company of Boston, Novelty Film Company of Union City, Bergen Film Company and the Allied Distributing Company of Chicago.

Rentals Increasing

Kodascope Libraries here and abroad are offering 125 of the most popular 16 mm. silent subjects for sale and rent in 8 mm. Rentals of the narrow gauge are increasing 10 per cent annually in the Kodascope Libraries while 16 mm. rentals are falling off. The films rent for an average price of 60 cents a reel compared to one dollar a reel for 16 mm. subjects and the sale price of 8 and 16 mm. subjects shows a similarly wide difference.

Through arrangement with Pathe News, Pathegrams is releasing "A Day with the Dionne Quintuplets" in 50 and 75-foot rolls in 8 mm. Allied Distributing Company of Chicago is handling distribution of the quintuplet films. Castle Films distributed the two previous Pathegrams releases, "Hindenburg Explodes" and "England's Coronation." Both these pictures were made with newsreel material obtained from major companies. There were close to 6,800 individual sales of 8 mm. "Coronation" films. The Pathegrams monthly news digest will be issued only in 50-foot lengths in 8 mm. Pathegrams is releasing many subjects in toy films.

Castle Films is offering a number of newly-produced subjects to the 8 mm. field, which are also being released in 16 mm. Some of these are "Shanghai Bombed," made from newsreel material of the Sino-Jap war; "News Parade of the Year," "American Legion-New York-1937," picturing antics of the Legionaires in New York; three sport films, three old-time movies and three "See" subjects, novelty reels of the unique and the unusual. Castle gets $5.50 for the single-reel length of all its subjects except the "Hindenburg" and "Coronation" films, and $1.75 for the 50-foot rolls.

Morris Kleinerman, head of Star Safety Film Company, one of the largest factors in the 8 mm. field, expects the 8 mm. market to be bigger than 16 mm. because of the lower price. He finds that the public buys star names in 8 mm. just as it does in the regular movies. Most in demand in the 8 mm. field are cartoons, travelogues, westerns, comedies and scientific subjects. Eight mm. sells more than 16 mm. abroad, according to Mr. Kleinerman. Star Film Company has its own laboratory and plans to make a low price sound projector.

The increased interest in 8 mm. is seen in the fact that a number of laboratories, including DeLuxe, have lately been equipped to handle 8 mm. printing. Pathe Film Company has expanded its facilities to turn out 100,000 linear feet of 8 mm. film daily. All in all the 8 mm. field appears to be definitely on the upgrade.

NARROW GAUGE FILM FIRST SOLD AS TOY

The present growth and impending development of the field of 8 millimeter film and equipment, discussed in the accompanying article by Mr. Harrison, is based on the elevation of a medium which first gained popularity and a market as a toy to a higher and more lucrative status. Eight mm. film in lengths up to 100 feet with Mickey Mouse, Betty Boop, Aesop's Fables and other cartoons and comedies as subjects has been popular for several years for use in toy projectors which found a wide sale at prices as low as $1.50. Manufacturers and film distributors now are reporting a ready market for improved and longer subjects, in many cases reduced from 35 and 16 mm., and for cameras and more expensive projectors.

THE BIGGEST MONEY MAKING STARS OF 1937

Exhibitors of America judge the relative box office rankings of 217 players

TRANSLATION of glamour that is the motion picture into dollars that are the box office, and the industry, was the objective of MOTION PICTURE HERALD when in the fall of 1932 it addressed an inquiry to the showmen of America that was to develop into the one accepted nationwide expression establishing the identities of the Money Making Stars of that year.

Countless polls had been taken, sectionally and nationally, on personality and popularity premises, directed toward the public but never telling the story of the box office itself. But it is the exhibitor's testimony and his account books' evidence that are also the infallible jury of public opinion. Hence the HERALD asked the exhibitors of the United States to name the ten players whose pictures, in the language of the ledger, "drew the greatest number of patrons to your theatre."

Immediately from studio, business office, and from the press of the land came recognition of the Money Makers as being precisely that. Indicative of that acceptance is the fact that never in the six years of these exhibitor polls has there been one word questioning the results; the exhibitor knows, and the exhibitor alone. When his box office speaks, the decision is final, irrevocable.

And the story is the story of the motion picture year, not the calendar year. The period covered is from September 1 to September 1.

That Fame is not fickle is one axiom drawn from the polls. In the six years three players have been accorded the honor of being the outstanding Money Maker.

Shirley Temple, given top ranking again for 1937, has been awarded the largest number of first places and total points for the third year in succession.

Marie Dressler was winner of the first poll, in 1932, and the star, whose memory is revered both for what she did and what she was, repeated her success in the following season.

Will Rogers, whose homely and homelike philosophy, which made him as well-known off the screen as on, was cut off by the air tragedy of August 15, 1935, was the one male player to be placed on the highest pedestal of Money Makers. How large a share in motion picture history he hewed for himself is attested by the fact that even into the 1937 questionnaire many an exhibitor penned a postscript of tribute to his name.

There is a close parallel in the steps of accession of Mr. Rogers and Shirley Temple to the cherished peak. The comedian, ninth in the first year of the Money Makers, had risen to second position in the following season, and 1934 found him at the top.

Meanwhile a child of six years had been having an unpretentious introduction to the exhibitor and public. In 1932 Shirley Temple had entered motion pictures in the Baby Burlesque short product of Educational. However, there was no burlesque in her appeal or in her role, for that matter. In September, 1933, she had her first role in a feature, in Paramount's "To the Last Man." With the release of that production things moved fast for Shirley. In 1934 there were "Stand Up and Cheer" and "Baby Take a Bow" for Fox—and Fox was bowing to Shirley, too—and "Little Miss Marker" and "Now and Forever" for Paramount. Her first feature part in 1933, yet in the Money Making Stars of 1934 she already had supplanted many of the elect, in eighth place. The next season exhibitors looked at their books and pronounced her their best friend at the ticket window. By the end of 1936 she had taken a longer lead. This year, while the span between first and second place was not so wide, it was greater than between any two other rankings.

Fame has indeed been faithful to her chosen ones, and to be noted also is this that in the six years she has selected, as outstanding among the outstanding, players whose appeal has been to the entire family. Miss Dressler, Will Rogers and Shirley Temple—their pictures uniformly have been for the universal public, not for specialized groups.

Closely akin also is the relationship of their productions to the tenets for which the Production Code Administration stands, and two of them, Marie Dressler and Rogers, had been the exhibitors' choice even before the Administration went to work on July 1st, 1934.

Four players never before among the Ten Money Making Stars rose to the heights in the 1937 canvass of exhibitor records, and one of these, Sonja Henie, achieved the unprecedented in being chosen among the ten leaders in her first year in American motion pictures.

It was a specialty, ice skating, that first brought Miss Henie into the motion picture, as dancing had brought Fred Astaire and singing Jeanette MacDonald, but as with them, the Norse champion of the flashing blades had also a flashing personality, which brought such quickening response from the box office that even though the release of her first picture, "One in a Million," came on the first day of this year, she was placed eighth among all Money Makers.

Jane Withers at 11 years accomplished what had been indicated in 1936. At that time the juvenile had made a rapid rise to first position among the Fifteen Honor Stars. The 1937 poll carried her up among the Ten Elect, in sixth place.

William Powell and Myrna Loy, among the Biggest Money Makers for the first time, were listed separately for the most part in the exhibitors' ballots, but it was largely as a result of the success of pictures in which they had been co-starred as a team that they both made the advance in rankings, Powell to fifth place and Miss Loy to tenth. Both had been among the Fifteen Honor Stars of 1936, in comparative placement, Powell third among the Honor group and Miss Loy eighth.

For consistency in receiving, and meriting, the favors of Fame, there is no clearer example among the Money Makers than that of Clark Gable. In each of the six years his name has been among the ten leaders. Starting in eighth place in 1932, he moved forward to seventh the following season; since, he has held second position with but one exception, and then he was third.

So too with Fred Astaire and Ginger

TWO STARS whose work has been cut short by death loomed importantly in exhibitors' estimates of the money making stars. The poll shows both Will Rogers, killed in an airplane crash in the summer of 1935, and Jean Harlow, whose sudden death this year was one of Hollywood's major fatalities, are well remembered by theatre men and the public.

Will Rogers was first in the records of exhibitors three years ago. One year later showed him second only to Shirley Temple. Last year he was a Money Maker and this year he was mentioned among the 15 Honor Stars.

Despite the passing of Miss Harlow, many exhibitors felt it their duty as showmen to mention her prominently among their preferences in gratitude for what she had done for the industry. She was among the Honor Stars in the 1936 rating and among the leaders in the present survey.

EXHIBITORS NAME WESTERN STARS; SELECT 36 RIDERS OF THE RANGE

GENE AUTRY, singing cowboy, is THE Money Making Western star of 1937, American exhibitors decided from their accounting books, in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S annual canvass to determine the positions of players in terms of box office dollars. So close as almost to match Autry's contributions to theatre owners' peace of mind and purse came Bill Boyd —who ever heard a Western player called William?

Thirty-six players in the Western type of product received votes from exhibitors who had played their pictures. The returned questionnaires indicated that a number of theatre men were expanding the definition of Western to include all forms of outdoor productions, because into their ballots were written names of stars who are not Western players. These names have not been listed.

Exhibitors were asked the identical question regarding Western players that was presented in the study of the entire field of motion picture personality. The question was: "Name, in order, the 10 players in Westerns whose pictures drew the largest attendance to your theatres." Covered was the period September 1, 1936, to September 1, 1937.

Four places among the Ten Leaders were taken this year by individuals never before accorded that honor. The four places represented six individuals, however, for most exhibitors specified all of the Three Mesquiteers rather than each individual, when they referred to Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune. However, because some showmen did mention them individually rather than as a team, in the computation of percentages full pointage was given for each team mentioned plus one-third point for each mention as an individual.

Another singing rider of the plains and valleys—Tex Ritter—was placed sixth by the exhibitors.

Bob Steele, first among those accorded honorable mention a year ago, won seventh place for 1937, and Charles Starrett, fourth in Honorable Mention in 1936, came up to tenth rank.

GENE AUTRY

Gene Autry's rapid rise, and indeed that of Tex Ritter as well, points to a widened field of Western accomplishment as well as reception.

Both were well known for their radio voices before they came upon the screen. Both are Texans.

Autry, born at Tioga September 29, 1907, worked on his father's ranch until he had completed his schooling, whereupon he became an employee of the San Francisco Railway in Oklahoma. He went into radio singing in 1928 and recorded his songs for the Victor Company. Four years later he entered motion pictures, writing his own songs. He has starred in many Republic features.

In the computation the same procedure was followed as in the general poll.

MONEY MAKERS APPEAR IN DIVERSIFIED PRODUCT

Rogers. It was as a team that this pair danced its way into the inner circle of Money Makers of 1935, in fourth place. The following season they had stepped forward into third position. Rated by the exhibitors in seventh place this year, while the preponderance of the voting was predicated upon their appearances together and therefore on that basis the pointage was made, yet the change by which they were to be individually starred was already under way. Miss Rogers had appeared as the star of "In Person," and they had gone to separate stages, Astaire to "Damsel in Distress" and Miss Rogers to "Stage Door," both only recently released.

Robert Taylor improved his position, moving into third ranking. His rise to fourth in the 1936 poll had been from 83d place the year before.

Bing Crosby, fourth among the 1937 Money Makers, is no stranger to the ranks of the leaders. In 1934 he was given seventh position by the showmen.

New to the group of Honor Stars this year were Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Spencer Tracy, Eleanor Powell and Jack Benny.

The entire field of the independent exhibitor, in key city or hamlet, was canvassed in the poll.

Final standings throughout the poll were determined by a pointage and percentage system which gave full credit to relative ratings set by the exhibitors. When the preponderance of ballots placed players as members of a team, full pointage was given for each vote registered for the team and in addition one-half point for each individual mention. Where most exhibitors placed the two individually, full pointage was given each for individual mention and one-half point to each for team mention.

Ten points were recorded a player for each for individual mention and one-half second rank mention and so on.

Diversity of product was represented by the Ten Biggest Money Makers—actually eleven because of one team position. Roles played by them included comedy, romance, melodrama, singing and dancing.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS NAME MONEY MAKING STARS OF THE YEAR

Shirley Temple again ranked first at box office in the United Kingdom

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, placed first by British exhibitors among the Money Making Stars of 1936, in the first poll conducted in the United Kingdom by MOTION PICTURE HERALD, retains her position by an emphatic margin as a result of the 1937 vote.

As in 1936, the questionnaire was sent by the London Office of Quigley Publications to over 5,000 theatres of all classes and capacities, in all sections of the community in England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, and the figures were prepared from such returns as were received in reply.

The results are only representative but again prove a considerable uniformity in the valuation placed on stars in the United Kingdom and the United States.

Once again, however, the British results demonstrate that production in this country has established a number of British stars who, in the British market, have a drawing power equal to that of Hollywood's most famous personalities.

A comparison of the 1937 ranking with that of 1936 shows the following interesting features:

Clark Gable, second in this year's poll, has improved his position from fourth place in the previous year.

Gracie Felds, third, occupied the same place in 1936, but her votes show a more favorable ratio to those of Shirley Temple than on that occasion.

Gary Cooper has come to the fourth place from the twenty-first.

George Formby, fifth, was not in the first ten in 1936, though at the thirteenth place he was not far away.

William Powell, sixth, shows an almost exactly similar improvement in status; he was 12th last year.

Jeanette MacDonald, seventh, has made a very big advance. She was not in the first twenty in 1936. Robert Taylor, eighth, also registers a notable step upwards as a new star value in England.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers as a team were in second position last year.

Laurel and Hardy, fifth last year, were tenth in the new poll.

The newcomers to the British "Honours Ten" are George Formby, Gary Cooper, William Powell and Jeanette MacDonald.

A comparison of the 1937 British results with those of the American 1936 vote is instructive, having in mind the fact that the United Kingdom sees American pictures roughly a season after the United States, and that therefore these results broadly represent the box-office valuation of the same films. These are the outstanding features:

Shirley Temple was first in both votes.

Clark Gable was second in both.

The Astaire-Rogers team, ranked third in U. S., stands ninth in U. K.

Robert Taylor, fourth in U. S., places eighth in U. K.

Joe E. Brown, fifth in the American rankings, did not place among the British Ten. Also missing from the British first ten are Dick Powell, Joan Crawford, and Claudette Colbert, who were America's sixth, seventh and eighth placings in 1936.

Jeanette MacDonald, ranked ninth last year in U. S., is more highly graded in U. K., where she is placed seventh, and Gary Cooper's comparative positions are even more flattering to his British value. He was America's tenth choice in 1936 and England places him fourth for 1937.

The similarity of the two lists is more striking than its differences. Six names appear in both lists. William Powell was thirteenth in the American list of 1936.

Of stars highly ranked in America but not included in Britain's first ten, Joe E. Brown is in thirtieth place in the U. K. list, Joan Crawford thirty-third, Dick Powell thirty-seventh and Claudette Colbert forty-fourth.

*Players in British productions.

The outstanding features of the British list are that it recognizes the stable values of Shirley Temple, Clark Gable and the Astaire-Rogers team, emphatically registers the new value of Robert Taylor, as America did a year earlier, and that it also underlines the definite box-office standing in England of the British stars Gracie Fields and George Formby.

Formby, in the fifth position, is one place higher than was Jessie Matthews in the British all-star list for 1936. That Miss Matthews dropped from sixth to fourteenth position has to be read with consideration to the fact that she had a serious illness during the year in question.

The British public's faithfulness to its stars, which all American experts rank as of longer life than that of the American "fan," is also illustrated by the British list. If artistes handicapped by infrequent appearances or other special circumstances are left out of account, it will be seen that, even when a star has been excluded from the Ten by the claims of new talent, he or she by no means has been discarded. James Cagney, for instance, is in the first twenty.

Obvious reasons exist for the fact that Norma Shearer has receded from tenth place in 1936 to thirty-fourth this year. Conversely, the advance of Gary Cooper undoubtedly is directly traceable to the enormous success of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" in British theatres.

Apart from its general endorsement of the theory that a big picture in America will be a big picture in England, and create substantially the same star valuations here, the poll is of special interest from its recognition of George Formby and Robert Taylor.

Formby's significance to the British box-office was stressed in comments on last year's poll of artistes in British films, and is further referred to in references elsewhere to that poll in 1937. Taylor's appeal to British picture goers was shown when recently he starred in the Metro-British production, "A Yank at Oxford." It is interesting to speculate just where Taylor will rank in the British all-star list after general showing of his first British film.

Another special point of interest about the British first ten is that Gracie Fields retains her superiority as a box-office attraction over all stars but Shirley Temple and Clark Gable. Miss Fields now is under contract to Twentieth Century-Fox, with pictures at Hollywood in prospect. It seems at least a possibility that, a few years hence,

THE TOP MONEY MAKERS IN BRITISH PRODUCTIONS

Gracie Fields repeats rating of year ago as first at the box office

GRACIE FIELDS, first in the Poll of Money-Making Stars in British films in 1937, as in 1936, emphasizes by her success what a British box-office value Twentieth Century-Fox has obtained by signing her for production in this country and in Hollywood. This American company, incidentally, now has on its star list both the British winner and the British All-Stars winner, Shirley Temple.

Miss Fields heads the HERALD poll of British exhibitors for the second time at the very moment at which she has ceased to be a British star in the more limited sense. As this is written, she has made her first for Twentieth Century-Fox at Denham, "He Was Her Man," with Victor McLaglen, also English born, opposite.

Though Miss Fields' triumph in the all-British list for the second year in succession is notable, her margin of votes over George Formby is considerably less than that which she had over Jessie Matthews last year. Formby has come from fourth position to displace Miss Matthews as runner-up, but Miss Matthews in third place maintains approximately the same ratio of votes, in regard to those for Miss Fields, which placed her second last year.

Formby's enormous appeal at the British box-office is emphasized by this fact. A purely British value at the present time and to some extent a localized value even in England—he is the favorite of the industrial areas and never is seen in London's "West End"—Formby represents in England something rather like that for which Will Rogers stood in America.

The fact that the methods and material of the two men are miles apart does not affect the comparison; Formby interprets and satirizes working class provincial life in England from the inside, just as Rogers interpreted his segment of American life.

Jessie Matthews is the one English player who has established herself as a star in America by her performances in British films. It is probable that her third place in the British Ten undervalues her box-office value here. "It's Love Again," released later in England than in America, was shown by many British theatres during the period covered by the present vote, but it was followed by her long illness which not only delayed completion of "Head Over Heels," but affected its quality. Miss Matthews, making three big pictures a year, is capable of challenging all competitors for first place among British stars.

Will Hay, fourth in this year's list, has risen from eighth place in 1936. Hay made more films in the last 12 months and some of them were considered very good. His method, like that of Formby, is typically and to some extent locally, British. His screen success, in the first instance, was built upon the public's knowledge of and love for his stage and radio portrayals of a comic schoolmaster. Recently, Hay roles have taken a much wider range. He is a fine character actor, capable of being understood and appreciated in America.

In fifth place is Jack Buchanan (sixth last year). Buchanan, musical comedy idol of British women, stage producer, theatre owner (the Leicester Square is his) and now film producer, is a big figure in the entertainment world this side. That his pictures have not made a greater impression in U. S., though Buchanan, currently playing on the New York stage, is heartily welcomed there in person, is probably due to the fact that for the most part they more or less literally transcribe stage musical productions. The program of Jack Buchanan Productions suggests that this drawback may be removed in 1938.

George Arliss' hold on the British public has not been lessened by his abandonment of work in Hollywood in favor of British studios. He is placed sixth, whereas in 1936 he was ninth. Arliss has appeared in a number of relatively modest films for Gaumont-British and Gainsborough, but his personality, in such subjects as "Dr. Syn," has been shown not to be dependent on superproduction, and the public's rating of him appears to support his recent advocacy of British films that are really British.

Charles Laughton comes from eleventh place to equal seventh place with Tom Walls, helped undoubtedly by his performance in "Rembrandt," at a time when he, like Arliss, definitely has associated himself with British production. Besides being star, he is joint managing director, with Erich Pommer, of Mayflower Pictures, aiming at the American as well as the British market.

Tom Walls, bracketed with Laughton, takes precedence in this year's list of the Tom Walls-Ralph Lynn team, which was placed seventh last year. The team this year is in twentieth place and Ralph Lynn, individually, sixteenth.

The Winners

|---|---|
| Gracie Fields | First |
| George Formby | Second |
| Jessie Matthews | Third |
| Will Hay | Fourth |
| Jack Buchanan | Fifth |
| George Arliss | Sixth |
| Charles Laughton, Tom Walls | Seventh |
| Anna Neagle | Eighth |
| Jack Hulbert | Ninth |
| Paul Robeson | Tenth |

Anna Neagle (eighth) comes into the Ten from fourteenth place last year. Unquestionably, her performance in "Victoria the Great," which had not been released in England when the poll closed, would have won for her a much higher rating and, in 1938, probably will be reflected both in the British and in the All-Star list.

Jack Hulbert, in ninth place, was third last year; he made fewer films in 1937. Tenth is Paul Robeson (22nd in 1936), already a big personal value in England and during this 12 months much more intimately associated with British production. Robeson, apart from a series of unpretentious but commercially very successful musicals for British Lion and other companies, had a big part in G-B's "King Solomon's Mines."

Outside of the Ten, the list indicates some interesting variations in British star valuations and the appearance of one or two significant new names. The eleventh place of American-born John Lodge is probably due to his work for Associated British Pictures in such productions as "Sensation" and "Bulldog Drummond at Bay." Arthur Tracy, "the Street Singer," was in the film of that title and in Herbert Wilcox's "Limelight," and is another American native who nowadays ranks as a British player.

Max Miller, seventeenth, is a British stage comedian who has made a large popular success in films for Gaumont-British and for Warner-First National at Teddington.

That Sidney Howard and Robert Donat are fourteenth and nineteenth respectively does not indicate any fall in popularity, but that they were seen in fewer pictures. Donat's "Knight Without Armour," for instance, had not been seen in England.

Donat was fifth in the 1936 vote, which followed on his "Ghost Goes West" hit, and Howard was tenth. Their omission from the First Ten, with that of the Walls-Lynn team, and the inclusion of Charles Laughton, Anna Neagle and Paul Robeson, are the main differences in the two years.

That seven out of the 10 first choices of 1936 are included in the first 10 of 1937 appears to indicate a stability in British star values rather superior to that of American stars in England, as revalued in the All-Star poll. Actually the list, like the All-Star list, reflects the British public's fidelity to old favorites, irrespective of their nationality. It shows it rather more obviously than the All-Star list, because new British stars do not come along, demanding box-office recognition, as rapidly as do new personalities of Hollywood.

In the palmy days of English variety the truth of this saying was somewhat fatiguingly illustrated by the fact that the top-liners sang the same songs for 10 or 20 years. In regard to films it means that the British public will not discard a star for one or even several weak productions, whether he be British or American.

BRITONS NAME BIGGEST WESTERN DRAWS

That the Western pictures retain a considerable hold on many sections of the British public is shown by the fact that British exhibitors placed 26 stars of such productions. Actually, they named 34 players, but eight of them are eliminated from the listing because while they have appeared in pictures of the out-of-doors, none of their product is truly Western in the American definition.

Gene Autry, voted to first place, was just out of the first 10 in last year's British list, but his eleventh position was made by very few votes less than those of Hoot Gibson, tenth.

Buck Jones, first in 1936, is now second to Autry by an insignificant percentage. It is almost a dead heat between them.

Placed third, Dick Foran has improved from sixth position and William Boyd, fourth, has risen from the ninth position.

George O'Brien, fifth, is one place lower than in the 1936 Ten, John Wayne is sixth instead of fifth, Tim McCoy is seventh as against third, Ken Maynard has fallen from second place to eighth. Hoot Gibson retains his tenth position.

Harry Carey, ninth of Britain's Western favorites, was placed fifteenth by last year's votes. His and Autry's are the only new names in this list. The two of last year's Ten displaced are Tom Mix and Randolph Scott. They were placed seventh and eighth in 1936; this year Scott is fifteenth. Mix is no longer in pictures.

That Britain's valuation of Western stars is substantially that of U. S. is shown by the fact that nine of the British Ten in 1937 appeared in America's Ten for 1936.

16 COMPANIES BUY 48 BOOKS AND PLAYS FOR NEW FEATURE SCHEDULES

Half of Properties Purchased in Month Are Originals—MGM Leads; Nine Novels Bought; Plays Added to Libraries

Nearing the half way mark in production schedules for the current season, producers in November purchased 48 literary properties, the majority of which will fill the few remaining spots in the 1937-38 season. In a few cases, however, material was bought for production during the 1938-39 season.

The November buying was by a total of 16 producers. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer led the group by acquiring the motion picture rights to 15 stories. MGM's purchases were varied. Of the 15 properties, six were originals, four were novels, three were plays and two were from magazines.

The total number of purchases was an increase of seven over the previous month. Original stories, as in October, proved the favorite, 50 per cent of the properties being in this classification. During October originals numbered 22, or 53.6 per cent of the total of 41.

Novels, of which nine were bought, maintained their October position of second place as a source of supply. November, however, saw twice as many plays purchased as in October when three were acquired. Magazine stories numbered six in October and eight last month. The one remaining purchase during November was made by Eugene Frenke who acquired the American rights to "Brothers Karamazov" which was filmed in Germany seven years ago.

Purchases by other producers were Universal, three originals, two magazines and two novels; Twentieth Century-Fox, four originals and one play; Paramount, three originals and one magazine; Warner Brothers, two novels and one magazine serial; Victory Pictures, three originals; Columbia, one play; C. C. Burr, one play; Republic, one novel; Gregory LaCava, one magazine; Joe Rock, one operetta; Mr. Frenke, one original in addition to the motion picture rights to the German film; and RKO, Grand National, Principal Productions, and Walt Disney, one original each.

Grand National, in announcing its lone purchase, "Angels with Dirty Faces," stated the company plans to purchase stories only from "front name authors" for its upper bracket films. James Cagney will star in "Angels with Dirty Faces," which was written by Rowland Brown, author of "Doorway to Hell" and "The Devil Is a Sissy."

The titles of the 48 stories, with all available production credits, follow:

AMATEUR CROOK, original by Basil Dickey, purchased by Victory Pictures. Mr. Dickey also wrote the dialogue and screenplay.

AMBUSH, Liberty Magazine serial by Robert Ray, purchased by Paramount.

AMERICAN CHAMBER OF HORRORS, original by Ruth DeForest, purchased by MGM.

AND ONE WAS BEAUTIFUL, Saturday Evening Post serial by Alice Duer Miller, purchased by MGM.

ANGELS WITH DIRTY FACES, original by Rowland Brown, purchased by Grand National.

BALALAIKA, musical play by Eric Maschwitz, purchased by MGM. Lawrence Weingarten will produce, George Oppenheimer and Ernest Vajda will do the screen play and Nelson Eddy and Ilona Massey will have the leading roles.

BROTHERS KARAMAZOV, American rights to the property which was filmed in Germany seven years ago, purchased by Eugene Frenke as a starring vehicle for Anna Sten.

CHAMPION LUCK, Saturday Evening Post short story purchased by MGM.

CLARION, THE, novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, purchased by Warner Brothers.

DEATH TAKES MR. KLUCK, original by Xantippe, acquired by Universal.

DELILAH, play by Ferenc Molnar, purchased by MGM.

DON'T LEAD WITH YOUR HEART, original by Hans Kraly and Albert J. Cohen, purchased by Eugene Frenke as a starring vehicle for Anna Sten. Mr. Frenke will produce and direct. Release will be through Grand National.

DOUBLE TROUBLE, original by Bertrand Robinson and Arthur Pierson, purchased by MGM.

DUSTY RIVER, musical by Barry Barringer and Eleanor Maronde, purchased by C. C. Burr.

FAIR CO-ED, book by George Ade, music by Gustav Luders, purchased by MGM.

FALLING STAR, original by Gregory Ratoff, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

FERDINAND THE BULL, original by Munroe Leaf and Robert Lawson, purchased by Walt Disney.

FORTUNEERS, original by Reginald Taviner, purchased by RKO. Lee Marcus will produce.

HAWAIIAN BUCKAROO, original, purchased by Principal Productions.

HELL'S KITCHEN HAS A PANTRY, magazine serial by Borden Chase, purchased by Universal.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION, original by Vina Delmar, purchased by Universal as a starring vehicle for Irene Dunne, Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy.

LITTLE GYPSY, original by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox as a starring vehicle for Jane Withers.

LOOKING AFTER SANDY, novel by Margaret Turnbull, purchased by Republic. George Nicholls, Jr., will be associate producer.

LOST RANCH, original by Basil Dickey, purchased by Victory.

LOVE IS A HEADACHE, original by Lou Heifetz and Herbert Klein, purchased by MGM. Frederick Stephani will produce and leading roles will be taken by Gladys George, Franchot Tone and Mickey Rooney.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE, original by Jack Neville, purchased by MGM.

Faith Baldwin Story

MEN ARE SUCH FOOLS, Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Faith Baldwin, purchased by Warner Brothers. Horace Jackson will do the adaption and David Lewis will produce.

MAE WEST BURLESQUES THE BIBLE ON THE AIR FOR COFFEE MERCHANTS

Sunday Night Broadcast Follows Combined Efforts of Standard Brands, Thompson and Morris Agencies and NBC

Mae West was finally brought to the air waves, for the first time in four years, last Sunday evening—radio's biggest night for the American family. It took the combined efforts, over months, of the Standard Brands-Chase and Sanborn coffee sponsor, its J. Walter Thompson advertising agency, the talent "scouts" of National Broadcasting Company, the William Morris talent agency, and whatnot, to land Paramount Pictures' self-proclaimed personification of "Cum up 'n' see me some time."

The Brooklyn-born Miss West appeared on "Red" networks, mostly in a burlesque of the Biblical story of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden. Later in the program, as explained by NBC's advance publicity, she attempted "to captivate the wooden-hearted" Charlie McCarthy, dummy of ventriloquist Edgar Bergen. The NBC publicity further explained that "Charlie boasts a long list of conquests but, as he whispered to his side-kick, 'it looks bad, Bergen; yes, it looks bad'."

Money seems to have been the main argument between Miss West and a radio appearance, with Hollywood estimating that she held out for sums ranging all the way from $5,000 to $10,000 for the single few-minutes broadcast. The J. Walter Thompson agency in Hollywood said that previous attempts to induce the star to join the Chase and Sanborn coffee air show were blocked only by conflicts with her picture work at Paramount. Others say it was salary. Still others contend that the Lux Theatre of the Air, a Lever Brothers toilet soap program, had some sort of a claim on Miss West for the air, to star her in one Monday night play. The fact remains that the efforts spent in bringing the lady to the microphone were lengthy and, finally, successfully. (J. Walter Thompson, incidentally, handles advertising for both Chase and Sanborn and Lux.)

Going on Tour

The William Morris talent agency was the direct contact between Miss West and last Sunday's broadcast. The agency also is handling the personal appearance tour which Miss West plans, in conjunction with Paramount, in behalf of her new Paramount picture, "Every Day Is a Holiday," as it plays the key first-run motion picture theatres. Some in Hollywood believe that the Sunday broadcast was accepted with expectation of advance exploitation values for the picture, but from socalled "inside" sources, neither Paramount or Emanuel Cohen's Major Pictures, which produces the West films, "had anything to do with the radio deal."

Mae West had appeared only twice before on the air. Like Shirley Temple, Mae, in the parlance of the radio talent scouts, always has played "hard to get" in broadcasting.

FEW ELIMINATIONS BY OHIO CENSORS

Something of a record was established by the Ohio state division of film censorship, at Columbus, when only four eliminations were ordered out of a total of 199 reels reviewed for the week ending December 10th.

Once she appeared with Rudy Vallee for his Standard Brands' Fleischmann's Yeast program, back in 1933. Louella Parsons, film critic for Hearst International News Service, tried to get Miss West for her Hollywood Hotel Campbell's Soup program, but Miss West turned down the request flatly, and somewhat of a socalled "feud" resulted, coming to a climax when the Hearst newspapers refused to accept any Mae West motion picture advertising. Eventually Mae appeared on the Parsons program.

Emanuel Cohen's Major Pictures was mentioned on last Sunday evening's coffee broadcast, Paramount was not.

Anyway, Arch Kobler, of the William Morris agency, wrote the script which Miss West read as "Eve," and then later in the program in the remarks she addressed to Edgar Bergen's dummy.

Editorial by Martin Quigley

The script, and the manner of Miss West's delivery, brought many adverse expressions, typical of the comment being an editorial by Martin Quigley in Motion Picture Daily, as follows:

"Radio in certain of its principal manifestations seems intent upon buying itself a headache. National Broadcasting Company's presentation on Sunday evening of Mae West for Chase and Sanborn is an example. The coffee merchants, counselled by persons experienced in writing trick advertising lines who have suddenly been metamorphosed into Belascos and Ziegfelds, might not be expected to know better, but somewhere within the confines of the genius of the great broadcasting system there certainly should have been someone capable of preventing this blunder.

"Failure to have accomplished this will leave spokesmen for radio looking decidedly ridiculous when called upon to face the bar of critical public opinion, an eventuality which is certain to arrive if there is persistence in policies which permit the broadcast of a typical Mae West performance into the homes of millions of persons throughout the nation, and on a Sunday evening at that.

Scissored by Censors

"These spokesmen will hardly be able to profess ignorance of the police court attentions which have been accorded to past professional activities by Chase and Sanborn's Sunday evening star, which activities initially created the characterization which the coffee merchants invited the housewives and their families to listen to on Sunday evening. Nor the avalanche of articulate criticism which has descended upon the motion picture industry as the result of Miss West's single-idea monologue.

"These spokesmen might be informed now, so as to escape the shock of having the information conveyed to them under more formal circumstances, that some of the material palmed off by Miss West on Sunday evening is by no means new to the members of the various motion picture censorship boards because they have been cutting it out for years. The broadcast was a nice salvaging operation for Miss West because it gave her an opportunity to use certain other material for which in Hollywood there is no longer a market for reasons which it has been assumed were quite well known to all persons with a trace of knoweldge of recent developments in the amusement business.

"The motion picture industry would probably welcome radio to a share in the headaches created by the Mae West characterization if it were not for the fact that headaches are not cured by sharing with others. If they were, radio would no longer need to aver its blessings to motion pictures. The contribution would be proven abundantly.

Travesty on Adam and Eve

"The West presentation was a bad taste travesty on the Adam and Eve story from the Book of Genesis, a grand idea to start with in a broadcast for a nation with perhaps sixty or seventy million enrolled church members. With this as its springboard it dove deeply into a morass of the familiar double-entendre patter with here and there that bovine emphasis which Miss West labors so industriously to convey. Chase and Sanborn, devoted to dating their coffee, should have had a look at the teeth of some of this material.

"Radio lives and must live if it is to continue a great institution of American life under the blessing of free speech. It just happens that among the chief media of expression radio has at best only a tenuous hold on its freedom of expression by virtue of the fact that its use of the air is already policed by a Federal commission.

"This Federal commission necessarily stands subject to the influence of any and all pressure groups that may wish to make it their business to put radio in a straitjacket.

"Persistence in a policy which admits of material of the character of Miss West's presentation on Sunday evening is not merely exposing radio to the jeopardy of a straitjacket; it is asking for it."

Dreher to Head Award

Carl Dreher has ben named chairman of the board of judges for the scientific or technical award by Major Nathan Levinson, chairman of the Technicians' Branch of the Academy. He will be assisted by John Arnold, Farciot Edouart, Lloyd Goldsmith, Grover Laube, J. M. Nickolaus, Gordon Sawyer, John Swain and S. J. Twining.

Attorney General Undertakes Study Of Trust Charges

Charging that plans for the construction of a neighborhood house in Savannah were halted because of inability to get pictures, Fred G. Weis, owner and manager of the Savannah Theatre, this week revealed he appealed for Federal aid and that the Attorney General's office ordered an investigation of his charges.

"If we do not obtain relief from this source," Mr. Weis asked, then what is to become of the independent theatre owner?"

Mr. Weis said he paid $11,500 for property on which to build the proposed theatre, paid an architect $875 and expended $500 on incidental expenses before learning that he would not be able to obtain product, although the theatre was to be located "in a non-competitive zone."

In Dallas, distributors and the Interstate Circuit, defendants in an anti-trust suit which they lost, filed a notice of appeal and W. H. Atwell, federal judge, set next Monday as the date for a hearing on the notice. B. W. Henderson, special prosecutor, was to arrive in Dallas from Washington on Friday or Saturday to prepare arguments attacking the substance and form of the narrative statement of appeal.

The appeal, filed by George Wright, counsel for the defendants, is based upon two premises. The first is that each distributor defendant, acting independently of other distributor defendants, as owner of a copyrighted film has the legal right to contract with a first exhibitor providing that certain pictures shall not be subsequently shown at admissions of less than 25 cents nor as part of double bills.

The second contention is that there was no evidence showing an agreement, understanding or conspiracy between the several distributor defendants to make such contracts with the exhibitor.

George Ryan, attorney for the Morse & Rothenberg Circuit in its anti-trust suit against distributors and three affiliated New England circuits resumed the taking of dispositions in the case in New York this week. He took evidence from Neil F. Agnew, Paramount general sales manager.

New York Theatre Owners Form Federation Committee

Theatre owners of New York City and vicinity at a meeting at the Hotel Astor this week formed a committee on behalf of the $6,250,000 New York-Brooklyn Federation campaign for the support of Jewish philanthropic societies.

Speakers at the meeting were Judge Algeron I. Nova, president of the Brooklyn Federation; Paul Moss, Commissioner of Licenses; David Bernstein, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, who presided.

Fanchon and Marco this week acquired five Bess Schulter and Alex Papand theatres in St. Louis. The deal completed the negotiations for the houses which had been under way for some time.

Jessel Answers Fidler by Terming "Gossipers" Defense Absurb

The Hollywood campaign against radio "gossipers" prying into the private lives of film personalities was kept alive by George Jessel this week when he characterized Jimmy Fidler's defense of radio columnists' activities as "absurd".

"We, the public," Mr. Jessel declared, "are only entitled to good performances, and entitled to be entertained every time we buy a ticket to go into a theatre, but it is not any of our business if so-and-so sleeps with his beard over the covers or tucks it underneath."

Mr. Jessel's comments were voiced on Sunday night over his regular Mutual Broadcasting System program, "Thirty Minutes in Hollywood with George Jessel". He singled out Mr. Fidler's assertion that "the motion picture studios want to make tin gods of their players" and that "if the only thing heard about them was the stuff sent out by their publicity offices, such sugar-coated speeches would cause audiences to lose their interest in Hollywood and its product". He answered the statement with the challenge: "Let's look at the record."

He then called attention to the fact that pictures produced before the radio "gossipers" era, drew huge grosses.

"The public didn't need any innuendos, rumors or travels into private lives of these people to make them go to see something that was going to give them fine entertainment," Mr. Jessel continued.

"No meritorious American product ever needed a besmirching note to get business in this country. The 'gossiper' then continued and said the private lives of these people were open to criticism as even the President of the United States and his family were. What an analogy. Supposing some fool did say something slurring about the President's private life? Could the exhibitors get together and bar the President's pictures? Could someone fire the President like the studio could be forced to do to the actor or actress? Why it's absurd."

In conclusion, Mr. Jessel said: "I don't believe in rigid censorship of any kind. I feel that if your pen does slip, let the blot fall on the charter of your own conscience; and any defense of the looking over the transom gossip business is a lost cause—as lost a cause as the defending the muscle racket, religious intolerance, or the bombing of Shanghai."

Detroit, Buffalo, Kansas City Variety Clubs Hold Elections

The Variety Clubs of Detroit, Kansas City and Buffalo held elections this week naming the following officers. Detroit: William Carlson, president; Alex Schreiber, first vice-president; Harold Robinson, second vice-president; David Newman, secretary; Jack Saxe, treasurer, and the following directors, William Felmion, Carl Buermele, Ray Moon, Charles Perry, Jack Stewart and Phil Kaplan.

Kansas City: R. R. Biechele, president; Finton Jones, first vice-president; George Hartman, second vice-president; Sam Abend, treasurer, and Douglas Deach, secretary. Directors, including officers, are Elmer Rhoden, Frank Hensler, George Baker, Arthur Cole, Earl Jameson and Norris Cresswell.

Buffalo: Jacob Levene, chief barker; Robert T. Murphy; first assistant chief barker; Sidney Lehman, second assistant chief barker, and W. E. J. Martin, secretary-treasurer. Directors are Albert Becker, Jack Berkowitz, George W. Ferguson, Stanley Konzanowski, Carl W. Kempke, Ralph W. Maw and John M. Sitterly.

Aalberg Heads SMPE Group

John O. Aalberg, in charge of the sound department for RKO Radio, has been elected chairman of the Pacific Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, succeeding Kenneth Morgan. Gordon Chambers was reelected secretary-treasurer and C. W. Handley was elected to the board of managers.

Felix F. Feist Left $347,284

Felix F. Feist, for 11 years general manager in charge of sales and distribution for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, left a gross estate of $390,795 when he died on April 15, 1936, according to a transfer tax appraisal filed this week by the State Tax Bureau in surrogates court in New York. Funeral and administration expenses amounting to $10,286 and debts, totaling $33,255, reduced the net estate to $347,284.

Mr. Feist left to his son, Felix E. Feist, Santa Monica, Cal., one-half of his entire net estate, and to a daughter, Marjorie M. Nast, of Beverly Hills, Cal., the remaining one-half of the net estate in trust until she attains the age of 25 years. The Corn Exchange Bank Trust Company of New York is the executor of the estate.

Review Board's Juniors Select Ten Best Films

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, in keeping with its custom of previous years, has conducted its balloting for the "ten best pictures of 1937" among its junior motion picture groups, the Young Reviewers and nationwide 4-star Clubs, in advance of adult selections. Over 350 boys and girls joined in the voting. The pictures in order of preference are:

"The Good Earth," "Dead End," "Captains Courageous," "Lost Horizon," "The Life of Emile Zola," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "A Star Is Born," "Stage Door," "The Plainsman," and "Stella Dallas."

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Arsene Lupin Returns

(MGM)

Mystery

Arsene Lupin, famous French international adventurer and thief, product of the imagination of Maurice Leblanc, master of French detective fiction, first was a subject of screen attention about twenty years ago. MGM again had him on the screen in 1932. Once more he comes back in a romance-tinged crook melodrama. This time he is not altogether successful in stealing jewels, but he does succeed in stealing a heart. He also wins the respect and admiration of an American detective who could not put him in jail.

The role of Arsene Lupin, which is also a dual character, will be filled by Melvyn Douglas, who scored in "Theodora Goes Wild," "I Met Him In Paris" and "Captains Courageous." His nemesis is Warren William, often seen portraying detective roles and last in "Madame X." The girl in the case is Virginia Bruce, who will be seen in "The Bad Man of Brimstone" prior to the release of the present production. The supporting cast lists John Halliday, who has been absent from the American screen for a considerable time, Monty Wooley, a new comer, Nat Pendleton, George Zucco, Leonard Penn and E. E. Clive, who adds much to the comedy value of "Beg, Borrow Or Steal."

George Fitzmaurice, whose latest picture is "Live, Love and Learn," preceded by "The Emperor's Candlesticks," is the director. John Considine, who made the last named picture, "Personal Property" and "Broadway Melody of 1936," is producing the film.

As does another picture described in this week's allotment of advance information, "Arsene Lupin Returns" adapts the Raffles theme. When such is the case, the type of showmanship, outside of that which is devoted to names, is evident.

Release date: Feb. 11, 1938.

Mad About Music

(Universal)

Deanna Durbin

Again Universal is offering its leading personality, Deanna Durbin. With "100 Men and a Girl," in which she is starred, currently attracting much favorable attention, it is evident that in any picture in which Miss Durbin will appear she naturally should be the dominating exploitation asset. However, in "Mad About Music," which Joe Pasternak, maker of "100 Men and a Girl," is also producing, there are other showmanship qualities which exhibitors should be able to adapt advantageously to assure the forthcoming film's commercial popularity.

The major locales are a girls' school in Switzerland and Paris. The story is based on a human interest plot. An orphan girl, whose mother denies her because she fears acknowledgment that she is the mother of a fourteen year old girl would ruin her screen glamour, attempts to convince everyone she has a father. Importance of music in accentuating the moods of the story is not ignored. She meets and prevails upon a bachelor to act as her father. In Paris, she meets her mother and, as mother love triumphs over selfish pride, the child's happiness is complete when she sees her bachelor ally romantically attached to her mother.

The cast of name players chosen to support Miss Durbin seems to be exceptionally strong. Included are Herbert Marshall, Arthur Treacher, Charles Judells, William Frawley; the juvenile players Jackie Moran, Marcia Mae Jones and Helen Parrish; Christian Rub, Nana Bryant, Elizabeth Risdon, Joan Trea and Hollywood's noted exhibitor, Sid Grauman.

While Frederick Kohner and Marcella Burke, who provided the original, have no outstanding screen contributions to their credit, the screen play writers, Bruce Manning who did many treatments, and Felix Jackson are better known. Lyrics and music which Miss Durbin will sing were composed by Harold Adamson and Jimmie McHugh.

Release date: Feb. 1, 1938, tentatively.

City Girl

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama

Name value in this production will be represented by Phyllis Brooks, seen in "You Can't Have Everything" and "Dangerously Yours" and who will be featured in the forthcoming "In Old Chicago" and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," Ricardo Cortez, Douglas Fowley and Chick Chandler, who have been in many 20th Century-Fox films, Robert Wilcox, who was featured in "Wild and Wooly," Marjorie Main, outstanding in "Dead End" and "Boy of the Streets," Adrienne Ames, Esther Muir, Charles Lane, George Lynn, Paul Stanton, Charles Trowbridge, Pierre Watkins.

The story is a study of a social problem. It centers on a girl who, born in the tenement slums, never had a chance. Easily influenced and dazzled by displays of underworld wealth and power, she falls into bad company and is eventually accused and convicted of murder. Kidnapped from court, disfigured in an accident, given a chance to work out her own regeneration, she nevertheless elects to retain the association of her gangster friends and play the game of life to the bitter end.

Three writers, Frances Hyland, Robin Harris and Lester Ziffren, all of whom have been associated with similar themes, wrote it. Under Sol Wurtzel's production guidance, direction is in the hands of Alfred Werker, maker of "Wild and Wooly," "We Have Our Moments" and "Stolen Harmony."

Release date: Jan. 14, 1938.

Headline Huntress

(Tentative Title)

(20th Century-Fox)

Domestic Comedy

The story to be told in this production follows a path already well trodden. A man is too busy to show his wife the attention she expects. The "old family friend" appears and the wife finds enjoyment in his company. Jealous as the husband is, there isn't very much he can do about the situation. Nevertheless, motivated by smart dialogue and amusing situations, the problem of domestic relations is eventually satisfactorily resolved. Modern in theme, the story is being treated from a comedy and not melodramatic problem play approach.

Being produced by Sol M. Wurtzel, the feature has Gloria Stuart and Michael Whalen, who previously have been seen together in "Poor Little Rich Girl" and "The Lady Escapes." The other man is Lyle Talbot, currently prominent in "Second Honeymoon." While the cast will also present many character and bit players, the other principals are eight-year-old Delmar Watson and Jane Darwell, a pair who are highly instrumental in straightening out the family affair.

Inasmuch as the producing organization has not yet arrived at a decision as to who will receive writing and adapting credits, that information will have to be left in abeyance for the time being. However, James Tinling, who directed "Sing and Be Happy" and many numbers in the Jones Family as well as Jane Withers series, is functioning similarly in the present instance.

There is no doubt that the present title will be changed. Showmanship that seeks to establish the attraction as a comedy of domestic entanglements rather than a melodrama seems to be the type of exploitation that should be applied.

Release date: Jan. 21, 1938.

The Perfect Alibi

(RKO-Radio)

Raffles Mystery

The Raffles type of story about master crooks who do their pilfering with ease and aplomb has usually been looked upon favorably by picture patrons. Exhibitors, likewise, have usually found it an exploitation subject that spurred their showmanship ingenuity. In this picture there will be two Raffles. One of them, a master safe cracker, poses as an author of crook stories who gets his ideas from police who are trying to trap him. The other is a woman. Both are expert jewel thieves. Both go after the same collection of gems. The girls steals the gems first. The man, in turn, steals them from her. Police investigators enter and so does Cupid, as well as a duplicate set of gems of which either thief knows nothing. Complications also enter, but finally Cupid wins over cupidity and the jewels are returned to their rightful owner.

Preston Foster, who has appeared in about fifteen RKO-Radio features, is one Raffles. Whitney Bourne, one of the company's newer players seen recently in "Flight From Glory" and "Living On Love," is the other. They are the central figures in all the melodramatic, mysterious and romantic action. The competent supporting cast lists Samuel S. Hinds, Donald Meek, Paul Guilfoyle, Cecil Kellaway, June Johnson, Arthur Lake, George Irving and Maude Eburne.

The sixth and final production which Manny Cohen will have made for RKO-Radio, "The Perfect Alibi" is being directed by Lew Landers, who made "Danger Patrol" and "Flight from Glory." Authorship of the original is credited to Arthur T. Horman, who wrote "The Big Shot," "Ellis Island" and "You Can't Buy Luck." He collaborated with Milton Bren in preparation of the screen play.

PARAMOUNT WINS IN "STRIKE" RULING APPEAL

Circuit Court Holds Philadelphia Exhibitors Violated Sherman Act During Film "Boycott"

Reversing the decision of United States district court judge Oliver B. Dickinson, the circuit court of appeals on Tuesday ruled that Philadelphia exhibitors violated the Sherman Anti-Trust Act during their recent "buyers' strike" against Paramount. The company, the court decided, "is entitled to injunctive relief."

Although the "boycott" of Paramount pictures was settled peacefully several weeks ago, Paramount continued to appeal from the lower court ruling for the purpose of setting a precedent.

The circuit court ruling was written by Joseph Buffington, judge, and was concurred in by his associates, J. Warren Davis and John Biggs, Jr. The decision said, in part:

"Evidence in the case at bar conclusively shows that the defendants violated the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by disseminating prejudicial, threatening and coercive literature and by appealing to the public for help in their fight. The plaintiff is entitled to injunctive relief."

When the case was tried in the lower court, Mr. Dickinson held that the business of Paramount in sending films over state lines did not come under the Sherman Act interpretation of "Interstate commerce." The circuit judges, however, declared the picketing and patrolling of streets by exhibitors constituted a conspiracy in violation of the act.

The "strike" against Paramount had been declared by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Philadelphia on the ground that Paramount had failed to deliver six features reputedly listed on the 1936-37 contracts.

While the "strike" was still in progress, Paramount appealed to the district court for an injunction and it was from this ruling against the company that the appeal was taken.

Meanwhile, exhibitor leaders conferred with Paramount officials and a settlement was effected.

The terms of the settlement served as the basis for ending disputes in other sections of the country, too.

Oklahoma and Ontario Tax Totals Announced

Sales tax collections for the fiscal year ending June 30 released by the Oklahoma Tax Commission show that theatres and tent shows accounted for 1.48 per cent of the total $10,259,327.32. Other amusements and athletic events accounted for .78 per cent. Collections from August 1, 1935, to June 30, 1936, were $63,802.61 compared with $147,088.36 for the period from August 1, 1936, through June 30, 1937, an increase of $83,285.75 or 130.54 per cent in two years.

According to the public accounts report of the Treasury Department for the fiscal ment collected slightly more than $2,000,000 in amusement tax and theatre licenses during the 12 months, this being the last occasion, presumably, when the Province of Ontario will be able to announce a heavy tax collection because the amusements levy was abolished in toto two months after the end of the fiscal year. The amusement tax totaled $1,918,597, theatre licenses were $88,805 and fees collected by the Ontario censors amounted to $100,725, making a total of $2,108,127.

Czech Independents Increase Production

Independent film producers in Czechoslovakia will make about 60 pictures this year compared to 36 last year, according to Leo Berger, sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Czechoslovakia, Poland, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, now in America. Mr. Berger has been with MGM for 11 years and this is his first trip to America. He plans a visit to the coast with various sightseeing stopover points.

Mr. Berger said that producers in Czechoslovakia are aided by the Government to the extent of 10,000,000 crowns a year. There are 1,800 theatres in the country, all wired for sound, and with about 800 operating irregularity, he said. The 800 houses are in educational and military sections of the country.

During the last two years, MGM has distributed 50 films a year, he said, adding that the annual number usually runs less.

A Slight Case of Murder

(Warner)

Comedy

Despite the rather blood and thunder sounding title, "A Slight Case of Murder" will be anything but melodrama. It will be comedy, satirical comedy more directly, and quite in line with the character of other Damon Runyon screen stories. As it will be packed with action and thrills, yet threaded with a whimsical love story, satire is the motivating force. It details what happens to a former gangster who became an honest brewer after the repeal of Prohibition. His henchmen transformed into suave salesmen, unable to sell the beer because their guns have been taken from them, the erstwhile gangster soon learns that "legitimate" business is too tough a game for one who had his only schooling in a racket and that "legitimate" business men have no ethics—at least none that appeal to the tastes and sensibilities of an honest but deluded ex-gunman.

Lloyd Bacon, who has quite a record of successes including the present "Submarine D-1," is directing. The production will feature the first screen gangster, Edward G. Robinson, lately in "Kid Galahad" and presently in "The Last Gangster." The supporting cast lists Jane Brian who shares the romantic contrast with Willard Robertson, Ruth Donnelly, Allen Jenkins, Edward Brophy, Harold Huber, John Litel and George E. Stone, whose presence in the lineup accents the comedy character, as well as Eric Stanley, Bert Hanlon, Paul Harvey, Harry Seymour, Pat Daly and Duke York.

The production is based on a play which Damon Runyon wrote in collaboration with Howard Lindsay. Naturally the characters will live on the screen as they have in many of Runyon's short stories. The screen play was done by Earl Baldwin, who has been associated with several features produced by Warner which Mr. Bacon directed or in which Robinson appeared, and Joseph Schrank, who collaborated on "Swing Your Lady," "Larger Than Life" and "Ever Since Eve."

Road Film Ready

The Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture will soon release a film called "Roads to Romance," it was announced this week. The picture is based on a historical pageant presented by the New Hampshire Federation of Garden Clubs for the American Association of Highway Officials meeting at Crawford Notch, N. H. Two crews shot scenes in various parts of New Hampshire and Alois Havrilla handled the narration. The United States Marine Band furnished the musical background.

350 ATTEND FABIAN TESTIMONIAL; BANQUET HELD IN IOWA FOR BLANK

Andrew W. Smith Acts as Toastmaster at Albany Banquet for Si Fabian, 20 Years in Exhibition

Met at the Albany railroad station by a fleet of bannered cabs, 250 New York motion picture executives filed out of a special train Monday night and were escorted by police to the DeWitt Clinton Hotel, where with 100 other industry representatives and city and state officials, they paid tribute to Si Fabian, head of Fabian theatres.

The occasion was a banquet in honor of Mr. Fabian for his completion of 20 years as an exhibitor.

Andrew W. Smith, general sales manager of United Artists, served as toastmaster. In behalf of Albany friends and branch managers of the Fabian organization, Bernard Kranze, Albany, presented Mr. Fabian with diamond and platinum cuff links and studs.

Adjutant General Walter G. Robinson, representing Herbert H. Lehman, Governor of New York, was one of the principal speakers and emphasized the importance of Mr. Fabian's contributions to the communities in which his theatres are located, adding the Governor's personal tribute to the praise bestowed upon the exhibitor.

"The Industry," General Robinson said, "calls for energy and intelligence and youth. It is the enthusiasm put into the work which leads so many of you to success."

Also at the speakers' dais were John Boyd Thacher, mayor of Albany; Chester Atkinson, mayor of Troy; Nate J. Blumberg, newly elected president of Universal; Meyer Schine of the Schine Theatres; Sam Rosen, treasurer of Fabian Theatres; F. M. McCarthy, sales executive of Universal; Jules Levy, of RKO; William Sussman, of Twentieth Century-Fox; Abe Montague, of Columbia; Walter Reade, Sr., of the Reade circuit; C. Frank Raevis, attorney, and Phil Fox, of Columbia, general chairman.

The proceedings, including the presentation of the gift to Mr. Fabian, were broadcast over Station WABY from 10 to 10:30 P. M.

A program of entertainment was presented by talent from the Albany hotel and night club shows and from Fabian's Proctor Theatre, Troy, N. Y.

Mr. Fox was assisted in making arrangements for the dinner by Peter T. Dana, Norman Ayres, M. N. Grassgreen, Bernard Kranze and Artie Newman.

Among those attending the testimonial:

Herman Gluckman, president of Republic exchange.
Jack Cohn, of Columbia.
A-Mike Vogel.

Louis Nizer, Boake Carter and Governor Harry Nice of Maryland were the principal speakers at the third annual dinner of the Philadelphia Variety Club Monday.

Misunderstanding of Dinner Prank Causes Erroneous Newspaper Report That Tri-States Head Will Retire

After vigorously denying that he was retiring from the motion picture industry, A. H. Blank this week started preparations for leaving on a four-week vacation trip to Honolulu—a voyage which was presented to him last Thursday night when he was feted in Des Moines at a banquet in honor of his 25th anniversary in the film industry. More than 400 persons attended the dinner and heard speakers praise Mr. Blank as one of the nation's leading film showmen.

The Honolulu trip was a gift from employees of Central States Theatres, of which Mr. Blank is president. The employees of the other circuit of which he is head, Tri States Theatres, celebrated the anniversary by presenting Mr. Blank with a luggage set.

One of the features of the banquet held at the Hotel Fort Des Moines was the distribution of a special edition of a local newspaper in which it was stated as a banquet hoax that Mr. Blank planned to resign the presidency of the two circuits. Although the story was intended merely as a joke, a press association reporter misunderstood the stunt and filed a story announcing Mr. Blank's resignation.

To clarify the situation, Mr. Blank issued a statement calling attention to his banquet speech in which he said: "I will take a vacation trip given me by my organization, as I feel I have the finest organization to be found and can go away for an indefinite period, realizing that Ralph Branton and H. M. Weinberg will do an even better job than if I were present."

Speakers at the dinner were representative of the industry, the church and officialdom and they included: Nels Kraschel, governor of Iowa; R. L. Cochran, governor of Nebraska; Barney Balaban, president of Paramount; Joseph Allen, mayor of Des Moines; George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of United Artists; Bishop Gerald Bergen of Des Moines; Y. Frank Freeman, head of Paramount theatre operations; M. A. Lightman of Memphis; John Cowles, owner and publisher of the Des Moines Register and Tribune; Herbert Yates, head of Consolidated Film Industries; N. L. Nathanson, head of Famous Players Canadian; E. V. Richards, New Orleans.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was toastmaster.

In accepting the gifts and expressing his appreciation for the banquet in his honor, Mr. Blank said:

"The theatre has always held for me a tremendous fascination. Doubtless this fact has colored my viewpoint tonight. I am glad I chose to entertain the public as my official job. To be proud of the motion picture industry means the deep appreciation of the men who make that industry.

"I have understood fine promises make friends but it takes performances to hold them. To call all present my friends warms my heart with satisfaction and pride."

RENEW LEGION PLEDGE AGAINST IMMORAL FILMS

New York Congregation Urged to Include Stage Productions in Legion of Decency Boycott

The Legion of Decency was created by the Catholic Bishops of the United States as an agency to deal with the moral influence of motion pictures, and thus far there has been no notice, officially, from that body indicating that the Legion is to be concerned regularly with matters other than motion pictures.—THE EDITOR.

For the fourth successive years, Catholics throughout the country last Sunday repeated the Legion of Decency pledge against attendance at "indecent and immoral motion pictures and those which glorify crime and criminals." At St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, Catholics were urged to include objectionable stage productions in their boycott which had been concerned only with motion pictures.

"We ask you this year to extend your pledge to include the legitimate theatre," the Reverend Lester Graham, assistant at the cathedral, informed the 3,000 persons who attended the 11 o'clock mass. He pointed out that since the Legion was formed in June, 1934, it has exerted a "tremendous influence for good" in motion pictures.

"If all our people are as cooperative in this regard," Father Graham said, "I feel sure that we will no longer have twelve or fifteen plays on the condemned list of the Catholic Movement."

The list to which Father Graham referred was issued last Saturday by the Catholic Theatre Movement of the Archdiocese of New York and contained the titles of twenty-three current Broadway productions of which eight were classified as "wholly objectionable," eight as "objectionable in part," and seven as "generally unobjectionable."

Those in the three classifications are as follows:

Class A: "Generally Unobjectionable"

Babes in Arms
Barchester Towers
I'd Rather Be Right
Julius Caesar
Juno and the Paycock
Susan and God
You Can't Take It With You

Class B: "Objectionable in Part"

Brother Rat
Father Malachy's Miracle
French Without Tears
Hooray for What!
The Lady Has a Heart
Many Mansions
Room Service
Star Wagon

Class C: "Wholly Objectionable"

Amphitryon 38
Golden Boy
Having Wonderful Time
Madame Bovary
Of Mice and Men
The Women
Tobacco Road
Yes, My Darling Daughter

Although the congregation at the cathedral was asked to include the stage productions in its boycott there was no mention of the legitimate theatre in the pledge, which was the same as given in all Catholic churches.

The pledge is as follows:

"I condemn indecent and immoral motion pictures and those which glorify crime and criminals.

"I promise to do all that I can to strengthen public opinion against the production of indecent and immoral films and unite with all who protest against them.

"I acknowledge my obligation to form a right conscience about pictures which are dangerous to my moral life. As a member of the Legion of Decency I pledge myself to remain away from them. I promise, further, to stay away altogether from places of amusement which show them as a matter of policy."

After the pledge was taken, Father Graham pointed out: "These promises of morality are taken at baptism. All we pledge now is to keep our minds and hearts pure. We ask you to avoid these amusement places only that you may keep your baptismal innocence."

WARNERS SEEKING PRESS BOOK IDEAS

Warner Brothers, to obtain theatre-tested and practical ideas for press books, is sending blank forms, to be known as "Idea-O-Grams", to exhibitors and theatre advertising men throughout the nation.

Photophone Celebrates

The first anniversary of the opening of RCA Photophone's new sound equipment manufacturing plant in Indianapolis was celebrated with a dinner to the plant executives in Indianapolis.

From Camden came vice-president and general manager Robert Shannon, vice-president Frank R. Deakins, who heads RCA's Photophone and Engineering Products activities, and Harry L. Sommerer, manager of the Photophone Division, to officiate at the ceremonies.

The new factory provides more than 165,000 square feet of space, is air conditioned and equipped for the manufacture of all types of sound apparatus. The plant is in charge of Harry LeRoy.

Monogram Film Distributors, Inc., has been organized in Kansas City to take over the western Missouri and Kansas franchise for Monogram product as of this week. Les F. Durland is general manager of the company, which is financed by W. Ray Johnston and eastern interests.

Open Academy Awards To All Craft Groups

To avoid possibility of friction between industry groups, nominations for the 10th annual Academy Award competitions have been thrown open to members of the Screen Actors Guild and writers and directors meeting with the minimum membership requirements of any craft organization, whether members or not.

Frank Capra, Academy president and chairman of the awards committee, set March 3rd as the date for the Awards Banquet. He named the following as members of the awards committee.

Mr. Capra and Howard Estabrook, representing the Academy; Alan Mowbray, Larry Steers and Regis Toomey, Screen Actors Guild; George Cukor, Rowland D. Lee and Irving Pichel, Screen Directors Guild; David O. Selznick, H. M. Warner and Darryl F. Zanuck, producers; Bernard Herzbrun, Victor Miller and Major Nathan Levinson, technicians; Claude Binyon, Oscar Hammerstein, 2nd, and Dwight Taylor, Screen Writers Guild.

Steiner Plans Circuit Of Newsreel Theatres

The first house in a planned circuit of newsreel theatres will be opened in New York City early in March, Joseph Steiner, former general sales manager for American Tobis, announced this week.

Mr. Steiner said the venture is financially supported by a Wall Street group which he declined to identify. The circuit, it is planned, will extend as far south as Washington and as far west as Chicago.

"We have quite a few sites lined up already," Mr. Steiner said. "A few of them are in New Jersey."

The first theatre in the group, he explained, is under construction at 219 West 34th Street, opposite the Pennsylvania station in New York.

MPTOA Selects Chicago For 1938 Convention

Although no date has been set, the 1938 convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be held in Chicago, according to Walter Vincent, treasurer.

He explained that for the last four or five years conventions have been held in the south or on the Pacific Coast and northern and midwestern affiliates urged the choice of a site more convenient to their membership.

The annual meeting is usually held in the spring.

Dawley and Jacobs Combine

J. Searle Dawley, who in the silent era directed such stars as Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Richard Barthelmess and Alice Brady, is collaborating on originals and adaptations of European operettas with Emanuel H. Jacobs, who for 20 years was connected with Paramount in the editorial and technical departments.

---

Front Page Productions is preparing its second of a series of two-reel short subjects of world events. The subject, tentatively titled "Sea of Strife," depicts the events that have occurred in the Mediterranean sea from the Roman Empire to the present day. David Strong of Criterion Films is the distributor.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

For Christmas

There appears to be a couple of advance Christmas presents in both the pictures that were launched during the past week and in those which were finished. This should prove pleasing to many managers, some who are not so far from Hollywood, who have been wondering what they were going to do for product. The acute picture shortage resulted in one oddity, at least, in Los Angeles where the down town Paramount found it necessary for the first time in its history to book an MGM feature picture. The stress is not so bad, however, on the neighborhood boys who are indulging in the annual fever of give-aways. Lobbies in many of the neighborhood and suburban theatres have taken on the appearance of home furnishing stores and auto display rooms with gas stoves, radios, miscellaneous paraphernalia and cars cluttering up the floor space.

Borrows William Powell

Borrowing William Powell from MGM to play opposite its newest foreign importation, 20th Century-Fox started "The Baroness and The Butler." A romantic comedy being directed by Walter Lang, it will further present Gregory Ratoff, Henry Stephenson, Helen Westley, Joseph Schildkraut, J. Edward Bromberg and Lynn Bari.

Paramount's activity was confined to starting "Bulldog Drummond Interferes." Under the direction of James Hogan, who made "Ebb Tide," it will feature John Barrymore, John Howard and Louise Campbell, who have been in earlier numbers of the new series. Other featured players are Porter Hall, Elizabeth Patterson, Nydia Westman and Reginald Denny.

Mystery Melodrama

More mystery melodrama will come from Grand National where "The Shadow Speaks" went into work. The cast lists Rod LaRocque, Astrid Allwyn, William von Brincken, John St. Polis, Tom Jackson, Oscar O'Shea, William Pawley, Bill Moore and Tennen Holtz. Charles Lamont is directing.

"Broadway After Midnight" was started by RKO-Radio. With Christy Cabanne assigned to direct, the comedy melodrama will present Allan Lane, Joan Woodbury, Bradley Page, Parkyakarkus, Lee Patrick, Gordon Jones and Bryant Washburn. The second film started by the studio "The Joy of Loving" gives promise of being one of those advance Christmas presents mentioned above. Identified by the publicity department as a "streamlined" comedy romance, it will feature Irene Dunne, currently demonstrating in "The Awful Truth" that casting her as a comedienne in "Theodora Goes Wild" was no mistake, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Principal supporting players assigned are Guy Kibbee, Alice Brady, Jean Dixon, Frank Milan, Phyllis Kennedy, Eric Blore, Lucille Ball, Dot and Estelle Steiner, a pair of juvenile prodigies; Charles Lane, Frank M. Thomas and Billy Franey. Tay Garnett, whose most recent achievement is "Stand-In," is directing. Gene Towne and Graham Baker wrote the show as they did "Stand-In."

For Columbia release, Larry Darmour started "Land Rush Days." An outdoor action adventure story, it will present Jack Luden, Eleanor Stewart, Harry Woods, Lafe McKee, Buzz Barton, Bud Osborne, Cactus Mack, Slim Whittaker and Francis Walker. Joseph Levering is the director.

Two pictures were started by Monogram. "Saleslady," a topical romance which Arthur G. Collins is directing, will feature Weldon Heyburn and Ann Nagel with Ruth Fellows, Eileen Carlyle, Harry Davenport and Matty Kemp. The second picture, "West of Rainbow's End," which had no rainbow arch above it inasmuch as the season's first rainstorm sent the company back from location, returns Tim McCoy to the screen with Nora Lane as his leading lady. Allan James is directing.

Columbia is credited with two of the finished pictures. Leading players in "The Campus Mystery" which Lambert Hillyer directed are Scott Colton, Mary Russell, Arthur Loft, Nick Lukats, Gene Morgan and Thurston Hall. "You Can't Win," melodramatic romance, features Donn Terry, Jacqueline Wells and Robert Page. C. C. Coleman, Jr., directed.

At MGM, "Everybody Sing," musical comedy romance, was finished. It will present Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice, Billie Burke, Reginald Owen, Lynne Carver, Mary Forbes, Reginald Gardiner, Elise Canova, Marie Blake and Helen Troy. Edwin L. Marin was the director.

WILL HAYS TO SPEAK ON COMMERCE PROGRAM

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will be the guest speaker on the Department of Commerce "Stories of Industry" program over the Columbia Broadcasting network, December 28th, 4:30 to 5 p.m., EST. He will speak on the progress and policies of the motion picture industry.

Harry R. Daniel, narrator for the Department of Commerce, will relate the story of the industry, including some stirring incidents associated with its growth. Two dramatic episodes connected with the motion picture will be presented with the cooperation of the United States Office of Education.

Except for a few pick-up shots, Paramount transferred "The Big Broadcast of 1938" to the cutting rooms. Leading players are W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Shirley Ross, Ben Blue, Bob Hope, Grace Bradley, Leif Erikson, Lynne Overman, Rufe Davis and Dorothy Howe. The supporting contingent lists Lionel Pape, Russell Hicks, Billy Daniels, Michael Brooks, Jack Hubbard, Leonid Kinsky, Stanley King, Irving Bacon, Patricia Wilder, Rebecca Wassem and James Craig. Specialties will feature Kirsten Flagstad, Tito Guizar and Shep Fields and his orchestra. Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger provided the music and lyrics. LeRoy Prinz staged the dance numbers and Mitchell Leisen was the director in charge.

Sol Lesser completed "Hawaii Calls" for RKO-Radio distribution. A comedy adventure story, with music, it will present Bobby Breen, Irvin S. Cobb, Gloria Holden, Ned Sparks, Warren Hull, Juanita Quigley, Pua Lani, Mamo Clark, Ward Bond and Raymond Page and his orchestra. Edward Cline directed.

"Happy Landing" was completed at 20th Century-Fox. Sonja Henie is the star. Don Ameche, Jean Hersholt, Cesar Romero, Wally Vernon and Ethel Merman are the featured players. Included in the supporting cast are the Raymond Scott Quintet, Leah Ray, Peters Sister, Condos Brothers, Marcelle Corday, Louis Adlon, William Brady, the Brewster twins, Marianna Brudie, Annabelle Brudie and Gene Mako. Roy Del Ruth directed.

Printer's Ink

The week that highly imaginative Russell Birdwell, David O. Selznick's press agent, doesn't think up some vivid idea to get either a mention of his boss's name or the title of a picture he happens to be exploiting at the moment can be marked off as a very dull one indeed.

A few years ago he painted a sign two miles long on Washington Boulevard and thereby tossed MGM, which was getting ready to open "The Great Ziegfeld," into furious and envious rage. He flew the entire populace of Zenda, Canada, to New York for the opening of "The Prisoner of Zenda." Last week he decided it was the 900th anniversary of Lady Godiva's famous ride and send her modern prototype journeying down the busiest street in Los Angeles.

His antic this week has possibilities. Surprised and quite indignant when it was suggested he had something to do with it, he nevertheless was eager to let us know that he has received word from the Mayor of Fort Wayne, Indiana, that the citizens of that enterprising town had erected a bronze tablet to mark the house in which Carole Lombard was born.

TWO COMPANIES SHOW DECREASE OF EARNINGS

Six Warner Directors Renamed; Bagnall Elected to Vice-Presidency by Paramount Board

Reports of decreased earnings for Warner Brothers and Loew's for the quarter ended in November as compared to a similar period in 1936 highlighted this week's financial news, which included the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation's declaration of a $5.25 dividend on its 7 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock for the quarters ended June 30th, September 30th and December 31st, 1934.

The KAO dividend, which is to be taken out of the company's capital surplus. will be payable December 24th to stockholders of record at the close of business December 17th.

The Paramount board of directors, meeting in New York Tuesday, declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on the outstanding first preferred stock and 15 cents per share on the outstanding second preferred stock. In addition, George Bagnall, studio comptroller, was elected a vice-president of the company. Mr. Bagnall succeeds Henry Herzbrun, resigned.

Warner Brother's announcement of earnings was made at an annual meeting of the stockholders at Wilmington. Six directors, Harry M. Warner, Jack L. Warner, Albert Warner, Joseph Bernhard, Robert W. Perkins and Waddill Catchings, were re-elected at the session.

Earnings Above $1,600,000

Earnings for the quarter ended November 28th, will exceed $1,600,000, it was announced, while in the corresponding 1936 quarter the income reached $2,047,000. The estimate provided for Federal income taxes but not for any surtax on undistributed profits.

The re-elected directors will meet with five holdover directors in New York December 21st for organization purposes.

Loew's earnings for the first period of its new fiscal year, the twelve weeks ended about November 25th, were estimated at about $1.70 to $1.75 a share as compared to the $2.14 a share earned in the corresponding 1936 quarter.

In the forty weeks ended June 3rd, 1937, Loew's reported a net income of $11,714,722 or about $7 a share on the common stock. Earnings for the 1937 fiscal year, therefore, should be in the neighborhood of $9 a share.

The decrease in the corporation's November earnings is not due to any material decrease in box office attendance, the Wall Street Journal announced. "A year ago Loew's had a concentration of unusually successful and popular films which swelled earnings to new high levels during the 1937 fiscal year. While current releases are in the main satisfactory, they have not had quite the pulling power of those of a year ago.

"Loew's list of forthcoming releases for the Winter months is apparently up to the company's usual standard without including any outstanding features, so indications are that the profits during the second period, the sixteen weeks ending about March 10th, 1938, will be less than the $3.05 a share earned in the corresponding 1937 period.

"There has been much discussion in the trade of the high cost of 'Conquest,' starring Greta Garbo and Charles Boyer, on which over $2,500,000 was spent. This heavy expenditure probably will prevent very large profits being shown by the film although it is expected to return its original cost."

Loew's London Theatres, Ltd., reported a net profit for the year ending last August, after all charges, of $15,596, compared with $11,105 for the previous twelve months. A dividend payment of $5,904 on the seven per cent preferred stock, representing 1¾ per cent, was paid during the year while the previous year saw a dividend payment totaling $11,809.

An increase in the net profit for Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., was announced in Toronto. Profit for the fiscal year ended last August amounted to $111,730 while in the previous twelve months the net was $81,795.

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced in Washington that it has approved the plans of International Cinema, Inc., Los Angeles, for a $250,000 stock operation. The company's registration statement, filed with the SEC September 16th, called for the issuance of 50,000 shares of $5 par seven per cent cumulative convertible Class A common and 100,000 shares of common stock, the latter being reserved for conversion of the former at a ratio of two to one.

Of the $250,000 the company plans to raise, $50,000 is to go for new equipment, a like sum for addition to working capital and $100,000 for reduction of debt, the statement disclosed.

The first dividend to stockholders of Eastern Theatres, Ltd., Montreal, was declared last week when the board of directors voted to pay 50 cents a share on common stock December 22nd to stockholders of record December 15th.

The Agfa Ansco Corporation, Binghamton, this Wednesday distributed bonuses totaling $100,000 to about 2,300 workers.

Air Express Campaign

The Air Express Division of the Railway Express Agency has announced increased appropriations for the 1938 advertising campaign with important changes being made in the media, art, layout work and in copy. The layout will be modernistic in conception, accenting a speeding plane superimposed on half-tones of striking designs.

Spitzer on Coast

Toni Spitzer has arrived in Hollywood where he will join the Walter Wanger press department. Mr. Spitzer formerly was a member of the producer's eastern publicity department.

Appeal Lost on "Birth of a Baby"

Producer Sam Citron lost his appeal on the picture "The Birth of a Baby" in Albany last week when Commissioner of Education Frank P. Graves dismissed the action and refused to grant a license for exhibition of the film in New York City.

The picture had previously been denied a license by Irwin Esmond, director of the Motion Picture Division, July 14, 1937, upon the recommendation of reviewers employed in that department. From that determination Mr. Citron took an appeal.

Commissioner Graves personally reveiwed "The Birth of a Baby" in the Madison Theatre in Albany, November 5, 1937. Following the filming, proceedings were adjourned to the State Education Building where arguments were presented. Mr. Citron appeared and argued for himself, with Mr. Esmond rebutting for the Motion Picture Division.

Applicant for the appeal cited that the film was educational in purpose and intended to enlighten prospective mothers and fathers. Another leading point in Citron's argument was the endorsement of various medical societies.

In Commissioner Graves' statement denying the appeal, the educational phase of the picture was mentioned. Commissioner Graves said in part "while it may well be that the presentation of this picture would be of value for clinical purposes, nevertheless its presentation in my opinion to general audiences at places of amusement is estopped by the provisions of Section 1082 of the Education Law. In my opinion the picture is indecent, immoral and would tend to corrupt morals within the meaning of this section."

Producers and exhibitors alike had watched the case with a view towards learning if a film, based on pregnancy and birth, would be admitted to film audiences composed of both children and adults, single and married people alike.

At the present time, "Tomorrow's Children," produced by Foy Productions, Inc., is on the January calendar of the appellate division, third department, and Eureka Production's foreign film "Ecstasy" awaits a decision by the same court as to a further review by the court of appeals. "Ecstasy" was reviewed in October by the five justices of the appellate division then sitting, and its ban by the Motion Picture Division and Commissioner Graves was unanimously upheld. Henry Pearlman, attorney for Eureka, is seeking a review by the court of appeals and the answer of the appellate division is expected January 3, 1938.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Universal's present-day widespread headline attention is by no means its first sensational appearance in the press. The company really caused a change in the entire Chicago newspaper map, some 21 years ago.

Back in 1916, in Chicago, there was a deal on, through John M. Burnham and Company, for the sale of Universal to a group of some Western capitalists. Universal was one of the real up-and-comers at the time, and Carl Laemmle was to receive $3,000,000 for his share of the company.

Walter Howey, then city editor of the Chicago Tribune, got a "scoop" on the story, published it in sizeable headlines, and was immediately "informed" by Joseph Medill Patterson, one of the heirs and representatives of the family fortunes controlling the Tribune, that some smart movie press agent had made a "sucker" out of him. Those were the days when circulation rivalries between the seven Chicago newspapers had led to the organization of armed camps. The bitterest struggle was between the Hearst papers and the Tribune. Mr. Patterson's crack riled Howey, and when Carl Laemmle backed out of the deal for the sale of Universal, leaving Howey apparently out on a limb and seemingly vindicating Patterson's belief, Howey quit his $8,000 a year job with Patterson—and got $25,000 to work for Hearst's Herald-Examiner, direct competitor of Patterson's Tribune. What happened between the two Patterson and Howey rivals after that is newspaper history.

Maybe Errol Flynn is taking his work too seriously. Anyway, on the completion of "The Adventures of Robin Hood," the other day, for Warners, Mr. Flynn openly announced that he would go into the wilds of Mexico armed only with a bow-and-arrow, and attempt to exist for 15 days on game he is able to kill. The only condition is that someone wager him $25,000 on the stunt. That's $1,666 a day. We know 80 out-of-workers back here in the cold canyons of Broadway who would go into the wilds of Mexico for $1.66 a day, without bow and arrow.

The Hutchinson, Kansas, News figures it this way: "The other Saturday 834 football games were of sufficient importance to have their scores printed in a New York newspaper. Crowds," they said, "must have averaged 5,000 a game, which makes 4,170,000. Add to this 100,000 listeners to each broadcast (for proof of this figure ask any salesman of radio advertising). That makes 834,000,000 listeners."

What with the total population in this country running around 130,000,000, no wonder the box office has problems.

"IKAN KRING" LEADS MENU FOR LUNCHEON

When Cecil B. DeMille celebrated his birthday and invited "The Buccaneer" company and the press to a New Orleans luncheon, the featured dishes of which traced their ancestry back to Creole culinary imagination, he started a vogue. Nimrods among the picture-making fraternity have been most kind in sending deer and moosemeat presents. Tay Garnett and John Ford went fishing, caught a lot of tuna and swordfish which they had no difficulty in giving away.

Wierdest sounding line-up of edibles which this eating observer has come in contact with in a long time, however, were those served by John Datu, technical adviser on "Her Jungle Love" in honor of Dorothy Lamour and the members of the company.

First there was "ikan kring," sun dried fish of indeterminate species, boiled, then fried to a crisp and served in slices. Then came "nassi goreng," fried rice, served with some kind of a hot Malayan sauce. Next was krupuk," more fried fish that looked like potato chips. Piece de resistance was "ajam," chicken roasted whole and stuffed with "pisang." "Pisang" is fried bananas. "Durian," a hard shelled nut containing a white meat somewhat of the consistency of ice cream gave the guests a few thrills. "Arak," a South Sea Island wine distilled from the sage palm, was quite potent. But the dessert, "Makanan manis," a cake made of rice and wrapped in banana leaves, neither looked nor tasted like the cake mother used to make.

Progress up the ladder has a mellowing influence on some of us. Take Bill Scully, for instance. While serving Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and its predecessors these 19 years, Bill guarded zealously the identity of the name representing his middle initial, "A." The other week he rose to the general sales managership of Universal. And what happens? He owns up, without a whimper, that his full name is William AUGUSTINE Scully.

Odd McIntyre concludes that the parade ground for the more expert rhumba specialists is a down-the-cellar place in New York near the old Winter Garden, called Club Yumuri. Mostly the patrons are the sleek-haired Latins and their high-combed ladies, who take the dance seriously—dropping in for dinner and never missing a number.

There are many finished exploiters of the ace Cuban dance caper, but our nomination for leadership is Joseph M. Schenck, who does many a rhumba between his chairmanshipping the board of directors of the Chase National Bank's Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

Much has been spoken, and duly recorded of late about the coming of the motion picture to the classroom. That the screen is already being used to teach students, seems to be the observation of many, not forgetting Arthur DeBra at the Hays organization.

Having reported variously at length on the trend, Motion Picture Herald now is able to present one first hand report—a "scoop!"—on the reactions of the classroom to the film, as forwarded to the Herald's city desk by Correspondent J. W. Leigh, in New Orleans. Wrote Mr. Leigh:

> "Machine-guns rattled, water froze and bottles smashed within bottles in a physics lecture on 'Molecular Theory of Matter' this week at the Tulane University college of engineering when the first sound motion picture was used in classwork. The molecular exhibit followed the acquisition of a talking film projector by Dean James M. Robert of the engineering college."

Hollywood producers and studios who have been complaining about burdens placed upon them by unionization will hereafter and forever hold their peace, and instead sympathize with their brother theatrical producers on Broadway.

When "Yes, My Darling Daughter" moved last week from the New York Playhouse directly across the street to the Vanderbilt theatre, only 100 feet distant, it was necessary to call four trucks and eight truckmen to load the "Darling Daughter" scenery, properties, trunks and electrical equipment on them and drive them around the block, back to almost the same spot.

Although stage hands from the theatre could easily carry scenery and the other paraphernalia across the road quickly and economically, union rules compel the more costly method, which will stand the management several hundred dollars in extra expense. This is an old Broadway stage union rule, which would apply even if the theatres were next door to each other. By its application it was necessary to call the entire crew of several stagehands at the Playhouse to take the scenery down and carry it to the trucks; the crew of eight of the four transfer trucks and the crew of the Vanderbilt theatre to receive the scenery from the trucks and set it up, a total of twenty-six men.

Newsreels Warned To End Violations Of Union Contract

A warning to newsreel companies to stop the "growing" practice of using material supplied by free lance non-union photographers was issued in New York this week by the International Photographers Union, Local 644, through its business representative, Charles W. Downs.

"We're going after them," Mr. Downs declared. "The next time a newsreel uses non-union material we're going to step in and demand that the union label be used on the reel."

Under the union's two-year contract with the newsreels, Mr. Downs said, they are prohibited from engaging free-lance photographers or purchasing their material. Mr. Downs hastened to explain that the union recognized the fact that often, especially in the case of disasters, it is impossible for the newsreels to have a cameraman on the scene and therefore the companies depend upon purchasing pictures from free-lance cameramen who take shots.

"They've been doing this for some time," Mr. Downs continued, "and we haven't said anything, but now they are abusing the privilege. They're using free-lance men on planned productions."

Mr. Downs also denounced two other practices which, he said, the companies have employed as a means of curtailing expenses. The first, assignment of newsreel photographers to production of commercial pictures, is a direct violation of the union's pact, Mr. Downs declared. The purpose of this practice, Mr. Downs explained, is that commermercial photographers are in a different classification than newsreel cameramen and receive higher wages.

The second practice to which Mr. Downs voiced objections is the exchanging of prints by the companies. While this is not a violation of the union's agreement, Mr. Downs added, it is unethical. The companies are continually "swapping" prints, Mr. Downs complained.

The union objects to the exchanging of prints on the ground that the system tends to the use of one cameraman for a "story" while at least five should be assigned to it.

Goldman Building Two

William Goldman, former Warner zone head in Philadelphia and now an independent exhibitor with 10 theatres, said in New York this week that he planned to build two new houses, one a newsreel theatre, in Philadelphia.

Cohen Representing Segal

Richard Cohen last week in New Haven became Connecticut representative for Harry Segal of Boston, Mass., handling Imperial Pictures, Ambassador Pictures, Art Cinema reissues of United Artists features and the Jam Handy pictures.

Gendel Gets Three Films

Max Gendel, independent distributor, last week acquired midwestern distribution rights to "Club de Femmes," "The Eternal Mask" and "Lower Depths."

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven Pictures

Of seven new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were approved for general patronage and one was listed as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Hitting a New High," "Million Dollar Racket," "Quick Money," "The Shadow," "Thank You, Mr. Moto," "You're Only Young Once." Class A-2, Unobjectional for Adults: "She Married An Artist."

Warners Plan 16 to 20 Films In England

Warner Brothers will produce from 16 to 20 pictures in England next season, it was indicated this week at meetings held in the Warner Studio in Hollywood by Harry M. and Jack L. Warner, Sam E. Morris, head of foreign activities, Irving Asher, London production head, and Joseph Hummel, foreign manager.

Mr. Hummel, following the meetings, sailed for Sydney, Australia, and other foreign parts.

It was said that four productions with an international appeal had been added to the program. The studio's contract players will be sent to England to appear in the films designed for world distribution.

Mr. Asher is expected to remain in Hollywood for the holidays, after which he will return to London. Harry M. Warner is not expected to return east for some time it was said.

S. Charles Einfeld, publicity and advertising director, will leave Hollywood for New York after the first of the year. He has been reorganizing the studio publicity department.

O'Shea Appointed Scully Successor

Edward K. O'Shea, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Buffalo manager, has been appointed to succeed William A. Scully as eastern district manager for the company. The appointment was made by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, at a mid-winter sales meeting held in Chicago this week. Mr. Scully becomes general sales manager for Universal on January 1st.

Ralph W. Maw, MGM salesman in Buffalo for twelve years, has been named to succeed Mr. O'Shea as Buffalo manager.

Those present at the meeting signed a scroll which will be presented to Mr. Scully.

Attending the meeting were Tom Connors, Eddie Aarons and Alan Cummings, New York; E. M. Saunders, western manager; Sam Shirley, Chicago branch manager; Jack Flynn, Chicago district manager; Charles E. Kessnick, Atlanta; Bob Lynch, Philadelphia; George Hickey, Los Angeles; Harris P. Wolfberg, Kansas City; Henry Nathanson and Walter Haynor, Toronto.

State AFL Asks Full Crew Law For New York

The executive council of the New York State Federation of Labor, meeting in Albany last week, went on record in favor of supporting "an amendment to the licensing law to require a full safety crew of competent moving picture machine operators in all projection rooms in places of public assemblage." The proposal, which at present applies only to first class cities, will be introduced at the approaching session of the state legislature. The bill would make it mandatory for exhibitors to have two projectionists in the booth on each shift.

IATSE Assessments End

International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employees locals in Hollywood were notified last week that the two per cent assessment imposed since February 13th would end last Saturday. The announcement came from the Washington headquarters of the Alliance.

The return of autonomy to the four locals now run by the International officers was not discussed but this move and the assessments were subjects of the recent legislative committee investigation of the Alliance and figured in two civil suits brought against International officers by union members.

In New York, Lou Krouse, general secretary, treasurer and assistant to George Brown, president of the IATSE, announced the start of negotiations with distributors of a master agreement for exchange employees to replace the temporary contracts drawn up last summer for exchanges in 32 cities.

Guild, Time Agree

The Screen Actors' Guild reached a tentative agreement with the March of Time following prolonged negotiations over adherence by the producer to the Guild closed shop contract.

A statement by Aubrey Blair, secretary-treasurer of the junior Guild, related that "two or three points" were still in dispute and would be presented to the Guild board of directors in Hollywood for settlement, but added that the Guild looked forward to "the same harmonious relationship with March of Time" which has been achieved with other eastern producers.

Revising Soviet Propaganda Film

Associated Press dispatches from Moscow say that a new soviet film depicting phases of the Bolshevist revolution and which features actors impersonating Nikolai Lenin and Josef Stalin, has been sent back to the studio for revision.

Stalin, general secretary of the Communist party, the dispatch said suggested the revision after attending a preview of the film with government and diplomatic officials on November 7th, the 20th anniversary of the revolution.

The film titled "Lenin in October," according to Izvestia, Russian government organ, will be ready for distribution in Russia and abroad the end of this month. Izvestia said that to "increase the significance of this film the cinema administration received urgent instructions to include the occupation of the Winter Palace and arrest of the Provisional Government on November 7, 1917."

IT NEVER MISSES!

The success of M-G-M's latest "Crime Doesn't Pay" release "BEHIND THE CRIMINAL" merits a salute throughout the film world. M-G-M's "Crime Doesn't Pay" series has never wavered in entertainment value since these thrilling Short Subjects first flashed on the screen several seasons ago. "BEHIND THE CRIMINAL", great in itself, is typical of the superior Short Subjects which M-G-M produces and which theatres have recognized as essential to quality programs.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

MGM Program

On the eve of his departure for America, Al Lichtman, vice-president of Loew's Inc., made it plain that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer does not intend to call a halt to its British production. On the contrary a complete production plan has been drawn up, and films and stars signed. A complete, all British organization is to be formed, and Robert Ritchie is to set about discovering and developing new talent for MGM's British unit.

Most important on the roster of forthcoming films is Cronin's "The Citadel" which is to be Victor Saville's first production under the MGM banner. This goes into production in January with Elizabeth Allan in the lead, well informed rumor has it, at Pinewood. At the same time, Michael Balcon will start production on Tennyson Jesse's "Finishing School" with an all British cast.

"We are delighted with our first British film, 'A Yank at Oxford', which has just been completed under the supervision of Michael Balcon and directed by Jack Conway," said Mr. Lichtman, "and more than grateful for the splendid co-operation which has been given to us by Government officials, the trade, the press and all concerned."

"Adaptation of 'The Citadel' now is being completed by Ian Dalrymple, whilst the script of 'Finishing School' is being prepared by Sidney Gilliatt.

"Also in preparation by Victor Saville is Vaughan Wilkins' novel, now a best-seller in all English-speaking countries 'And So—Victoria', being adapted for the screen by Sir Hugh Walpole.

"Robert C. Sheriff is putting finishing touches to the script of the R.A.F. epic 'Shadow of the Wing', to be produced by Michael Balcon next summer. Sheriff has recently completed the screen version of James Hilton's 'Good-bye, Mr. Chips', also on next summer's schedule.

"These are all production certainties," Mr. Lichtman emphasized. Ben Goetz, managing director of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios, is rounding out a completely British organization of artists and technicians to carry on the schedule begun with 'A Yank at Oxford'."

The work of discovering and developing young and new British talent is being successfully continued by Robert Ritchie, who has been responsible for the acquisition of so many of the stars and featured players sent to Hollywood from England and the Continent. He will now devote most of his time to the development of British talent for the British organization.

CORAL BROWNE, Australian star who plays the "other woman" in the Twentieth Century-Fox British picture, "He Was Her Man," now being filmed at Denham. Gracie Fields and Victor McLaglen play the leads in the production.

Crowd Scenes

Armies of extras are being engaged on Howard Welsch's Vogue production, "Kicking the Moon Around" which he is making at Pinewood for General Film Distributors release, and which is being made on a budget of £80,000 ($400,000).

The film, though unified by a story, is essentially a musical, and Ambrose's band, accredited class musical ensemble of the British dance world, is one of its featured star lines.

In one court scene some 450 extras are employed, a scene in which the band registers some of the film's musical numbers in an unwonted setting. In another, a chain store sequence, four hundred more extras are engaged on a set which is claimed to be a replica of the type of "threepence and sixpence" stores, which are found in every English town.

Evelyn Dall, blonde swing singer of Ambrose's outfit, Harry Richman and Florence Desmond, leading English mimic and noted musical comedy star, are also in the film.

Special numbers have been written for "Kicking the Moon Around" by Jimmy Kennedy and Michael Carr. Direction is in the hands of Walter Forde.

Sinister Street

London's mythical "Crime Street," imaginary thoroughfare in one of the allegedly mysterious by-ways of the capital, formed a high spot of recent filming of "Kate Plus Ten," by Wainwright Productions, at Sound City Studios, with Jack Hulbert, Genevieve Tobin, Noel Madison, Googie Withers, Edward Lexy and Francis L. Sullivan in leading roles.

In writing the story, Edgar Wallace chose one of those areas where, behind respectable exteriors and in streets of by-gone glories, organizations of modern crooks exist. The Wainwright set for this sequence reflected the elegance that was of yesteryear's Camden Town, with the more faded environs of Kensington backwaters. In such a setting, a great deal of the action of "Kate Plus Ten" takes place, with Kate (Genevieve Tobin) planning large scale coups, such as the robbery of the £600,000 gold bullion train, round which the central theme of this story revolves.

Frank Cellier has been added to the cast in an important role and newcomers to the shooting have included Francis L. Sullivan and Googie Withers.

Richard Wainwright and his director Reginald Denham, have planned a variety of London settings for further sequences of "Kate Plus Ten," ranging from the West End to the smartest rendezvous of Mayfair's elite.

Dita Parlo, foreign star of Schach's "Madamoiselle Docteur," has been engaged by the Capitol production chief to make another film for him. Production will begin in the spring of 1938, and the subject chosen will be "Asphalt," a comedy-drama of a lady of the pavements who falls in love with the policeman who arrests her. This story was originally written for Parlo in Germany when she was seventeen, but she left for Hollywood for two years and finally it was made without her as a silent film, and scored.

Dita Parlo's contract with Max Schach allows the star to make films abroad for six months of the year, and before she makes "Asphalt" she is to take Garbo's original role in a new version of the film which started the triumphant career of the Swedish star.

Shavian Rights

Emphatic insistance that he and he alone has the film rights on Shaw's "Pygmalion," and that he will start production on the film in January next is forthcoming from Gabriel Pascal, chief of Pascal Films of London. Pascal has already engaged his cast and plans to start at Pinewood on January 24th next.

A script is at present being prepared by W. P. Lipscomb, who has developed a first treatment by Cecil Lewis, and the artistes engaged have the full approval of George Bernard Shaw.

Leslie Howard and Lee Garmes will be jointly responsible for direction and Pascal hopes that it will be possible to engage Harry Stradling as cameraman. The cast scheduled includes Wendy Hillier, Philip Merivale, Joyce Barbour, Marie Lohr and of course Leslie Howard.

The directors of Sound City decided not to pay the half-yearly dividend due this month on the 134,800 £1 six per cent cumulative participating preference shares.

Norman Louden, chairman and managing director, in a circular to shareholders pointed out that the company derives its principal revenue, from production activity in its studios.

"Since the beginning of this year," he added, "finance has largely been withdrawn from film production. In consequence, the majority of the studios in this country have seen a lessening of activity."

POSSIBILITY SEEN SELZNICK MAY BE VOTED OWNER-MEMBER OF UA

Organization Reported Seeking to Retain Producer Following Goldwyn-Korda Deal Failure; 13-Week Sales Drive Planned

With the abrupt collapse of the Samuel Goldwyn-Alexander Korda deal to purchase the controlling interest in United Artists, David O. Selznick's activities this week became the main topic of speculation concerning United Artists' future.

The most widely circulated and most recent reports were to the effect that United Artists directors are making a concerted effort to keep Mr. Selznick affiliated with them and that there is a possibility that the head of Selznick International may be voted an owner-member of the distributing organization.

While negotiations were underway for the purchase by Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda of the stock held by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin, it was generally understood that Mr. Selznick was not amenable to renewing his contract with United Artists if the deal were consummated.

Mr. Selznick, at that time, was reported as considering aligning himself with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer but this deal, although said to have reached the stage where only signatures were necessary, was believed to have collapsed, too.

Conferences Continue

Mr. Korda planned to leave the coast for New York early this week but delayed his departure to continue conferences with Mr. Selznick on the possibility of continuing with United Artists beyond the two pictures which Selznick International is committed to produce for United Artists release. Maurice Silverstone, United Artists head in England and the United Kingdom, is expected to leave Hollywood with Mr. Korda and accompany him on the return trip to England.

The announced end of negotiations by Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn last Wednesday night was followed on Monday by the company's announcement that it will launch "The United Artists Better-Business Drive" during a 13-week period, starting January 2nd and ending April 2nd.

Smith Outlines Plans

A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager, outlined the plans for the drive and emphasized the point that "this is the first time in a sales campaign that every member of the exchanges in the United Artists sales organization throughout the country will be enabled to participate in the prize awards."

Although a formal statement was issued by Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda announcing that they would not exercise the option they held on the stock owned by their three partners in United Artists, no definite reason for the abanment of their plans was given. In their statement they said:

"Owing to insurmountable legal complications we have decided not to exercise our option for the purchase of the three units of United Artists Corporation stock owned by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin and, accordingly, are returning the option today."

Just previous to the announced collapse of the deal it was reported in London that the basic agreement for the exercise of the option would, if carried out, be a violation of British stock corporation laws. The cash for purchase of the three units of stock was to have been furnished by a group of London financiers.

After the brief formal statement given out for Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn, the last-named and Miss Pickford both issued statements intended to clarify the situation.

Miss Pickford said:

"Mr. Fairbanks and I have conscientiously cooperated with our partners, holders of the option, to effect a successful consummation of the deal, even to the extent of making two drastic concessions from the original agreement. In the first instance we agreed to take $1,500,000 in stock instead of all cash and in the second to take $500,000 less in cash and no stock. I take definite exception to printed statements that I am responsible for the failure of Korda and Goldwyn to exercise the option.

"The statement that I might trade my franchise of six pictures annually to the detriment of United Artists is absurd and utterly without foundation. Creation of United Artists originated with me and it has been my constant aim to maintain its high artistic standards since its organization 19 years ago, and I certainly would be the last to mar either its glorious past or its potentially brilliant future.

"It was part of the deal that I should have the right to release six pictures annually. United Artists distribution contracts contain the 'favored nation' clause and I simply requested continuation of the old contract. At no time was the suggestion made by me that I should be entitled to better terms than other producers.

"Despite innumerable and varied statements that have been given for the press, the true reason for the socalled 'flop of the option' has never been printed, but I leave it to the imagination of the picture industry and I sum up the situation in 'two words.'"

Goldwyn Cites Relationship

Mr. Goldwyn pointed out that his connection with United Artists is through its distributing corporation, and that he is sole owner of his producing company, Samuel Goldwyn Productions. This pointed reference led to the conjecture, in some quarters, that Mr. Goldwyn might withdraw his product from United Artists release.

His statement:

"United Artists is a distributing organization. My only relationship with United Artists is that I own one-fifth of this corporation and am distributing my pictures through United Artists at the present time. United Artists does not own any part of Samuel Goldwyn Prod. I am sole owner of my production company and have been for the past 15 years, during which I have produced pictures independently."

Although he would not discuss the possibility of Mr. Selznick becoming a partner owner of United Artists, a spokesman for the company admitted that negotiations with Mr. Selznick were discussed at the board meeting which continued through Friday and Saturday.

The report that the MGM-Selznick deal did not materialize was followed by a formal press statement that Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's and MGM, who refused to elaborate on the announcement, which follows:

"In leaving California after this happy visit I am proud in the knowledge that the MGM studio is the most strongly fortified organization in the industry, built upon a solid structure that depends upon no one man."

The United Artists drive will be concentrated on 11 pictures which are scheduled for release during the 13-week period. The pictures are, "The Hurricane," "Action for Slander," "The Adventures of Marco Polo," "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "I Met My Love Again," "The Divorce of Lady X," "Storm in a Teacup," "The Goldwyn Follies," "The Gaiety Girls," "The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel," and "Nothing Sacred."

Quotas will be set and awards made to the leading district managers throughout the country, the leading branch managers in the eastern and western divisions, and leading salesmen in the two divisions.

For the Christmas openings of Mr. Goldwyn's picture, "The Hurricane," 17 men went out from New York for local exploitation assistance, as follows: Leo Pillott, Worcester, Mass.; Harold Marshall, Hartford; James McFarland, New Haven; Henry Spiegal, Scranton, Penna.; Louis Ramm, Atlanta; Ed Bellew, Rochester; Harry Rice, Akron; Hob Wood, New Orleans; Edgar Wallach, Harrisburg; George Ettinger, Reading, Penna; Maury Davis, St. Louis; Ed Gallner, Baltimore; E. M. Milburn, Norfolk; Steve Edwards, Springfield, Mass.; M. J. Kavanagh, Bridgeport; Charles Perry, Philadelphia, and Charles Baron, Detroit.

Art Catlin, the company announced, has been in Chicago on the assignment for the last week, and Jay Frank will leave New York for Milwaukee Thursday.

$250,000 DIVIDEND DECLARED BY UA

Earnings of United Artists for 1937 were estimated at $1,100,000 at the company's board of directors' meeting in Hollywood.

Payment of a dividend of $250,000 out of the earnings for the year was authorized by the board of directors. The dividend will be divided among the five member - owners: Samuel Goldwyn, Alexander Korda, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin.

Financing Arranged for Grand National Films

Financing arrangements have been made for the production of Grand National pictures, an official of the company said this week. Issuance of a formal statement, it was said, is being delayed until after the agreement is signed. No changes are expected to be made in the production program or the executive personnel.

Grand National started paring its home office staff this week by dismissing members of the story, publicity, advertising and exploitation departments. Edward Peskay, general sales manager, said that Edward Finney would move his department to the coast January 1st. Helen Harrison will continue as contact for Mr. Finney at the home office. Sam Shumer remains in the east as story editor. Among those dismissed were Harry Blair, Joseph O'Sullivan, Merritt Crawford, George Fish, Frank Pratt, Charles Dorsa, Jack Kerness, Barbara Day and Marjorie Dobbs.

CRIME, POLITICS CHIEF OBJECTS OF NEW FRENCH CENSORSHIP CODE

Review of Scripts Before Production Starts Is Called Important Provision; Attention Is Focused on Morality

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

Most important of the new Government film censorship measures, in the opinion of French cinema executives, is the move toward the establishment of a preventive and supervisory authority, expressed in that provision of the regulations which requires that all scripts containing possible censorable material must be submitted to the Government board before production is started.

The new regulations, now in effect, provide for the banning of films which might affect the prestige of the French army or other governmental agency, provoke diplomatic incidents with foreign countries or which show crime or criminals in such a way as to have an injurious influence on the minds of youth.

Notice of the new measures was given to producers, distributors and exhibitors in the following letter from Edmond See, director of the Film Censor Board, writing in the name of the French Ministry of National Education of the Department of Fine Arts:

"From: The Director of the Film Censor Board:

"To: The Producers, Distributors and Exhibitors of Films.

"In accordance with instructions from my superiors, I have the honor to communicate to you the decisions mentioned hereafter, pertaining to the production of films.

"A. In future visas will be absolutely refused by the Commission of Film Censorship for:

1. Films having a tendency to ridicule the Army or capable of diminishing its prestige.
2. Films liable to shock the national sentiments of foreigners and therefore bring about diplomatic incidents.
3. Films showing armed attacks (hold-ups), burglaries with house-breaking and any similar attempts which might have injurious influence on the minds of youths.

"B. Visas will only exceptionally be granted for:

1. War or spy films, which for some time have been a tendency to increase.
2. All films based on military or police stories other than those mentioned above.

"For these last categories of production, for films relative to national defense, great state institutions, French or foreign high officials and for any other which you should deem necessary to submit to me, you will kindly consult me before proceeding to produce the film and communicate to me, for examination, the detailed scenario of the film proposed.

"I take this opportunity to remind that by the terms of article 4 of the decree of May 7, 1936:

" 'Films must be submitted to the Censors at least eight full days before trade presentation to the public. . . .' "

Mr. See has given the following explanations of the regulations:

"The first and foremost aim of the Film Censor Board will be to exercise a preventive authority, resembling that used by the Hays organization in America.

"All films will be examined in script form, before work is undertaken on the production, so that, in cases of scenarios containing disputable points, the aforementioned precaution will avoid the unconsidered investment of important funds in a film which would perhaps risk being banned on the eve of its presentation in public.

"The script will be carefully studied and all passages which the censorship committee should deem necessary to change or even suppress completely, will be clearly indicated.

"In some cases the Censorship Commission may demand the entire rectification or modification of certain scenes. If the producer of the film should fail to take note of these indications, the film would run a great risk of being banned in its completed form."

The French Film Censor Board is dependent on the Department of Fine Arts, which is under the management of Mr. George Huisman, and the sub-management of Mr. René Gadave. This department is a section of the Ministry of National Education. The present Minister of National Education is Mr. Jean Zay, who has shown a profound interest in all cinema matters.

The members of the Film Censor Board, chosen by the Minister of National Education, include delegates of the Prime Minister department, the Home Office, Ministry of National Education, Foreign Office, and the War, Marine, Air and Justice ministries.

Politics Was Chief Consideration

Until last April, films were mainly examined from a political point of view, that is to say, in such a way as to take care that social, foreign and home susceptibilities were treated with tact.

The political opinions of the French Government in power have been one of the biggest factors in the censorship of films. For instance, all Soviet films were banned in France when the National Government was in power, while since the advent of the Popular Front Government, Soviet pictures for the most part have been allowed.

The matter of morality has never greatly concerned the Censorship Commission, except in some particular cases, when the subjects treated were really too offensive, for example, white slavery, which would have given France a bad name in foreign countries. Providing a film has been accorded a visa by the censor, it may be shown in any cinema and to any category of audience, irrespective of the fact that adolescents and children may be included in the said audience. It sometimes happens that the mayors of some towns, or the prefects of some departments, ban a film which might have an injurious influence or which they judge to be contrary to morality, but they do so on their own initiative.

Last March the censorship committee took measures against films showing burglaries, house-breaking and bank hold-ups. This type of film is to be banned because of the number of crimes committed by gangsters in the south of France.

American films were the first victims of these new measures: "Black Legion" was the first to be banned, but was accorded a visa two months later after numerous cuts had been made at the request of the censor. The same thing happened to "You Only Live Once," from which all scenes of violence were suppressed.

Morality New Factor

The new measures adopted at the request of Mr. Jean Zay, Minister of National Education, three weeks ago, show the new trend. One of Mr. Zay's principal aims is to raise the moral standard of the French cinema. This question is one of the main concerns of some private associations, which for a long time have protested against the negligence of the censor, in the matter of the morality of films.

It is very common to see in French films, naked or partially naked women, vulgar scenes and immoral situations, or for a film to contain obscene or immoral dialogue, and in France there is no law prohibiting children from attending cinemas showing such films.

To date only three organizations seriously examine the question of morality in films. One of these is Catholic, the other two are laic. The first is the Centrale Catholique du Cinema, now in its seventh year, which in its weekly paper Choisir reviews and gives a moral classification to all films.

This organization acts in the same way as Catholic organizations the world over, and in accordance with the wishes expressed by Pope Pius XI in his Encyclica "Vigilanti Cura."

The Centrale Catholique du Cinema already has asked Producers (who in doing so would assure themselves the support of the Catholic public) to submit to them the script of their films, so that they could be advised on the scenes to reject before work on the film was started, and thus lessen the risk of the banning of a film in its completed form. This request was made long before the Government censor adopted the idea which has now become official, although treatment of the matter differs somewhat in the two cases as the Government censor will not attach as much importance to the purely moral value of a film, as the Centrale Catholique du Cinema.

Higher Standards Sought

Another organization, the French League for the Raising of Standards of Morality in the Cinema, which includes 71 sections, spreading throughout the country, has taken in charge, among other important aims, that of trying to "clean up" the cinema. The main object of the league, which was founded in 1883, and which is officially recognized by the State, is to oblige the Board of Censors to examine films from the moral point of view and to indicate which films may be seen by all, or by adults only, or which are entirely objectionable.

The league would like the Government to pass a bill prohibiting the attendance of children in cinemas showing objectionable films.

A third group, Les Amis de l'Ecran (Friends

FRENCH ACTORS STAGE SIT-DOWN

Fifty actors, stagehands and ushers held a sit-down strike at the Renaissance theatre in Nice, France, when the owner served a dispossess notice of the management for non-payment of rent.

The company producing the play, "Mon cure chez les riches", disagreed with the point of view of the theatre owners, the Railroad Workers Mutual Aid Fund, saying it was a shame that workers should deprive other workers of their chance to earn their daily bread. So the staff occupied the stage pending a solution.

of the Screen) associated with the fan publication, Cine France, has also been formed, with the aim of raising the moral standard of films. The main object of this organization is to fight all films which are dangerous because of immorality, stupidity or bad spirit; and to encourage all films exalting honorable sentiments, of good taste and of quality. This association plans to open branches throughout the country. Prominent French personalities such as Louis Lumiére, Marshal Pétain, Henry Bordeaux, Cardinal Verdier, José Germain, are honorary members.

Both these leagues and about 50 other associations, such as the Catholic Working Youth, other Catholic associations, and the Y. M. C. A. have given their approval.

American Product Hit

It is the American films, although already carefully censored by the MPPDA, which have been the first ones to bear the brunt of the new regulations of the Government censor. For example, "The Road Back" has been banned, but after a second screening the film may be allowed with cuts. No official reason for the banning of this film has been given, but it appears that films dealing with the "return from the front" should be avoided. Another film said to be affected is "The Life of Emile Zola," but it is reported that Warner Bros. have decided not to release the film in France as it deals with the Dreyfus case, which, although 40 years old, is still provoking controversies between Frenchmen, and is liable to cause trouble in the theatres, as happened six years ago when a play, treating the same subject, was shown in Paris.

American producers are rather anxious as to the measure of severity in the new regulations. Since all films dealing with gangster stories, detective stories, and underworld are to be banned, it will mean that films such as "Dead End," "Winterset," "Fury," "Mountain Justice," can not be shown.

In a statement to the Cinema Commission of the French Parliament on April 12, 1937, Harold L. Smith, representative in France of the MPPDA, speaking in the name of American distributors, referred to the problem. (It was just after the banning of 'Black Legion.')

"We should also be happy to see points of friction which we have with the French censor smoothed out and avoided. We are the first not to want movements of opinion or demonstrations to be brought about, which, whatever may be thought, cannot do otherwise than prejudice the success of a film. Here both sides can only work in an atmosphere of conciliation and agreement.

"However, we have perhaps been treated somewhat severely, by the prohibition, on principle, of certain subjects and certain films, for we do not believe that a single one of our films, leaving aside the artistic question, can be accused of being immoral.

"Our films have already undergone the test of a similar censorship in America, where, moreover, we have only inter-professional control—and as to our detective films, all of them, without a single exception, far from making heroes of evil-doers, always conclude by the triumph of the police.

"Whatever may be the force of persuasion of a film shown, we do not believe that it can stimulate misdemeanors and crimes to a greater extent than does a daily press in which they, unfortunately, are given a great deal of space."

French producers and distributors are joining American distributors, as they are all anxious to see how the Government censor will apply the new regulations. The industry hopes that the new measures will be applied with intelligence, and that they will not be based entirely on political reasons.

The Catholic paper Choisir gave the opinion of many French organizations when it said: ". . . But for a better cinema, and higher morality in films, the Commission of Censors ought to include, besides their civil servants, persons who know exactly what repercussions and influence the cinema may have."

PARIS SEASON OFF TO A GOOD START

The 1937-38 season in Paris has started much more auspiciously than the previous season, although the improvement is attributed in some quarters to the unusual influx of visitors to the city as a result of the Paris Exposition. Among the leading American films playing first-run there are "Stage Door", "The Prisoner of Zenda", "100 Men and a Girl" and "Easy Living".

N. C. Circuit Adds Theatre

North Carolina Theatres, Inc., Charlotte, N. C., will take over the operation of the Broadway theatre, formerly operated through Warner Brothers. The transaction gives the circuit control of all the picture houses in the city. It also solves the problem of the company in regard to a new theatre to succeed the present State, which is a part of the building sold to Woolworth's store some time ago. H. F. Kincey is president of the circuit.

Producing "Wind Country" Short

A featurette, "Gone With the Wind Country," is being produced in Georgia by Ted Toddy of Hollywood, for Southern Producers, Inc. The short subject is being adapted from an unpublished original story that elaborates on the country dealt with in the Margaret Mitchell novel, "Gone With the Wind."

Constructing Drive-In Circuit

Philip Smith, Boston, will construct automobile open-air theatres in Cleveland, Philadelphia, Buffalo and Detroit, according to terms of a franchise signed with the Camden Drive-In Theatre Corporation.

Fanchon Royer Plans Film

Fanchon Royer, woman producer in the state rights field, will make a picture to be known as "Religious Racketeer," which will star Mrs. Houdini, widow of the magician. Frank O'Connor, who wrote the original and the screenplay, will direct.

Technicolor Opening New Office

Technicolor will open offices in New York, January 1st, with Morgan Hobart, formerly studio contact for the company, in charge. The company has been using the office of its eastern attorney.

Non-Theatrical Film Award Won by Jones for Travelogue

A color film, "Western Holiday," by Hamilton R. Jones, Buffalo, won the first Hiram Maxim Memorial Award for the best of the ten outstanding non-theatrical films of the year selected by the editors of "Movie Maker," according to an announcement appearing in the magazine's December issue. The award was established by Mrs. John G. Lee and Hiram Hamilton Maxim, the two surviving children of Hiram Percy Maxim, inventor, who founded the Amateur Cinema League.

The award consists of $100 and a replica of the memorial which is in the league's headquarters in New York. Mr. Jones' name will be the first to be engraved on the memorial. His picture is a study of Canadian scenery from the eastern to the western borders of the dominion.

Ritter on Personal Tour

Tex Ritter, Grand National singing cowboy, is making a series of personal appearances throughout the south and middle west, which will keep him on tour until mid-January. He is accompanied by a group of players including Snub Pollard, Augie Gomez and Darling White Cloud, Indian princess. On his return to Hollywood Ritter will start work on his next for the company, "Rollin' Plains."

Editing Paris Fair Subject

James A. FitzPatrick, who returned yesterly from England with 5,000 feet of color film of the Paris Exposition, is preparing to assemble the footage for a special three reel subject for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer distribution. A musical arrangement will be added to the film.

SEPARATE QUOTA CLAUSE DEFEATED DESPITE LAST MINUTE SUPPORT

Parliamentary Strife Subsides Following Adoption of Films Council Proposal; Bill Stalled in Committee by Critics

BULLETIN

The proposal for separate quotas as part of the new Films Bill was killed finally Tuesday night by the House of Commons Films Act Committee by a vote of 34 to 14. In spite of presentation of a united front by sponsors of a reciprocity plan and the advocates of separate quotas, a last minute effort by producers to carry the proposal, Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, offered no agreement and the committee voted down the proposal.

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The tumult and the shouting of quota controversy have to some extent died down during the past week. But neither the captains of industry, nor the kings of commerce have departed from their battlefield. The campaign has taken a less blatant if no more subtle form.

Following the Commons Committee's approval of Oliver Stanley's Films Council scheme and what was, to quote a noted British journalist, tantamount to a rebuff to the producers' plea for a separate quota clause, the noise of battle has subsided somewhat and the optimism of yesterday has given place to the scepticism of today.

The Federation of British Industries and their labor allies—"stooges," they have been termed in more irreverent circles—are clearly less confident of their scheme being adopted as each day passes, though there is no lessening of the tenacity with which it is being pressed, only of the clamor with which it is accompanied.

Weight, it was thought, might have been added to the conviction of the separate quota idea, by the half hearted support lent it by American renters here, who, as recorded last week, had intimated to the Government that though they were not agreeable to the suggested figures they were not opposed to the idea in principle. In spite of this he would be an optimistic prophet who would forecast that even with this to guide him the president of the Board of Trade would, at this penultimate hour, change the whole form of the Bill to incorporate a proposal presented so late in the day and with such mixed backing.

Well informed circles record that when the last F.B.I. deputation waited on Mr. Stanley to press once again for a separate quota clause, they met with a far more cordial reception. Reports further hint at Mr. Stanley's spokesman, Captain Euan Wallace, twitting the Film Unit on its unrepresentative and disunited character. It will be remembered that both Maxwell and the Ostrers walked out of a recent meeting in order to disassociate themselves from the scheme.

Exhibitor circles in particular who are well known to have Mr. Stanley's ear, and on the supposed righteousness of whose case the Board of Trade president is believed to be convinced, are absolutely certain that the separate quota idea is dead.

A last minute effort is likely to be made to have some clause incorporated in the Act making it possible of consideration and institution by the proposed Films Council.

Though this Films Council, approved on its first reading in Committee, does not go all the way demanded by certain interests, there has been very little criticism of it since the matter was voted for in the Commons Committee.

At the time of writing, the Second Reading has not been taken, Mr. Stanley having voluntarily postponed this so that details could be considered and if approved inset in the amendment. There is little likelihood of there being any hitch in this direction.

Opposed by Labor

On the other hand there has been opposition mostly from the Labor Benches to the proposed Advisory Committee, the functions of which, as understood by its sponsor, Mr. Stanley himself, would be to take a mass of routine work off the shoulders of the full Council. Labor sees in this a less accessible body, responsible not directly to Parliament, but to the Board of Trade, and fearing a departmental obligarchy, has persuaded Stanley to defer further proposals until the Third Reading of the Bill before the full House of Commons.

Meanwhile, pending further discussion in Committee of the F.B.I. Labor scheme, the propaganda goes on, the press and Parliament being sedulously but discreetly approached. Taunted to further action by alleged misunderstanding and misrepresentation, the F.B.I. last week staged a very informal reception to the press and over a pleasantly contrived cocktail party, buttonholed the scribes individually and collectively. Basil Dean, leaning nonchalantly on a full ornamented cocktail bar, made a further appeal for consideration and support, being backed even more generously than might have been expected by Labor spokesman Tom O'Brien, secretary of National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, who see in the idea the answer to the present grave unemployment problem.

Writing to the Times, Mr. Dean, accredited mouthpiece of the London-born idea, criticises the Stanley Act as throwing the main burden of British production on a body of "unwilling foreign importers whose primary and legitimate object is to sell their own pictures in this country for as much money as possible."

This, though to give them full credit they have not expressed any opposition to the Bill, is exactly what the American renters would like to be left to do, instead of being burdened with the production of pictures in this country.

Mr. Dean, speaking, of course, for his group, still insists that the American importer regards the British film as a tax he has to pay for trading in Britain, suggesting that no commercial enterprise can hope to compete against a rival who is willing to sell at a loss.

The Committee stage, thanks to the persistence of the Bill's Parliamentary critics, is taking much longer than was expected and with two sessions a week there is little hope of it being concluded before the House rises for the Christmas recess.

Irish Labor

Following the British Government's inquiry into labor conditions in the industry, Northern Ireland, loyalist territory in that country, is to do likewise.

Major Shillington, Ulster Minister of Labour, announced in the Northern Parliament that following the lead of the mother Parliament, he was taking steps to set up a similar inquiry and was preparing for an investigation. Every Ulster exhibitor is to be subjected to a questionnaire on working conditions and wages.

Charity Premiere

"The Divorce of Lady X," the Merle Oberon production made in Technicolor at Denham, under the direction of Tim Whelan, is to have a charity premiere at the Odeon Leicester Square on January 4th, 1938. Proceeds will go to the Westminster Hospital.

$30,000,000 in Royalties

The amount of film royalties paid in England to foreign companies during 1936 amounted to about £6,000,000 ($30,000,000), according to an estimate made recently by Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade.

Receipts from British films shown abroad in that period amounted to less than £1,000,000 ($5,000,000), it was estimated.

ROYAL NAVY MAKES FRIENDLY GESTURE

Lord Mountbatten, in a gesture of cordiality from British officialdom to American distributors, invited them to a dinner this week at Mountbatten House, London, to discuss a supply of films for 200 British warships. The Duke of Kent was present and the distributors met the chiefs of the Royal Naval Film Corporation and the Admiralty Board.

Columbia Pictures Declares 25 Cent Quarterly Dividend

The board of directors of Columbia Pictures Corporation this week declared a 25 cents quarterly cash dividend, payable January 3, 1938, to common stockholders and voting trust certificate holders of record at the close of business December 22, 1937.

In its formal announcement the company stated:

"The legislative activities and uncertainties with respect to the ultimate status of the present undistributed profits tax law have been deemed by the management of sufficient importance to justify the deferment of action, at this time, on the usual 2½ per cent stock dividend."

You're a Sweetheart

(Universal)

Musical Comedy

It was a damp and disconsolate company of press folk who foregathered at the Alexander theatre in Glendale, Cal., on the third night of an interminable downpour to expose eye and ear dutifully to this oddly cast diversion. Another offering from the same sponsor had failed dismally to take the reportorial mind off of wet journalistic feet the night before at another place and it is to be admitted that expectations were not high. This was the audience, then, about as "tough" an audience as this or any picture is likely to encounter any time or place, that Mr. B. G. DeSylva's 95-minute contribution to the gaiety of the season took into camp completely. It would be, on the basis of results obtained in this decidedly inauspicious tryout, a hit, a smash, a wow and—to quote a word quoted frequently in the picture—a wham (maybe, to quote still another, even a bop!—which is tops in the language of the characters).

Ninety-five minutes is quite a spell, as the sprockets fly. Not the least of the surprises registered on this occasion came from discovery that the film ran that long—it seemed far less. But into 95 minutes may be packed a great quantity and variety of entertainment, especially when the pace is midway between headlong and breakneck. There is, therefore, a great number of people and things for showmen to tell their customers about. For instance, they could list:

Alice Faye and George Murphy in the finest, fastest, flashiest song-and-dance routines of the year.

Ken Murray and Oswald at better than their radio best.

Andy Devine and Frank Jenks in their peak comedy characterizations of 1937.

Casper Reardon in the all-time champion rendition of hot music on the classic harp (and an outspoken showman could name names here, if that were ethical).

The Four Playboys whipping singing guitars stingingly.

Maida and Ray in and out of whizzing lariats.

The Norvelle Brothers back from forgotten vaudeville to whistle a sparkling interlude.

Charles Winninger in a comic brevity, Edna Sedgwick in a syncopated ballet, Frances Hunt, Donald Meek, William Gargan and David Oliver in uniformly polished supporting roles.

It wouldn't be necessary, if it ever is, to tell the customers what the story's about, especially as this particular basic idea has been kicked around unmercifully this year. It happens to be about the Broadway producer who experiences difficulty with the fellow he owes for the scenery, but this difficulty occurs far down in the picture and is without real importance in the scheme of things. More prominently responsible for what goes on is a publicity stunt in which a waiter poses as an Oklahoma oil man and buys out the house for the first week of the show's run. Mr. Murphy plays the bogus oil man and Mr. Murray the producer, both in a fashion to suggest that they'll be getting many more things in the same general bracket to do from now on. Miss Faye plays the star of their mutual admiration and, to be sure, commercial interest.

Just where major credit for the impact of this fast, fresh and unfettered film upon the assembled onlookers belongs is not readily determinable. It is unmistakably the work of producer DeSylva, naturally. It shows plainly, too, the experienced hand of director David Butler. And a lot of credit for smart dialogue and humor remains to be distributed among Monte Brice and Charles Grayson, the screen playwrights, and Warren Wilson, Maxwell Shane and William Thomas, who wrote the story. Music, some of it distinguished and all of it popularly singable, is from various quarters; Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson wrote five of the songs, Charles Tobias and Murray Mencher added one, and the seventh is by Lou Bring, Mickey Bloom and Arthur Quenzer.

Previewed, as noted at some length in the foregoing, December 10th.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

There are quite a lot of names listed below which have varying degrees of marquee significance. The first half dozen, suitably bunched, may prove quite enough to get a tidy company in to witness the proceedings.

Such a company will see Mr. Raymond portray again the rich young man and hear Miss Sothern sing. They will see and hear Mr. Moore and Miss Broderick in characteristic banter. According to preview reaction, they will laugh at a hypnotism sequence in which Solly Ward attempts to unmesmerize the accidentally mesmerized Miss Broderick. That, again according to preview reaction, will be about all the laughing of importance.

Such a company will be told that creditors of an impoverished socialite conspire to finance the lady, without her knowledge, in a romantic campaign to obtain by marriage a generally desirable solvency. They will be told that the young lady, allergic to coffee, must drink innumerable cups of it daily, by way of testing the product, and that her extreme nausea resulting from this devotion to duty is amusing. Finally, of course, they will be given to understand that everything winds up happily.

Miss Sothern sings one song, "It's Sleepy Time in Hawaii," in her highly competent manner, but it's dropped into the picture in such a way as to bring to a dead stop the meagre progress made up to that point. It's by Leon and Otis Rene.

Man Proof

(MGM)

Modern Triangle Romance

This is a smart adaptation of an ultra modern triangle story written by Fanny Heaslip Lea. It is a class picture. It is pointedly aimed at entertaining adult woman audiences. Depending upon dialogue and characterizations to serve as the interpretative medium, it, like "Craig's Wife," which also featured Rosalind Russell, includes but little of that spontaneity that interests general audiences.

"Man Power" is the story of a woman who wanted a husband and, even though the man was married to another woman, made no bones about her determination to win him away from his wife. The plot is developed sincerely, realistically and with dignity, which keeps its moral tone on a high plane. For specialized grown-up audiences it appears to be suitable entertainment.

The players principally involved in the triangle situation are Myrna Loy, Rosalind Russell and Walter Pidgeon. All have difficult roles to enact, yet all carry their characterizations with force and conviction. Although Pidgeon chose to marry Miss Russell, his action did not deter Miss Loy from her determination to win him for herself. The situations which throw them together, while Miss Russell sits home and suspects, are well handled. But they lead to the inevitable conclusion. When Miss Russell, while denouncing her husband, claims him as her own and he, in turn, confesses that his attachment for Miss Loy was but an infatuation, the latter abandons her plan for conquest to find comfort in the affection of Franchot Tone, a relationship which her mother, Nana Bryant, had long been trying to establish.

Exploitable assets in the production are the theme and name values. While efforts may be made to kindle the interest of general audiences in the film, the fact that the theme is one of particular interest to women makes it evident that a determined drive should be waged to arouse the attention of that portion of audiences.

Previewed December 9th in the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal. Audience reaction indicated that the women in the gathering were more interested in the production than the men. Appreciating the work of the leading players, as well as the contributions of the supporting cast, the women, particularly, seemed to look upon the picture as one that put the question, "What would I do under similar circumstances?" right up to them. Comment overheard in leaving the theatre, with many women making that query of themselves or friends, suggests that it might be a good idea to adapt as a means of calling attention to the picture.—Gus McCarthy.

Spy Melodrama

Spy pictures have by now tended to follow a pattern and this unexciting but not displeasing production makes little attempt to get away from it. Here are the same old dramatic formulae, the conflict 'twixt love and duty, the ancient and venerable codes and disguises, and the inevitable narrative obscurities, woven into a film which has its moments, and at least two fascinating performances, but lacks the excitement of real melodrama and the essential pictorial punch. It is a studied effort but stilted, drab in its camerawork and indecisive in its narrative, with a climax which one might be pardoned for explaining on the grounds of directorial fatigue.

Into it comes Dita Parlo, charming blonde star of the Continent, in the role of Anne Marie Lesser, a spy who actually worked for Germany during the war, and Erich von Stroheim, whose deliberate bull necked study of Teutonic tenacity makes substance out of the shadow of a very fictitiously designed role.

La Parlo's role is the not unfamiliar one of the woman who joins a German spy organization to avenge the killer of her boy friend, and at long last finds herself face to face with him in the young officer she has learned to love. We get to this ultimate problem through a sequence of incidents of the accredited espionage nature, with prying into portmanteaus, escapes across frontiers, and passwords in Salonika, where Stroheim lurks disguised in a fez and a black eye patch. Director Greville, or his scenarist, or both, make little attempt to find a solution, for in the climax, a German air raid on the town, we are left with the knowledge that each knows the other's secret but with little idea of how they are going to cope with it either by escape, or death or . . . and the trouble is that we do not very much care.

John Loder's obscure and rather stagey British Captain is not the least indigestible of the film's elements, many of which take a deal of explaining away.

Exiled to Shanghai

(Republic)

Newsreel vs. Television

An entertaining action picture, as modern as tomorrow's headlines, has been made from a story of newsreel men.

Most newsreel stories are of rivalry among the cameramen, in obtaining exclusive pictures and in getting the pictures first on the theatres' screens. Here it is a newsreel company against the radio, wired-photos and eventually news by television. In the story the newsreel runs a poor fourth. The application of television here, incidentally, is beyond the wildest dreams of today's optimists, what with broadcasts from far away Shanghai to New York.

The picture stars Wallace Ford, who has a leading role in the highly successful "Of Mice and Men," now playing on the New York stage. He also recently appeared on the Rudy Vallee radio program in a scene from the play. June Travis, daughter of the vice-president of the Chicago White Sox baseball team, plays opposite Ford, turning in a well rounded performance and in addition impressing one as a typical American girl, if any.

The story opens in Spain where "Ted Young" (Wallace Ford) is shooting scenes of the war. On his return to New York with the "shots" he discovers that newspapers had featured wired pictures a week ago. In his endeavor to scoop the newspicture services "Young" photographs "Nancy Jones," believing her to be a sweepstakes winner.

The pictures are released, then withdrawn, when it turns out that "Nancy" is only a winner of a television exploitation contest. "Young," out of a job, becomes television-conscious and crusades for this new medium. A fraudulent company agrees with "Young's" plans, the company's stock is pyramided on the strength of the idea, and a demonstration is held for investors. The demonstration turns out to be a trick. "Nancy" heads for home, thinking "Young" guilty, but he in typical serial fashion parachutes out of a plane, stops her train and joins her. The picture ends with the television broadcast from Shanghai.

Daughter of Shanghai

Melodrama

Condense all the excitement of a multi-chapter superthrilling serial into 60 minutes running time and you get some idea of the entertainment character of "Daughter of Shanghai." No war picture is this. No expedition is made to Shanghai. The only reason for the title apparently is that Anna May Wong, an American born Chinese, is introduced to the ribald habitues of a tropical island honky tonk as "the daughter of Shanghai—exotic dances." Directly the picture has to do with the experiences Miss Wong and an oriental undercover government man played by Philip Ahn meet when they set out to break up an alien smuggling ring. A wild and woolly melodrama, everything, including characterizations, action, dialogue, situations and locales is pointed to accentuate that quality.

For resisting racketeers "Barden" and "Sleete," "Quan Lin" is killed, but his daughter, "Lan Ying" escapes. Under the supposed patronage of "Mrs. Hunt," "Lan Ying," refusing the cooperation of "Kim Lee" determines to break up an alien smuggling ring. On an island, where she pauses for a while to be a cabaret entertainer, she encounters many harrowing experiences, and gets information pointing to "Hartman" as one of the key figures in the racket. Arriving back in the environs of San Francisco, there are more hair-raising goings-on, imagination-defying escapes, until "Mrs. Hunt" is revealed as the hypocritical queen and brains behind the smuggling ring.

*Previewed December 10th in the Dome Theatre, Ocean Park, Cal. # Wild Horse Rodeo

(Republic)

Western

This subject should prove satisfactory to western fans in most situations. The story shifts from rodeo to ranch to rodeo and back to the ranch as two factions fight for a wild horse. The final sequence, wherein a group of horses is herded by airplane into a corral, a shooting duel between those on the ground and those in the air, and finally the destruction of the plane by a pistol shot from the ground, stops at nothing, but youngsters' enthusiasm is not likely to be troubled by incredulity.

The story, like others in the Three Mesquiteers series, has a romantic tinge, but the love story is left open for another feature. Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune are the Mesquiteers; June Martel, the girl, and Walter Miller, the trouble maker.

"Stony" is a rodeo performer for "Colonel Nye's" outfit. "Tucson" runs a ranch. "Stony" and "Lullaby" borrow $1,000 from "Nye" to help "Tucson' by promising to capture the wild

Colorado Kid

(Republic)

Western

A swiftly paced action western, more in the manner of the older school, though not particularly exciting or interest-sustaining in story content and production values, has an innocent hero, found guilty of a murder. He makes the usual incredible escape from jail and exposes the murderer.

Bob Steele is the "Colorado Kid," with Marion Weldon playing opposite as the romantic lead.

The "Kid" is foreman of a ranch. His boss gets drunk, the two have an argument and the "Kid" is fired. The boss, with $5,000 on his person, is killed and robbed. The "Kid" is accused, sentenced to be hanged. He escapes and hides out on a friendly ranch.

The owner's daughter "Irma" (Marion Weldon), in an attempt to forestall any more killings, manages to tie the "Kid" and proceeds to the hideout of the murderer to bargain. The "Kid" gets free in time to rescue "Irma" and capture the murderer.

Prescription for Romance

(Universal)

Comedy

The credit sheet lists Wendy Barrie, Kent Taylor and Mischa Auer in that order atop the cast of this light comedy, but these arrangements are governed, generally, by other than box office considerations. In any case, showmen, who elect to bill the gifted Mr. Auer in foremost position will not be misleading their patrons, for it is he, with an unnamed dog which accompanies him throughout the picture, who provides most or all of the laughs induced by the unreeling.

The story opens in New York and jumps quickly to Budapest, where a lady doctor, American, shelters an old friend, "Kenneth Barton," who has absconded with some half million dollars. "Steve Macy," detective, arrives in pursuit of the absconder and captures him after a series of adventures in which he and the lady doctor work out a practically automatic romance.

Auer's role is that of insolvent count, impeccably attired and living by his wits in the Hungarian metropolis. Miss Barrie plays the lady doctor and Kent the detective.

Mannequin

(MGM)

Metropolitan Romance

Probably the first thing the more outspoken type of showmen will want to tell his clients about this appearance of Joan Crawford is that it does not resemble "The Bride Wore Red" in any particular, and probably the most convincing way to convey that information is by dwelling first upon Spencer Tracy's distinguished presence as the spark plug of a cast that plays together like the Fordham Backfield. That the story is dated today and pertains to the doings of plain people, such as may be found in great numbers at any dark spot on the map, is another matter for immediate mention.

Other cast names to mention are Ralph Morgan and Allan Curtis. A young man likely to be heard from more prominently hereafter, and expenditure of a spot of space in behelf of Elizabeth Risdon, Oscar O'Shea and Leo Gorcey, who borrow the picture from the principals now and again to run off smart gains through tackle, is manifestly appropriate if not precisely surefire copy.

The story is by Katharine Brush, whose "Young Man of Manhattan" will be favorably remembered, and Lawrence Hazard's screen play does full justice to that work and this not altogether dissimilar successor. The fact that it is a Joseph L. Mankiewicz production should serve any informed community as adequate assurance of general excellence.

The story is about John Hennessey, up from Hester Street poverty to Park Avenue affluence, who befriends Jessie and Eddie Miller, newlyweds from his old neighborhood, when Eddie's dishonest tendencies bring trouble. Jessie leaves Eddie when he proposes that she get a divorce and marry Hennessey for his money, divorce Hennessey in turn and rejoin Eddie, bringing back same. Later she marries Hennessey with honorable intent. Then Eddie prepares to force her to go through with his plan on threat of telling Hennessey such was her intention. Hennessey loses his fortune just in time to save the situation and his wife.

Coyly called the "best dressed woman in America," because she has the happy fortune of never wearing the same costume twice, the identity of this blessed female is revealed as a department store window mannikin. In an interesting sequence of behind the scenes revelation, the first section of this issue shows how the lady dummy is born, put together, beautified and generally made presentable for her bow on the shop window stage. The middle portion of the material is devoted to a dazzling display of some of the royal jewels from the Romanoff dynasty's art treasures. The final division inspects the workings of a New York school for professional children. # IMPROVED BUSINESS IN AUSTRALIA BASIS FOR OPTIMISTIC FORECASTS

Distributors and Exhibitors Preparing to Take Advantage of Pronounced Economic Recovery with Augmented Budgets

by CLIFF HOLT
in Melbourne

A study of Australia's prospects for 1938 instills nothing but the greatest confidence. Provided the Empire can avoid European conflict, the Commonwealth's future prosperity seems assured.

This, of course, is of importance to all overseas commercial institutions which are interested in the Australian market, and of moment to motion picture producing companies whose revenue from Australia fluctuates with the country's internal condition.

If the adage be true that a people contented with its lot is contented with its government, a happy omen for the commencement of trading activities for 1938 is the confidence the electors placed for the third successive time in the Lyons Government at the October election.

As pointed out by the Prime Minister in his policy speech prior to the election, the story of Australia's industrial and economical life over the past three years is one of progress and recovery. Its recovery from the effects of the worldwide upheaval of six and seven years ago can now be said to be complete.

Employment is back to pre-depression levels. Invalid and old-age pensions and public service salaries and wages which were reduced during the slump have been completely restored. Taxation has been reduced by substantial amounts. There is remarkable building activity. More than 200,000 more persons are back at work in secondary industries than at the depth of the depression. Deposits in savings banks and trading banks are at record levels and record figures are shown in the business of life assurance companies. Australian business is dealing on a rising market and the limit is believed to be far from reached.

Increased Returns Seen

Australian exhibiting companies and independent theatre-owners therefore look to 1938 for big profits. Similarly, distributors will look forward to increased returns.

The next important consideration is quality of film product. Will 1938's releases live up to the distributors' enthusiastic predictions? About the same time that the Prime Minister of Australia was making his policy speech to the electors, distributors were making theirs to exhibitors. Brief quotations from each tell their own story.

For MGM, N. Bernard Freeman, managing director in Australia, said: "1938 promises to overshadow in prosperity any previous year in the history of motion pictures. This opinion is inspired by the vast improvements indicated in public finances. I forecast a sharing of this potential wealth between all sections of the trade. In keeping with the Australian-wide prosperity, the industry generally and MGM particularly has really outstanding pictures to offer."

Harry Hunter, managing director in Australia of Paramount: "My company not only plans to make the new season the biggest in its history, but has already made several pictures which alone would entitle them to this claim. . . ."

Ralph Doyle, managing director of RKO: "Every picture so far listed has box-office angles, which, if properly exploited, will give most gratifying results. . . ."

Just back from a visit to Hollywood, Herc C. McIntyre, managing director of Universal, brought first-hand knowledge of Universal's progress. He says: "Never in the history of the business has there been such a revolution and a revelation. I see it in every department of the company's activities.

"Just a little over one year old, Universal's revitalized organization has gone right to the top.

"Exhibitors, not only in Australia but throughout the world, look on the New Universal with different eyes."

Universal already has completed 15 of its most important pictures."

Warner Brothers' Australia chief, Ralph Clark, pointed to the increased production budgets: "Reviewing the trend in Hollywood for 1938, the thing that impresses me most is that the profits made by producers in general this year are being put back into the element which is the beginning and end of this business—good, well-made pictures.

"Production budgets are being augmented by as much as 33⅓ per cent by major film-makers.

"The picture industry, like all others, has experienced its bad times, but it has always been quick to sense economic recovery and act accordingly."

"As far as Warner Brothers-First National, in particular, is concerned, we have a product which will set a standard to be aimed at in the future. This assertion has what I might call celluloid backing in the form of really outstanding pictures which have arrived in Australia and which I have seen."

Stanley S. Crick, managing director of 20th Century in Australia, also visited New York and Hollywood this year. His view is most optimistic:

"During the past year, Darryl Zanuck and the resources of Movietone City and the Westwood Hills Studios have been successful in building up an unprecedented array of new star power material.

"I may state that never have I been so optimistic and confident that the forthcoming season of 20th Century-Fox product will create a new appreciation in the minds of exhibitors of the money-making potentialities of the pictures released through my company."

Other distribution chiefs are equally enthusiastic about 1938's prospects—and of their own product—so with a fat public purse to draw on, theatre box-offices should click a merry tune in Australia during the year ahead.

POLISH EXHIBITORS "GANG UP" ON U. S.

Exhibitors in Poland are reported to be "ganging up" on American distributors with prearrangements to bargain individually with allotted companies to the exclusion of others. Salesmen are turned away from one theatre with the statement that they "belong" to another house, and must do business there only. Salesmen are left with non-competitive situations.

Surprise is being expressed in the daily press here by financial editors over the failure of Hoyt's shares to respond on the stock market to the much-improved balance sheet. They attribute this to the uncertainty over the future of General Theatres Corporation and the trading prospects of Hoyts and Union theatres should they dissolve partnership at the end of this year.

Financial experts point out that the Hoyts profit for the last 12 months of £81,305 represented a 33 per cent increase over the previous year and equalled the level attained before the financial crash of 1931. Further, £33,000 more than was brought into the accounts has been carried forward and dividend arrears have been brought much closer, yet none of these factors have been appreciated by the share market.

Speculators apparently are skeptical as to how Hoyts and Union will fare when competing against each other. In their report, the directors of Hoyts express satisfaction with the higher profit which, they say, was achieved, in the face of active competition. Now it seems investors prefer to see whether the competition in 1938 may not be too hot and whether the two companies can make the same progress independently of each other. It is understood that the directors of Hoyts are confident of their ability to produce better results without Union. The latter company, also, is believed to be looking forward to the dissolution of the pool. However, the fact that despite its splendid profit of last year, Hoyts' shares have not risen in price, and indeed are actually lower than at this time in 1936, seems to clearly indicate that investors prefer to wait and see.

The appointment of Ernest Turnbull as general manager of 20th Century-Fox in Australia has been made officially. Mr. Turnbull will continue in his position as managing director of Gaumont-British here.

Universal to Aid Chauvel

In a lecture to the Royal Empire Society on his return from Hollywood, Charles Chauvel, Australian independent producer, said that Universal Films had agreed to come into his company and provide one-third of the capital and much valuable equipment. Universal would not control the company. If the pictures possessed merit they would be released in the United States by Universal.

Mr. Chauvel said he was planning an ambitious picture dealing with the operations of the Australian Light Horse.

Advocating the presentation of talking pictures in churches, the Archbishop of Brisbane, Dr. Ward, is organizing a Religious Film Society modeled on a similar group in England.

"We need to stir the imagination of Australia Church people," he said, "and the churches will do it." Supporting the move, another speaker advised the interested organizations "not to start full of enthusiasm, then buy cheap stuff and expect to get the people in. People will pay one and nine to see the ordinary pictures, but they'll put 3d in the plate at a cheap church show."

The Spanish Relief Committee here has lodged an appeal with the Commonwealth Appeal Board against the Censor's decision to eliminate 31 feet from the film, "Thou Shalt Not Pass." The shots deleted show the dead and coffins. The committee protested that these are an essential part of the soberly stated case by the Spanish Government against the attack on the civil population of Spain, and are shown not for sensationalism, but for the humanitarian purpose of raising funds for Australian nurses in Spain.

MORE THAN HALF OF FILMS SHOWN IN SWEDEN IN YEAR ARE FROM U. S.

Paramount Provides 47 of 189 American Pictures Released; Melodramas Lead; Most Swedish Product Comedies

by KRIS WINTHER
in Copenhagen

A study of the 333 motion pictures exhibited in Sweden in the past season discloses that although twelve nations were represented the American motion picture industry supplied more than one-half of the total number of features released in the period between August 1, 1936, and July 31, 1937. Thirteen American production companies together released 189 pictures, Paramount leading with 42 films, followed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with 28.

The complete lineup of released features during the period in question, giving each nation's percentage of the total releases, follows:

| | Number of Releases | Percentage of Total Releases |
|---|---|---|
| American | 189 | 56.8% |
| German | 35 | 10.5% |
| French | 32 | 9.6% |
| Swedish | 26 | 7.8% |
| British | 23 | 6.9% |
| Austrian | 15 | 4.5% |
| Russian | 5 | 1.5% |
| Czechoslovakian | 3 | 0.9% |
| Swiss | 2 | 0.6% |
| Finnish | 1 | 0.3% |
| Hungarian | 1 | 0.3% |
| Italian | 1 | 0.3% |
| TOTAL | 333 | 100.0% |

Of the 189 American pictures exhibited in this period 42 were released through Paramount, 28 were MGM pictures, 26 from 20th Century-Fox, 23 from RKO, 19 from Warner-First National, 18 from Universal, 14 from Columbia and 12 from United Artists. The remaining 7 American pictures released were from Burroughs-Tarzan, Exploitation Pictures, Imperial, Liberty, Mascot and Mentone.

British Product

United Artists also released 10 British pictures. Of the remaining 13 British productions shown in Sweden in the past season four were Gaumont-British features. The German production company UFA released 13 pictures, one-third of the total number of German productions shown during the last season.

In classifying the releases according to content, one notes that the American producers supplied all the westerns, eleven of the twelve gangster pictures (Finland supplying the twelfth), all three classics and the one juvenile, 24 of the 27 mystery pictures and 14 of the 19 adventure features. In melodrama and comedy the American producers fell below the 50 per cent mark, in the comedy classification mainly on account of 17 Swedish productions. The complete list is:

| | Number of Releases | Percentage of Total | American Releases |
|---|---|---|---|
| Melodrama | 131 | 39.4% | 62 |
| Comedy | 68 | 20.4% | 29 |
| Musicals | 48 | 14.4% | 26 |
| Mystery | 27 | 8.1% | 24 |
| Adventure | 19 | 5.7% | 14 |
| Westerns | 16 | 4.8% | 16 |
| Gangster | 12 | 3.6% | 11 |
| Historical | 6 | 1.8% | 2 |
| Classical | 3 | 0.9% | 3 |
| Biographical | 2 | 0.6% | 1 |
| Juvenile | 1 | 0.3% | 1 |
| TOTAL | 333 | 100.0% | 189 |

The Swedish productions released in the past season consisted of 17 comedies, 8 melodramas and one historical picture.

The French pictures were mainly melodramatic, although eight comedies, two musicals, two of adventure and one mystery picture also were released during the season.

The Russian pictures were mostly built up propaganda, with the exception of one extremely hilarious comedy wherein the political element was very lightly passed over.

Of the non-American musicals released, Germany supplied nine, Great Britain six, Austria four. France was represented with two, and one comedy came from Switzerland.

Outside of the regularly released pictures one motion picture was shown as special propaganda for Palestine. This picture was prepared by Palestine Film and was planned to draw Jews to Palestine. As there are not very many Jews in Sweden who could be drawn to Palestine, the picture was shown as a travelogue.

Swedish Film Successes

A questionnaire prepared by a Swedish publication revealed that the S. F. Circuit's houses had scored their greatest successes on three Swedish pictures, the two best being comedies. The two non-Swedish pictures with the best records in this circuit were "Camille" and "San Francisco" (both MGM). The "Ri" Circuit placed "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" (Columbia) at the top, followed by "Showboat" (Universal) and "My Man Godfrey" (Universal). The one Swiss musical released the season took a close fourth.

The Sandrewska Circuit scored its greatest hit with the Austrian picture "Ernte," a comedy with Paula Wessely. Three pictures vie for second place, "The Story of Louis Pasteur" (Warner), "The Great Ziegfeld" (MGM) and "Garden of Allah" (United Artists), and after these the French melodrama "Pepe le Moko."

The two largest independent houses report as follows: Chinabiografen listed "The General Died at Dawn" and "The Plainsman" (both Paramount) as the best drawing cards of the season; Sagabiografen placed three pictures on a par, "The Charge of the Light Brigade" (Warner) and "After the Thin Man" (MGM) together with the French "Club des Femmes."

Warners Getting Wired Programs

Warner Brothers have completed preliminary negotiations to take over the development of Muzak Corporation, and eventually will acquire control of Wired Radio, Inc., of which Muzak is a wholly owned subsidiary. Waddill Catchings, president of Musak and a director of Warners, acted with Harry M. Warner, president, in arranging the deal. Mr. Catchings said Saturday that he will retain his post as president of Muzak.

Muzak supplies programs by wire directly, using either telephone or electric wires to homes or places of business such as hotels or restaurants, from a central broadcasting location.

The company, during three years of experimental development, has assembled a library of 7,500 specially prepared records in master transcriptions. It is planned to develop the company on a nationwide scale, including the use of educational programs.

The wired radio music has been used for some time by New York hotels and restaurants, and there has been a limited installation of receivers in homes. It is claimed that recent experiments have made it possible to supply the receivers at a nominal price. Under the plan the subscriber would pay for Muzak service on a monthly subscription basis.

"Monastery" Has Boston Premiere

"Monastery," a motion picture depicting the life of monks, distributed by World Pictures, had its premiere in Boston last Friday at the Fine Arts theatre. The proceeds, $5,850, the admission was $10 per person, were turned over to the Reverend Michael J. Ahearn, narrator of the picture, for the Father Ahearn Fellowship Fund.

Among those who attended the opening were Frederick Mansfield, Mayor of Boston; Bishop Francis Spellman and Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams.

Swedish Film Unit Goes to Antarctic

Svensk Filmindustri, Stockholm, Sweden, recently sent an expedition to the Antarctic. The expedition traveled on board the Norwegian whaling steamer Cosmos II together with a flotilla of 19 smaller craft. The expedition consists of 20 people with Tancred Ibsen as director and four cameramen and two sound men together with actors. The steamer will return in the spring. The plan is to film scenes for a dramatic feature and to make films of an educational and documentary nature.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LOST HORIZON, THE: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—Heard much comment on this one. I believe this is just a little above the heads of the general run of patrons, as many asked me what it was all about. They couldn't make heads or tails of it. The older people thought it wonderful, but they like a picture that makes them think, and this is one that will. I thought it a great picture, and enjoyed it through seven showings. We expected to do good on this, but business was average. The picture follows the book very closely. The scenery is good and many of the shots are remarkable. Push this one and you'll do good. Running time, 117 minutes. Played Nov. 28-29-30.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—Did extra business with increased admission of Sunday with this. Lots of comments both pro and con.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—A magnificent production that failed us terribly at our box office. So much film wasted. Business below normal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RACKETEERS IN EXILE: George Bancroft, Evelyn Venable—Just fair on a midweek date.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

ROARING TIMBER: Jack Holt, Grace Bradley—Columbia always delivers good action picture for our week-end patrons. This one included.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

First National

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell—Had a good house both days. My patrons enjoyed this, came back for more of it. Some claimed it the best feature of year, but then comedies go over here. Joan Blondell is getting good again, in this, anyway. Let's hope for more "Perfect Specimens." Running time, 97 minutes. Played Nov. 24-25.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PRAIRIE THUNDER: Dick Foran, Ellen Clancy—Goodbye, Dick Foran, in westerns. This company is making the biggest mistake of their lives by not producing this series. This picture is as good as any Foran has made and that is saying a great deal. His voice is much improved and all in all it is as good as any we have seen. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Grand National

DAMAGED GOODS: Pedro de Cordoba—Boys! See your Grand National Exchange and get this one and make some real money. This is the outstanding picture of its kind, one that you can show to adults, only no one under 16 years admitted. Don't be afraid to meet them when they come out. Your ministers, doctors and teachers will endorse this picture for you if you will screen it in advance. This is not a shock picture, but does tell a story of what happens when youth runs wild. We screened it, then bought it for all our towns, and it's been grossing big in every situation and pleasing everyone. My advice is, buy it now. Do not confuse this with the old silent print. It's nothing like that. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Nov. 22-23.—Steve Farrar, Egyptian Theatres, Inc., Harrisburg, Ill.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy—This is perfect entertainment for any audience. Had a lot of nice comments on it.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren William—The finest portrayal of this tear jerker we have ever seen. Miss George is tops as an emotional actress and the picture was heartily endorsed by the small audience which saw it. The allocation is entirely too high for this small town and we lost plenty on the picture. It is too heavy for our Sunday crowd and too good for mid-week. Am at a loss where to play such. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, John Beal—The old perennial "Madame X." Three times run, once silent, twice in sound and they don't repeat for any business. Miss George is great in the role, of that there is no question, but as with Universal's "Resurrection" that they made so many times, the public just does not go for them.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WOMEN MEN MARRY, THE: Josephine Huchinson, George Murphy—Good, pleased on Friday and Saturday, and that's something here. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Nov. 26-27.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall—This picture is meat for the Dietrich fans but a kick in the pants for the general public. Slow and draggy with the double-meaning lines which slipped past czar Hays' office. Too much for our small town audiences. The true Lubitsch touch was too sophisticated. Absolutely no draw here for Sunday showing. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall—It will be okay if Marlene goes to Europe and forgets to come back. The picture bogs down consistently all the way through in fact, it seems to die three or four times, then struggles to life again, and between these interims the audience groans. This might be stretching it a little, but not much.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker—A pleasing picture, but it didn't draw. If it had been in color, Paramount would have had a honey. The scenery was wonderful, but the story rather dead. Running time, 90 minutes. Played Nov. 21-22.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BLONDE TROUBLE: Johnny Downs, Eleanore Whitney—SOPHIE LANG GOES WEST: Gertrude Michael, Larry Crabbe—THE GREAT GAMBINI: Akim Tamiroff, Marian Marsh—SHE'S NO LADY: Ann Dvorak, John Trent—Here's four pictures that don't mean a thing. There is not ten cents worth of entertainment in all four of them. Paramount is sure handing us some lemons this year. Where are the big ones they promised us? Reserved for next year, I suppose. However, I suppose we will bite again..—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

BLONDE TROUBLE: Johny Downs, Eleanore Whitney—Nothing there to hold interest. Heard no kicks. Walked in and walked out. Running time, 67 minutes. Played Nov. 23.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HOLD 'EM NAVY: Lew Ayres, Mary Carlisle—Just average, seemed to please. Running time, 60 minutes. Played Nov. 19-20.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town.

HOPALONG RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, George Hayes—This series of westerns just can't be beat. I have played all of them, and they always get good business. Much better produced than most westerns. Can't be beat for weekend dates.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Martha Raye, Bob Burns—This was a real attraction. Did a good midweek business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE: William Boyd, George Hayes—These Hopalong Cassidys are a good, consistent attraction.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft—It seems a shame to waste such good pictures when people can't afford to see them. And this is a very good picture, as have been all the Paramount pictures we have played. If you are fortunate enough to be located where the people have a little money, give this picture all you have and your customers will thank you for it. Running time, 92 minutes. Played Nov. 27-28.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D.

THIS WAY, PLEASE: Charles Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable, Fibber McGee and Molly—Boy, when the radio stars get into pictures, the deflation is on, and does it deflate them. Not a good word for this pair of socalled radio stars. In my experience, I have never seen the program pictures that have come in, so far this season, so consistently poor. With business receding and the time that pictures should be good to attract the waning attendance, it is just the other way about. I can see the sheriff's sign on the door if they don't come any better than they have, and that goes for all of the producers. Hollywood seems to be losing its grip on what it takes for entertainment.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

TURN OFF THE MOON: Charles Ruggles, Eleanore Whitney—Amusing and entertaining comedy.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Shirley Ross, Martha Raye, Bob Burns—A very nice musical attraction. Fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Republic

HIT PARADE, THE: Phil Regan, Frances Langford—A very enjoyable musical that proved to be nice entertainment. Duke Ellington's band is very good, but business was not so good. Running time, 83 minutes. Played Nov. 6-7.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

OH! SUSANNA: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—The most favorite and best boxoffice attraction for a Western program. Doubles receipts over other Western pictures. Here's for more Autry pictures.—Albert S. Norton, New Brad Theatre, Bradford, Ohio. Small town patronage.

ROOTIN' TOOTIN' RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Armida—Another Autry; good Saturday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

CHINA PASSAGE: Constance Worth, Vinton Haworth—Fair melodrama; average Saturday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

DON'T TELL THE WIFE: Guy Kibbee, Una Merkel—Fair comedy. Rather poor Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

FIGHTING FOR YOUR LADY: John Boles, Ida Lupino—Folks here are accustomed to expect good comedy stuff on our previews, and were more than satisfied with this one.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La.

FORTY NAUGHTY GIRLS: Zasu Pitts, James Gleason—Average. Pleased. Fair mystery story and a little comedy. Running time, 63 minutes. Played Nov. 19-20.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

NEW FACES OF 1937: Joe Penner, Harriet Hilliard—Not so bad after all. In fact, most of our young folks liked this picture. The box-office said "not so good." Running time, 100 minutes. Played Nov. 21-22.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown—Our first Joe E. Brown, and we are glad that there will be more.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La.

SHALL WE DANCE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—The usual Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers musical featuring the usual song and dance routine that has made them famous. There is no doubt about it but that the picture is excellent. Astaire's routine in the engine-room scene is tops in dancing. The finale featuring Harriet Hoctor in a ballet scene is out of the ordinary and in addition there is the excellent comedy work of Eric Blore and Edward Everett Horton to keep the plot bubbling, but with it all it's still a Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers musical. Running time, 110 minutes. Played December 4.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SOLDIER AND THE LADY, THE: Anton Walbrook, Elizabeth Allan—The players didn't mean a thing. The picture has some very brutal scenes. It just got by on Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SUPER SLEUTH: Jack Oakie, Ann Sothern—Here is a nice little picture. Full of action and comedy. Will satisfy 100 per cent where Jack Oakie is liked. Business fair. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Nov. 13-14.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

THAT GIRL FROM PARIS: Lily Pons, Gene Raymond, Jack Oakie—A little old, but a great musical comedy that will please them all.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ont., Can. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, June Lang, Roland Young—One of those dream things. He goes to sleep in Hollywood and wakes up supposedly in Bagdad. At that it did business, for some unknown reason, whether it was because the Republicans came to cheer, and the Democrats to hiss. I don't know, but he does rib the New Deal and I think they are entitled to some of it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DANGER—LOVE AT WORK: Jack Haley, Ann Sothern, Mary Boland, Edward Everett Horton—Good comedy. The whole family are screwy and that is where the laughs come in. As fine an assortment of nuts that ever was assembled in one picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DAVID HARUM (REISSUE): Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable—This did a good Friday and Saturday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart—Here is better than average picture. However, it did not get any business. Everyone liked it, but it just didn't draw like it should, but I am glad I ran it. Think I will bring it back later.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

SEVENTH HEAVEN: Simone Simon, James Stewart—This is a very fine picture but did not draw as well as I expected.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter—Here's a nice little picture, boys, that should bring them in and send them out highly pleased. Loretta Young is there with everything. When I think that Warner Baxter gets a fat salary for making love and kissing a girl like Loretta, I sometimes wonder if maybe the economic system should be revised. Maybe Norman Thomas is right after all. I certainly wouldn't want to interfere with the union scale, but I'd be willing to work overtime for the same money Warner gets. And so would John L. Lewis. Well, anyway, it's a grand picture with lots of boxoffice sock. The women will like it and so will everybody else. Virginia Bruce is grand, too. Our next Loretta Young picture will be "Second Honeymoon." I'm giving that extended playing time whether business justifies it or not.—Rudolph Covi-Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

DEAD END: Sylvia Sidney, Joel McCrea—Very good. Unusual story and good in any house.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

KNIGHT WITHOUT ARMOR: Marlene Dietrich, Robert Donat—Nothing but a lot of noise. I wish they would leave these English-made pictures over in England. Business poor as usual. Running time, 100 minutes. Played Nov. 27-28.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

We are glad, both Wahoo and I, to see our names in print. If you can use the following, in part or in toto, you are welcome to do so.

H. WILSON YOUNG,
Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March—We lost plenty of money on this one, due to the fact that we had it advertised to the skies and the New Orleans United Artists bunch, for some mysterious reason, pulled it out on us at the very last minute.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—A great picture. Step on it hard. The picture will back up everything you can say or do.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

Universal

AS GOOD AS MARRIED: John Boles, Doris Nolan—A nice little comedy drama but not a special.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD: John Wayne, Louise Latimer—Played this with an Amateur Night to a good business. Fair action drama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

OH, DOCTOR: Edward Everett Horton—They have changed the story without improving it any. Just an ordinary picture. Business to correspond.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SMOKE TREE RANGE: Buck Jones, Muriel Evans—Another Western to average business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TOP OF THE TOWN: Doris Nolan, George Murphy—This started out to be a fair musical but it fell down badly on the last scene. Just fair Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

DEVIL'S SADDLE LEGION, THE: Dick Foran, Ann Nagel—Not his best picture. A lot of dark scenes. Business good. No regrets. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—The younger generation never heard of Zola. Muni was great in the role, as was Donald Crisp as the trial lawyer, but it just is one of those out-dated subjects that will not get any money in a small town. The critics gave it everything and, as far as the picture goes, they did not overrate it for its type, but again I say that it won't get any money in a small town and that was proven here. Call it a prestige picture and charge off your loss.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—Very finely produced. Wonderful production from production standpoint, but strictly a class picture. Small towns will starve to death on this one. I did not gross expenses by $20. Should be sold to schools and run as a benefit picture. However, all who came told me how good it was, but that doesn't put money in the B. O. Running time, 116 minutes.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AIR HOSTESS, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Very good. Nice color. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 4—A very good short subject. Nice Hawaiian singing. Running time, 8 minutes. Played Nov. 6-7.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D.

DR. BLUEBIRD: Color Rhapsodies—As clever a cartoon as we have played. Some time the color was magnificent.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontaria, Canada. General patronage.

GRAND HOOTER: Charlie Chase—A fairly good two reeler. Running time, 18 minutes.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D.

LET'S GO: Color Rhapsodies—A very nice color reel. Running time, 7 minutes.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D.

LODGE NIGHT: Andy Clyde—Very good. The customers seem to like this guy. Running time, 2 reels.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CARNIVAL IN PARIS: Musical Comedies—This series of shorts has been the most disappointing that this company has put out for some time. This one is no better. The subject matter is so far fetched and the action so draggy that it is a shame to show them to your patrons. Just no good. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FISHY TALES: Our Gang Comedies—A dandy "Our Gang" that went over with a bang here. One of the best we have seen by this wonderful team of kids. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

HEARTS ARE THUMPS: Our Gang—These Our Gang pictures have a great appeal here.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOUND AND THE RABBIT, THE: Harman-Ising—A very good cartoon. Worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE MAESTRO: Tabloid Musicals—Everyone in the whole MGM setup must have been napping when this vulgar little reel slipped into circulation.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La.

SONG OF REVOLT: Tabloid Musicals—A lot of production value wasted on a mediocre musical idea.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

AQUABATS: Ted Husing—With Ted Husing as commentator, this could not help but be a good subject. Something in water sports our people would not have had a chance to see. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CANDID CANDIDATE, THE: Betty Boop Cartoons—Another good cartoon by this company.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

NEW DEAL SHOW, THE: Betty Boop Series—Very good, clever. Your adults will enjoy it. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 10—A very well balanced pictorial with color that is beautiful. Will go well any day of the week. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 2—Interesting, fairly good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

PROTEX THE WEAKERIST: Popeye the Sailor—Very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

RKO Radio

MARCH OF TIME: No. 3—The best of this series we have seen. The story of FBI is absorbing and the Amoskeag Industries is a knockout. So good that we are having a free show of this reel for the local Chamber of Commerce today. Play it any day in the week.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROYAL STEEDS: Sports with Bill Corum—Here is a beautiful, entertaining and out of the ordinary short featuring, as the title implies, royal steeds. You do not have to be a lover of horses to enjoy this, it is a natural for any program. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

TRAILING ALONG: Headliner Series—The most completely satisfying two reels of shorts that we have ever run. RKO, please make more like this Gene Austin short, and let us have them.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La.

Vitaphone

DOUBLE TALK: Edgar Bergen "Charlie McCarthy"—This is the first opportunity the men have had to see Charlie McCarthy and needless to say it will not be the last. These ventriloquist shorts are taking the country by storm and I hear that Charlie is now America's sweetheart. Nuff sed! Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IT'S WORK: Colortour Adventures—A very novel short that was enjoyed by all. The subject matter discounts the lack of good color. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NECKIN' PARTY, A: Edgar Bergen—Very good, play it. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

POSTAL UNION: Broadway Brevities—Not so good, not so bad. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn.

RHYTHM ROUNDUP, THE: Estelle Taylor—Very good short, some comedy, dancing and music, also shooting. Seemed to please. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

VAUDEVILLE HITS: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—The poorest bunch of acts that Vitaphone has put together in a long time. Skip it. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Serial

Republic

PAINTED STALLION, THE: Ray Corrigan, Hoot Gibson—This serial did a fine business all through. Sorry to see it end. In fact, all Republic serials are good and produce, and that's something.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

THREE SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTERS

Three exhibitors from as many states add their contributions to "What the Picture Did for Me" in this issue. They are:

Albert S. Norton, New Brad theatre, Bradford, Ohio.

Rudolf Covi, Covi theatre, Herminie, Pennsylvania.

R. B. Hipple, Bijou theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

Read the reports of these showmen in the columns of the department.

Columbia Changing Story Setup

D. A. Doran, in charge of stories and talent in the east for Columbia, is now in Hollywood for a reorganization of the company's story department. A statement from the home office said, "the reorganization is prompted by the studio's increasing demand for a more specific type of material which will tie in more efficiently with current production plans."

Plan Three Wisconsin Theatres

Three new theatres are planned for Wisconsin. They include a house at Krukauna by William Van Dyke, operator of the present Vaudette; a new 450-seat house at Elroy by Eskin Theatres, Inc., and a new 600-seat house at De Pere by W. R. Vincent, operator of houses in De Pere, Oconto Falls, Denmark and Oconto. All are slated to open before the first of the year.

Yost in Hollywood

I. Lynn Yost, Grand National distributor in the canal zone and in most of the Central American countries, arrived in Hollywood last week to confer with studio officials about new releases and a proposed plan to produce Spanish films for his market.

National Theatres Signs Contract with GN

Grand National will have from 6,500 to 7,000 accounts on its books for the 1937-38 product, Edward G. Peskay, general sales manager, announced after a contract was signed with National Theatres.

William Shartin, former branch manager for GN in Cleveland, has been named branch manager of the Minneapolis office and Peter Rosian, a former salesman in Washington, has been appointed to the Cleveland position. Carl Goe has been named branch manager of the Buffalo office, Jack Lamonte has been added to the sales force of the Washington office, and William Crystal has been appointed to the Minneapolis sales force.

Sonja Henie Honored by King

Sonja Henie has been decorated by King Haakon in Oslo, Norway. The King made her a member of the Knightly Order of Saint Olaf and the insignia will be presented to the skater and motion picture star by a Norwegian consul.

Irving L. Jacobs, district manager in Denver and Salt Lake City, has left the company. Jules Lapidus and his Grand National staff in Pittsburgh have moved into new quarters.

GB Adds to Sales Staff

Three recent appointments have been made by GB to its sales staff in the field. John Dickson has been appointed salesman at the Los Angeles exchange. Grant Lovegren has been named booker in Seattle. Leonard Raatz, formerly booker there, has been promoted to salesman.

Richard Forecasts Longer Newsreel

A. J. Richard, editor of Paramount News, in a forecast of newsreel changes for 1938 said, "I am convinced that the American public wants its screen news in the fullest possible measure; that the newsreel industry soon will find its 10-minute screen limitation breaking down seems almost a certainty."

Production of a two-reel newsreel was understood to be under discussion by Paramount officials this week. If approved, the new reel would be issued early in 1938.

Observing that the public appetite for screen news has been constantly sharpening during the last five years, Mr. Richard believes a climax in this respect will be reached in 1938 when "production, sales and exploitation problems that will then come upon us all will be an interesting challenge to our capacity for meeting new conditions . . . out of the keen competition that is one of the blessings of the newsreel industry there will come, I feel certain, entirely adequate answers to the developments looming ahead."

He said:

"The problem of editing, always with us, in 1938 will be in sharper focus than ever before. I believe that newsreel editors must harden their determination to go ahead boldly and fearlessly on the principle of unbiased editing. They can be certain of attack; they can be sure that the extremists on the left and on the right will howl their heads off perhaps even more loudly than heretofore over fancied advantages given their opponents in the presentation of screen news. If the industry keeps clearly in mind that the great bulk of movie-goers appreciate and applaud fairness, I hold that unjustified attacks against our shooting this or that particular story will evaporate for lack of support.

"To my way of thinking, the function of the newsreel must be concentrated more than ever on the presentation of spot and live news—economic, political, factual, industrial —to the full extent of the screen time at our command. I believe that the percentage of light entertainment in the newsreel must be lessened. I do not mean that the reels must be robbed of sparkle nor of 'Big Apple' stories reflecting the current fads and foibles of our day. I do mean that the injection of vaudeville acts and of entertainment material that properly belongs to Shorts does not make a true newsreel.

"The newsreel of 1938 will have a stronger sports section than ever before. The amazing Coast-to-Coast interest in football, as evidenced in the season recently ended, is another index to the box-office drawing value of news.

"The new year, I am firmly convinced, will find exhibitors increasingly aware of the fact that the interest of the public today in news, together with the improved technique of the industry, has transformed the newsreel from a merely interesting ten minutes into an intensely entertaining interlude in any man's show."

Spectrum Again Signs Scott

Spectrum Pictures Corporation, New York, last week renewed Fred Scott's contract for another series of six pictures.

MGM Contracts Are Closed, Says Schenck

Nicholas M. Schenck, president and chairman of the board of Loew's, Inc., on Monday revealed that new long term contracts actually have been closed at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Louis B. Mayer, Edward J. Mannix, Sam Katz and Benjamin Thau. Mr. Schenck made know the conclusion of the deals prior to his departure for New York by train. The statement supplemented his announcement last week that the contracts had been agreed upon.

Al Lichtman, vice-president of Loew's and executive aid to Nicholas M. Schenck, has signed a five-year contract.

Universal Sales Drive Scheduled

A three months sales drive will be held by Universal district managers starting January 8th in a concerted move to clean up all unsold situations and liquidate unplayed time. The drive will close April 16.

Frank J. A. McCarthy, acting general sales manager, will make a trip to the field on behalf of the drive.

Harry Graham, southern district manager, will call his drive the "Southern Challenge." His office include Atlanta, headquarters; Memphis, Charlotte, New Orleans, Dallas and Oklahoma City.

William Heineman, west coast head has called his drive the "Western Leadership Drive." His branches include Los Angeles, headquarters; San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Salt Lake City and Denver.

A. J. Herman, with headquarters at Albany, N. Y., has his men at Boston, Buffalo and New Haven working on a name. E. T. (Peck) Gomersal, mid-west district manager, with headquarters in Chicago, has started work on his drive with the Des Moines, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Omaha and Minneapolis branches cooperating.

Sig Wittman, with headquarters in New York, will conduct meetings at the New York, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Washington exchanges.

William A Scully, who will assume the general sales managership for Universal after the first of the year, said he would choose an assistant from the Universal ranks following the decision of Lou Weinberg, sales contact for Columbia, not to join Universal in an executive post.

Gus Schaeffer, export manager, returning home after a five month trip abroad said that Universal's European sales organization has been divided into two divisions for greater centralization of sales and distribution activities.

Jean Berkham has been appointed supervisor of the eastern and central European division, and Ernest Koenig supervisor of the western European division. They will work under the supervision of George L. Canty, general European manager. European headquarters have been moved from London to Paris in the revised setup.

The company is establishing new offices in Norway and Denmark, both of which are scheduled to open January 1st. A. H. Haslund will be in charge of the office in Oslo and Tage Neilsen in the Copenhagen office.

Altec Appoints ERPI Engineers

Five former Electrical Research Products, Inc., engineers have been appointed to head divisions of the engineering department of Altec Service Corporation, the new company which has taken over Erpi's theatre sound equipment servicing and installation business.

F. C. Gilbert, who has been with Erpi in executive capacities for the last ten years, was named chief engineer of Altec. E. S. Seeley, with Erpi's field engineering group since 1931, was named with supervision over precision measuring apparatus, in addition to directing a special group of technical investigators.

T. H. Carpenter will head a department formed to handle mechanical problems, supuly special information on theatrical sound problems and serve in a consulting capacity to manufacturers of sound squipment. L. J. Patton will be in charge of liason between the engineering group of Altec and the theatre and film fields. H. S. Morris was appointed to Mr. Gilbert's staff.

The appointments were made by G. L. Carrington, vice-president and general manager of Altec.

W. L. Hoppes, who obtained a leave of absence from Erpi for one year to serve as station relations manager for the World Broadcasting System, is returning to Erpi the first of the year. Mr. Hoppes will serve as assistant to D. C. Collins, vice-president. He will concern himself primarily with recording license activities in the radio, motion picture and other fields.

Television News Service Underway

Peck Television Corporation this week began operation of a commercial television news service when it transmitted a news broadcast by television to its first client, Jack Dempsey's Restaurant, 50th Street and Eighth Avenue, New York. The broadcast originated at the company's headquarters, Hotel Lincoln, 45th Street and Eighth Avenue.

The messages were typed on a cellophane ribbon which was spun into a transmitting machine where the message was picked up by photo electric cells and sent out. The line definition of the transmission was not made known. The company said, however, that the 441 line definition would be achieved very shortly.

It expects to have approximately 200 clients within six months. By that time the company also expects to be selling receivers in the open market for about $250 per set. The service, as it now operates, is leased for $35 to $45 per month. The company plans to maintain 18-hour service a day.

Opens Philadelphia Exchange

The Allied exchange in Philadelphia was opened last week by Harry Marcus, formerly of the Allied exchange in Denver, and his brother Gene, former operator of exchanges and theatres in Salt Lake City.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

THE 1938 AWARDS

Coincident with the New Year, the Quigley Awards will enter upon their second phase of development.

Starting on January 1, 1938, entrants will no longer be judged solely by their endeavors on single picture campaigns. The Awards will go to the men in the field who develop the most consistent week-to-week showmanship during a series of four three-month competitions. Further, the Awards plaques will be offered in five different classifications according to size of situations and policy of operation.

It was inevitable that this should come about, but until now all else was subordinated to the job of spotlighting the talents of the theatreman for attention of superiors accustomed to take the accomplishments of the manager for granted. The numerous promotions, salary rises and bonuses given Awards winners have done much to change this limited viewpoint. Endorsements from exhibitors who have "seen the light" are no longer unusual.

The widening of the Quigley Awards horizon in the coming year is predicated upon the inescapable conclusion that this is a 52-week business, every year. Thus, it would seem that the highest recognition should go to those men who program themselves accordingly and pursue a definite plan in getting the most out of every change of bill.

In short, gentlemen, it will no longer be possible for the "one-shot" guy to outdistance his less spectacular but perhaps far more consistent brother.

Complete details will be carried in a forthcoming issue. Through the revised rulings, the 1938 Awards should prove an even wider road to personal progress for ambitious theatremen in every situation.

With the announcement in this issue, I move over to new quarters. But only new in surroundings. It's still the same show.

Before pushing off, it is fitting that I set down my appreciation of the conduct of you members who have helped to keep these pages bright and informative; an appreciation of the cooperation that has aided your own cause and the institution you so ably represent.

The five years of my stewardship have seen many changes for the better in the fortunes of the theatreman. Most heartening is the growing recognition of his importance to the business of the motion picture, a recognition long deferred, but happily here to stay.

The Round Table has aimed always to stand firmly behind the man on the firing line. The Round Table will continue to give encouragement and support to the betterment of your jobs in the service of the industry.

A-Mike Vogel

THIS issue marks the departure of Mr. Vogel from the conduct of the Round Table to assume the editorship of Motion Picture Daily, a progression consistent with his intelligently enthusiastic support of the institution of showmanship in these pages for the last five busy and speeding years. The Round Table has through these years achieved and enjoyed a premier status in its field, with a substantial and consistent program of service to the men behind the box-office and their concerns in the merchandising of amusement on the screen. The Round Table will, obviously, continue on its constructive policy, and announcement of your new editor will follow in due season.

—THE EDITOR.

Round Table In Pictures

Above, left, shows prison scene in lobby of the Fox Theatre, Visalia, Cal., for "Alcatraz Island" created by Manager J. Lawrence Pilegard. Cashier was stationed behind bars and guard stood at post constantly. Tieup was effected with annual police ball, Larry planting usherettes in convict uniforms at dance spot distributing chances on passes to picture.

One of the interesting slants arranged by United Artists Manager Henry Weiner in Havana was street car ballying "Prisoner of Zenda" at the Auditorium Theatre, shown above, center. Passengers seen at windows were painted figures and inside car was 10-piece band playing martial music. Car plied streets three days ahead of opening.

Promoted by Assistant Jack Cleland, Capitol, Glendale, Cal., for "Big City", was 4-foot-high model of the Los Angeles City Hall. Buildings were illuminated and entire cost of wiring and transportation was met by the local power company in exchange for small credit card atop entire display.

That team of Steinbuch-Harris, manager and publicity head, respectively, of Loew's State, Cleveland, as part of their extensive campaign on "Vogues of 1938" staged a style show in the spacious State lobby. Cooperating leading department store supplied mannequins who modeled styles, replicas of which were to be shown in the picture. At left may be seen Manager Steinbuch putting his stamp of approval on the show.

In preparation for the engagement of "The Barrier" at the Mt. Baker Theatre, Bellingham, Wash., was what is reported to be the most elaborate display ever used in that sector, created by Manager Jack Rosenberg, and Norman Davis and Lon Heather of his staff who aided in the decorations. Wood, bark, trees and leaves secured from the nearby Mt. Baker National Forest, in region where picture was produced, combined to make rustic display typical of the great north woods. Box office as well as sides of front were covered with bark and small evergreens.

Street bally used for "Nothing Sacred" at Loew's, Rochester, by Les Pollock was made up of four men attired as George Washington, yegg, monkey and devil. Copies on backs reading as follows: "I cannot tell a lie, Nothing Sacred is the funniest picture since '76". Other copy was in keeping.

Here shown is H. M. Addison, Northeastern Division Manager of Loew's Theatres, awarding "Mrs. Smith", wirehaired terrier puppy, to winner of prize letter in conection with contest on "Why I should like to own Mrs. Smith". Pooch is reported kin of famous canine star appearing in "The Awful Truth", Loew's State, Boston.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Racing Heralds

In a town of 750, with no local newspaper, David Goodenough, Orpheum Theatre, Buena Vista, Colo., for "Day at the Races" printed his own racing extra, merchants' ads defraying cost. Ads were written in racing parlance and each herald was numbered, tickets going to those holding numbers corresponding to list in lobby.

For the Disney Award Revue, Dave held a special kid matinee, principal of schools announcing the show at joint assemblage of high and grade school students. Classes were dismissed earlier and the manager reports nearly 100 per cent attendance.

Quick Thinking

It seems that Borrah Minnevitch, who appears in "Love Under Fire," was playing a personal in nearby Youngstown a few days ahead of Bob Bowman's date on the feature at the Columbus, in Sharon, Pa. So Bob took a local reporter over to interview the harmonica maestro. Results: Swell yarn and cut in the Sharon Herald timed to build publicity for the picture engagement.

Exchange

In exchange for allowing members of leading professional women's clubs to put on a fund-raising drive in the lobby of the Rialto, New Braunfels, Texas, Manager A. Wolfshol had each of the club women phone five of their friends recommending "Good Earth," his coming attraction. Wolfshol also distributed imprinted paper sacks containing small amount of earth and planted "This is good earth" signs at excavations, in flower beds and parks.

Safety Campaign

Both sides of the Lowell, Mass., City Hall streets were roped off as part of Nat Silver's safety campaign for "Devil Is Driving" at the Strand Theatre. Permission was granted by Mayor Archambault to plant wrecked cars properly bannered in front of City Hall, traffic being detoured during run of pictures. School children were guests of Silver at special show with Mayor, Superintendent of Police and traffic officers addressing audience. Local dailies picked up the campaign with stories and photos.

FORMAT OF MAGAZINE ADAPTED FOR 'CONQUEST'

Created to attract quick attention, which it does, is the smart four-page take-off on Life Magazine reported by Ernie Emerling of Loew's for distribution on "Conquest" date. Measuring about 6 by 8 inches, the format follows the picture-magazine style with photo of Garbo on front cover topped by reverse box in red reading "Love" instead of "Life". Inside spread is given over to scene shots and back page to reviews and theatre dates.

"Tovarich Lite"

In connection with the Warner's release of "Tovarich" on December 25, arrangements have been made for a national tieup with manufacturers of the new "liplite." Breaks and ads in numerous important magazines and newspapers, plus displays in dealer windows throughout the country will be landed. Counter displays have been distributed to leading department stores and circulars plugging the picture have been sent out.

Institutional

Full page institutional ad was planted in local daily by Paul O. Klingler, Strand Theatre, Lewistown, Pa. Center two columns carried editorial message from the manager, balance of page devoted to forthcoming attractions, cuts of stars and stories on production angles.

"Stand-in" Cards

Planted in all local bus sheds by Morris Rosenthal, Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., for "Stand In" were bright orange cards measuring 8 by 18 inches. Printed in bold type copy read "Stand in here in bad weather while waiting for your bus—see Stand-In" at the, etc., etc."

Air Flight

Eastern Air Lines, through general manager Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker recently announced an offer of free round-trip flight to Washington on each day of the engagement of "Non Stop New York" at the New York Globe. Passengers were selected from cards containing their names and addresses which were deposited by patrons in box provided for the purpose in theatre lobby.

Police Aids

Through the cooperation of Police Athletic Association and local PTA, Robert Wernick, Skouras Granada, Corona, L. I., arranged a special kid show for Thanksgiving Day. Children assembled at park few blocks from theatre, parade formed, sound truck playing music and announcing that the kids were guests of the Granada. Line of march covered entire city with kids awarded promoted prizes for best costumes. Merchants' gifts on display in lobby week ahead were guarded by members of the local boy and girl scouts. Newspapers carried stories and cuts of the party.

Dairy Cooperates

Local dairy paid for printing and distribution of "Heidi" glossy photos in tiein effected by Leo Young, Strand, Portland, Maine. Picture showed Shirley Temple drinking bottle of milk, reverse side plugged dairy's products and picture. Special Saturday morning show was held for kiddies and imprinted bookmarks were planted in all libraries.

For "Vogues of 1938," Young promoted full co-op ad page, each merchant's ad carrying tiein copy such as "Follow the Vogue," "Thrift's Always the vogue," etc., etc.

Merchant Tieups

Special tieups highlighted Jack Hynes' "Broadway Melody" campaign at Shea's Bradford, Bradford, Pa., among which co-op ad was promoted from Cocoa-Cola agency using three-column 10-inch ad with large cut of Melody girls drinking the beverage. Other tieins included frigidaire dealer ad stressing angle that the stars used their product to keep their drinks cold. Music store hooked up loud speaker over which hit tunes were broadcast and five and ten featured girl accordionist who also featured numbers from the picture. Jack reports that he was ably aided by his assistant, Dale Tysinger.

Score Board

Covering local football games, George N. Hunt, Jr., Loew's and United Artists Theatres, Louisville, Ky., sent out an usher wearing large sandwich board plugging "The Awful Truth." In the center of the sign was large black circle in which the score was marked as game progressed.

Amateur and Quiz Ideas Build Weak Nights for Bishop

Playing features of "C" classification with programs running six days, starting on Saturdays, Len Bishop, at the Tivoli, Hamilton, Ontario has recently inaugurated two special nights that are aiding much in holding up grosses. In the middle of the week, Wednesday, Bishop is now presenting a stage show comprising radio amateur prize winners from a popular Toronto sponsored program, their appearance at the Tivoli given weekly plugs during the broadcast. Bishop's show is also broadcast locally and includes swing band and other talent promoted by the theatreman. Len is the M.C. of the evening and reports that his uncertain Wednesdays have now becomes capacity. To follow he is contemplating a Big Apple competition.

To bring up receipts on Fridays, the last day of his show, Bishop has been doing very well with a Dr. Query stage show idea in which audiences are invited to participate. The stunt, also broadcast, has Len himself in cap and gown as the erudite Doctor. First 15 minutes are devoted to asking five contestants three questions each. Fifty cents is given for each correct answer with the prizes parleyed in case of incorrect replies. Thus a contestant can win as much as two or three dollars a question. Last 15 minutes of the broadcast are devoted to interrogating the audience, questions asked from the stage, people selected to answer replying into roving mike.

Shining new 50-cent pieces are given for acceptable replies and to build up the laughs, Bishop has a number of high school students planted in the audience to turn in gag answers to serious questions. To obtain these questions and answers, the Round Tabler recommends the book "Boners." Stooges carry white button-hole emblems for identification purposes. One dollar is offered for each set of five questions and answers submitted and used by the Doctor. Special question asked each week carries five dollar prizes and parleyed to following week if incorrectly answered. Four numbered slips of paper are placed at random underneath seats in auditorium. At certain time, audience is asked to rise and look under seats. Those finding slips are invited to come down front and answer a specific question in order of number.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Nautical Lobby

Starting gun in Charlie Taylor's "Submarine D-1" campaign at the Great Lakes Theatre, Buffalo, was luncheon for Commander of the U. S. Naval Coast Guard. Lobby display was secured consisting of miniature submarine, deep-sea diving equipment, life belts, firing gun and other paraphernalia. As further decoration, naval pennants were strung from building offices to the marquee. Tieups were made in prominent store windows, stills and cards carrying theatre copy and plugging the engagement.

Harding hits the Plaque column for his initial success, and the balance among the Firsts and Honorables for November run about even. Deadline for December, the last month for the 1937 Awards, is midnight of January 8, 1938, with preparations going forward for the presentation of the Silver and Bronze Grand Awards.*

Buck Adventure Club Started by Stribling

To exploit "Jungle Menace" at the Kiowa, Hobart, Okla., Joe Stribling formed a Frank Buck Adventure Club for kids. At special matinee, each child was given club card entitling him to see every fifth chapter free if all dates were properly punched.

Material for a Frank Buck scrapbook was given to each child with instructions on how to use the theatre ads on the picture as run in dailies. Prize was awarded for neatest book. For a novel giveaway, animal crackers were inserted in small envelopes copy reading: "If you have a weak heart and are afraid of animals like me, cure it by seeing," etc., etc.

Durbin Double Contest Planned by Smalley

Cooperating jeweler and Station WNLC aided Ted Smalley, Garde Theatre, New London, Conn., on a Deanna Durbin contest for "100 Men and a Girl." Main prize was week's engagement at the theatre, week ahead station made several spot announcements in addition to 15-minute daily broadcasts in which the theatre, feature and playdate were frequently mentioned.

Camera shop tied in, man snapping pedestrians whose pictures were displayed in store window, those identifying themselves awarded guest tickets. Programs were placed on bulletin boards of local schools, cashiers telephoned selected list.

"100 MEN" ANIMATION

Among the most effective of lobby animations in use by theatremen are those created for showing at the RKO Keith Memorial in Boston by Manager George E. French and Artist Cyl-Champlin. Illustrated here are the working plans immediately above and three photos showing the operation of the moving display for the date on "100 Men and a Girl". Changes of copy and animated figure of orchestra leader are shown on revolving panel.

Weekly Broadcast Held By Soriero From Stage

Reported as highly successful is Tom Soriero's weekly broadcast from stage of the United Artists Theatre, Los Angeles, through tieup with Station KMPC, each Sunday afternoon from 3:00 to 3:30 P. M. Innovation is called "Station of the Stars" and staff of technicians from the station are on hand to see that the show goes over the ether properly. KMPC also gives stunt five daily plugs, inviting listeners to watch the broadcast from the stage of the United Artists Theatre.

Outstanding promotion recently effected by the theatreman was trailer valued at $895 for giveaway to his patrons and those of the Fox Wilshire Theatre, playing day-and-date. Since the lobby of the latter house was not large enough to hold the trailer, it was decided to cut it exactly in two, each half being displayed in both theatres. On night of giveaway it was announced from stage that if the trailer was not satisfactory when the two halves were put together again a new one would be given. Machine was promoted at no cost except expenditure of tickets and announcement on screens.

Durbin Window Wins First Prize for Martin

With the South Bend, Ind., Chamber of Commerce offering prizes for best trimmed merchants' windows, Guy Martin, Colfax Theatre tied in with leading clothing store by planting three ushers and one usherette in window. Copy across entire display read "We are three of the smart men from "100 Men and a Girl." We are looking for a smart girl and we've found her wearing Blank's (merchant's name) smart fashions." Display was voted first prize, which gave the date extra newspaper publicity.

Full-page co-op ad was run, with merchant's giving gifts to first baby born during engagement and named Deanna. Reported unusual scoop was permission granted Martin to place ads on blackboards of school rooms in the three local high schools. Balloons, some of which contained passes, were turned loose from plane carrying ad and candid camera contest was used during run of picture, prizes given to most unusual photos taken of crowds entering or leaving.

Essay Contest Planted By Rhines for "Heidi"

Contacting superintendent of schools, Elmore H. Rhines, Mayfair Theatre, Bridgeton, Maine, for "Heidi" distributed bookmarks to all students including those in rural schools, each teacher announcing picture. cameras and passes were awarded winners of essay contest on "Scenes I Liked Best in 'Heidi' and Why." The theatreman garnered a little extra business by announcing following the special matinee at which time he again packed the house, prizes, of course, were promoted.

Herald were distributed house to house and window cards planted in postoffices. Before showing of trailer week ahead, child dressed in Dutch costume such as that worn by the starlet in the picture did clog dance on stage, after which she made an announcement on playdates. Bumpers on fleet of cars were properly bannered. Cooperating merchants distributed imprinted paper bags, and rural telephone subscribers were called, acquainting them of the opening.

PROMINENTS HONOR WINNERS OF AWARDS

. Bell Receives "Silver" from Senator Key Pittman; Borough President Honors Binstock

In Washington last week the legislative processes of the federal government were temporarily stilled as its presiding officer, President Pro Tem Senator Key Pittman vacated the rostrum so that he might present to Ray Bell the Quigley Silver Plaque for September, earned by the Washington Loew publicity director for his campaign on "Stella Dallas."

The presentation was made in the offices of Colonel Edwin A. Halsey, Secretary to the U. S. Senate, who also participated in the ceremonies. The Nevada Senator told Bell he "ought to be mighty proud of such an achievement," a sentiment echoed by Colonel Halsey. Senator Pittman said he had followed with considerable interest the pioneering program of Martin Quigley and he knows that any activity sponsored by the publisher of MOTION PICTURE HERALD was most worthy.

"I know that showmen throughout the world compete for these Quigley Awards, and the winning of one represents a distinct achievement; an honor to be highly coveted," he emphasized.

Colonel Halsey, who has been an intimate of virtually every member of the Senate for the past 20 years, said he was particularly pleased to participate in the presentation, he having followed with admiration the "many fine ventures originated by Bell."

The September Plaque winner, who is in charge of publicity and advertising for the three Loew theatres in the Capital, was recently presented with a Quigley Bronze by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

Before a capacity audience which displayed great interest in the proceedings, Paul Binstock, manager of the Randforce-Marboro Theatre, in Brooklyn, N. Y., last week, was presented with the Quigley Bronze for May by Borough President of Brooklyn Raymond V. Ingersoll. The ceremonies held on the theatre stage were also witnessed by Louis Frisch, president, Randforce circuit; Irwin Gold, general manager, and A-Mike Vogel, Chairman, Managers' Round Table. Binstock was voted his Award on MGM's "Romeo and Juliet." The presentation headlined a special Manager's Gala Night, staged in honor of the winner and including a number of added entertainment features.

Proceedings were opened by Mr. Gold, who informed the audience of the Quigley Awards before introducing Mr. Ingersoll. The Borough President said he was pleased to present the Award to Binstock since it represented an activity that benefited the community. Mr. Ingersoll further praised the promotional efforts of the Randforce theatremen.

"Topper" Sign

Week ahead of "Topper" at the Star, Hereford, Texas, J. H. Roberts erected a six-foot top hat for his marquee with cast painted on blanking paper on inside allowing names to show when light was flashed on. Bottom half of hat was painted black with with title letters. "Conserve your ectoplasm for Topper" street stencils were used profusely as were banners and billboards, cards were also planted in beauty parlors and barber shops advising patrons to look their best for "Mr. Topper". Local jeweler displayed eight clocks in window showing correct time in various countries large clock in center bearing copy "time to see 'Topper.'"

Loewmen Report Recent Activities

Punching bag in front of theatre with a "sock meter" attached was ballyhoo used for "Nothing Sacred" by Francis Deering, Loew's State, Houston. Guest tickets were awarded to ladies matching Carole Lombard's reported score and men matching Fredric March's.

Hollywood opening was the order of the day for Jack Simons' "Conquest" date at Loew's Poli, Hartford. Alighting from cars in front of theatre were doubles of several famous stars who were introduced and interviewed over p. a. system by emsee. Jack further offers the suggestion to those playing "Firefly" around Christmas to get a string of small colored electric light bulbs and wind them around title on lobby display with flasher button. These should then be plugged into light socket with flasher button.

In Brooklyn, Eddie Dowden escorted Santa Claus into town. Santa's plane from the North Pole landed on the big runway at Floyd Bennett Airport where he was welcomed by a huge crowd. Clowns, Loew's Cadet band and hundreds of balloons added color to the event. Plane itself was lettered with Loew copy and snow trimmings. Immense packages which Santa unloaded from plane each advertised a different Loew picture. Headed by police escort, the entourage proceeded to the Metropolitan Theatre.

For "Vogues of 1938," Ed Pentecost, Loew's Grand, Atlanta, Ga., sent eight girls in slacks and sweaters carrying title and playdates to local night football games and State Fair distributing heralds. Shirt stuffers, door hangers and imprinted cardboard megaphones were also used, and special electric sign with four-foot cutout letters was erected over marquee.

SOME INTERSTATE THEATRES ADS

Reproduced on this page are various newspaper displays forwarded by Adman Bill Elliott, Interstate Circuit, Dallas, created with the cooperation of the managers of the theatres represented as follows: Ed Sullivan, Majestic, Dallas; Walter Henshel, Palace, Dallas; Irwin S. Waite, Melba and Tower, Dallas, and J. P. Harrison, State, Amarillo.

The Interstate Circuit is known for the emphasis placed upon surrounding short subjects in newspaper advertising, which trend is illustrated in various of the displays here shown.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 95

Bluebook School Question No. 95 was: (A) Describe what is known as an inter-tube coupling and its effect. (B) Amplifier circuits may be either Class A or Class B. What is the difference between these circuits?

The following made satisfactory replies: C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; J. R. Prater; H. Edwards; C. Oldham; L. Cimikoski; R. and K. Wells; W. H. Edmonds; J. Morton; J. A. Zachritz; D. and W. Porter; L. F. Hayes; W. Limmroth; D. Coates; D. M. Stinson; L. E. Dodson and H. T. Hood; T. W. Redhouse; R. R. Robbins and W. Winkler; A. W. Baxter; H. Bunker; D. M. Stinson; P. and L. Felt; F. E. Brandenburg; L. and F. L. Savlor; C. H. Lowrie; B. and M. Walker; A. H. Bradley; M. D. O'Rorque; R. and K. Wells; A. C. Greene; C. Caldwell; M. F. Robinson and L. A. Beachwood; R. R. Jacobs and B. B. Hornstein; L. D. Samuels; D. D. Strobey; R. M. Schnider; S. L. Maxwell; H. T. Plum and D. A. Shea; G. Maybe; B. L. Kent; M. D. McGuire; H. H. Grant; S. H. Billings and L. Jones; H. T. Randolph; P. S. Baker; L. M. Roberts; M. Dey and H. Lathrope; B. L. Jones; H. A. Ames and F. E. Dorp; R. H. Carter; G. L. Goss; M. and J. Devoy; D. Dennis; M. Samuels and O. Goldstein; E. F. and M. Wentworth; S. U. Lamont and P. F. Maxwell; G. T. Jones and S. Leonard; H. T. Billings; L. F. and B. Brown; K. L. Brant and G. A. Simmons; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; R. Davis and F. M. Brown; W. C. Bant; H. T. Watkins and N. S. Reid; R. E. Bullard and J. Robinson; W. R. Davis; W. L. Brandon and M. Lee; E. Exline; F. D. Kendal; W. R. Matthews and J. R. Davidson.

From a number of very good answers I have selected that of J. R. Prater as most suitable for publication, with L. Cimikoski as a close second. Prater says:

"Inter-tube coupling is a means by which the sound current which has been amplified by one tube is passed on to another for further amplification. The effect of such coupling is to enable the amplification of very weak currents to the point where they have ability to operate a loudspeaker at maximum capacity or more. Were it not possible to utilize such a connection and thus cumulatively add the amplifying power of several tubes, talking pictures as we have them today would be impossible for the reason that no one tube is both sensitive and powerful enough to operate a loudspeaker of any considerable capacity for sound volume. Then, too, most modern theatres utilize from two to several speakers.

"Transformer coupling is satisfactory in operation for all frequencies, but is less efficient than is resistance coupling. By this latter method the plate circuit of the first tube is completed by a resistor. The input or grid circuit is completed in the same manner. These two circuits are then inter-connected or 'coupled' through a condenser, which permits the amplified a.c. ripple from the first tube to set up a corresponding fluctuation in the grid circuit of the second tube. Two or more tubes may be used in the same stage with resistance coupling, but they must be connected in parallel, rather than in push-pull.

"Many variations of both above named methods are used. The same amplifier may use a resistance coupling between some stages and a transformer coupling between others. Large amplifiers sometimes employ eight to ten tubes in the output stage alone, hooking them in push-pull-parallel."

W. Limmroth answers, somewhat more concisely, "Inter-tube coupling is a term employed to designate an amplifier of more than one stage. All main amplifiers used in theatre sound systems are made up of several stages of amplification. In such an arrangement the extremely weak, fluctuating photocell current is applied to the grid of the first tube or 'stage' of the amplifier, which has the effect of boosting the fluctuations to far greater strength in its plate current. This boosted current is then used to similarly affect the plate current of another and more powerful tube, which process may be repeated, within reason, as many times as may be wished. It also is possible to use transformers in inter-tube couplings."

(B) G. E. Doe says, "Chiefly the difference between the Class A and Class B amplifier circuits consists in what is known as grid bias. However, the coupling of transformers and the equipments in service therewith must of necessity be suitable for the type of amplification and for the voltage impressed upon the grid, in which latter there is a decided difference between Class A and Class B.

"In Class A there is a flow of plate current that is constant and of considerable amount; also, the grid voltage is high and remains constantly negative. The plate current before referred to, fluctuates and is at times both above and below what we may term a medium level.

"On the contrary, when Class B amplification is examined we find the grid bias usually is adjusted to make the plate current relatively low. In fact, sometimes there is none at all, whereupon the a.c. speech current causes the grid to become positive during a portion of each cycle, which same portion may be as much as one-half of the cycle. Under this condition it is seen that the grid is positively charged during a portion of each cycle, though the plate circuit adjustment is such that there is some, though slight, current flow when the grid is negative, which flow is large in amount when the grid is positive, or even when it is neutral.

"Class A is employed by a very large percentage of theatre amplifiers because of the fact that it supplies a considerably better quality of speech sound, but Class B supplies a higher power output per tube. In fact, relatively small amplifiers using Class B amplification will supply sufficient volume for a theatre up to, say, 500 seats, but the sound will not be equal in quality to that supplied by Class A. Because of the difficulty of ascertaining which amplifier is A and which B from wiring diagrams, it is advisable that projectionists ascertain just in what manner each type operates."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 101

(A) I am in receipt of many inquiries as to screen resurfacing. Aware that this is perhaps not quite a fair question to spring on you, still I am going to ask you to tell us what you know about the matter. At what point would you recommend resurfacing, or under what condition would you recommend the installation of a new screen? What type of surface would you recommend — silver, white or tint, and why?

I do not expect an authoritative discussion, but an analysis of the problems based upon your own observations as a projectionist.

(Note: Remember this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

Mitchell Joins DeBrie

R. Fawn Mitchell, manager of the technical service and standard cine-machinery division of Bell and Howell, Chicago, resigned last week to become general manager of Andre DeBrie, Inc., equipment manufacturers of New York. Mr. Mitchell succeeds H. R. Kossman, who resigned.

Holly in New Post

Gus Holly last week succeeded Harry Somerville as district supervisor in Kansas City for RCA Photophone. Mr. Somerville will turn to commercial sound service and sales, and to the training of men.

The World Film News, London, England, has moved to 34 Soho Square, W. 1, there.

GTE Committee Ordered Dissolved

An order calling for the disssolution of the reorganization committee of General Theatre Equipment, Inc., has been issued by Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott in chancery court, Wilmington, Del.

The assets of the company acquired by the reorganization committee had been turned over to General Theatres Equipment Corporation, by the plan of reorganization.

The order provided for the payment to the receiver of the balance of the purchase price of the assets of the old company and the distribution of the proceeds of the sale of assets on claims. It provides for payment of $83.80 by the receiver on each $1,000 of all debentures which did not participate in the reorganization.

Former United States Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware is the receiver for the old company.

Paramount News Sued for Libel

Paramount's legal department this week filed a demurrer to a $350,000 libel suit instituted against the company by the Maurice Mercantile Company of San Francisco, and Joseph Rosenthal, its president.

The action is based on the charge that Paramount News libeled the plaintiffs by issuing a newsreel in 1935, dealing with deaths and illnesses reputedly caused by impure baking soda. The pictures showed people being taken to the hospital, the director of health in San Francisco issuing a warning to residents of the city, and the members of one family explaining how they had been stricken.

In New York, Paramount's legal department pointed out that the reel did not mention the source of the baking soda nor did it imply that the soda itself was impure. It indicated that the impurity came from a barrell in which the soda was taken.

Paramount further contends that in issuing the reel it was merely joining in a newspaper and radio campaign to aid public health officials.

Fabian, Copia File RKO Plan Objections

Fabian Operating Corporation and Copia Realty Corporation, who have filed claims against RKO Radio based upon two guaranteed leases made with RKO Proctor Corporation in 1930, have filed objections in United States district court in New York, to the report of Special Master George W. Alger which approved the proposed RKO plan of reorganization.

The claimants contended that the plan discriminates unfairly in favor of general creditors whose claims have already accrued. They asserted that the number of consents from the class of creditors whose claims have not yet matured is below the required percentage of 66 2/3. They also raised the point that Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act would violate the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution if their contention were not upheld.

Ruling on Bartholomew Gives Aunt Full Control

The Los Angeles superior court ruled this week that Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, aunt and guardian of Freddie Bartholomew, have full control over the boy's interests and affairs. The ruling followed testimony by Bartholomew, who said:

"I would like my aunt to have full control of the estate. My reason is very aptly illustrated by the fact that while my aunt had charge of my affairs once before for a little over a year, she saved $20,000, but since the other parties have taken over the estate, it has depleted very rapidly. I would like very much to have my sisters provided for, so they may have their schooling, but I think father is well able to take care of himself."

Adjourn Goldwyn Case

Trial of the $1,000,000 infringement suit brought by Mort Eisman, Clara Dellar and Louis Shayon against Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., United Artists Corporation, Samuel Goldwyn and Eddie Cantor has been adjourned to February 25th. The plaintiffs claimed infringement of their play "Oh Shah" in the picture "Roman Scandals." A permanent injunction and an accounting of the profits are asked. The adjournment action occurred in United States district court in New York.

MGM Denial Filed

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation has filed a general denial in answer to the amended complaint of Henry Rose against it, MGM Pictures Corporation, MGM Distributing Corporation, Loew's, Inc., Culver Export Corporation and Frank Dolan. Mr. Rose claims that his copyrighted play, "Burrow Burrow," was infringed in "Man of the People." He asks a permanent injunction and an accounting. MGM, in its answer, also attacks the constitutionality of the copyright law which gives the protection of copyright to unpublished manuscripts. The answer demands a dismissal of the complaint with costs and attorney's fees.

Monogram Charges Infringement

Monogram Pictures Corporation has filed suit in United States district court in New York against Screen Attractions Corporation and M. Kleinerman of Exhibitors' Film Exchanges and Star Safety Laboratory, for alleged infringement of their picture, "The Girl of the Limberlost." The complaint states the picture was produced in 1934 and the 16mm. rights were sold to Walter O. Gutlohm, Inc. It is alleged that the defendant has been infringing by producing 16mm. copies of the pictures.

Opens Los Angeles Exchange

F. L. Patterson, manager of Atlantic Film Exchange, San Francisco, has opened a Los Angeles exchange to handle the southern California territory. Associated with Mr. Patterson in the venture is Edward Patterson, who will manage the office. The men are not related.

Name Rogers Architect

John Duncan Forsyth, Tulsa, Okla., has been named architect for the Will Rogers memorial to be erected at Claremore, Okla. The Oklahoma legislature has provided $200,000 for the building of the memorial on a 20 acre tract donated by Mrs. Rogers.

OBITUARIES

Austin Webb Dies; Actor with Griffith

Austin Webb, who toured with David Wark Griffith's stage company, died at his home in Los Angeles at the age of 58. After his association with Mr. Griffith he toured the country with his own company. Mr. Webb was born in Guysville, Ohio.

He is survived by his widow and his mother, Mrs. Emma Webb.

Fred Lotto

Fred Lotto, 83, pioneer actor and stage director, died at his home in Hollywood. He directed Edwin Booth, Nat Goodwin and Robert Mantell in many productions and later was associated with the Charles Frohman office as actor and director. He retired in 1924.

J. J. Cotter

J. J. Cotetr, 54, partner of Ruben, Levine in the J and R Company, theatre building firm, died in Chicago. He, earlier, was connected with Ascher Brothers, National Theatres and Orpheum circuit.

Frank Jeffers

Frank Jeffers, 63, pioneer North Chicago theatre owner and real estate dealer died in Chicago following an operation in St. Therese Hospital. His widow, three sons and three daughters survive.

SMPE Distributing Ballot

The Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers through its secretary-treasurer D. E. Hyndman is distributing ballots for the election of officers for 1938. Officers and managers whose term expires the end of this month are George Friedl, Jr., chairman; Mr. Hyndman, and M. C. Batsel, manager. Mr. Friedl and Mr. Hyndman have been selected to succeed themselves by the nominating committee. The committee also nominated Paul J. Larsen for manager.

Ligo To Distribute RKO Films

Radio Films International, Ltd., has contracted with Ligo Films for the distribution of its product in the Baltic States of Lithuania, Latvia and Esthonia. Lietfilmas formerly distributed for RKO. Alfonso Valadez, manager of the Seville office of Radio Films, SAE, has resigned.

Lloyds Insures Roach Cast

Lloyds of London has issued a blanket indemnity insurance policy for $1,250,000 to the Hal Roach studios against loss through illness or the death of six principals in "Merrily We Live." They are, Constance Bennett, Brian Aherne, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray, Clarence Kolb and Bonita Granville.

Parsons Leaves GN

Lindsley Parsons has left his post as supervisor for Boots and Saddles, producing westerns for Grand National, and has joined Principal Pictures as associate producer in charge of the Smith Ballew and Tarzan series.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk() immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.*

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

The other night we went and saw "Good Earth," with Paul Muni and Luise Rainer, two very excellent performers. It shows the mob scenes of the starved Chinese, crazed by hunger, which will make you give thanks to the Almighty that you are under the Stars and Stripes.

It is questionable in our mind as to its appeal to many of the small town audiences because of the gruesome scenes, but its historical value is beyond question. In our judgment the producer, the director, Mr. Muni and Miss Rainer should receive the congratulations of the entire industry for giving us this excellent picture.

The scenes showing the invasion of billions of locusts, and the fight the peasants make against them, will cause you to wonder how the director got these scenes, and you will also wonder if such an invasion could ever occur here. It can, and it has. Many spots in the middle west, including our own garden, can give mute evidence of the devastation caused by these insects, except that here they are called grasshoppers instead of locusts. When it comes to destroying crops a grasshopper doesn't take a back seat for a Chinese locust, his digestion doesn't stall at anything from spinach to a wire fence.

Lum and Abner seem to be having a hard time getting into the movies, and Elizabeth and Pearl have to wash dishes in a cafe to support the boys, and we certainly pity the girls. Lum paid a woman sixty bucks for a half interest in Signal Hill, and when he went to call on her the next morning she was gone and so were his sixty bucks. This incident calls to our mind the time a fellow tried to sell us that bronze lion on Michigan avenue in Chicago. Our looks evidently inclined him to believe that we were from the sagebush country. We didn't buy the lion because we are not overly strong for lions. In fact the only lion we ever cared very much for is Leo, and MGM won't sell him.

Isn't it astounding what improvement has been made in this country. You probably don't remember when the Union Pacific railroad was built across the country; nor when the pony express riders carried the mail overland; nor when the emigrants went west in a bull train. That's history. Now we can leave Chicago by rail in the morning and take dinner in Los Angeles the evening of the next day. We can sit in our parlors and hear a political speech by the Bard of the Pacific in Portland, Oregon, or turn the dial a couple of notches and hear the marine band giving a concert in Washington, D. C.

We used to play two subjects on one reel and guess at what they were doing, but now we get one subject on ten reels. Gosh, but we are going some, Cedric.

Jimmy Fidler says that a prominent producer in Hollywood says there are only two versatile actors on the screen, Paul Muni and Spencer Tracy. This causes us to wonder what a lot more of them could do if given the opportunity. Paul is a good actor, as everyone will agree, and Spencer, well why shouldn't he be a good actor when he used to play marbles in the alleys of Milwaukee with Pat O'Brien? It may not be generally known that these two boys, in conjunction with that famous extract of barley, made "Milwaukee Famous," and our guess is that these two boys and Paul have helped make Hollywood famous also.

Not that we consider it necessary at all, but simply to remind you boys that Christmas comes this year on December 25th, the same as it did back when we used to hang our stocking up on the rocking chair. And Jim Farley routes our mail to Neligh, Nebraska, U. S. A., and a note from you boys (not promissory) would incline us to exemplify our angelic disposition.

Did you ever play Eddie Cantor in "Ali Baba Goes to Town?" If not, we believe you would be making no mistake by playing it. If this ones doesn't ridicule some of the acts of some statesmen!

Should you ever go to Wisner, Nebraska, be sure to call at the Royal theatre and meet N. R. Olson, the manager. You will meet a swell guy and no doubt see a swell show, for he runs 'em, and don't tell the Wisner folks he doesn't, for they wouldn't like it.

John Grabenstein operates the Liberty theatre at Eustis, Nebraska, and Eustis is in what might be termed "the garden spot of the world." John has a theatre that measures up favorably with the surroundings, and this means that the Liberty is well patronized.

Peru, Nebraska, is located close to the Missouri river and is surrounded by hills, and when you go there be sure to step on the brakes when you go down, and step on the gas when you come up, but in spite of its being located down in a canyon, it is a good town and Elmer L. Hanson operates a good theatre, and besides that, he is a pretty ardent advocate of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, as is evidenced by a check for his renewal which we have just received from him. We believe that Peru also supports a college in addition to a very fine theatre.

When it comes to vaudeville shows we've got to hand it to congress. They put on more free vaudeville acts at the taxpayers' expense down there than we can see on the stage, and this certainly is bad competition for the Washington theatres. That Washington vaudeville troupe should be on the Orpheum circuit and give us hammerheads out here a chance to see the show. A copy of the Congressional Record we have just received shows that Senator Soaper was granted permission to have printed in the Record a speech he made at a political rally in Possum Run on the eradication of prairie dogs. Who givesadam what he said, anyhow? He wouldn't know a prairie dog from a skunk.

Rockwell City, Iowa, is located in the heart of the country "Where the tall corn grows," and Oky Goodman furnishes entertainment for the whole country at his Empress theatre, and Oky wants us to renew his subscription to the HERALD. No better evidence as to his excellent judgment need be furnished; this is conclusive. And no evidence need be furnished that we are going to quit right here. We'll prove that ourself, but before we do we want to remind you to send Gertrude Merriam of the HERALD one of your theatre passes. She will be tickled pink.

THEY SENT FOR HER

IN swift crescendo a storm of denunciation and protest has arisen in consequence of the radio appearance of Miss Mae West on a coffee merchant's program a week ago Sunday. Public decency has been outraged and it rages, by mail and wires, from press and pulpit and a flood of letters from Vox Populi. John R. Public has been annoyed, betrayed, almost disgraced, in his home, of a Sunday night with his wife and family and the youngsters because the most pungent character woman of stage and screen has done her musk-laden stuff on the air—an Adam-and-Eve burlesque.

Hell is to pay, in its most pyrotechnic manner.

Apologies have been had, mayhap somewhat in the Japanese ex post facto fashion, but apologies none the less, from the advertising agency responsible for the script and production, in utterance to the press, and on the air, on the same program last Sunday night, in the sponsor's behalf. The Federal Communications Commission is investigating.

A natural, inevitable sequence is taking its course—which is well.

Meanwhile, it is possible that it might be appropriate to observe that Miss West, no matter what the superficial showings of fact may be, herself, in person, has had not so much to do with it, and should as an individual hardly be asked to share in the larger responsibilities.

Evidences indicate they sent for her. She was bought, not sold.

Only slightly more responsible is the author of the radio script with the offending words and business.

On upward in the chain of executive supervision, if there was any, is increasing responsibility.

A clear-eyed examination of the facts will disclose that the daughter of a Brooklyn prize-fighter, making early advent on the vaudeville stage of a great many years ago found audiences responsive to certain manifestations and in time, over many years, crystalized them into a type form, a symbolism of attainable sex, garnished with the ostrich plumes of the red plush parlor period. The act "went over"—so well and so far in fact that even blase New York sent Miss West over to "the Island" for a spell.

THE motion picture industry was not entirely uninformed of all this when in the midst of the depression that came before the recession, Miss West was invited to Hollywood at great price to grace the screen with her art of representing the type which had brought her a sort of fame well garliced with notoriety. "I was thinking of nothing but some way to get some dollars into the box office," was the subsequent explanation of the executive responsible.

Miss West appeared in a picture which achieved considerable dollar success—and forthwith became to the screen a problem rather than an asset. Subsequent performance was bought on an unwarranted presumption that the public wanted a lot of the same.

Nearly everybody has some sex and likes to talk about sex, at times and in places. Miss West got the biggest cocktail hour and smoking compartment line of word-of-mouth publicity in the annals of commercialized fame, and the more she got talked about, the more photographs of her in variant degrees of deciduousness appeared in the public prints, the less she was acceptable to the family-communal motion picture audience. But her fame grew on and on, by word of mouth and printed joke in the Esquire school of journalism.

ALONG came advertising merchandising, looking as usual for results at any price. Miss West was hard to get. They paid the price, buying what she had, and knowing it. She delivered it at the microphone and from there it was flung in the face of America, only incidentally by Miss West, who was no part of the devices and purposes of promulgation the other side of the microphone out where the exploiters of her aromatic fame were in pursuit of attention for their wares.

Let us recapitulate:

The producers of Miss West plays knew what they were trying to do.

The motion picture producers of Miss West's screen drama knew what they were trying to do, and who they were doing it with.

The radio sponsors of Miss West's Adam-and-Eve on the air knew who they were presenting and why.

It is not appropriate for anyone in these sequences of promotional responsibility to say that they "did not know it was loaded."

At each step, stage, screen, radio, the abandoned pursuit of attention regardless, has achieved a large disservice to the art and industry concerned.

THE debacle of the Adam-and-Eve coffee episode is made conspicuously remarkable by the extensive background of radio's morally inoffensive performance. Through the years when the coloration and publication policies of broadcasting were substantially dominated by the acute Mr. M. H. Aylesworth the radio cemented a tradition of almost painful purity, an attitude of bland euphemism comparable with the quality of adult conversation on Sunday afternoon in the presence of the children and the parson. This has served to give Miss West's act of the other night a positive crash impact.

It has now been demonstrated, again, that even common decency is not automatic—that good conduct remains in the arts, as elsewhere, a matter of discipline, to be continuously applied.

The unhappy and discouraging aspect of the current matter is the quality of misunderstanding of what is wrong embodied in the coffee merchant's apology on the air Sunday night, saying:

> "It has been brought to the attention of the sponsors of this program that a skit on it last Sunday night offended the religious sensibilities of some of our listeners," the statement said. "Our hope is to make each and every hour spent with us both entertaining and edifying. We pledge ourselves to that purpose and sincerely regret any unintended offense that may have been given."

The term "religious sensibilities of some of our listeners"

Increased License Fees

Chicago theatremen, in an attempt to prevent adoption of plans to set a one per cent tax on theatre grosses, agreed this week to a 50 per cent increase in license fees for 1938. The proposal, made to members of the city council, would raise the theatres' payments to the city from $120,000 to $180,000 annually. Coincident with the discussions of ways and means of the city meeting a $3,000,000 budget deficit, came the disclosure that A. G. Lindell, alderman, plans to introduce an ordinance which would prohibit the showing of double features.

Both plans are discussed, along with other Chicago news, in an article by William A. Crouch on page 27.

Equity Leader

Actors Equity Association avoided the naming of a successor to Frank Gillmore, who submitted his resignation as president by electing Burgess Meredith vice-president with the duties of president. In addition, the council voted to have Mr. Gillmore continue as titular head of the organization until the general meeting in June.

Code for Radio

Adoption of a code of self-regulation to govern the radio industry along lines parallel to the Production Code of the film industry is being discussed by leading broadcast company officials and will be one of the principal topics at the convention of the National Association of Broadcasters in Washington next February, Fred Weber, general manager of the Mutual network, said in Hollywood Wednesday. Mr. Weber, addressing the press at a luncheon, said an attempt at unity of action for all broadcasters, regardless of the power of the stations would be attempted.

Warner Changes

Edward M. Schnitzer this week assumed the post of eastern sales manager for Warner Brothers. He formerly had served Republic in a similar capacity. Theatre zone heads and home office executives met in New York in their regular quarterly conference and Harry M. Warner, president, announced that henceforth he would make his headquarters in Hollywood.

See page 26.

Government

In Washington this week:

Theatre owners were included in new Federal Housing Administration legislation permitting government loans for modernization of structures and equipment.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue waived requirements compelling exhibitors to retain stubs on taxable tickets.

The Federal Communications Commission started investigation of Mae West's NBC "Adam and Eve" broadcast for Chase and Sanborn and Representative Connery demanded revocation of NBC radio station's license.

New trade practice rules were issued for the music industry by the Federal Trade Commission.

Film distributors would be included in new interstate commerce legislation for federal licensing of corporations.

Compulsory filing of monthly Social Security tax returns by employers, including the motion picture, was waived by the Treasury Department.

House of Representatives' shelving of wages-and-hour legislation relieved Hollywood of a fight to hold child stars.

Intervention in RKO reorganization proceedings was requested by the United States Attorney General's office in federal court.

Federal theatre "'divorce" laws are to be proposed by Representative Lyle Boren.

Caricature

With the approach of the Christmas recess discussion of the films Act in Britain's House of Commons committee quieted down but wide attention was accorded a caricature in the left wing newspaper, The Week, accusing the Government of surrendering without a struggle to a "threat" said to have been received from Hollywood through diplomatic channels. Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, told Parliament that the British Government had received many communications from Washington concerning films but none referring specifically to separate quotas or a film commission and that no attempt of any kind had been made to impose pressure.

"Bicycling"

Distributors were informed this week by their Copyright Protection Bureau that exhibition copyright violations are gradually changing from the "hold-over" type to "bicycling," the main reason being an influx of new exhibitors in the business.

The Bureau's report, filed by Jack H. Levin, director, appears on page 45.

THEY SENT FOR HER

represents either ignorance or a purpose of confusion and evasion.

No religious issue was or is involved.

Indecency is indecency in anybody's religion, and it is still indecency even if one has no religion.

Endeavours to confuse issues of decency as the special causes of special creeds can not be made in entire good faith and understanding.

In the face of this, all too often, there is to be discovered a resentment and evasiveness toward even the lightest of disciplinary precautions, a hatred of codes. Yet the same persons who would resist a code for their art have no criticism of business practise in writing contracts, contracts of employment, performance, sales, which also are codes. And commonly, too, they invoke the power of the state and law to enforce their contract written codes.

The popular arts have a contract with a public which professes a common decency as its norm.

Increased Earnings

United Artists Theatre Circuit had an increase of $197,127.36 for the fiscal year ended August 31st, as compared to the previous 12 months. The income for the year was $384,973.02 while in the previous year it was $167,845.66. Dividends were declared by Trans-Lux Corporation, Consolidated Film Industries and Western Electric and United Artists, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Warner Brothers announced a Christmas bonus for their employees.

Legislation

Further action designed to outlaw the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in Nebraska was continued this week when the state attorney general petitioned for reports on the complete gross receipts of ASCAP since 1920. An anti-ASCAP measure similar to the Nebraska bill was introduced in Georgia. Tax legislation continued to be a matter of concern to exhibitors and "blue law" matters cropped up in several local situations.

Chance Games

Developments in chance games during the week were highlighted by the decision of the Missouri supreme court holding Bank Night illegal, thus reversing the decision of a Jefferson City circuit court judge. In Connecticut a superior court judge termed Bank Night a lottery, placing the game within the title "Offenses Against Public Policy."

Milstein Resigns

J. J. Milstein, general sales manager for Republic, resigned Wednesday after reported differences with Herbert J. Yates Mr. Milstein's contract, which had eight months to run, has been settled and he will leave the post Saturday. He returned last weekend from a three weeks trip to the Republic exchange centers.

Universal Realignment

Realignment of the home office personnel of Universal Pictures resulted this week in the appointment of John E. Joseph of Chicago as head of the advertising, publicity and exploitation department. Resignations of the week were those of Paul Gulick, publicity head; Joe Weil, in charge of exploitation; R. V. Anderson, newsreel business manager, and Edward Bonns, in charge of short subject sales.

Apologies in Full

A round robin of apologies topped with promises that it won't happen again followed violent and vociferous public protest in newspapers, by mail and in Congress over the Chase and Sanborn radio program in which Mae West played Eve in a Garden of Eden skit and was introduced following her performance to Charlie McCarthy. The Federal Communications Commission, under pressure of public indignation and of questions from Congressmen asked the National Broadcasting Company for an explanation and threats of further federal action were heard.

Bombing Pictures

Norman Alley, Universal newsreel cameraman, is on his way to New York from China with 5,000 feet of negative film which he shot during the bombing and sinking of the U. S. S. Panay on the Yangtze river. A special three reel feature of the entire footage will be released immediately after his arrival, Charles E. Ford, editor of the newsreel said. Mr. Alley was on board the ship when the Japanese attack began and obtained a complete pictorial record of the attack.

His escape from the sinking ship and the hardships and danger involved in saving his film are told on page 25.

The New Champion

A wooden dummy is the radio champion of 1937. Edgar Bergen's character, Charlie McCarthy, who recently was involved in a storm which struck following the appearance of a guest on his Sunday night coffee program, received a majority of the votes of the more than 400 radio editors who cast ballots in Motion Picture Daily's second annual popularity poll on behalf of Fame. Behind Charlie ranked Jack Benny, Bing Crosby, Fred Allen and Rudy Vallee in that order.

The lists of winners and the classifications of other personalities and programs are on page 16.

Romance in Costume

Robin Hood and his merry men of Sherwood Forest long have been the subject for story tellers and they have been brought to shadowy life on the motion picture screen at least once before but advance reports from eye witnesses have it that the version of the legend now being recorded by Warner Brothers will exceed in size and magnificence of detail any previous effort.

A pictorial preview of the production is on pages 14 and 15.

Opera Plan

Geraldine Farrar, native American opera singer, has advanced a suggestion for the development of a larger appreciation of the opera through a nationwide chain of opera houses. Miss Farrar made the suggestion while lecturing on "The Progress of Opera in the United States" before the Museum of the City of New York.

The venture, she said, could be financed in part by Government appropriation and partly by fees from radio audiences to whom the productions would be broadcast. In addition to spreading wider appreciation of opera, a plan such as she proposed, Miss Farrar believes, would give much broader opportunities to young native singers.

Color really is making progress on the screen. Here are Joe Louis and Edna Mae Harris in "The Spirit of Youth," above, a Globe production for release presently through Grand National. It is said to be a story of his life in which Mr. Louis plays himself, thus attaining verisimilitude and the ultimate in the economy of make-up.

This Week In Pictures

John E. Joseph, new advertising, publicity and exploitation director of Universal Pictures. Mr. Joseph's appointment was the first change in this position in 23 years.

Miss Margaret Bourke-White, photographer extraordinary, famed contributor to the gilded pages of Fortune and the penetrating camera narratives of Life, is recorded, left, deep in Hollywood with Michael Curtiz on the fringe of a Robin Hood set.

SNOW WHITE and the Seven Dwarfs who made their debut in multiplane color at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood, this week amid what the wires claimed was an "unprecedented" demand for tickets indulge here in a little extra-curricular activity engendered by the approach of Christmas and its patron saint. Doc, Happy, Dopey, Sneezy, Bashful and Snow White seem to have caught the spirit but Grumpy, at the extreme left, is smugly suspicious. A review of the screen capers of Mr. Walt Disney's latest characters in their first picture appears on page 36 and a story of the Hollywood opening is on page 21.

Maurice Silverstein, manager for MGM in Bogota, Columbia, S. A., receives a silver plaque, left, from Mr. J. deFrancisco, general manager of the Primer Circuito, in the name of exhibitors and newspaper men of Bogota who honored him thus on the occasion of his transfer to Caracas, Venezuela.

Just in case there's any doubt about it, Hollywood really cares. For instance, below are Jack L. Warner and Hal B. Wallis of the Warner Brothers studio, photographed in a subtle suggestion to the field workers concerning the Sears Sales Drive which runs from December 26th through April 16th, a period of 16 weeks—one of the longest drives on record. Incidentally the campaign is named for Gradwell Sears, the driver.

MAE WEST'S EVE BRINGS EDEN'S CURSE ON RADIO--APOLOGY, ALIBI, INDIGNATION AND INVESTIGATION

Hot coffee hour stirs nation to protest and Washington wants to know — just as new West picture nears release

"It looks bad, Bergen; yes, it looks bad."

—From the remarks of Charlie McCarthy in the Mae West Chase & Sanborn air program.

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The ether-waves from Mae West's December 12th broadcast burlesquing Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden have gone like snow at Yuma, but their impact on the American public, press and pulpit gathers growing thunder.

Already discernible from the direction of Washington are demands for a federal investigation of broadcasting, and for revocation of the license of the National Broadcasting station in Hollywood from which the program was sponsored by Chase & Sanborn Coffee.

Everybody has apologized for the Mae West air-show but Mae West.

Stanley Resor, president of J. Walter Thompson, the Chase and Sanborn advertising agents, apologized to Lenor R. Lohr, president of NBC, on behalf of his clients. Mr. Lohr apologized to Mr. Resor, on behalf of NBC. Chase & Sanborn then apologigized to both, when it took to the air, last Sunday, and, besides, presented Walt Disney's "Snow White and Seven Dwarfs."

The broadcasters were about tied with the Japanese on apologies for the week.

Don Gilman, for NBC on the coast, blamed it on Miss West's "inflection."

Admittedly flooded by individual and organized protests against Miss West's broadcast, the United States Government, through its Federal Communications Commission, formally and officially asked National Broadcasting for an explanation.

Frank R. McNinch, commissioner, informed NBC's Lenox Lohr that the protests charged that the skit was "profane," "obscene," "dirty," "sexy," "insulting to the American public."

And, almost at the same hour when Commissioner McNinch was writing down such adjectives, action was being taken in Washington to renew efforts for a federal investigation of radio.

Elsewhere at the Capital, Congressmen were not only demanding revocation of the license of the Hollywood NBC studio from which the program originated, but Commissioner McNinch himself was subjected to attack for his conduct of federal supervision over the air waves.

MAE WEST CHOSEN SANTAS' FAVORITE

Charter members of the Benevolent Order of Santa Clauses, holding their first annual convention in Brooklyn this week, selected Mae West and Shirley Temple as their favorite motion picture stars.

The two tied for first place, while Edward G. Robinson and Mickey Mouse were runners-up.

Calls Commission to Account

The script and the manner of Miss West's delivery brought a storm even before the program was at an end. First of the printed comment was an editorial by Martin Quigley in Motion Picture Daily, entitled: "Radio Begs Trouble." Mr. Quigley warned that "Persistence in a policy which admits of material of the character of Miss West's presentation is not merely exposing radio to the jeopardy of a straitjacket; it is asking for it."

Support came immediately from such persons representative of their fields as Walter Vincent, of Wilmer and Vincent, theatre circuit, who is chairman of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners committee assigned by exhibitors to study relations between radio and the box office; Ashton Stevens, motion picture and dramatic critic of the Chicago American; Lester Gottlieb, of Mutual Broadcasting System; Manuel Ruderman, vice president of Radio and Film Methods Corporation, and others, all of whom wrote letters to Mr. Quigley commending his stand.

Remarking that "Miss West had her day in court, her day in the film and now her night on the air," the New York Sun predicted that, "It is unlikely there will be any further bidding for her services as a radio personage."

The Sun expressed "amazement" that was typical of other newspapers. "If it were not so generally known that radio programs must pass through hours of rehearsals before going on the air, there might be a reason for the Mae West episode. On any other day of the week," continued the New York newspaper, "the skit would have justified the severest criticism from the standpoint of good taste, but on Sunday such a broadcast represents the all-time low in radio. The most charitable explanation," the Sun concluded, "is that the producers were mesmerized by the reputed glamor of the entertainer."

Congressional attacks were led by William P. Connery, Jr., Democrat of Massachusetts, who promised a bill for a federal investigation of radio at the Congressional session starting in January. He demanded of Commissioner McNinch that the Federal Radio Commission revoke the license of the radio station from which the Adam and Eve broadcast originated.

Calling the program "indecent," Congressman Connery charged, in a letter to Commissioner McNinch, that the FCC was "derelict in enforcing the communications act," adding that he had received a "volume of complaints" against the program, which, he said, "violated the sensibilities of even those who are familiar with the burlesquing of historical events."

"It is time," he wrote to Mr. McNinch, "your commission either functioned in the interest of the American people, or admitted your incompetence and permitted the President to place men on the commission who will function in the interest of the American people, rather than satellites acting for the additional enrichment of a private few."

"Is it true," asked the Congressman, "that the president (Lenox R. Lohr) of the National Broadcasting Company personally authorized broadcast of this program?"

Donald L. O'Toole, Democrat, of New York, joined in the demand for a federal radio investigation. He charged that the quality of radio programs had "lowered recently," and admitted he had filed a formal complaint with the FCC on the Mae West program.

"If a company has not sufficient sense not to allow such a program, then censorship must be exercised," the Congressman said.

Francis L. Burt, MOTION PICTURE HERALD correspondent in Washington, said last Saturday that "the violent unfavorable reaction to the Mae West broadcast has served to climax a growing dissatisfaction with the failure of Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, to do the 'cleanup' job for which he was transferred (by President Roosevelt) from the Federal Power Commission."

Chairman Criticized

Commissioner McNinch, said Mr. Burt, has "done nothing thus far other than to restate some of the old orders of the FCC," and his actions have only "served to add supporters to the Congressional resolutions which are seeking an investigation of the radio situation."

"Protests against the ill-advised Mae West program began to flow into the Federal Communications Commission almost with its conclusion," continued Mr. Burt. "Quite serious is the determined resentment of the public, which is certain now to be thrown behind the resolutions providing for an investigation not only of broadcasting, but also of the FCC.

"Administration leaders in Congress who have been trying to stave off an investigation of the Communications Commission were admittedly disturbed this week over the Mae West situation, which, it was pointed out, provides excellent ammunition for supporters of a general radio probe."

At the headquarters of the FCC in Washington, officials were reluctant to discuss the Mae West matter, although they pointed out that the program could be made the basis for inquiry when the license of the key station of the circuit came up for renewal. (The NBC studio in Hollywood is admittedly its main link between Hollywood talent and its national systems, and that source of talent apparently is figuring larger in the building of broadcasting programs).

"In Washington, generally, it is believed that the furore over the Mae West incident has pushed the FCC into a corner," according to Mr. Burt, "and the Commission now must either make an investigation of this particular broadcast, on its own initiative, or else be pushed into a general probe of the entire radio situation by Congress."

The first anti-West step taken by the FCC was Commissioner McNinch's official instructions to Mr. Lohr, NBC president, to furnish all details. He asked Mr. Lohr to explain the why and whereof, demanding that NBC supply a copy and exact transcription of the script, a copy of the contract between NBC and its Chase and Sanborn clients, and the names and locations of stations that carried the program.

Admitting that the FCC had received "many letters protesting the sketch," Commissioner McNinch added in his letter to Mr. Lohr:

"There is marked uniformity of thought in the letters of protest. These letters bear no evidence of having been written by cranks or prudes, but by responsible and intelligent citizens.

"Section 326 of the Federal Communications Act of 1934 provides that no persons shall utter any obscene, indecent, or profane language by means of radio communications. This Commission is charged by law with the enforcement of that provision.

"If those who have protested this broadcast are substantially correct, I have no hesitancy in saying that the licensees of the station over which it was broadcast have been derelict in the discharge of their duty. However, the Commission will reserve its judgment until all the facts are before it."

Mr. Lohr's office at NBC headquarters in Rockefeller Center, New York, admitted on Monday that the letter had been received from Commissioner McNinch, but was silent on a reply, if any.

The National Legion of Decency sent a protest over "the low moral character of the material offered.

MAYER PLANS PARTY FOR "ROSALIE" CAST

Developments in the field of radio as related to motion pictures this week included:

Plans of Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to play host at an informal radio "Christmas party" for the cast of the picture "Rosalie," Thursday night.

Mary Pickford changed places with Louella Parsons, and commented on Miss Parson's picture "Hollywood Hotel" during the "Hollywood Hotel" broadcast Monday night.

MGM extended for 13 weeks the contracts of George Jessel, advisor and writer for "Good News of 1938," Ed Gardner, producer of radio programs, and Sam Moore and Morton Harris, writers.

Warner Brothers announced plans for inaugurating a semi-weekly gossip news and feature service for 160 radio stations. The plan goes into operation January 1st.

The Legion's expression was its first of concern over a radio program, efforts having heretofore been confined to the objectionable in films.

The Legion's letter, signed by Mary Harden Looram, asserted that its efforts to discourage the use of just such material in motion pictures "are seriously embarrassed by your radio broadcast."

The press of the country was called upon to aid in the fight in a letter addressed to editors by the Reverend Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the Department of Religion of the Catholic University of America. Dr. Sheehy requested the press to "bring to the attention of the managers of the broadcast the gravity of their offense" against moral standards.

He called the sketch "the most indecent, scurrilous and religiously irreverent program that it has ever been my misfortune to hear."

"Under the direction of a committee of Bishops," he pointed out, "the Legion of Decency has done much to raise the moral standards of the movies. He suggested that "we petition to this organization to extend its efforts in the field of radio."

In this connection, a statement by the National Catholic Welfare Conference on the West broadcast, said: "The annual meeting of the Bishops, held in Washington last month, adopted a resolution condemning indecency in the amusement world."

Protests were lodged with both the National Broadcasting Company and the Federal Communications Commission by the National Council of Catholic Men, the National Counncil of Catholic Women, the Brooklyn Tablet and National Catholic Welfare Council, among others.

Telegrams, telephone calls and letters received at NBC headquarters in protest against the broadcast, from organizations and individuals, resulted, firstly, in the sending of the following letter to Mr. Lohr from the J. Walter Thompson Company, advertising agents for Standard Brands and its Chase and Sanborn coffee subsidiary:

"MR. LENOX R. LOHR,
President,
National Broadcasting Company:

"On behalf of our client, Chase & Sanborn, we wish to express our deepest regret that the program broadcast Sunday night, December 12th, gave offense to anyone. Obviously, the whole purpose of these broadcasts is to afford wholesome entertainment. These programs, over a period of eight years, are evidence of this. The script of this feature of the broadcast was our responsibility. It was a mistake, and we can assure the public at large that the same mistake will not be made again.

Sincerely yours,
J. Walter Thompson Co.,
Stanley Resor,
President."

Mr. Lohr, for NBC, replied:

"MR. STANLEY RESOR,
President,
J. Walter Thompson Company:

"We appreciate your expression of concern about the broadcast of December 12th, against which criticism has been directed. We share with you the regret you express as we share also the responsibility in this incident.

"Our interests are entirely mutual in striving to give to the American public the type of wholesome entertainment which it wants, and which it has every right to expect. The National Broadcasting Company can be counted upon to intensify its efforts to this end.

Sincerely yours,
Lenox R. Lohr,
President,
National Broadcasting Co."

J. Walter Thompson Company went beyond its written apology when, last Sunday, it broadcast a second apology, direct to the public, in the regular Chase and Sanborn broadcast. Ronald Drake, regular announcer for the program, read the following:

"It has been brought to the attention of the sponsors of this program that a skit on it last Sunday offended the religious sensibilities of some of our listeners. Our hope is to make each and every hour spent with us both entertaining and edifying. We pledge ourselves to that purpose and sin-

ROMANCE IS

A HERALD PICTORIAL PREVIEW

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

THE legend of Robin Hood—there is a Robin Hood in every language and literature—has charmed hundreds of millions for centuries. The legend is so highly regarded as motion picture material that, in various guises, it has been adapted as the premise of countless modernly conceived productions.

Successful in their cinematic interpretations of the legends of "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "The Prince and the Pauper," Warner Brothers, more than a year ago, became interested in the legend of Robin Hood, picturesque hero of English historical fiction, as a subject of screen endeavor. To writers Norman Reilly Raine and Seton I. Miller was assigned the task of examining the thousands of tales which date back to the ballads of the 12th and 13th Century minstrels and contrive a screenplay that would preserve all the qualities which have made the legend of Robin Hood a world favorite.

Their job completed, announcement came that Robin Hood would be produced in natural color. The $1,600,000 production budget which was originally allotted has since been considerably expanded. William Keighley, whose achievements include "The Prince and the Pauper," "God's Country and the Woman" and many other successful pictures was named to direct. Almost automatically Errol Flynn, who leaped to fame in "Captain Blood," was selected to be the dashing, lovable, formidable fighting "Robin Hood" and Olivia de Havilland to be the charming "Maid Miriam." Basil Rathbone will be seen as the villainous "Sir Guy of Gisbourne"; Claude Rains as "Prince John"; Eugene Pallette as the doughty "Friar Tuck"; Alan Hale (repeating the role he created 15 years ago) as mighty "Little John"; Melville Cooper as "High Sheriff of Nottingham"; Ian Hunter as "King Richard"; Patric Knowles as "Will Scarlett"; Montague Love as "Bishop of Black Canon"; Herbert Mundin as "Much" and Robert Warwick as "Sir Geoffrey."

Given a ninety-day shooting schedule the actual making of the story of the Saxon hero and his Merry Men of Sherwood Forest who defeated the plot of the invading Normans to seize England's throne from King Richard, has been, and for weeks to come, will continue to be a tremendous endeavor. The scopes of the sets built on the lot which authentically reproduce interiors and exteriors of Nottingham Castle and environs are the largest and most expensive which the studio ever constructed. The problem of costuming the principals and the hundreds of extras as well as that of furnishing more than 25,000 props—bows and arrows, quarter staffs, lances, broadswords, battle axes, war clubs, chain mail armor and other items of knightly gear and accoutrements taxed the facilities of the studio's mechanical departments.

When illness forced Mr. Keighley to relinquish direction at a time when the film was about one-third complete, Michael Curtiz, maker of "The Charge of the Light Brigade" and "Captain Blood," assumed the responsibility of finishing the picture.

The picture will not be finished until well after the first of the new year. Thereafter will follow weeks devoted to cutting, editing, scoring and the myriad other phases to which all big pictures must necessarily be subjected before it is ready for public inspection. Consequently Warner Brothers have been unable to determine a release date. However, it may be looked for shortly after Easter Sunday of 1938.

MAE WEST TAKES A HOLIDAY TOO

cerely regret any unintended offense that may have been given."

This is the first time of record that a radio advertising sponsor assumed responsibility for having offended listeners, and made public acknowledgement.

Last Saturday night, at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, California, Emanuel Cohen, her producer, and Paramount Pictures, distributor, previewed Miss West's new picture "Everyday's a Holiday." The star herself was diligently devoting herself to taking a holiday in an unannounced but inaccessible place.

But, just before her "holiday," the Motion Picture Daily reported that Miss West, queried on the subject of her Chase and Sanborn broadcast, replied she had questioned the propriety of the subject matter, but had been assured by the agency controlling the account (J. Walter Thompson) that it would meet with approval.

Direct quotes from Miss West were not forthcoming, but the United Press reported from Hollywood:

"Officials at Mae West's studio said that the film actress objected to the script in her broadcast with the wooden dummy, Charlie McCarthy.

" 'Miss West wanted to play a part from her latest picture,' the studio spokesman said, 'but the producers of the air-show overruled her. They insisted on an 'Adam and Eve' skit. Miss West objected on the ground that anything connected with Adam and Eve is too closely associated with religion to be made into a comedy.'

"Writers of the skit declared it was 'okay', but that the famous Westonian 'inflections' may have caused unlooked for meanings to filter over the airways."

Both Paramount and Mr. Cohen's Major Studios denied authorship of the United Press statements reputedly issued by a "spokesman" for one or the other, explaining that Mae West desired to broadcast scenes from her new picture and was overruled by the agency.

Hollywood generally manifested eagerness to pretend that the whole thing never happened.

Both Paramount and Major Pictures continued in their original declaration that they had nothing whatever to do with any part of the Mae West radio appearance.

Miss West received between $5,000 and $10,000 for doing "Eve," as variously estimated by Hollywood.

Cooper With Golden State

Roy Cooper, formerly general manager of John Danz's Sterling Chain circuit, Seattle, Wash., has joined Golden State Amusement Company as San Francisco division manager with 18 theatres under his supervision.

J. Kenfield Morley has been appointed vice-president and general manager of the Advitagraph Corporation.

Charlie McCarthy Unseats Benny as Radio Champion

Edgar Bergen's dummy, Charlie McCarthy, is the radio champion of 1937, according to a majority of the more than 400 radio editors who were consulted in determining the results of Motion Picture Daily's second annual radio popularity poll.

The ventriloquist's dummy took first place from Jack Benny, winner of the championship in last year's poll.

Those in the "open champions" list are Charlie McCarthy, Jack Benny, Bing Crosby, Fred Allen, Rudy Vallee, Kate Smith, Don Ameche, Nelson Eddy, Eddie Cantor, Andre Kostelanetz, Fibber McGee & Molly, Deanna Durbin, Lanny Ross, Bob Burns, Walter O'Keefe, Major Bowes, Jeanette MacDonald, Judy Garland, Herbert Marshall, Leopold Stokowski, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Tommy Riggs, Judy Canova, Arturo Toscanini, Kirsten Flagstad, Lucrezia Bori, Lawrence Tibbett, Tyrone Power, Gertrude Niesen, Charles Winninger.

Bing Crosby and Kenny Baker were rated in that order as the best liked popular vocalists and in the feminine division Frances Langford and Kate Smith took first and second positions.

In the classical field the leaders were Nelson Eddy and John Charles Thomas and Lily Pons and Jeanette MacDonald.

Gracie Allen and Beatrice Lillie were the editors' first and second choice among comediennes, while they named Burns & Allen and Fibber McGee and Molly as the leading comedy teams. Among the various comedy series, Jack Benny's Jello-o program was adjudged the leader and Amos 'n' Andy took second place with their Pepsodent program.

Playwright Awards Seen Early in 1938

The first fellowship awards under the John Golden $5,000 fund for the encouragement of new stage playwrights will be made early in 1938, the Authors League of America said Saturday in New York.

The awards resulted from Sidney Howard's suggestion at the first convention of the American Theatre Council in New York last summer to save the theatre from Hollywood raids by developing new sources of stage writers and material. The awards will be made by a committee consisting of Mr. Howard, Burns Mantle, George S. Kaufman, Mr. Golden and Frank Crowninshield.

Trade Board Holds Election

Leo Abrams, president; Harry Hummel, first vice-president; Edward Bell, second vice-president, and Jack Bowen, treasurer, were reelected this week at the annual election of the New York Film Board of Trade. Louis Nizer also continues as executive secretary. Morris Epstein succeeds Harry Decker as secretary. Robert Fannon replaces Mr. Epstein as sergeant-at-arms.

Warner Brothers Reelect Officers

Harry M. Warner, president, and all other officers of Warner Brothers and Stanley Company of America, were reelected at an organization meeting of the board of directors at the home office in New York Tuesday.

Other officers are Jack L. and Albert Warner, Sam E. Morris and Herman Starr, vice-presidents; Albert Warner, treasurer; Samuel Carlisle, W. Stewart McDonald, and Paul A. Chase, assistant treasurers; Robert W. Perkins, secretary and general counsel; Harold S. Bareford and E. K. Hessberg, assistant secretaries, and Mr. Carlisle, comptroller.

Zasu Pitts Assessed

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has asked the Board of Tax Appeals to affirm income tax deficiency assessments of $15,396 against Zasu Pitts, for 1932 and 1933. Wallace Beery has petitioned the board for redetermination of an $11,241 tax deficiency assessed against him by the bureau on his 1934 income.

CAPITAL TAKES UP NEW FILM LOANS, TAXES, THEATRE 'DIVORCE', MAE WEST

Various U. S. Government Branches Take Up Assortment of Business Affecting Films; Legislative and Enforcement

Legislative and enforcement branches of the United States Government at Washington moved this week on an assortment of matters pertinent to the conduct of the motion picture business, directly and otherwise.

Second Opportunity for Theatre Modernization Loans

Exhibitors throughout the country who failed to take advantage of the modernization-loan program of the Federal Housing Administration in 1935 may be given another opportunity to secure Government-insured loans under the new housing legislation, introduced to carry into effect the recommendations made by President Roosevelt in his message of November 29th.

Just how extensive the new modernization program will be depends entirely upon provisions developed by the Senate and House banking committees, but as introduced the bill contemplates loans up to the amount of $10,000 for additions to structures or installation of immovable equipment, to be secured in the same way and upon the same terms as during the original program, that is, the money would be secured from banks on a discount basis of $5 per $100, which would cover interest and insurance and other charges.

Encouraged by the success of the original program, of which hundreds of theatre owners took advantage, rebuilding theatres and buying new equipment, officials of the Federal Housing Administration are said to believe that a new similar program would meet a well defined need. It is pointed out that not only would it make needed funds available to many exhibitors and others who did not take advantage of the original opportunity but that, since the modernization program ended, large numbers of business men have found it desirable to expand their plants but have been unable to do so because of the difficulty of getting funds.

Primarily, it was explained, the new plan would be of benefit chiefly to the so-called small business men, in which class are the majority of independent exhibitors. The larger businesses usually either have the funds or ways of raising them or need more than can be secured under the Government program.

It is the smaller businesses, usually retail, that have the most difficulty of financing improvements the FHA finds. Ordinarily, they need but comparatively small sums, yet often of a size which necessitates a commercial loan against which they cannot offer satisfactory collateral.

Divorcement Bill Studied for Congress

Dismemberment of the motion picture industry is provided for in legislation now being studied by Representative Lyle H. Boren, of Oklahoma, with a view to introduction early in the coming regular session of Congress.

Explaining that "the exhibitors of my district and of Oklahoma generally are operating under severe handicaps due to the theatres owned by the producers," Congressman Boren said this week that his bill not only would divorce exhibition from other branches of the industry but also would separate production from distribution.

It was stressed that the measure is still in the tentative stage, and that it may not be introduced. As now written, however, it would require each of the three branches of the industry to be operated separately without any connection, direct or indirect.

A number of conferences have been held by the congressman with exhibitors interested in the matter. Development of legislation was undertaken, it was said, following receipt of numerous complaints from Oklahoma exhibitors that circuit theatre competition was making it difficult for independents to operate.

If it is decided to go ahead with the measure, it will be introduced early in the coming session and committee hearings will be demanded, it was said.

THE FILM WEEK IN WASHINGTON

The Federal Housing Administration decided on plans for new housing loans, to be pushed in the new Congress, next month, after this week's Senate passage of the Housing Bill, which will enable theatre owners, among others, to secure Government loans for modernization of theatres and equipment.

Bureau of Internal Revenue requirements compelling exhibitors to retain ticket stubs on taxable admissions were waived.

The Federal Communications Commission, as official investigator, entered the nationwide protestation against Mae West's December 12th burlesque broadcast of Adam and Eve on the NBC networks for Chase & Sanborn Coffee. Representatives Connery and Walsh demanded revocation of NBC station license. (See page 12.)

The Federal Trade Commission issued new trade practice rules for the music publishing industry, and set a hearing for January 4th, arousing the interest of the motion picture industry through its extensive use of music and widespread music publishing holdings.

The United States Senate will receive new legislation designed to provide for the federal licensing of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce, including film distributors.

United States Treasury Department waived the compulsory filing of monthly returns by employers, including those in the motion picture business, on Social Security taxes.

Exhibitors' Bookkeeping Lightened in Tax Reporting

Exhibitors operating on a straight box-office admission policy, selling tickets through mechanical recording devices and keeping appropriate records are to be relieved of the necessity of retaining ticket stubs for a period of not less than three months, as heretofore required under Article 29 of Regulations 43. A ruling to that effect was issued this week by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Bureau officials estimated that a large proportion of motion picture theatres would be able to avail themselves of the privilege of adopting the system set out by the ruling.

Authority to discontinue retaining ticket stubs was asked of the Bureau by an unnamed exhibitor, who explained he sells no tickets covering reserved seats or boxes, sells none to ticket brokers or speculators, or for an amount in excess of the regular established price, sells only through a mechanical recording device and keeps hourly records showing the serial numbers of the tickets sold each day and the register numbers which record each sale made during the day.

In its opinions, the Bureau referred to Article 29 of the regulations, requiring the retention of ticket stubs, and also to Article 44, outlining the records to be kept, and said:

"It is held that where a motion picture theatre (1) does not sell reserved seat tickets to cover particular seats or boxes, (2) does not sell tickets to ticket brokers or speculators, (3) does not sell any tickets for an amount in excess of the regular established box office prices, (4) does not sell tickets otherwise than through a mechanical ticket sales recording device which records accurately every ticket sold and its selling price, and (5) makes and keeps for inspection by revenue officers, as well as for other purposes, hourly records of all transactions made through the mechanical device or otherwise, such records being transcribed from an accurate mechanical system of recording which is the equivalent of an individual count of ticket stubs, there is in effect compliance with the above-quoted provisions of the regulations and it will not be necessary for such theatre to retain the ticket stubs unless instructed to do so for certain periods by duly authorized representatives of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

"If at any time such motion picture theatre sells any reserved seat tickets, or sells tickets to ticket brokers or speculators, or sells tickets for an amount in excess of the regular established box office prices, such theatre must comply with all of the provisions of article 29 of Regulations 43 (1932), as amended by Treasury Decision 4749, including the retaining of all ticket stubs for a period of not less than three months."

Films Involved in New Music Publishing Practices

New trade practice rules for the music publishing industry, applying the provisions of the Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination act more directly than was done in the rules proposed by the Music Publishers Protective Association, were made public this week by the

Federal Trade Commission. The motion picture industry is directly concerned, through its extensive use of music and its widespread music publishing holdings.

The Commission announced that a public hearing would be held on the rules at its offices in Washington, January 4th.

In its original proposals, on which a hearing was held October 4th, last, the Publishers' Association provided for a ban on "song-plugging" and acceptance by the music industry of the provisions of the Robinson-Patman Act.

The proposed new rules, to which the Commission has given tentative approval, retain the ban on "plugging," but instead of adopting the Robinson-Patman act in toto, include rules prohibiting the making of exclusive lease or sales agreements and barring discriminatory rebates, refunds, discounts, credits and other price differentials, in violation of the Clayton Act as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act.

In view of the fact that the added rules are projections of existing law to the music publishing industry, it is expected that the January 4th hearing will be confined largely to consideration of song-plugging, which was the sole subject of discussion when the music industry met with the Commission last October.

At that time it was explained by John G. Paine, executive chairman of the MPPA board, that the association had found it impossible to eliminate paid plugging by agreement and therefore appealed to the Federal Government to outlaw the practice, having in mind the success of the code adopted under the NRA which, it was said, "was not once wilfully violated during its life."

Mr. Paine pointed out that the music industry is of vital importance to the motion picture and radio industries, and that they could not exist without it. Because of this, certain publishers have attempted to use the radio to popularize their production by plugging, a practice, however, to which many of the best known orchestra leaders and performers have never lent themselves.

The three proposed rules, it was said at the Commission's office, have been given tentative approval by the commission. The association's proposed rule applying to Robinson-Patman anti-price discrimination act to the industry, was rejected, apparently because it is a statute, compliance with which is mandatory, and needs no acceptance by any industry. The proposed price discrimination provisions cover matters involved in the Robinson-Patman Act, but are so worded as to apply directly to the music publishing industry.

The new code would make it an unfair trade practice for any member of the industry engaged in interstate commerce to give or offer to give anything to any orchestra or band leader, performer, dancer, singer or musician for using the publisher's works without the knowledge and consent of the employer of such person or where plugging would tend to restrict competition, as provided for in the original proposals of the association.

Borah and O'Mahoney Back Federal Licensing

New legislation designed to provide for the Federal licensing of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce, which would apply to film distributors, among others, will be pressed at the coming regular session of Congress, it was disclosed this week by Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Dem., Wyo.) and William E. Borah (Rep., Idaho), authors of the measure.

Both Senators have previously introduced individual bills dealing with the subject of Federal corporate licensing, but in their latest move have joined forces in a measure which, they said, "attempts to reduce to simple terms in a Federal statute the principle that since the Constitution gives the Government power to regulate commerce among states, and since this commerce is now chiefly carried on by artificial agencies called corporations, powers, functions and duties of these agencies should be prescribed by the Federal Government."

Taking cognizance of the increasing opposition to expansion of Federal control over business, the new measure is far less drastic than any previously proposed and, in particular, gives no discretionary authority to any Federal agency to impose conditions upon business.

At the same time, provision is made to give business a voice in the drafting of licensing legislation, the bill directing the Federal Trade Commission to call a national industrial conference within 90 days after enactment of the measure, at which recommendations to Congress would be drafted as well as a "thoroughgoing" Federal incorporation law.

Primarily, it was explained by Senator O'Mahoney, the bill is directed at four objectives, as follows:

1. Protect the investing public by making it impossible for any corporation hereafter to indulge in the principal practices by which the investor has been exploited.
2. Improve labor standards and benefit labor by prohibiting child labor and discrimination against women, and by guaranteeing the right of collective bargaining.
3. Prevent combinations in restraint of trade and conspiracies to monopolize trade before the offenses were committed, instead of ineffectively seeking to punish such offenses after they have been committed.
4. Prevent manipulation of prices to the disadvantage of the consuming public.

As planned by the two Senators, the law would be self-enforcing and would make practically impossible violation of the anti-trust laws.

U. S. Simplifies Method Of Filing Tax Returns

After January 1, 1938, monthly tax returns under Title VIII of the Social Security Act will no longer be required of film and all other employers, but instead tax returns under this Title are to be made and paid quarterly.

A Treasury decision signed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and approved by the Secretary authorizing this change provides also that information returns listing employees to whom wages have been paid and the amount paid to them are to be combined in one form with the tax returns.

Prior regulations required that these information returns be made quarterly, but exceptions were made for the calendar year 1937, requiring returns in half-yearly instead of quarterly periods. Information returns were made for the six-months' period which ended June 30th and similar information returns under Form SS-2 must be made for the six-months' period which will end December 31st of this year. Monthly tax returns under Form SS-1 must also be made for each of the months of the present calendar year.

After January 1, 1938, however, each film and other employer liable for the payment of taxes under Title VIII will be required to make only a single return on Form SS-1a, in place of the monthly tax return and the quarterly information return now required by the regulations.

Returns, together with tax payments, must be made to collectors of Internal Revenue in the month of April for the quarter ending March 31, 1938, in July for the quarter ending June 30th, in October for the quarter ending September 30th and in January, 1939, for the quarter ending December 31, 1938.

Child Player Arguments Averted by House Vote

Climaxing five days of heated and acrimonious debate, the House of Representatives last week-end returned the wages-and-hours bill to the House Labor Committee by a vote of 216 to 198, practically killing all chances of the Administration to enact the measure into law at this time.

For two days, the House had been in an uproar over the bill, which was so greatly amended at the close of the debate few members had any real knowledge of just what is provided.

Child stars of the screen were brought into the picture during the discussion, following adoption of an amendment which would so greatly restrict the authority of the chief of the Children's Bureau to issue work certificates as to make impossible the employment of any child under 14, in Hollywood or elsewhere.

Both Representatives Dockweiler and Kramer (Dems., Cal.) immediately sought to secure a change which would permit the continued use of children by the studios, the latter winning out with an amendment to that effect which was accepted by the House without demur.

As it stood upon recommittal, the bill provided for an administrator in the Department of Labor, with authority to appoint employer-employee committees for each industry to recommend the maximum working week and minimum hourly wage; a 40-hour average week and an average minimum wage of 40 cents an hour, with longer weeks and lower wages possible if an industry was threatened with sudden changes in working conditions; and protection for collective bargaining agreements now in force.

While there was no direct discussion of the effect of the measure upon the motion picture industry, it was generally conceded that the product of the studios entered into and affected interstate commerce and that, therefore, the producers would come under the bill. It was not believed that there would be any changes in practices necessary, though, since on the whole the standards of the industry are above those proposed in the legislation.

BUILD-UP FOR 'SNOW WHITE' OPENING DWARFS HOLLYWOOD PREDECESSORS

Premiere of New Entertainment Form Follows Campaign Begun Last Spring for Disney's First Feature Length Cartoon

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
in Hollywood

Beneath a star spangled sky while a multitude looked on and millions listened, the flower of Hollywood genius and glamour foregathered at the Carthay Circle theatre Tuesday night to celebrate the most extraordinary world premiere in cinema history, the baptism of Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

By 4 o'clock of this sunkissed California afternoon the loyal peasantry had occupied the spacious bleachers, flanking the forecourt and dug in, lunch in lap, to await the arrival of the mortal mighty intent upon obeisance to a performance by no mortal players of Grimm's immortal fairy tale. Never in the memory of the oldest resident had a ceremony in kind attracted a comparable measure of interest and never had credentials of admission been assessed at equivalent value.

For this was no mere premiere of a picture, but a premiere of an entertainment form, a crucial test of a vital new commodity introduced into a close drawn and cruelly competitive commerce.

First Feature Length Cartoon

This was, the world well knew, the first feature length picture in the cartoon medium. If it turned out to be less than wonderful it would be the last. If it proved the daring Disney an even greater artist than an admiring world had crowned him, a genius possessed of power to do with pen, paint and perseverance a thing all too rarely done with men, women and money, it would open the door of expectation upon vast and various vistas. No high hat in Hollywood saw fit to high hat this adventure.

It is to be inferred from the review of the picture (on page 36) that the work does in sooth establish Mr. Disney as that kind of a genius. But the earnest gentlemen who make a profession and something of an art of telling the world about Disney and RKO-Radio product are not fellows accustomed to giving the world its own time about beating a path to any mouse trap maker's door and they both toiled and spun a-plenty in behalf of this objectively stimulating merchandise. If anybody in North America didn't know what was going on in Hollywood on Tuesday night it was his own fault and he had to work at it.

Starting last spring and scheduling his publication dates with precision, Mr. Disney's Gregory Dickson placed in the hands, eyes and minds of magazine readers more indelible information about "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" than has ever been conveyed gratis by magazine publishers for any picture for any reason. This phase of the campaign is covered in detail in the "Hollywood Scene" page of this issue (page 29). The reader coverage of the combined circulations computed on the usual basis of five to one equals, roughly, more people than there are, a figure somewhere in the neighborhood of infinity and unquestionably an all time high.

Starting at about the same time, radio producers began to display interest in the Disney operations, whether or not because all the columnists had commenced to paragraph the proceedings, but it was not until last week that programs were selected to purvey the publicity and the selection was consequently competent. On Sunday the top ranking Charlie McCarthy of the recently conspicuous Chase and Sanborn program entertained the Seven Dwarfs as charmingly as he had entertained Mae West alarmingly the preceding Sabbath.

This seems especially appropriate in that Charlie-the-dummy is almost as completely synthetic as Mickey Mouse, the Dwarfs and all the Disney creations.

On Tuesday the distinguished Cecil B. DeMille of bathtub tradition entertained the distinguished Mr. Disney on his spotlessly laundered Lux program, and on Tuesday evening the Packard show gave the production a Packard ride. About simultaneously the songs sung in the picture began popping out of loudspeakers from Saskatchewan to Sustaining, and this isn't the place or tense in which to list other broadcasts to come.

Then the Opening

In circumstances like these it would have been possible no doubt to open the picture at the Carthay Circle without further ado, but Howard Benedict's energetic dispensers of favorable tidings didn't feel that way about it. It's a little hard to ascertain positively on a night like Tuesday just where, if anywhere, the line of demarcation between producer and distributor exploitation is properly to be drawn, but the joint, or joined, or in any case unified, campaign conducted for the Carthay Circle opening set somebody back $27,000. You can buy "a lot of nearly anything for that much money, even in Hollywood."

Newspaper advertising, characteristically arresting Disney material, took on dominating size and shape during the week.

A thousand 24-sheets in the cool blue and silver mode of the trade announcement in a recent edition of this periodical, informed that portion of the populace which conceivably is without benefit of radio or newspaper, and 5,000 one-sheet snipes punned the title with effective announcement that the community is to have a Snow White Christmas.

Bleachers for 4,000

Reproductions of scenes, settings and characters from the picture were reproduced in lifelike dimensions and staged for permanent display adown the parquet, if that's the word for it, that invites motorists on speeding Wilshire Boulevard two blocks to the theatre entrance. Bleachers to accommodate 4,000 were set up, smallish folk wearing prop dwarf heads copied from the seven in the film were commissioned to caper about the premises in seemly pursuits, and the lovely ladies of the usherial corps were outfitted with copies of the lovely Snow White's classic garment.

Into this scene came in gleaming cavalcade the cream of cinema notability, and out of this setting was pumped a complete report of the pomp and circumstances over the NBC blue network coast to coast, the pump priming being attended to by those erudite orators of the air, Don Wilson and Buddy Twiss. No hit or miss pickup affair, this broadcast, but a thoughtfully proportioned script including orchestral presentation of music from the film, songs by the folk who sang them for the characters which seem to, and intervals for remarks by the more remarkable guests alighting from their carriages.

Among those who managed to get a few words into the nationwide microphone edgewise were such mixed company as sedate George Arliss and Bazooka Bob Burns, revered Jesse Lasky and chipper Charles Chaplin, himself a comedian of parts and trouper enough to trip down to the curb and receive Mickie and Minnie Mouse for the photographers. Amos 'n' Andy did a bit, Jimmy Starr and Ed Sullivan spoke up for the columnist contingent, Leo Spitz led off with an appropriate and prophetic observation about the picture being a thing of beauty and joy forever, and a frightened young woman flown out from Carolina with the South in her mouth allowed as how she was right pleased to be here.

Among those present were—but no, they'll tell you themselves.

Pertinent Statistics on Disney's First Feature

Statistics on Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," as supplied by by RKO, follow:

It took three years to make at a cost of $1,500,000.

The Production is composed of more than 250,000 drawings, selected from about 1,000,000 sketches, backgrounds and animated figures.

A multiplane camera, devised by Mr. Disney at a cost of $75,000, provides the illusion of the third-dimension.

A musical background was provided by an orchestra of 80 musicians, and eight songs, written by Frank Churchill and Larry Morey are used.

As many as 570 artists worked on the production. The artists included 32 animators, 102 assistants, 167 "in-betweeners" (younger students of animation who are capable of filling in the inconsequential bits of action), 20 lay-out artists, 25 artists doing water color backgrounds, 65 effects animators, and 158 young women adept at inking and painting the Disney figures on transparent celluloid sheets.

KANSAS MERCHANTS ASK STATE AID IN OBTAINING SHORTER CLEARANCE

Governor Petitioned After MPPDA Declines to Intervene; Agreement Reached on Form of Appeal from Dallas Decision

Informed that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America is powerless to aid them, the business men of Kansas City, Kan., this week appealed to Walter A. Huxon, governor, for governmental assistance in their fight to obtain a reduction in the present clearance of 28 days between first run theatres in Kansas City, Mo., and their city.

The unusual situation of merchants taking up the cudgels for exhibitors in a fair trade practice controversy, arose from the fact that the Kansas business men believe their business is affected unfavorably by residents of their city traveling to the neighboring Missouri city to see motion pictures.

The appeal to the governor was made by Ray T. Willette, Chamber of Commerce manager, who declared: "There appears little else for us to do but resort to an appeal to governmental authorities."

Other trade practice developments during the week included the reaching of an agreement in Dallas on the form of a defendant distributors' appeal in the Government's anti-trust suit; the reactions of motion picture attorneys and exhibitors to the recent Philadelphia decision of the circuit court of appeals, granting Paramount a permanent injunction restraining exhibitors from conducting a "buyers' strike"; the adjournment of deposition taking in the Morse and Rothenberg anti-trust suit against distributors.

The suit of Gary Theatre Company, Indiana, against Paramount was dismissed this week on application of the plaintiff.

The Kansas City businessmen's fight won the support of the local newspaper, the Kansan, which in a recent comment on the situation pointed out that although Mr. Willette received word from the MPPDA early in the fall that it did not have authority to intervene, "Mr. Willette had been given reason to believe that a kindly word from the Hays office would have induced motion picture producers and distributors to reconsider their discriminatory treatment of Kansas City, Kan."

After receipt of a reply to his first letter to the MPPDA, Mr. Willette said he wrote another letter which was answered by Gabriel L. Hess, MPPDA attorney, who explained that first run clearance "is a matter of competition between theatres over which this association has no jurisdiction or control."

Commenting on Mr. Hess' letter, the Kansan said:

"He went further to insure a termination of the correspondence by adding this paragraph to his letter to Willette:

" 'In concluding this exchange of correspondence, I desire to point out to you that your conclusion that the theatres in Kansas City, Kan., are discriminated against in favor of Kansas city, Mo., theatres is clearly error, based on your erroneous assumption that the theatres in both of these municipalities are not in competition with each other, when, as a matter of fact, the seeking of licenses for first run pictures by all these theatres is purely a matter of competitive buying.'

"Willette interpreted that paragraph to convey two messages, first, that the Hays office doesn't want to be bothered with any more correspondence on the subject, and, second, that if Kansas City, Kan., theatres want better clearances they can pay for them.

"Willette has bowed to the first point, but when he discussed the second with the local T. O. A. (Theatre Owners Association) members he learned that they claim they have tried to buy first-run pictures but cannot do so regardless of price."

The agreement in Dallas was reached after a series of conferences on the technical phases of the appeal to the United States supreme court from Federal Judge W. H. Atwell's decision finding distributors guilty of a conspiracy in entering into contracts regulating subsequent run admission scales. B. W. Henderson, assistant United States attorney general, represented the government at the conferences. The appeal will be forwarded to Washington within 10 days and a hearing is expected to be held by the court early in the spring.

The Philadelphia ruling, a reversal of a district court decision, was regarded by film attorneys as significant should Minneapolis exhibitors, who were enjoined by the United States district court from similar "strike" activities, appeal to the United States court of appeals in their district.

Use of "peaceful persuasion," as employed in the later stages of the Philadelphia "strike," were held to be as illegal as employment of force or coercion. Only unqualifiedly individual action could escape violation of the anti-trust laws, the court ruled.

Independent exhibitor leaders, however, did not regard the decision as affecting the exhibitors' legal rights to protect their interests in future controversies with distributors. Ben M. Golder, attorney for United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Philadelphia, said:

"This case has not taken from the exhibitor any right which he heretofore had; to wit, collective bargaining and the right to cooperative action. I feel that the result of the entire situation is one of great benefit to the individual exhibitor and to exhibitors generally. Henceforth, armed with the knowledge that they have a right to cooperate and do not need to use any illegal methods, they are in a better position to recognize the value of concerted action for their mutual benefit."

The taking of depositions in the anti-trust suit brought by Morse and Rothenberg, Boston independent circuit, against distributors and the Maine & New Hampshire and M. A. circuits was adjourned until January 4th after Abe Montague, Columbia general sales manager, testified. Previously, John D. Clark, Twentieth Century-Fox general sales manager, was queried.

The Ledirk Amusement Company's case against Paramount, Warner Brothers, United Artists, RKO and Columbia, originally filed two and a half years ago, was scheduled to go to trial this month, but was adjourned.

JAPAN CONSIDERS 20 PER CENT TAX

The Japanese Government is considering the imposition of a 20 per cent tax on photographic apparatus and motion pictures, according to word received from Tokyo. Income tax on these imports has already been advanced and theatre owners will increase theatre admission prices proportionately.

Withdraw Charge In RKO Hearing

With final hearings on the RKO reorganization proceeding before William Bondy, federal court judge in New York, the United States Attorney General's office this week petitioned the court for permission to intervene, but then withdrew the request.

Through Lamar Hardy, United States attorney for the New York district, the Attorney General's office asked that it be permitted to answer the contention of Edward Hickey, an RKO stockholder, that the company's reorganization plan should not be approved because it is being proposed under Section 77-B of the Bankruptcy Act, which Mr. Hickey contends is unconstitutional.

Mr. Hickey withdrew his objection to the plan on Tuesday with the result Mr. Hardy did not pursue his application to intervene.

Although objections to the plan are comparatively numerous, especially among small stockholder groups, the plan has been approved in essence by George W. Alger, special master, and has more than the required amount of creditor and stockholder assents. None of the principal creditors has filed any objections.

The principal phases of the reorganization remaining to be completed before court confirmation of the plan include the designation of a new board of directors of nine members to serve for an initial term of two years, and a designation of the value of the new RKO securities comprising the $1,600,000 issue to be underwritten by Atlas Corporation.

An agreement was reached last week on an extension for one year of the option to acquire RCA's remaining holdings of RKO securities by a financial syndicate headed by Atlas and Lehman Brothers.

After a brief preliminary hearing Tuesday on the RKO reorganization plan Judge Bondy adjourned the proceedings to January 24 at the request of counsel for the independent stockholders' protective committee which sought additional time to prepare financial data in support of its claim that stockholders are entitled to a greater equity in reorganized RKO than the 50 per cent of their present holdings which is accorded them under the plan.

Their motion for an adjournment was not opposed by H. C. Rickaby, attorney for Atlas, proponent of the RKO plan, who advised the court that he would devise an order of procedure to be followed in hearing the objections to the plan when the sessions resume next month.

U.S. OFFICIALS TO STUDY FILMS FOR TRUE STORY OF PANAY BOMBING

Universal Cameraman To Arrive in America with Negative Dec. 26; Company Plans to Release Special Three-Reel Feature

A complete unedited print of the motion picture record made of the bombing of the American gunboat, Panay, by Norman Alley, Universal Newsreel cameraman, will be forwarded to Washington to aid government officials in establishing the true story of the Japanese attack on the ship in the Yangtze River in China.

It was generally agreed among newsreel men that the pictures will have a far reaching effect upon the diplomatic relations between United States and Japan. It is the first time, they pointed out, that a pictorial record has been obtained of such an internationally important incident.

One of the chief points which United States government officials will seek to determine through the pictures will be whether Japanese gunmen fired upon those aboard the Panay while it was sinking, newsreel men said.

Mr. Alley, with approximately 5,000 feet of negative, left Manila Wednesday aboard the China Clipper and is scheduled to arrive in San Francisco December 26th. Within 24 hours of his arrival, scenes of the Panay attack and sinking will be shown in theatres throughout the country, Charles E. Ford, Universal Newsreel editor, announced.

A special three-reel feature of the entire footage taken by Mr. Alley, who was aboard the Panay when it was bombed, will be released by Universal, Mr. Ford said. The company also announced that to protect its interest in the film during the trip from Manila to the United States, a quarter of a million dollar insurance policy has been taken out.

Shots taken by Eric Mayell, Fox Movietone cameraman who also was aboard the Panay, also are scheduled to arrive on the China Clipper. Officials at Movietone were attempting on Wednesday to check a report that their film would be shipped directly to Washington when it arrived in San Francisco.

The report was given to Movietone by the correspondent for a London newspaper, according to Dan Dougherty, who is a member of the staff of Truman Talley, editor.

Mr. Dougherty said his company will not know what shots it has until the film is actually screened. He pointed out that a cameraman attempting to "shoot" pictures while under fire would not have time to focus and make other adjustments on his camera.

After a trans-oceanic telephone call from Mr. Alley Mr. Ford said: "Alley reported that he was the last civilian to leave the Panay and took pictures of the crew jumping overboard as the vessel sank. His scenes will reveal one boat-side of the Panay almost totally destroyed. During the entire aerial attack Alley cranked away at the mounting carnage aboard ship and sought refuge only momentarily in the boat's companionways when a diving bomber was upon him.

"The staggering of the wounded seamen as they retaliated with machine gun fire at the planes, the action aboard the nearby British boats as they sought to defend themselves, was all under the lens of his camera.

"Even after reaching shore he kept his camera going, photographing the wounded survivors, until danger threatened in the form of Japanese army patrols and he realized that he was in peril, not only of losing his film, but his life if he were caught. With a moving band of seamen to keep up with, and a wounded man to administer to, he worked quickly to hide both his films and his camera in mud and weeds along the shore. He was able to recover them later when the British gunboat Bee picked him up along the banks of the Yangtze to transfer him to the United States gunboat Oahu, which took him to Shanghai and the protection of the U.S.S. Flagship Augusta. It was here that the navy placed him aboard the Stewart for his trip to Manila in order to catch the China Clipper for his flight home.

"Alley's film not only includes the actual Panay incident and subsequent events but has scenes taken for a week prior, showing the evacuation of Americans from the United States Embassy in Nanking seeking refuge on the Panay. He has also complete footage of the burning and bombing of Nanking. Among the most remarkable of the scenes which Alley took are those showing Americans on the banks of the river waving desperately at the Panay to take them aboard."

The New York Times, in a wireless dispatch from Shanghai, described the Panay bombing as "the cameraman's paradise."

"The light," the dispatch continued, "was excellent; the attacks continued long enough for movie men to get set ups. . . .

"Arthur Menken, Paramount Newsreel man, mounted his movie camera right between two undamaged machine guns on the Panay and was 'shooting' pictures of the bombers while United States machine gunners were blazing away on either side of his camera."

At Paramount, William Montague, assignment editor, said his office has not yet determined what shots Mr. Menkin obtained and was able to save.

The board contended that the presentation of the material would be "inadvisable in view of the current situation in Shanghai."

Syracuse Offering New Film Course

A new motion picture course "Critical Reporting' will be offered in the School of Journalism of Syracuse University by Dean M. Lyle Spencer, former president of the University of Washington, and one time dramatic critic and editorial writer on the Milwaukee Journal.

Instruction will cover film book and play reviewing, with the bulk of the course divided between the cinema and books. Two credit hours will be given. During the film study, weekly attendance at local theatres will be required as laboratory work in reviewing.

Rivaling the journalism course will be Prof. Sawyer Falk's cinema appreciation class, which has attracted more than 90 students each semester since 1934. Professor Falk, who heads the University's dramatic department, approaches the film from an aesthetic viewpoint, emphasizing the history, development and cinematic qualities of the product.

The class attends assigned films each week, in addition to the regular Hollywood product offered in theatres. Professor Falk has inaugurated a foreign film program at the University-controlled Civic Theatre in conjunction with his course. Among the pictures offered this season were "Carnival in Flanders," "The Eternal Mask," "Janosik" and "The Wedding of Palo." Two credit hours are given for the course.

Paramount Distributing Government "River" Film

In cooperation with the Department of the Interior, Paramount will distribute the government produced documentary film, "The River." The film was written and directed by Pare Lorentz, who directed a previous government sponsored film, "The Plow That Broke the Plains."

The picture has already been shown in a number of cities including Washington, New Orleans and Chicago. Director Lorentz and his camera travelled through a total of 13 states to film the story of "The River." Virgil Thompson, concert pianist and composer, composed an original musical score for the film.

RKO Radio del Peru Formed

RKO Radio Pictures del Peru, South America, has been organized in Lima, Peru, under the supervision of Ben Y. Cammack, for the distribution of the RKO Radio product. The new branch will be managed by William S. Farmer, formerly assistant manager of the RKO Radio Panama branch.

Richard Dix has signed a long-term contract with RKO Radio. His first assignment will be an outdoor role.

UA CIRCUIT EARNINGS INCREASE TO $364,973

Company's Net Income Totaled $167,845 in Previous Year; 3 Companies Vote Dividends

An increase of $197,127.36 in the net earnings of United Artists Theatre Circuit for the fiscal year ended August 31st as compared to the previous year was revealed with the issuance of the company's consolidated statement.

Net income for the year was $364,973.02, while in the preceding 12 months the earnings were $167,845.66. According to the statement, net income for the year ended in August, before interest, depreciation, amortization and provision for Federal income taxes, including profit from the sale of capital stock of affiliated companies and other assets, was $627,254.18.

Other financial news of the week included the voting of dividends by the Trans-Lux Corporation, the Consolidated Film Industries, and Western Electric, and the announcement by United Artists, Warner Brothers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and several other companies that they distributed Christmas bonuses among employees.

The United Artists consolidated statement listed cash on hand at $485,883.37; cash in escrow for real estate taxes $12,710.34; sundry receivables, less reserves, $10,121.01; due from affiliated companies, $117,839.08. The cash surrender value of life insurance policies was figured at $135,373.50, and investment securities at $20,044.01. Theatre investments totaled $6,394,728.85 and deferred charges were $1,413,791.28.

The dividend declared by Trans-Lux was an extra payment of 10 cents a share on the common stock, payable December 24th.

Consolidated voted a dividend of 50 cents on the preferred stock, payable December 27th to stock of record December 23rd. It is the first declaration on the preferred since $1 was paid on December 26th, 1936.

Western Electric voted a payment of 90 cents a share on its common stock, virtually all of which is owned by American Telephone and Telegraph. The dividend compares with previous payments this year of 60 cents a share in March and 75 cents a share in June and September.

Consolidated also entered the financial news on a different score when the supreme court in Dover, Delaware, affirmed the decree of Chancellor Wolcott, who had granted a perpetual injunction against the company enjoining it from filing or causing to be filed or recorded a certificate of amendment.

Amendments to an agreement between William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and the network was reported in an amendment to the company's registration statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

One amendment provided that Mr. Paley's term of employment is to end December 31st, 1940, instead of December 31st, 1939. A second amendment provided that "additional compensation" for Mr. Paley shall be 5 percent of the annual consolidated net profits of the network and its subsidiaries up to $1,000,000, plus 4 per cent of the next $1,000,000, plus 3 per cent of the next $1,000,000, plus 2 per cent of the sum by which the net profits shall exceed $3,000,000.

At Rochester, Eastman Kodak announced a plan to give vacations with pay to more than 11,500 factory employees. The holiday will be for one week or two weeks, depending upon length of service.

The bonus distributed by United Artists was one week's pay and went to the company's 750 home office and exchange employees.

MGM employees earning less than $100 a week received a bonus of two weeks' salary and those employed in the foreign department received an additional gift of $25 each from Arthur Loew, personally.

The Warner Brothers bonus of one week's salary went to employees earning less than $100 a week.

Manager of the Kincey and Wilby houses in the south received three weeks' salary and in addition were guests at an annual Christmas party held by R. B. Wilby.

Approximately $100,000 was distributed by Agfa Ansco Corporation among its employees. The bonus ranged one-half week's pay to two weeks, depending upon the length of service of the individual.

The Wagner Sign Service, Inc., wished its employees a Merry Christmas with bonus checks of 5 percent of their annual wages. At Americus, Georgia, J. N. Morgan, manager of the Martin Theatre, distributed bonus checks ranging in sums from $5 to $100.

The Interstate Circuit of theatres in Texas also distributed its annual bonuses to employees.

KORDA REQUESTS RELEASE FROM UA

As an aftermath to the collapse of the Samuel Goldwyn-Alexander Korda deal to purchase the controlling interest in United Artists, it was reported this week in Hollywood that Mr. Korda is seeking to cancel his contractual obligations with the company.

Mr. Korda has requested that he be released from both his agreement to release his English made pictures through United Artists and his unfulfilled commitment to purchase a one-fifth stock interest in the company, it was understood. His stock purchase pact, payable out of dividends he receives from the company, is said to be one-sixth completed. His distribution contract runs to 1940.

Thorgersen on Fair Committee

Ed Thorgersen, sports commentator for Movietone News, Twentieth Century-Fox release, has been appointed to the sports advisory committee of the New York World's Fair by Grover Whalen, president.

Schnitzer Starts At Warners; Zone Heads Hold Meet

Edward M. Schnitzer this week assumed the post of eastern sales manager for Warner Brothers.

Eastern Warner theatre zone heads and home office theatre executives met in New York this week, on their regular quarterly conference.

Harry M. Warner, president, decided this week to make his headquarters at the studios in California.

Mr. Schnitzer, formerly eastern district manager for Republic, will supervise Warner sales in New York, New Jersey, Albany, Buffalo, New Haven and Boston. No successor has been appointed as yet to fill the vacancy at Republic.

Gradwell Sears, general sales manager for Warners; Roy H. Haines, eastern divisional sales head, and Ben Kalmenson, western sales division chief, arrived in New York this week from vacations. They will meet with Mr. Schnitzer at the home office to discuss sales problems.

Theatre zone managers and home office personnel who attended the quarterly meeting at the home office Monday got together in the evening for an informal dinner in the St. Moritz Hotel.

Among those who attended were: Joseph Bernhard, James Coston, Nat Wolf, I. J. Hoffman, Don Jacocks, Moe Silver, Ted Schlanger, Harry Kalmine, John Payette, Herb Copelan, Howard Waugh, Clayton Bond, Ed Hinchy, Frank Phelps, Stewart W. McDonald, Harry Goldberg, Nat Fellman, Leonard Schlesinger, Harry Rosenquest, Frank Marshall, Maurice Henry, Dan Triester, Mort Blumenstock, Byron F. Moore, Abel Vigard, Jim Brennan, Lou Kaufman, Harry Kaplowitz, Frank Cahill, Herman Maier, Harry Mayer, Don Sherwood, Jules Levey, Max Blackman, Rudy Weiss, Lou Brager and Ben Wirth.

Harry Warner, while making Hollywood his permanent headquarters, plans to make short periodic trips to New York from time to time. All important conferences regarding administration of executive business will be conducted in Hollywood with heads of the various departments scheduled to come on from the east to discuss topics pertaining to their own departments.

Canada Studio Active

Six features in the next six months are planned by Central Films, Ltd., producing company with studios at Willows Park, Victoria, B. C., it was announced in Toronto last week.

William Kubitski, formerly salesman in Kansas for Grand National, has joined Imperial Pictures as a salesman in the Kansas City territory. William Flynn has been named to succeed Mr. Kubitski as Grand National salesman for Kansas.

Benjamin Glazer will produce six features for Warner Brothers under the terms of a new production contract. The first will be "You Can't Escape Forever," by Thelma Strabel.

COMPROMISE ON NEW LICENSE FEE URGED BY EXHIBITORS IN CHICAGO

Alderman to Propose Bill to Eliminate Double Features; Allied Considering Monopoly Suit Against B & K Circuit

by WILLIAM A. CROUCH
in Chicago

Confronted with the demand by city officials that a one per cent. tax be levied upon all theatre grosses, Chicago theatremen, both circuit and independent, agreed last Sunday to propose a compromise offer to pay an additional $60,000—a 50 per cent increase—in license fees during 1938.

At the same time, it was disclosed that A. G. Lindell, alderman, plans to call upon the city council to adopt an ordinance which would eliminate double feature programs in Chicago. Specifically, the bill, which has not yet been drafted, would prohibit theatremen from offering programs which last more than two and one-half hours.

Under the plan to impose a tax on theatre grosses, it is estimated that the city would derive an income of approximately $500,000 a year. The 50 per cent increase in license fees would increase the theatres' payments to the city from $120,000 to $180,000.

Councilmen met with exhibitors later this week and after first demanding an increase of $250,000 over the present amount they reduced the figure to $125,000. No agreement was reached, however, and the theatremen planned a continued protest against so large an increase.

The increased revenue is needed by the city to meet a budget deficit of $3,000,000. City officials expect through the licensing of handbooks and amusements of various sorts to raise this amount.

At the present time Edward J. Kelly, mayor, has his fellow officials engaged in setting up an ordinance that will enable the city to receive from $1,500,000 to $5,000,000 a year from operators of handbooks which now are run in defiance of the law.

However, Henry Horner, governor, has warned city officials that the plan they have in mind is illegal and that he opposes adoption of the revenue-raising scheme.

Would Grade License Fees

The license fee scale for theatres now runs from $200 for the small houses to $1,200 for the Balaban and Katz Chicago theatre, largest house in the Loop. The compromise offer calls for a graduated scale which would range from a 25 per cent increase for smaller houses to a 75 per cent increase for the larger theatres.

Aaron Saperstein of Allied Theatres, and John Balaban and Morris Leonard of Balaban and Katz were among the theatre officials who met to discuss the proposal. The city was represented in the discussions by William Rowan and James J. Crealis, alderman.

Mr. Lindell's plan, inasmuch as it has not been drafted as yet, probably will not come up for discussion until after the first of the year.

Interested in this plan for the shortening of theatre programs are many independent theatremen who are anxious to get rid of the dual bill policy now in effect in Chicago. They plan to offer suggestions to the city legislators who sponsor the ordinance. Present indications are that the bill will be based upon the health angle as Mr. Lindell contends long shows are harmful to both children and adults.

A copy of the brief filed in the circuit court of appeals in Philadelphia, stating that duals are harmful morally and physically, will be given to the councilmen for any information it might contain.

Monopoly Suit Discussed

The third situation of importance in the theatre business in Chicago at the present time is the plans Allied Theatres have for instituting suit against B. & K., charging it is a monopoly.

The suit is ready for filing, except for a few small details, according to Mr. Saperstein, president of Allied. The legal firm of Rosenberg, Toomin and Stein will probably represent the independent theatremen if the case goes to court.

Mr. Saperstein said this week that much interest was being shown by his group in the Philadelphia case between the major companies and the theatremen. In that situation the majors are fighting the duals and here they are supporting them.

The theatre license fee increase must be decided this week it is reported by city officials as the plans for the new year must be ready by then. The adoption of an ordinance regulating the length of shows may or may not be acted upon in the next few weeks. The filing of the suit against B. & K. by Allied may be within a week or so or it may be settled by changes in the plans of B. & K. regarding duals as was the situation last year when B. & K. changed their plans for extra clearance on the eve of the filing of a suit by Allied.

However, regardless of the legal and tax arguments, theatremen are more concerned about the slump in business. Not since the leanest days of the depression have grosses been as low and unless some change takes place soon most of the exhibitors will not worry about fights and arguments.

Chicago Motion Picture Survey Shows Increase in Family Films

A substantial increase in the percentage of family pictures is shown in a five-year survey made by the Motion Picture Council of Chicago Land, an associate organization of civic groups.

The survey, completed with the close of the club year in May, shows an advance in percentage of family films exhibited in Chicago from 25.4 per cent in 1932-33 to 42.1 per cent in 1936-37. The ratio of increase in the intervening years showed a steady advance, with 27.1 per cent in 1933-34, 33.4 per cent in 1934-35, and 39.3 per cent in 1935-36.

In 1936-37 the largest percentage of family pictures was produced by Twentieth Century - Fox, attributed in part to the presence of Shirley Temple on its roster of stars. The company was credited with 43.7 per cent. United Artists was second with 42.1 per cent. Only one company was listed as having less than 20 per cent.

The figures are related to motion pictures exhibited in Chicago, and ratings were based on the estimates of the preview groups of the Council.

Plan Film Bank for Industry in Mexico

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Further stimulation of the national film industry is planned with the establishment of a bank to finance the industry by the Government and film interests.

The bank is to have a capital of 500,000 pesos (approximately $140,000) and will have headquarters here. The capital is to be supplied on a fifty-fifty basis by the Government and the industry. The bank is expected to begin functioning early next year.

Stephen Czufin, of the Detroit staff of Jam Handy Picture Service, Inc., last week was appointed to head the executive editorial contact staff of the company's New York production unit.

NEW ANTI-ASCAP, TAX AND "BLUE LAW" MOVES

Nebraska Demands ASCAP Produce Income Records, and Georgia Gets New Bill

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, collecting royalties from theatres and other public performers of music, was the principal target of legislative attack this week insofar as legislation and the motion picture is concerned.

Nebraska took a new line of action to prohibit ASCAP from doing business there, and another ASCAP measure appeared in Georgia.

The legislative hampers this week also received "blue law" measures, in several places, and Ohio, Georgia, Chicago, Cleveland and St. Louis were concerned with taxation matters.

In Nebraska, action designed to outlaw ASCAP in the state was continued when Attorney General Hunter appeared in United States district court in Lincoln and petitioned for the complete gross receipts of the organization since 1920. ASCAP in November obtained a temporary injunction on the legislation enacted against it last spring. Attorney General Hunter also asked leave to file 137 questions, 63 aimed at Gene Buck, president of ASCAP.

A measure similar to the Nebraska bill and those in other states has been introduced in the Georgia state legislature.

ASCAP will defer filing of its actions attacking the constitutionality of Florida and Tennessee legislation barring the organization from operating within those states until decisions have been handed down by the special Federal statutory courts which heard ASCAP's attacks on similar legislation enacted by Montana and Washington, E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee, said.

The organization had planned to file its Florida and Tennessee actions immediately following the statutory court decision enjoining Nebraska from enforcing its anti-ASCAP legislation, which was handed down early in November.

A bill also has been introduced in the Georgia legislature calling for the imposition of license taxes on chain theatres running from $50 on one house to $200 on 16 houses. The bill was introduced by Assemblyman J. Verlyn Booth.

The measure has an intricate provision to prevent avoidance of the tax through subsidiary companies or oral agreements. Two or more theatres will be considered a chain "if any person, or group of persons, having a common interest in such theatres, or if any part of the gross or net revenues or profits ultimately go to a single person or group of persons." The same chain definition applies if any person or group of persons shares in the expense of operation.

Police Hearing on Bill

The bill will not come up for final hearing in the Georgia House of Representatives until a public hearing has been held. This was decided when the House granted Assemblyman Booth's request that the bill be sent back to the Ways and Means Committee for a hearing.

Under a new requirement of the recent consolidation of the Ohio sales tax and amusement tax departments, exhibitors in the state hereafter will be required to notarize their monthly statements which show the opening and closing numbers of tickets in all cases. Sales tax inspectors who blanket the state will check the theatres at various intervals. The admission tax yield for 1937 is estimated at $1,600,000, of which exhibitors are paying 65 per cent, with purveyors or other types of amusements contributing the remaining 35 per cent.

Evasions Reported

State officials report a number of evasions in filing monthly statements of the three per cent tax collectible on admissions, but the penalty of 10 per cent, plus one per cent per month will be rigidly enforced in the future, it is said, with a revocation of the theatre license as the extreme penalty for the more serious violations.

The finance committee of the Ohio House of Representatives has approved allocations of the proceeds of the admission tax for relief purposes for the next two years. The measure will be taken up by the House for consideration, as part of a permanent relief program.

In Cleveland, theatres are facing new taxation in the plan advocated by City License Commissioner Joseph E. Cassidy to raise $500,000 for city funds by providing application of license fees for every business activity. Included in the list of new things to license are motion picture and vaudeville houses. At the rate of 20 cents a seat per year, it is estimated that the theatre license fee would raise $24,000 annually.

Governor Stark of Missouri was reported cool to the suggestion of Mayor Dickmann of St. Louis that the city be permitted to levy a local sales tax for unemployment relief. Legislative action would be required, and Mayor Dickman urged a special state session.

New Building Code

The city council of Dover, Del., has enacted a new and strict theatre building code to cover all buildings used for theatrical purposes. Under the code, buildings used for theatre purposes in the city must be constructed of iron, steel, concrete or brick and have sufficient areaway on each side to provide for the easy passage of patrons in event of an emergency. Due to the requirements of construction on outside passages it is doubtful whether any of the existing buildings in the city could be remodeled or rebuilt to comply with the new regulations.

A proposed municipal ordinance to limit motion picture theatres to one for each 3,000 permanent population was tabled by the Manasquan, N. J., borough council when it came up for final action. Tabling of the proposal followed a declaration by Major Lloyd C. Riddle that such a measure would not be upheld by the courts of the state.

A bil providing for the creation of State Motion Picture Commission has been introduced in the Massachusetts legislature. The commission would have five members to pass on all films within the state, with ban to be imposed on those deemed immoral, indecent, sacrilegious or tending to incite to crime.

The town of Zion, Ill., stronghold of Wilbur Glen Voliva, voted against the showing of motion pictures in the city saying they were "of the devil." The vote was 948 to 494. The townspeople also voted 738-550 that a film censorship board be set up in case the decision warranted it.

Motion pictures have been shown for some time by Mr. Voliva in the city gymnasium. The religious leader said he would continue to show them. The Balaban and Katz circuit of Chicago had planned to build a theatre in Zion if the vote was affirmative.

Blue Law Nullified

In Vermont, a Bellows Falls jury deliberated only 15 minutes and acquited Raymond A. Kiniry and his four employees of a charge of violating a 160 year old "blue law" by showing films on Sunday at his Park theatre and Opera House.

Mr. Kiniry. testifying in his own defense, contended the shows were legal because the law permitted "charitable" business on the Sabbath. He said $33 of the proceeds was given the Bellows Falls Rotary Club for its Crippled Children Fund. His testimony was corroborated by the Reverend Curry Spiedell, Rotary president, and William L. Mayo, Rotary secretary.

Following the appearance of a number of ministers who protested the continuance of Sunday motion pictures in Salisbury, N. C., the city council at its weekly meeting deferred action on the matter since one member of the council was absent.

A Salisbury theatre opened on Sunday for the first time and Paul Phillips, manager there for North Carolina Theatres, Inc., which operates all the houses in Salisbury, made a plea for tolerance, pointing out that many towns in the state now have Sunday shows.

Sunday shows are being presented at the Globe theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., under an option approved by the common council.

Although Toronto has been noted for its strict observance of Sunday, there is much discussion there over the recent leap to prominence and popularity of performances of various sorts on Sunday. Toronto clergy, headed by Presbyterian Church leaders, have asked for a showdown from the authorities, requesting a complete ban on any and all performances in Toronto theatres on Sunday. The matter has been taken under advisement by the Board of Police Commissioners.

Smoking in New York City theatres will be banned, with certain exceptions, if an ordinance ready for presentation to the new City Council after the first of the year is passed by that body. The exceptions are in houses with flame proof floors which have receptacles for smoking in balconies, loges and boxes.

F&M QUERIES PUBLIC ON TIMING PROGRAMS

Fanchon and Marco have offered three alternate timings for programs to the public in page newspaper advertisements in St. Louis. Patrons are asked to indicate their preference.

The first is designed for patrons who prefer to leave the theatre early and yet arrive late enough to see the main feature. The feature would start around 9:30 p.m., preceded by 30 minutes of short subjects.

The second is similar to the first, but is based on the idea that a majority prefer a second feature to short subjects. The second feature would start at 8:30 followed immediately by the main feature.

The third attempts to placate both groups. The main feature preceded by short subjects would go on at 9:15 followed by the second feature.

Columbia Deal

Columbia has closed a deal to distribute in South America the all-Spanish picture "La Vida Boheme," produced in Hollywood by Cantabria Films. The deal includes four similar pictures to be produced by Cantabria next season.

R. H. Conway has been appointed manager of the Memphis branch office of the National Screen Service Corporation. The office was opened recently.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Enter 1938

It is usual, as the Christmas season nears, for the production bill to slacken down noticeably. This year is no different than any other and the circumstance should give no occasion for alarm. It is a seasonal condition that practically every other industry undergoes during certain periods of the year. Plans for activity to follow the new year holidays indicate that during the initial weeks of 1938 Hollywood will have more productions in the work than at any other period in its history. Presently more than 50 productions are scheduled to start during January.

At Warner Brothers two pictures started, "Penrod's Double Trouble," which Lew Seiler is directing, will present Billy and Bobby Mauch, Phillip Hurlic, Jackie Morrow, Sonny Bupp, John Pirrone, Billy Lechner and Gene Lockhart. Additional assignments will be made during the filming of the Booth Tarkington story. "Men Are Such Fools," romance and melodrama, will feature Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Hugh Herbert and Priscilla Lane with Penny Singleton (Dorothy McNulty) and Donald Briggs. Busby Berkeley is directing.

New Player Featured

"Stolen Heaven" was started by Paramount. It will feature Olympe Bradna and Gene Raymond supported by Glenda Farrell, Lewis Stone and Ruth Rogers. Andrew Stone is the director.

Fourth starting picture is credited to RKO-Radio, the once postponed "Vivacious Lady," comedy romance, having been given the starting signal. Ginger Rogers and James Stewart are starred with James Ellison, Frank M. Thomas, Phyllis Kennedy, Alec Craig and Dorothy Moore also in the cast. George Stevens is directing.

As four productions started, five were finished. Grand National completed "The Shadow Speaks," a mystery melodrama. Players to be seen are Rod LaRoque, Astrid Allyn, William von Brincken, John St. Polis, Tom Jackson, Oscar O'Shea, William Pawley, Bill Moore and Tennen Holtz. Charles Lamont directed.

Crime Club Story

Universal finished "The Black Doll," a Crime Club story. For names it will offer Donald Woods, Nan Grey, C. Henry Gordon, William Lundigan, Doris Lloyd, Addison Richards, Edgar Kennedy, John Wray, Fred Malatesta, Holmes Herbert, Syd Saylor and Arthur Voight. Otis Garrett directed.

"The Old Barn Dance" was finished at Republic. Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Helen Valkis, Sammy McKim and the Colorado Hill Billies are featured. Joe Kane was the director.

For Columbia release Larry Darmour completed "Land Rush Days," an adventure, action and romance story. Jack Luden, Eleanor Stewart, Harry Woods, Lafe McKee, Buzz Barton, Bud Osborne, Cactus Mack Slim Whittaker and Francis Walker compose the cast which Joseph Levering directed.

The final completed picture is RKO-Radio's "The Perfect Alibi," romance and melodrama. Directed by Lew Landers, it will offer Preston Foster, Whitney Bourne, Samuel B. Hinds, Donald Meek, Paul Guilfoyle, Cecil Kellaway, June Johnson, Arthur Lake, Edithe Elliott, George Irving and Maude Eburne as its principal names.

WANT SOUND LIBRARY OF BIG WORLD EVENTS

The International Radio Convention held this week in Nice, France, adopted a resolution asking that a sound library be created for great world events. The world conference on telecommunication, which will be held in Cairo, Egypt, in February will examine the project. A resolution also was adopted requesting a standard pitch. The United States did not participate in the convention.

Condensation

Two weeks, 12 working days, none of which were shorter than 10 hours were spent in filming a sequence for "Happy Landing," Sonja Henie's third picture for 20th Century-Fox, which at the most will not last more than three minutes on the screen. One of the most costly attempts ever essayed by motion picture production to inject spectacular thrill into a motion picture, it probably will, from the viewpoint of emotional impact, equal all the spectacular imaginings of Cecil B. DeMille, Samuel Goldwyn and those of Darryl Zanuck who had some bizarre dreams of sensationalism in other than the earlier Sonja Henie films.

The three-minute episode will be the ice ballet. For quick interpretation the incident might be described as a rhythmic harmonic ballet plus amazing gymnastics and demonstrations of athletic skill. Definitely it will be an interpretation inspired by Rimsky-Korsakov's opera, "The Snow Maiden," executed on skates instead of in dancing shoes.

Site for the incident was stage 15 on the 20th-Fox lot. Scenic artistry having reconstructed a frozen Norwegian lake surrounded by pine trees and snow covered mountains on which were erected two huge snow figures, each 25 feet high and, by force of necessity, made of papermache and cotton. The ballet requires no description—it will be grace and rhythm in the ultimate. It will attain that ultimate which one who can't skate a stroke, but who can teach ballet dancing like nobody's business, Harry Losee, can vision. Performers in this ballet flash on the screen in no formal way. They come streaking down a slide, pitched at a forbidding angle to leap over barrels, hurdles and various other impediments at breakneck speed. Although there were many possibilities for injury, none of the 30 male skaters or girls who flashed down the runway were hurt. We saw them do it about 20 times. But because lights were wrong or because whoops and gasps emitted by other spectators intruded upon the sound track and because occasionally some one landed on parts of his anatomy other than those that were equipped with skates, the episode was photographed over and over again for 12 successive days.

Disney Luck

Alongside the many who speak and write of the Walt Disney genius are, as in all such cases, those who refer to the Disney luck. It would be these who might point out that Mr. Disney came along with his extraordinary "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at the precise point in the development of pictorial journalism where editors were not merely susceptible to but hungry for lively photographic material with which to decorate yawning pages. This would be true, of course, but it would not be completely explanatory of the tremendous expenditure of printer's ink which has set what appears to be an all-time record for cinema publicity in the magazine field. The complete explanation is a young man named Gregory Dickson, who takes care of things like that for Mr. Disney and hasn't had a full night's sleep for months.

Young Mr. Dickson's office on the Disney premises has been an extremely busy place since 'way last summer when the flower of the Fourth Estate began making it a prime point of call. Young Mr. Dickson has had to be a diplomat of the first water and a human dynamo to rig up and properly date the avalanche of pure publicity with which he has caused the Disney opus to be baptized. Avalanche is precisely the word, as witness this incomplete footing-up of what the members of his profession modestly call "breaks":

Life—3 pages, and more to come.
Stage—2 pages, 1 cover and story.
Time—cover and statistical story.
Collier's—article.
Good Housekeeping—story.
Town and Country—story.
McCall's—double truck in color.
Popular Science—4 pages.
Better Homes and Gardens—feature.
Popular Mechanics—survey.
Newspapers—too numerous to mention.

These are "breaks" of known record. What is to be vouchsafed the production by practically countless other publications will be as much or more. What it is all to mean to Mr. Disney's picture and to the Disney stature among the major personalities of the contemporary scene will be, to put it colloquially, quite something, and with another quite something left over to add to the stature of the art-industry which Mr. Disney represents.

JOHN JOSEPH AT "U"; FOUR OTHERS RESIGN

Gulick, Weil, Anderson and Bonns Leave Publicity, Newsreel and Sales Posts

Realignment of Universal Pictures home office executive personnel under the new Cowdin-Blumberg-Rogers management resulted this week in the appointment of John E. Joseph, of RKO theatres in Chicago, to the post of director of advertising, publicity and exploitation to succeed Philip D. Cochrane, and the resignations of Paul Gulick, publicity head; Joe Weil, in charge of exploitation; R. V. Anderson, Universal newsreel business manager, and Edward Bonns, in charge of short subject sales.

Nate J. Blumberg, who assumes the Universal presidency on January 1st, going over from executive head of RKO theatres, was the guest of honor at a testimonial dinner last week. Friends also gave a dinner to Larry Waterman, another RKO recruit, who becomes Mr. Blumberg's executive assistant.

Universal's short subject sales department will be consolidated with the feature sales office after January 1st. Present indications are that no assistant to Mr. Scully will be named to fill the post which Lou Weinberg of Columbia originally was to take.

Sidney Singerman, director of Universal's program department, has not left the company, despite previous reports.

Mr. Joseph is from Chicago, where he was the divisional director of advertising and publicity for RKO Theatres. Previously he was in the advertising department of Balaban and Katz Circuit for four years. During 1925-'27 Mr. Joseph was film critic and assistant dramatic editor of the Chicago Herald and Examiner. He is a graduate of the University of Chicago, where he was on the editorial staff of the Daily Maroon, and also played an important part in the "Black Friars" plays there.

Louis Blaine, who was Mr. Joseph's assistant for several years, succeeds to the post.

Mr. Gulick had served as director of publicity for Universal under three administrations. During most of his tenure of office Mr. Gulick also edited the house organ, The Universal Weekly, recently discontinued. He was one of the founders of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers and was its third president. He has been active in all industry matters. Several years ago, in connection with his publicity work, he had some successful radio experience.

Directly upon graduation from the University of Vermont, Mr. Gulick entered newspaper work in New York City. Eventually he became dramatic and music editor of The Journal of Commerce, from which he resigned to establish an independent publicity bureau under the name of Philip Mindil, Inc. One of his clients was the Atlas Theatres Company, which gave Mr. Gulick his first opportunity to manage and publicize motion picture theatres. Joe Brandt, then general manager of Universal, brought Mr. Gulick into the company. He has lived for the last four years in Pelham Manor, N. Y.

Mr. Weil was for the last 10 years exploitation executive for the company. During this period he was for one year executive assistant to Carl Laemmle at Universal City, for two years director of advertising, publicity and exploitation of the Universal Chain Theatres with 380 units, and for seven years director of exploitation of Universal Pictures.

Handled National Campaigns

As director of exploitation, Mr. Weil handled the national campaigns on all of the company's big pictures, making frequent trips to the coast for the purpose of creating trailers, making radio transcriptions and devising exploitation campaigns. He also handled the national cooperative advertising deals with theatres throughout the country and was in charge of sales promotion for the distribution department.

Mr. Anderson managed Universal's newsreel department in charge of the buying and distribution of prints and other business details since two years after the start of the reel in 1929. For 10 years, from 1919 to 1929, when Universal distributed the International Newsreel, produced by Hearst, Mr. Anderson was contact man between Hearst and Universal. Following the start of Universal's reel he was with Warner Brothers for two years, but returned to Universal when Jack Schlaifer, then sales manager, sent for him to reorganize the business end of the department.

Mr. Bonns, short product sales manager, entered the industry in 1912. He began by handling roadshows for Edison Talking Pictures, and has been advertising, exploitation and publicity executive at Warner Brothers. Goldwyn and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The dinner tendered to Mr. Blumberg was a surprise affair given by his friends. It was held at the Warwick Hotel in New York. Mr. Blumberg was presented with a desk set as a parting gift from his associates. Among those who attended were:

Mort Singer, Joe Bern, William Cadoret, Charles Koerner, James Brenna, Nat Holt, Charles B. MacDonald, Russell Embde, Louis Goldberg, John O'Connor, Max Fellerman, Fred Meyers, Major Leslie Thompson, William Howard, David Canavan, Thomas O'Conor, Milton Maier, Ned E. Depinet, Jules Levy, Cresson E. Smith, Malcolm Kingsberg, Leon Goldberg, Al Dawson, William Merrill, Leon Bamberger, John Dowd, S. Barret McCormick, William England, John A. Cassidy, Rutgers Neilson, Arthur Willy, Gordon E. Youngman, William Mallard, O. R. McMahon and J. H. McCausland.

Mr. Waterman was tendered a farewell luncheon at Murray's in New York by some 20 RKO associates.

Spanish Film Plans Set

Jaime Salvador, Spanish producer, returned to the coast this week from New York, where he completed distribution plans for the newly formed Edward LeBaron Productions, Inc., which plans to produce only Spanish pictures. The LeBaron organization also will be sole distributors in the Southwest for Cifesa, of Spain. Present plans call for 15 pictures a year, the first, "Castles in the Air," starting production January 2nd.

Publishing Kiesling Book

The "Art of Publicity," by Barrett C. Kiesling of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's publicity department, will be published by Johnson Publishing Company, Richmond, Va. The book, which is the second by Mr. Kiesling dealing with the motion picture industry, will include articles by leading publicity men, among them Charles Michelson and Frank Braden.

NEWSREEL EDITOR PICKS NEWS "BESTS"

A. J. Richard, editor-in-chief of Paramount News, this week selected what he considered the 10 outstanding and most significant screen news stories of 1937. The selections were made from 500,000,000 motion picture frames, which Mr. Richard estimated were included in 50,000 miles of film released during the year to theatres throughout the world by Paramount News. In the order of importance they are:

(1) Sino-Japanese War.
(2) Hindenburg Disaster.
(3) Coronation of King George and exile of Edward.
(4) South Chicago riots and auto strikes.
(5) Wedding of Duke of Winsdor.
(6) Inauguration of President Roosevelt.
(7) Middle West floods.
(8) Spanish War.
(9) Supreme Court fight and Black appointment.
(10) 300 children killed in Texas school blast.

Cohen Names Six Titles

Emanuel Cohen, president of Major Pictures, has announced the titles of six films which he will produce for Paramount following completion of Mae West's "Every Day's a Holiday" and Bing Crosby's "Doctor Rhythm." They are, "Man in Evening Clothes," written by Dwight Taylor from a stage play by Yves Mirande and Andre Picard; "Eight Days," a Collier's Magazine story by Quentin Raynolds; "Star of Sahara," script by Joseph Anthony and Tommy Cotter from a story by Sara Christie MacDonald; "Call Back Love," a Collier's Magazine story by Rose Franken now being scenarized by Mary McCall, Jr.; "Hold That Kiss," script by Stanley Rauh and Doris Malloy from an original story by Mr. Rauh, and "Free Woman," an original screenplay by Mary McCall, Jr., and Leonard Q. Ross.

Wilk Lectures at Dartmouth

Jacob Wilk, story editor for Warner Brothers, lectured this week at Dartmouth College in the course on screen script writing, which was instituted and sponsored by Walter Wanger, producer, as a memorial to Irving Thalberg.

Quits GN Position

Irving L. Jacobs, district manager for Grand National in Denver and Salt Lake City, has left the company. Jules Lapidus and his Grand National staff in Pittsburgh have moved into their new quarters after occupying temporary Film Row quarters for more than a year.

Ban "Spanish Earth"

The Providence, R. I., Bureau of Police and Fire has banned "Spanish Earth" on the ground that it is "propaganda."

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Night Spot

(RKO-Radio)

Melodramatic Romance

"Night Spot" is not to be included in RKO-Radio's list of special productions. Rather it is being planned as average grade entertainment in which are included, from personnel, story and production standpoints, those showmanship elements which every exhibitor considers necessary.

The story told concerns the romance of a young policeman and an ambitious singer, played, as the title indicates, against the sinister background of underworld scheming.

Motivation is based on an unpublished story, "She Sang for Her Supper," by Ann Jordan. Transition to the screen was effected by Lionel Houser, previously associated with such similarly grounded films as "Border Cafe," "Let Them Live" and "I Promise to Pay." Direction is in the hands of Christy Cabanne, who made "Criminal Lawyer" and "Annapolis Salute."

The production will present a new romantic team, Allan Lane, who was in "Having Wonderful Time" and "Sing and Be Happy," and Joan Woodbury, who was featured in "Living on Love" and "Crashing Hollywood."

Included in the supporting cast are Bradley Page, playing a characteristic role, Lee Patrick, Gordon Jones, Parkyakarkus, Jack Carson, Robert Middlemass, Cecil Kellaway and Frank M. Thomas.

Release date undetermined.

Three Men in the Snow

(MGM)

Comedy

A few weeks ago Sam Zimbalist delivered one of the year's surprise pictures, "Navy Blue and Gold." Exhibitors found in it much entertainment quality and a brand of potential and easily adaptable showmanship that made the job of selling it to the public comparatively easy. It is Mr. Zimbalist's intention that "Three Men in the Snow" shall embrace similar exploitation and amusement qualities.

The story, written by Erich Kaestner, and which was a best seller in Europe, is whimsical comedy that takes many new and refreshing twists. Vacationing in the Swiss Alps, a wealthy capitalist prefers to be considered a poor man. While palming off his butler as a wealthy man, he meets an impoverished youth and the three form a strange association which amazes the hotel management and its guests. His daughter arrives to rescue her father from the indignities she hears are being imposed upon him. Naturally she falls in love with the youth.

The cast will feature Robert Young and Florence Rice, who were the leads in "Navy Blue and Gold." Frank Morgan, currently in the entertaining "Beg, Borrow or Steal," is again Miss Rice's father and the gay deceiver. His butler is Reginald Owen, who has been teamed with him in several pictures. The supporting cast includes Edna May Oliver, Mary Astor, now in "Hurricane," Harman Bing, one of Morgan's compatriots in "Beg, Borrow or Steal," Henry Hull and Walter Kingsford.

Direction is in the hands of Edward Buzzell, a comedy specialist, as "As Good As Married," "Luckiest Girl in the World" and "Three Married Men" will attest.

Release date, Jan. 14, 1938.

Love is a Headache

(MGM)

Satire

The entertainment and commercial value which has accrued to many of MGM's socalled secondary productions should serve as a tip-off as to what to expect from "Love Is a Headache." In this case the headaches, which all implicated in the story suffer until love finally takes command, should prove hilarious amusement for audiences. Mainly it concerns a willful stage star whose appearances in a series of flop shows bring down upon her the caustic wrath of a radio broadcasting columnist

An original screen play by Lou Heifitz and Herbert Klein serves as the basis of the film. It will present Gladys George, remembered for "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie," and Franchot Tone, who was with her in "They Gave Him a Gun," as the leads. Inclusion of Ted Healy and Frank Jenks as the hairbrained press agents should accentuate the comedy elements. The children who are the centers of the melodramatic excitement are Mickey Rooney and Virginia Weilder. A bit of romantic rivalry involves Ralph Morgan. Supporting players include Barnett Parker, Fay Holden and Henry Kolker.

Richard Thorpe, whose "Night Must Fall" and "Double Wedding" stand as tributes to his versatility, is directing.

Release date, Feb. 6, 1938.

Her Jungle Love

(Paramount)

Adventure and Romance

"Her Jungle Love" will feature Dorothy Lamour and Ray Milland in practically the same kind of an exotic, action, adventure, melodramatic romance as was "Jungle Princess," their first co-starring vehicle. Both have recently been in important productions, Miss Lamour in "Hurricane" and Milland in "Ebb Tide." These appearances should not be overlooked in calling attention to their presence in "Her Jungle Love," which, incidentally, is being made in color.

The principal supporting cast lists Lynne Overman, seen in many Paramount pictures; J. Carrol Naish, currently in "Night Club Scandal" and "Daughter of Shanghai"; Dorothy Howe, a promising newcomer, and Archie Twichell. George Archainbaud, who has made six Paramount pictures during the past two years, is directing.

Locale of the story is the Indo-Malay country and the South Pacific, backgrounds which should insure scenic beauty. The story concerns experiences encountered by a pair of flyers who crash in the jungle and are befriended by a native girl.

An interesting showmanship point about "Her Jungle Princess" is that for the first time the color process is being applied to an average budgeted picture. Heretofore the cost of such color films have approached and topped the million-dollar mark. Yet, although this has been allocated a generous budget, it by no means will approach the production cost of most of its predecessors.

Release date, Feb. 14, 1938.

Rangers Roundup

(Spectrum)

Musical Western

"Rangers Roundup" will mark the debut of Stan Laurel as head of a producing organization. Such being the case, it may be expected that the man who has appeared in scores of comedies with Oliver Hardy will put his best foot forward in order that his first effort will convince exhibitors that succeeding pictures will be worthy of their attention. In several ways, he has made a good start. For a producer he has chosen Jed Buell, whose all-Negro "Harlem on the Prairie" already is the recipient of much attention. The story is an original by George Plympton, who has written many outdoor action adventure pictures, and Sam Newfield, who directed many of the pictures which Plympton wrote. The four original songs were composed by Lew Porter, who contributed several of the melodies to "Harlem on the Prairie."

For a star, Messrs. Laurel and Buell selected Fred Scott, now in his second year as a riding, singing, fighting, shooting buckaroo. The girl, Christine McIntyre, is a comparative newcomer, but the balance of the cast is made up of players who many times have been seen in this type of action entertainment. Included are Al St. John, Carl Hackett, Stever Ryan, Syd Chatton, Bob Owens, Carl Matthews, Dick Cramer and Jimmy Aubrey, who is the comedy relief.

With certain novel twists introduced, the story is made up of the familiar ingredients and situations which have given outdoor action pictures such a strong hold on so many theatregoers. As a medicine show entertainer, Scott is given opportunity to sing several times, as he also does in his romantic relations with the girl. Surprise twist in the story is that in its conclusion, after Scott has rounded up all the desperadoes, he is revealed as an undercover Texas Ranger.

Love on a Budget

(20th Century-Fox)

Domestic Comedy Romance

Over a two-year period and in a series of seven productions, the "Jones Family" pictures have proved their entertainment and commercial worth. Clean, wholesome comedy and romance, they seldom have appeared in any of Broadway's glittering film palaces, but they are well known in the neighborhood houses and the Main Street theatres of countless towns.

Divorce clouds born of wasteful extravagance in collision with planned economy send bride "Bonnie" back to the family domicile. Enters a slick, sharp shooting, high pressure promoter.

As always, the story is based on experiences of characters created by Katherine Kavanaugh. It will be directed by Bert Levy.

Also, as usual, the familiar "Jones Family" characters, Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russell Gleason, Kenneth Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan, will be featured. Alan Dinehart makes his debut as a member of the melange as the trigger brained, but irresponsible promoter. Other newcomers to the family are Dixie Dunbar, Marvin Stephens, Paul Harvey and Joyce Compton.

Release date, March 14, 1938.

MISSOURI, CONNECTICUT, KENTUCKY, JERSEY ACT AGAINST CHANCE GAMES

State Supreme Court Decision Holds Bank Night Illegal in Reversal of Case Against Distributor of Game in Missouri

Highlighting chance game developments during the week was the decision of the Missouri supreme court holding Bank Night illegal thereby reversing the decision of a circuit court judge in the case of the State vs. R. W. McEwan, Bank Night distributor.

In Connecticut, a superior court judge termed Bank Night a lottery placing the game within the title "Offenses against Public Policy" as set forth in the general statutes of Connecticut.

State Attorney General Webb declared all forms of chance games are illegal in California, and instructed district attorneys and local police to act accordingly.

In New Jersey a common pleas judge reserved decision on a motion to direct a not guilty verdict in Newark's first Bank Night case.

The proposed deadline for the elimination of giveaways in New York City found more games established than when the campaign started.

A police order banned several of the games in Cleveland.

The County Prosecutor in Cincinnati gave as his opinion that distribution of Bank Night prizes is a violation of Ohio laws.

The Racine, Wis., proposed ordinance banning Bank Nights appeared to be doomed to failure.

A CIO committee in Fort Wayne, Ind., passed a resolution opposing a proposed ordinance prohibiting games.

The Assistant Attorney General of Kentucky said that Bank Nights are illegal.

In Louisiana despite the ruling of the state supreme court declaring all money games lotteries and in violation of the law, there has been no withdrawal of the games.

The Missouri supreme court held Bank Night to be illegal under the State Lottery Law thus reversing the decision of Judge Marion D. Waltner of circuit court in Jefferson City last year in the case of State vs. R. W. McEwan, Bank Night distributor. The opinion written by H. J. Westhues, commissioner, and concurred in by members of the supreme court read:

"The courts would be blind indeed if they could not see that the scheme described is a deliberate plan to evade the lottery statutes. The scheme has all the elements of a lottery and is just as harmful as if it were limited to those purchasing tickets. We hold that sufficient consideration exists in the scheme to come within the terms of our statute which makes it a felony to establish or aid in establishing any lottery, gift, enterprise or scheme of drawing in the nature of a lottery.

"One cannot sit by his fireside and take part therein. He must be present and swell the crowd. Such persons naturally get enthusiastic and the gambling spirit is quickened, stakes rise from week to week and pictures become of little importance."

Mr. Westhues said that to follow the cases cited in defense of Bank Night would be a policy that would "only tend to force legislatures to constantly enact new laws to meet the ever increasing cunning devices to evade existing laws. Anyone who deliberately attempts to evade the letter and spirit of the law is not entitled to the strictest construction of the law in his favor."

The test case concerned the promotion of Bank Night by Mr. McEwan in the Ashland, Jefferson City, on June 18, 1935. In reversing the circuit court the supreme court sent the case back for trial.

"Against Public Policy"

Deciding that the increase in receipts and the benefit in the way of increased gross receipts for paid admissions constitute sufficient consideration, Judge Edward Quinlan held Bank Night a lottery in the superior court, Middlesex County case against Ernest Dorau, manager of the Capitol theatre, Middletown, Conn. Judge Quinlan placed the game within the title of "Offenses against Public Policy" as set forth in the General Statutes of Connecticut, and said that the "element of time inserted in the rules governing this particular bank night to enable one to reach the stage from the outside doesn't accomplish the attempted evasion."

Elsewhere in Connecticut, Warner Brothers contracted for Bank Night at the Palace, Danbury, after having discontinued the game for some time. N. C. Wrisley is handling Bank Roll, a new money game, for the state, and is also promoting a new giveaway of La Touraine coffee in theatres.

In New Jersey, Judge Brennan in common pleas court reserved decision on the motion of Attorney Milton Unger to direct a not guilty verdict in Newark's first Bank Night case, resulting from the arrest of Martin Horn of the American theatre early last spring. The court gave Assistant Prosecutor Conlon an opportunity to file an answer to Mr. Unger's contention that Bank Night was not a lottery because of the fact no charge is made or tickets required to register.

In New York City on the proposed deadline for the elimination of giveaways there were more games established than when the campaign was launched against them. The campaign was sponsored by the Independent Theatre Owners Association. An article in the ITOA's house organ reads:

In Cleveland, Police Chief George Matowitz issued an order banning Beano, Banko and Bingo. Bank Night and Movie Sweepstakes were not included in the order.

Distribution of Bank Night prizes in theatres and other places of amusement is a violation of the Ohio lottery law, and, therefore, illegal, is the opinion of County Prosecutor Dudley Outcalt Miller, of Cincinnati. The opinion was given to Sheriff Frank Lutz who requested the information after having received requests for a ruling from the Andalus theatre, a suburban house, and others where inauguration of the game was contemplated.

Despite reports to the contrary the ban on Bank Nights and other games in Chicago will not be lifted according to word from the Corporation Counsel's office.

It is reported that chance games are disappearing in most Oklahoma situations. In Oklahoma City, for instance, the first run houses have eliminated all games while the neighborhood runs feature Bank Night on only one night a week with the cash award being given to persons in the theatre at the time of drawing.

An assistant city attorney in Milwaukee, Wis., refused a policeman's request for a warrant to arrest Lawrence Burnett, manager of the Plaza theatre, in connection with the playing of Bingo at the theatre, on the ground that there was no city ordinance to cover the case.

Ordinance Opposed

The Fort Wayne, Ind., Joint Council of the Committee for Industrial Organization passed a resolution opposing a proposed municipal ordinance which would prohibit theatres from holding Bank Nights and outlaw other games.

Fox-Beatrice Theatres Corporation is seeking a rehearing of its appeal to the Nebraska supreme court, which recently upheld a lower court decision in declaring Bank Night illegal and a violation of the state lottery laws.

The city council of Casper, Wyo., passed on first reading an ordinance to ban Bank Night, Screeno, merchandise drawings, Bingo, suit raffles, or the drawing of coupons given with groceries or admission tickets.

In a letter to Sam Levin, St. Louis attorney, Assistant Attorney General J. K. Lewis of Kentucky gave as his opinion that Bank Nights are illegal. Mr. Lewis wrote that Kentucky courts have never ruled on the subject, but the legal profession "is generally in agreement that the enterprises violate both the Constitution and the statutes."

Following the ruling by Mr. Lewis, a declaratory judgment suit to test the legality of Thrift Night awards at the Columbia and Arcade theatres, Paducah, Ky., was filed in McCracken circuit court there.

A proposed ordinance to prohibit the holding of Bank Night contests was defeated by the Jacksonville, Fla., city council when a committee report, recommending rejection of the measure, was adopted by a 13 to seven vote. Councilman W. T. Gordon, one of the authors of the bill, now proposes to tax such features. He said a tax of 25 per cent should be levied against each award, in addition to all other levies against theatres or amusement places.

Managers of two Birmingham, Ala., suburban theatres have been placed under $100 bond by police for conducting Jack Pot, following a ruling by city officials that the game is a violation of the city and state lottery laws.

The $75 left in the Ritz theatre, Tuscaloosa, Ala., Jack Pot fund has been donated to the Tuscaloosa Junior Welfare Association for use in its campaign against tuberculosis, Cecil B. Grimes, manager, said, following the recent ruling of the Alabama supreme court that chance games are illegal.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

For the benefit of exhibitors operating theatres in towns visited by, or through which President Roosevelt passes, we pass along Tom Olsen's attention-getter for his Warner theatre in Aberdeen, Washington. Mr. Olsen took advantage of the President's last visit to the northwest to sell his double feature attraction by inserting in his marquee lights, and throughout the front of his theatre, the message: "WELCOME, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT. WISH YOU COULD STOP AND SEE OUR GRAND SHOW. TWO FEATURES, 'ROSE MARIE' AND 'HELL DIVERS.'"

The idea, of course, could be applied to the visit of almost any celebrity. But, in the case of Mr. Roosevelt, we strongly advise against its use in the dual billing, for instance, of "Thin Ice" and "You Can't Have Everything," or "Dead End" and "The Man Who Could Work Miracles." Or, just imagine what would happen if some exhibitor's marquee lights read: "WELCOME, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT. WISH YOU COULD STOP AND SEE OUR SHOW, 'FLY-AWAY BABY' AND 'YOU ASKED FOR IT.'"

United Artists admittedly is flooding the provincial press with a glorification of Samuel Goldwyn, entitled "The Story of Great Entertainment." The glorification really is Mr. Goldwyn's glorification of the motion pictures he is making this season.

Set-down in the document, in the first-person, is the Goldwyn assertion: "They have called me 'the Star Maker,' 'The Columbus of Films,' and many other complimentary things." Which is fair enough, considering Mr. Goldwyn's proficiencies on the screen. But, one note that Mr. Goldwyn strikes in the 43 pages stands out above all others. Says Mr. Goldwyn: "I have never allowed myself consciously to deviate from the credo which I feel is the sine qua non of a producer."

National Broadcasting Company in New York the other week entertained the 2,000,000th person to visit its radio studios in Rockefeller Center, a special Guest Relations Department arranging to greet "Mr. Two Millionth" with broadcasts, dinners, airplane trips, a new RCA radio and the presidential suite at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

"No barkers or ballyhoo men, no fan dancers or sword swallowers, lure the home folks and the farm folks to the world's largest broadcasting plant," says NBC, adding in explanation that they come in twos and twenties, but always with questions about one thing or another to disturb the guides assigned to escort them around the studios. Only the other day, one person asked whether air-conditioned programs are better, and then asked what is done with the dirt that is taken out of air filtered for the studios.

And Jack Miles, at NBC, swears that another visitor asked: "If the master control desk looked like this yesterday, what will the control room of today look like tomorrow?"

Strong, indeed, is the desire of some of Hollywood's biggest actors to live their screen roles, as witness Read Kendall's tale of Warner Oland, the Charlie Chan "Chinaman" of the movies. Last year, when Oland visited China he was received with acclaim and with honors no other Hollywood star can boast, save Anna May Wong. One night a banquet was staged in his honor. The gayety and festivity proceeded at great height, until someone asked Oland how he happened to be in the Orient. Without a thought of the consequences he gravely answered: "To visit the graves of my ancestors." Oland seems to have forgotten that he is a big Swede—a six-footer—born in Umea, Sweden, of Jonas Oland. Starting in 1928, "Tong War," "Chinatown Nights," "The Mysterious Dr. Fu Manchu," 'The Return of Dr. Fu Manchu," "Charlie Chan's Chance," "Charlie Chan's Greatest Case," "Charlie Chan's Courage," "Charlie in London," "Charlie Chan in Paris," "Charlie Chan in Egypt," "Shanghai," "Charlie Chan in Shanghai"—these and many other Orientations by Oland have left their impression. Now he even thinks he's a Chinaman.

Seeking new methods of increased interest, or even some interest, in their annual sales meetings, executives of a large number of industrial and manufacturing companies have adopted the Charlie McCarthy-Edgar Bergen technique and are delivering sales talks with the aid of a ventriloquist and his dummy. The method, they claim, has proved highly successful and enabled the sales managers to hold the attention of the sales forces while the performers deliver company messages which otherwise might fall flat, if heard at all. At a sales gathering in New York last week a ventriloquist in the role of a skeptical dealer (he would be a film salesman or an exhibitor in the movie business), entertained a ballroom filled with salesmen. Objections raised by the pseudo dealer (film salesman or exhibitor) were answered with biting sarcasm by a dummy (film sales manager) held on his knee.

Feature Length Cartoon

It is the custom of reporters filing reports of their observations under the above banner line to take the product apart, piece by piece, and deal as informatively as possible with each as a saleable or static item of box office merchandise.

But this custom was born of and thrives more or less ruggedly upon a product composed in prime or principal part of personalities, performances, human equations of this or that variety which have been added up expertly or otherwise to total a motion picture. If Walt Disney continues making feature length cartoons like this production, in which case others may be expected to do likewise, this convenient and altogether commendable custom would seem to be in line for having something done to it, because "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" just doesn't admit of taking apart.

There are just two parts to talk about in the case of "Snow White," and the lesser of these is the probable exploitation value of mention that the story is a Grimm fairy tale which everybody must have read. All that might be said about that goes without saying, and from about now the work will be remembered as a Disney fairy tale anyway.

The other part to talk about is the Disney production of the first feature length motion picture in the cartoon medium, and there's more to talk about in that than any normal showman could possibly get around to. There is so much of it, in fact, that all the nation's commentators, columnists, feature writers, picture editors and plain journeyman journalists haven't yet been able to get it all said.

Of course, the foregoing is by no means news. That the picture is a box office natural in the abstract has been no secret at any time since word that the diligent Mr. Disney would dare to stretch his talent over the feature distance had seeped into print. What the picture is in the concrete is the only thing left for a showman to want to know. Wherefore this reporter departs herewith from the good old custom referred to above and sets up shop as a critic.

Now this reporter thinks, in common with everybody else in Hollywood, that he knows a good picture when he sees it, or a weak one, but he's been around long enough, unlike nearly everybody else in Hollywood, to know that he's no oracle because there ain't no such animal. Nevertheless, he gives you his opinion, for whatever it may bring, that Mr. Disney's "Snow White" will make people forget all about Mr. Disney's "Three Little Pigs" and start dating the Disney saga from here.

Your reporter bases this opinion on no mere personal reflex. He took quite a few precautions against doing that. He arrived early at the spectacular scene of the world premiere and exposed himself thoroughly to the incoming throng, as seasoned a collection of cinema laboratory specimens as ever got together under glass. He took along with him, for service as a very special kind of laboratory specimen and confidential adviser, his decidedly outspoken daughter, aged eleven and about equally versed in nursery literature and Hollywood hoopla. He tarried in the foyer after the screening and eavesdropped on the customers. He is pleased to report that at a late hour he has still to hear a dissenting vote.

Mr. Disney's picture is priceless entertainment. It is the Grimm fairy tale told as Dr. Grimm might have told it had he possessed the Disney talent and tools. It is a fine artistic accomplishment and it is also a commanding demonstration of shrewd showmanship. It contains the best of all the established Disney devices for instrumenting charm, and establishes a number of new ones.

The seven dwarfs are more individualized than were the three pigs and yet no less a group. They sing a song quite as likely to become a rage as was the porcine ditty of a few years back, and at least three of the dwarfs are sure to be known by name and characterization as the pigs never were, three being a conservative figure.

"Snow White" is of course less indelibly etched, although superbly conceived and voiced, and the Prince of the tale is in it but briefly at start and finish. There is a new Disney touch, however, in the balcony serenade-sequence sung by these two, a dove introducing at this point a manner of seeming to participate naturally in human affairs which is continued in multiple and variety later on.

Plot construction and narrative routine is in the formal mode. The score is a splendid work including a number of extremely singable songs and frequent passages where spoken dialogue meshes with background music and happens also to rhyme. Color, always at its best in Disney products, is superbly administered, ranging from artistic brilliance at points of tension to approximate monotone in appropriate places. Use of the multiplane camera is accountable for several effects strikingly approximating perspective.

As previewed at the Cathay Circle theatre on Tuesday night the picture ran 82 minutes and seemed so much less that it is unlikely it will be shortened. Laughter was induced at will, and spontaneous applause occurred at a half dozen points in the exhibition. From audience reaction, foyer comment and the general air of extraordinary satisfaction with the world in general that was prevalent about the premises, it would seem incontrovertible that the picture is both a box office classic and the other kind.—WILLIAM R. Musical Comedy

Showmen who didn't do so well with the last previous Mae West production will be well within the limits of advertising accuracy if they tell their clients that this one is different. On the other hand, showmen who chalked up a profit last time will violate no trust if they declare that this is more of the same. This flexible circumstance derives from the adroit technical maneuver executed by the author-actress in casting herself this time as confidence woman instead of consort and devoting her talent to acquisition instead of amour, continuing of course the while to be the same indelibly typed personality.

Having chosen one of these alternatives, the practicing showmen may move at will down a long list of significant names in the supporting cast, speaking well of each. Edmund Lowe can be advertised as turning in one of his masterful romantic leads and Charles Winninger is entitled to a splurge of emphasis as contributing his best comedy performance of all time. Proportionate praises may be parceled out to Charles Butterworth and Walter Catlett and there is no good reason for omitting Lloyd Nolan's serio-comic villain. Herman Bing, Chester Conklin and Louis Armstrong are other names with definite value. George Rector is highly mentionable, also, although he appears briefly.

When he gets down to telling what the picture is all about, the less than locquacious showman may be satisfied with informing his clients that it's a Mae West story about New York City in 1899 and 1900. "Gay nineties" is a comprehensive and vague term that will cover the matter nicely. It should be added, of course, that there are a number of songs in the picture, some of which will have become familiar by reason of radio, but possibly it's as well to omit mention of that instrument at just this time, if possible. There is also the customary double entendre.

A further detailing of the story would not be, if it ever is, an especially profitable enterprise. The synopsis would be sure to sound like that of something the industry decided quite a while ago not to supply the trade. It could even be construed as a short course in how to get around the Production Code under cover of mirth, music and dated dress. That wouldn't

"GRACE MOORE CHARMS MUSIC HALL AUDIENCE

"The Music Hall inaugurated its holiday program yesterday with GRACE MOORE'S latest singing film, I'LL TAKE ROMANCE. Besides being a diverting comedy, in which MELVYN DOUGLAS plays his part opposite the singing star most suavely and amusingly, it offers the prima donna an ideal setting for her charming lyric soprano voice.

"As the high spot of the production she renders, with Frank Forest singing the tenor role, the thrilling love duet from 'Madame Butterfly'. In all, she is a treat to the eye as well as to the ear.

"E. H. Griffith has handled the romance with such a deft and lightly amusing touch that the various episodes take on a bright and sparkling appearance."

Terry, who really enthused the preview gathering, the Peters Sisters, Brewster Twins and Chilton and Thomas.

While that kind of showmanship which has proved effective in exploiting previous 20th Century-Fox film musical comedies is again in order, the opportunity that is given exhibitors to talk about Miss Simon as a surprise should not be overlooked.

Previewed December 17th in the Alexander theatre, Glendale, California. Other than for the contributions made by Miss Simon, Miss Davis and Bert Lahr, the audience appeared to think that the prolonged attention given to the Winchell-Bernie feud was a bit monotonous. It picked up pep, however, when the film turned from narrative, with occasional music, to glamor and spectacle. Final reaction indicated that "Love and Hisses" should more than hold its own in the intensive competition that will be waged in the post-holiday weeks.—G. M.

Character Study

In the Provencal French vernacular, the title of this means "codfish." This salty sobriquet is applied by the pupils of a local lysee near Marseilles to one of their teachers because to their sensitive sense of smell the pedagogue gives off such a piscatorial odor.

As unusual and as striking as the title, the picture presents in its novel narrative a character study of a personified "inferiority complex" that will entice the clinical curiosity of the psychiatrist and offers for the parent and teacher certain problems concerning child welfare and pedagogical practice. Cliques which dote on "art films" may find ample material to satisfy their appetities for the "exceptional" cinema. Though a running compilation of superimposed English titles translates succintly the French dialogue, it is to be feared that the distinctive nature of the story will find acceptance in limited audience circles.

A character study that is so simple as to seem plotless, the story seems static and one dimensional. Concerned with a situation facing the leading player rather than a full length portrait of his personality, the story reveals the human interest problem of how a well meaning and sympathetic teacher tries to compensate for a physical deformity by acting the cold, hard taskmaster. When the pedagogue is assigned to proctor a group of unruly pupils who by unfortunate circumstances must spend their Christmas holidays at school, the children and the master match wits in making each other uncomfortable. But when the youngsters are packed off to their individual beds, "Merlusse" gives way to his good nature and plays Santa Claus. With the discovery of his good deed, the attitudes of the children as well as the opinion of the principal and his fellow teachers look upon the misunderstood teacher from a better and a more enlightened viewpoint.

Henri Poupon in the leading role plays the part with telling emotional effect. The children of the cast perform in easy and unaffectedly expert style. The direction of Marcel Pagnol from his own script is keyed to a steady and stark pitch. Under the camera work of Albert Assouad, the drab and lonely surroundings of the school are sensitively made evident.

Drama of Heroism

Léon Poirier is one of the few French producers and directors who believe that besides their ordinary entertainment value motion pictures have a mission to accomplish in treating and emphasizing the themes of family, country and duty.

After "L'Appel du Silence" ("The Call"), a film based on the heroic life of the French monk, Father de Foucault, which, in spite of some technical and casting weakness, was an outstanding financial success, M. Poirier has completed in the present production another film with an heroic subject, exalting the spirit of duty, self-sacrifice and love for the motherland.

This picture is the true story of two French women of very different social conditions, an aristocrat, Louise de Béttignies, and a child of working class people, Léonie Vanhoutte, who, in 1914, when the north of France and Belgium were invaded by the German armies, organized a secret service, not for espionage itself, but to deliver "military mail." For 10 months, up to the day she was arrested, on October 20, 1915, Louise de Béttignies managed this service through which information gathered by the agents of the intelligence service in these invaded territories, was transmitted across the Belgium-Dutch border to the headquarters of the British Army which was situated facing the Germans in the north of France.

The film depicts with moving and thrilling scenes how Louise de Béttignies and Léonie Vanhoutte took the documents confided to their care from France to Holland, helped by French and Belgian friends, who offered them shelter on the dangerous journey, the most difficult part of which was the crossing of the Dutch-Belgian border, well guarded by German soldiers.

Discovered and arrested in Belgium, the two were judged and sentenced to death, a sentence commuted to life imprisonment, at the Royal Fortress of Siegburg, in Germany. Louise de Béttignies contracted pneumonia in the cell into which she was thrust for having encouraged her companions in captivity to refuse to make ammunitions which would be used to kill their compatriots. She died on September 17, 1918, after having heard from a Belgian priest of the imminent victory of the Allied Armies. Léonie Vanhoutte is now Mrs. Antoine Rédier, the wife of the author of the book on which the film is based.

The picture, in which, according to M. Poirier's own statement, the subject of the main feature, more important than the technical side and the cast, is very moving and human. The majority of the sequences were shot on the actual scenes of action, in the little towns and villages of French Flanders and Belgium. Scenes of the trial were made in the hall of the Belgian Senate, at Brussels. A deep accent of truth and authenticity marks the film, which, in spite of the fact that it runs for two hours, is never boring.

There are no technical effects, no special artistic researches, no big stars, and if at times one feels a weakness in the direction and in the acting, these faults can be easily overlooked in such a film.

Photography is good and reflects the sad and grey skies of the north of France.

The cast is made up of French, Belgian, Dutch and German actors, who, as in "The Great Illusion," speak their respective languages, and thus lend an additional atmosphere of reality to the film. Jeanne Sully, a member of the "Comédie Française," heads the cast in her first appearance on the screen, as Louise de Béttignies, Josette Day co-stars in the part of Léonie Vanhoutte. The acting honors go to Henry Defreyn as the Belgian Albert, who helps the two women. Thomy Bourdelle as the president of the German Court is also worthy of mention.

A clever use of local songs and national themes is included in the musical score.

This is a film which suits all kind of audiences, and especially the family patronage. It is one of the French pictures which should help to obliterate the unhappy impression created by unhealthy films such as "Lucrece Borgia" and "Club de Femmes." It will attract audiences in all countries.

Viewed at the Paris Opera House in a gala charity performance attended by the President of the French Republic. The patriotic audience applauded loudly and acclaimed Léonie Vanhoutte who attended the performance.—Pierre Autré.

Produced by S.A.C.I.C. (Société Artistique, Commerciale, et Industrielle de Cinématographie). Distribution in the Paris territory and foreign sales, C.U.C. (Compagnie Universelle Cinématographique). Author and director, Léon Poirier. Story based on Antoine Rédier's book "La Guerre des Femmes" ("The War of Women") and on historical facts. Cameraman, Georges Million, assisted by Jean Lallier. Musical score by Claude Delvincourt and J. E. Szyfer. Assistant director, Armand Tallier. German adviser, Kronegger. Film editor, Jacques Grassi. Scenery, Laurent and Druart. Sound engineer, Maurice Menot. Produced at the Eclair studios, Epinay-sur-Seine, near Paris, and on location in the north of France and Belgium. Recorded on Optiphone-Hawadier system. Running time, when seen in Paris, 125 minutes. General audience classification.

A College Story

There is little in this film that would recommend it to the serious attention of the most easily satisfied audiences or exhibitors. It offers nothing new or different. The attempts it makes at being amusing are of inferior caliber. Neither story content, musical embellishment, production detail or quality of individual or group performances come close to any standard that would permit any exhibitor to make any kind of effort to interest his clientele in it.

It has to do with all the phases of co-ed college life. The star oarsman prefers to study and work his way through school rather than

Public Health

Opening with a talk by Dr. John L. Rice, Health Commissioner of New York City, appealing for the cooperation of the public in a campaign to reduce the pneumonia death rate and pointing out that dissemination of the facts concerning the disease is the first step in such a campaign, this ably produced short subject efficiently and interestingly presents such facts.

The educational purposes of the film is capsuled in a dramatic short story. A country doctor is summoned to the bedside of a woman suddenly and seriously ill after suffering the symptoms of a heavy cold. During his treatment of her the doctor explains to her husband, and to the audience, the ordinary symptoms the disease (labored breathing, high fever, chest pains) and modern methods of treatment including laboratory anayses and serum development are dramatized.

Serial on the Wing

The aerial minded youth of America and elsewhere will find this particular chapter play starring famed wingman Capt. Frank Hawks fascinating thrill material replete with skillfully blended action and mystery plot ingredients. Particularly saleable to the Junior Birdmen clubs throughout the land are the appended brief lessons in the art of flying that Capt. Hawks gives in an easy and clear method of instruction at the conclusion of each installment.

Hawks plays the chief role in this narrative concerning the air activities of the Canadian police and acts his assignment with a natural and winning self-effacement. Supporting roles are assumed by such familiarly known screen personalities as Dorothy Sebastian, Kenneth Harlan, Esther Ralston, Clara Kimball Young, Rex Lease, Guy Bates Post, Yakima Canutt and Frank Lackteen. Spencer Gordon Bennet directed from the script of George Rosener and George M. Merrick.

The plot material concerns the work of the air forces of the law and order in the Canadian wilds to police the lonely and wild country. Complications to this end are found in a murder committed aboard a train passing through the section, a damsel in distress and a gang of racketeers who arrive on the scene for some nefarious business. Each chapter concludes on a predicament for the principals sufficiently puzzling to carry over audience interest to the subsequent week. Running time, for the first chapter, 29 minutes. Running time for the following episodes, 19 minutes each. Release date, December 9, 1937.

Lonesome Ghosts
(RKO Radio)
Excellent

The irrepressible Mickey Mouse and his cohorts, Donald Duck and the Goof, provide some extra special fun in this cartoon on ghosts. The ghosts, with all due respect to Mickey, however, steal the show. Four fun loving, vaguely visible characters, the ghosts, lure Mickey, Donald and the Goof to a haunted house, there to harass the three who advertise themselves as “ghost exterminators.” The ghosts, in as clever a series of animated sequences as have yet been devised, thoroughly confuse Mickey and his pals. In the end the “ghost exterminators,” floundering around in molasses and flour, present such an awesome spectacle that even the ghosts become scared and flee. Running time, 9 minutes.

Prairie Swingaroo
(RKO Radio)
Mediocre Musical

Even in this fair land of these United States, the East is East and the West remains the West and “ne'er the twain shall meet.” For as exemplified in this short subject contest between Pinky Tomlin, upholding the honor of the western lands, and an effete braggart from the eastern environs, it is the sons of the wide, open spaces who excel in such manly sports as shootin' straight and ridin' hard. Pinky, a songsmith of some repute in national Tin Pan Alley circles, illustrates by the way the ancient adage “that music hath charm to soothe the savage beast.” For under the soothing spell of Pinky's prairie yodeling, a rambunctious bronco is melted to the state of a meek and mild trick equine. However, the sedative tune may cause the more musically sensitive of the audience to squirm painfully in their seats. A lass misnomered Lois January is the real cause behind the heated sectional rivalry.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Edgar and Goliath
(RKO Radio)
Another Kennedy Comedy

Another Edgar Kennedy trial and tribulation offering that succeeds in raising the gentleman's high blood pressure considerably and will amuse the fans who derive a great deal of enjoyment from witnessing the unfortunate individual's many predicaments. The “goliath” of the subject's title turns out to be a six cylinder, ninety horsepower tractor which Edgar wins in a contest. The fun for the audience and the woe for Kennedy reaches the peak when the lucky winner arrives to claim his award. Running wild in the midst of dowtown traffic, the machine carts the hapless owner around in whirlpool circles, endangers the weal of pedestrians, defies street cars and engages the local interest of the gendarmes. Some major scaled irritations from the little wife, Florence Lake, together with the difficulty of transplanting a tree from his yard, are additional trials for the hapless Edgar to shoulder.—Running time, 17 minutes.

A musical comedy subject, this features Phil Harris and his orchestra and Ruth Robbins. The comedy angle of the subject concerns the mixup caused when Miss Robbins mistakes Harris for an employee of an escort bureau and he eagerly pretends to be one. Harris, who currently appears with his orchestra on the Jack Benny radio program, sings several songs, including “I Want It Sweet Like You” and “Thank You for the Lovely Evening.” Running time, 20 minutes.

Phoney Boy
(RKO Radio)
Poor

The grade of entertainment contained in this subject may be marked down as the first word in its two worded title. Set on a western ranch, more dull than dude, this minor effort presents musical fare that would be colorless in any locality. J. Harold Murray, trained to be a western hill billy from his “Rio Rita” stage engagement, sings lustily some uninspired melodies. Miss Cass Daly, a miniature of Miss Martha Raye, shouts her songs as badly as the faces she makes in her mugging byplay. The customary group of prairie chanters intone for local color effects. Obviously working their way west, a collection of our own champion “Shag” dancers from the Daily News Harvest Moon Ball contest drop in to strut by now their fully professional dance steps.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Rhythm Wranglers

Six musically inclined cowboys provide the entertainment, playing cowboy and hillbilly tunes. The story concerns the feud between two dude ranch owners. Lloyd Ingraham and Georgia Simons, the owners, feuding for years and ruining each other's business are brought together by the music of the cowboy band and announce their engagement. Ray Whiteley, leader of the band, follows suit by becoming engaged to Ingraham's niece, Jane Walsh. Running time, 19 minutes.

Monogram Has 4,538 Accounts

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, said this week that the company now has 4,538 definite theatre commitments on its product, not including the 2,000 spot booking engagements.

The Dallas exchange has closed deals with all major circuits in that territory for the entire 1937-'38 Monogram product, it was said this week. The circuits include the Jefferson Amusement Company, R. E. Griffiths, Inc., Robb and Rowley, G. Fry, N. B. Blankenship, Interstate Theatre, J. G. Long, Texas Consolidated, Jack Pickens Theatres, Talley Circuit and the Tri-State Circuit.

Five pictures now in production, "Saleslady," "My Old Kentucky Home," "West of Rainbow's End," "Wanderer of the West" and "Painted Trail" are to be completed this month, giving Monogram 26 finished productions by the first of the year.

Next year's schedule tentatively calls for a total of 48 productions, including 32 dramas and 16 westerns. The budget set for the 1937-'38 schedule will be increased approximately 25 per cent for the 1938-'39 season, Mr. Johnston said.

E. B. Derr will produce "Female Fugitive" as his next for the company.

A franchise holders' meeting is tentatively set for March 1st on the coast, and a regional sales meeting will follow in May.

RCA Promotes Five

Frank R. Deakins, former RCA Photophone sales manager, has been elected a vice-president of RCA Manufacturing Company. Homer B. Snook, formerly assistant treasurer of RCA Photophone, has been placed in charge of all Photophone sound equipment sale to theatres and industrial producer licensees. Henry C. Bonfig and Vance C. Woodcox, formerly sales executives with the manufacturing company, were elected vice-presidents. Robert Shannon, a vice-president, has been made general manager, in addition.

Circuits Get Wisconsin Houses

The Standard Theatres Company and the Fox-Wisconsin Company, circuits with headquarters in Milwaukee, last week increased their holdings. Standard added the Geneva at Lake Geneva, and the Delavan at Delavan, while Fox-Wisconsin acquired the Plaza and World in Milwaukee, and the Majestic and Cudahy in Cudahy. Fox-Wisconsin now has 51 theatres in Wisconsin and upper Michigan.

Allied Cruise Cancelled

The annual cruise of Allied of New Jersey to Bermuda was canceled this week when 450 members of the Monarch of Bermuda crew called a strike two hours before sailing time. Irving Dollinger, president, however, planned to sail for the resort on another boat to celebrate his 10th wedding anniversary.

Monogram will hold its 1938-39 convention in Los Angeles, some time in April. Franchise holders and office managers will convene there at a date to be announced by W. Ray Johnston, president, after the first of the year.

COPYRIGHT VIOLATORS TURN TO "BICYCLING"

Distributors' Copyright Protection Bureau Reports Violations in 12 Per Cent of Theatres

Violations of the distributors' copyright on motion pictures were found in some 12 per cent of an undisclosed number of theatres investigated this year, according to the Copyright Protection Bureau. The Bureau maintained by the distributors for the specific purpose of ferreting out and curbing such violations. Gabriel L. Hess, counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is head of the Bureau, but its actual workings are in charge of Jack H. Levin, as director.

Activities of the Bureau in curbing copyright violations were revealed Monday in the Bureau's annual report. Covering the period from October 31, 1936, to October 31, 1937, the report, submitted by Mr. Levin, said:

"With approximately the same number of theatres investigated under practically identical methods, as in each of past recent years, one or more violations were found in 12.03 per cent of the theatres where investigations were completed. This is in excess of the 9.3 per cent of irregularities disclosed during the fiscal year 1936, but still considerably under the 44.6 per cent for the years 1930 and 1931. In addition to the increase of disclosures of irregularities, 'bicycling' violations substantially exceeded the 'hold over' type of violation, a reversal of the trend during preceding years.

"The explanation for this increase in violations disclosed, and the trend of violations toward 'bicycling' rather than 'holding-over,' presumably lies in an influx of new exhibitors and exhibitors previously operating single units or small circuits who acquired one or more additional theatres," said the report.

"During the year the Bureau undertook an intensive investigation in 33 states of motion pictures shown under non-theatrical auspices, to determine the source from which the prints are obtained," it was said.

The report discussed an opinion handed down on December 6, 1937, by the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit. "This opinion, for the first time, expressly recognizes the existence of exclusive exhibition rights, under the statutory copyright obtained for a non-photoplay film registered under Class M. This right to prevent copying is granted by the U. S. Copyright Act to all copyrights and would include photoplay and non-photoplay films. All previous court opinions in respect of exhibition rights were handed down in cases involving only photoplay films."

Nicholas Schenck Reports MGM Studio in "Fine Shape"

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, in New York Monday said that he was elated over his recent visit to the coast, adding that "the studios are in fine shape." He said that "innumerable contracts have been renewed with producers, directors and writers at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. They are too many to enumerate, but every important personality whose contract expired at this time has been continued."

Ben Goetz, MGM production head in England; Victor Saville, English producer signed by the company, and Peter Bull, English actor, arrived on the Normandie Thursday and left immediately by plane for the coast. Mr. Bull will head for the MGM studio, where he has been cast in "Marie Antoinette."

Harry Rapf, producer, has been signed to a new contract by the company.

National Decency Legion Classifies 13 Productions

Of 13 new pictures reviewed and classified by The National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week nine were approved for general patronage and four were found unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Boy of the Streets," "Checkers," "Murder on Diamond Row," "Partners of the Plains," "Romance of the Rockies," "Sergeant Murphy," "Tovarich," "Wells Fargo," "You're a Sweetheart." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Daughter of Shanghai," "Krauch in Hinterhaus" (German), "Man-Proof," "Der Postillon von Lonjumeau" (German).

Philadelphia Club Started

The Motion Picture Club of Philadelphia, a social and fraternal organization, was formed in Philadelphia last week at the Hotel Sylvania. Frank Hammerman, Republic Pictures, was appointed temporary chairman, and Moe Verbin of the Philadelphia Record, as temporary secretary. A temporary board of governors was elected.

Columbia Appoints Managers

Columbia Pictures last week appointed Harry Wineberg to the branch managership of its Los Angeles office and W. Guy Craig branch manager of the Indianapolis office. Mr. Wineberg has been with Columbia four years and was the city salesman in the Los Angeles area. Mr. Craig also was a salesman, working out of the Indianapolis branch for the last eight years.

Preparing Series For GN

Frank Gay, who produced "King of the Sierras" for Grand National, is preparing a series of features in association with Lou Rantz for GN distribution. "King of the Sierras" was released nationally on November 26.

Portland Changes Decrease

Equipment and poster men in the Portland, Ore., area, report that many suburban houses are making two changes weekly instead of three, as was formerly done.

BLIND BOOKING CLAUSE COVERED IN FILMS ACT

Amendment Would Protect Provision; 'Threat' from Hollywood Caricatured in Paper

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Following the decisive defeat of the separate quota proposal in the House of Commons Films Act committee last week and the subsequent introduction by Oliver Stanley of a double credit plan, controversy over the bill quieted down. Parliament will adjourn for the Christmas recess on December 24th.

The Committee this week adopted minor amendments to the bill proposed by Captain Euan Wallace, Parliamentary secretary to the Board of Trade, designed to prevent the unscrupulous from taking advantage of the blind booking clause, but no other features of the legislation were discussed.

Wide attention was accorded in the press to a caricature of an unseen hand from Hollywood firmly gripping Government members of the House by the scruff of the neck which was printed in the left wing newspaper The Week. The newspaper reported that American film executives sent an ultimatum to the British Government that unless certain features of the Films Act were abandoned Hollywood would film short skits damaging to Anglo-British relations and also would withhold American films from British theatres.

"The British capitulated immediately," The Week said. "Undisclosed intervention from Washington is the real explanation of the mystery of the Government's about-face over the question of providing in the bill for an advisory commission with really practical powers to alter protective measures to suit changing conditions."

Mr. Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, told the House of Commons the Government had received many communications from Washington concerning films but none referring specifically to separate quotas or a films commission and that no attempt had been made to impose pressure.

Mr. Stanley's credit proposal provides that films not registered for the distributors' quota would be available for double credit under the exhibitors' quota. He said the aim of the amendment was to provide underselling by American distributors. The effect of the proposal was seen as an extra inducement to counteract the possibility of underselling. Sir Adrian Baillie declared his belief that the suggestion would not accomplish its purpose.

The Stanley proposal was seen as important to American interests since its effect would be that British producers would seek release through British distributors who would not need to acquire the distributors' quota and would be able to offer films as double quota value.

Stage Shows, Radio Fought

Associated British Union Cinemas is believed contemplating the abolition of stage shows in its houses. Certain of the circuit's theatres presenting vaudeville are being studied with this end in view.

The action is in line with the concerted move begun by the film industry to prevent radio broadcasts from theatres, film houses, studios and similar places. The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association will join other trade organizations and theatrical music hall interests in discussion of the competitive problem which has arisen.

The General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association has reached an agreement with the Kinematograph Renters' Society for the exemption of bookings for special children's matinees from rental returns. The distributors will offer only pictures released in August and September for showing during July and August of the following year. The exhibitors have accepted the proposal and will give it a year's trial.

Gainsborough Has Loss

Gainsborough Pictures, subsidiary of Gaumont British, has reported a loss of £11,801 for the year ended June 30th, the total deficit amounting to £127,289. The amount does not include any films produced under the arrangement by GB with General Film Distributors.

Allied Albany Office

Independent Exhibitors, Inc., Allied New England affiliate, plans to establish an independent Exhibitors office in Albany, New York, according to Arthur K. Howard, business manager, who said that 30 new members have been added to the Allied ranks in Upper New York State.

Commonwealth Expands

The Commonwealth Amusement Corporation, operating over 25 theatres in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa, has acquired the 400 seat Plaza at Neosho, Mo., from N. W. Huston. Commonwealth, in partnership with Hugh Gardner and Ed. Harris, also run the Fotosho and Orpheum in Neosho.

Durland Promoted

L. F. Durland has been named sales manager of Monogram Pictures of Kansas City, Inc. W. L. Norris, president of the exchange, has been in ill health for a year, and plans to devote more of his time to covering the territory.

Local 666, Chicago, cameramen's union associated with the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, will hold a dinner dance at the Stevens Hotel, February 5th.

DISPLAY DEPICTS HISTORY OF FILMS

The Selwyn theatre on 42nd Street, off Broadway, New York, has installed a display of photo-murals in the lobby. The exhibit depicts the panoramic history of the motion picture from its pioneer days.

Included in the display are scenes of notable silent and talking pictures, a montage of famous stars, Academy Award winners and composites of memorable moments in motion pictures.

SPA Plans Court Actions Attacking Music Publishers

Beset by internal dissension, the Songwriters Protective Association this week prepared to carry its fight against publishers to the courts, believing this action will result in several members reconsidering the resignations they submitted when it appeared certain that the organization would adopt a controversial amendment to its bylaws.

The amendment, tabled after a deluge of protests, was to provide for a 25 year membership instead of the life membership which members now hold. Irving Caesar, president, received the resignations but declined to accept them immediately. In a letter to the resignees, he pointed out that the amendment was tabled and would not be resurrected in its present form. He also informed the entire membership of the organization's plan to institute actions in New York State supreme court against Irving Berlin, Inc., and Mills Music, Inc.

Through the suits, complaints for which have been prepared but not filed as yet, the SPA will seek to establish the validity of the assignment of rights made to the association by members. The actions also will petition the court to award the SPA all or part of the 10 per cent commission collected by the Music Publishers Protective Association for the disposal of transcription and synchronization rights.

Mr. Caesar explained that the SPA council contends that the 10 per cent should be deducted from the publishers' share of the returns instead of from the entire gross as is the practice now. Mr. Caesar estimated that during the last six years, the publishers association collected 10 per cent on a total of $750,000 to $800,000.

When the SPA council considered the membership amendment, Mr. Caesar said, it was to overcome the contention that life memberships are illegal. Originally, he charged, the publishers advocated the change but, Mr. Caesar continued, when the measure was brought up the publishers reversed themselves with the result that several SPA members tendered their resignations.

"We don't have to accept the resignations, you know," Mr. Caesar said, "and we won't until the members have had a chance to reconsider their decisions. Of course, we're not going to hold anyone in the association against his will. If, after reconsidering their decision, the members still want to resign then we'll accept the resignations."

The SPA's counsel is John Schulman who announced the complaints against the Berlin and Mills companies will be filed "within the next few days."

Press Photographers Ball

The Press Photographers Association of New York will hold its Ninth Annual Entertainment and Dance in the Hotel Commodore, February 18th.

Monarch Buys Rights

Monarch Pictures Company has acquired Western Pennsylvania rights to "Thunder Over the Orient" from Criterion Pictures.

Order Against CFI Affirmed by Court

The decree of the Chancellor of Delaware in declaring null and void and granting a permanent injunction against a proposed amendment to the certificate of incorporation of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., a Delaware corporation, was affirmed by the State supreme court in special session at Dover, Del., this week. The action against the film company was brought by Norman Johnson, a preferred stockholder of New York.

The decree was handed down by Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott in the chancery court at Wilmington last September granting a perpetual injunction against the film company and enjoining it from filing, or causing to be filed, or recording a certificate of amendment to the certificate of incorporation whereby new preferred stock would be created and exchanged for old preferred, the holders of the latter to forfeit unpaid accumulated dividends.

The corporation sought by the proposed amendment to the certificate of incorporation to change its presently outstanding 400,000 shares of $2 dividend cumulative preferred stock into 500,000 shares of $1 dividend cumulative preferred stock and 100,000 shares of new common stock. The old common stock, comprising of 524,937 shares, were to have been converted into 349,982 shares of new common stock at the ratio of 2/3 of a new share for each share of the old stock. The plan provided in addition that dividends in arrears to the extent of $4 per share on the old cumulative stock as of October 1, 1936, would be canceled.

Court Approves New Madison Bond Plan

With the approval by Federal Judge F. A. Geiger in Milwaukee of the reorganization plan for the Capitol theatre and store building at Madison, Wis., the company will issue new bonds totaling $717,000 in lieu of the present first and second mortgage bonds. Of the new bond issue, $417,000 will be first mortgage bonds and $300,000 second mortgage bonds.

The court also signed an order to show cause why a master should not be appointed to take up consideration of a change in the lease covering the location of the theatre entrance and two stores in the building.

Shuberts' Reports Filed

Lee and Jacob Shubert this week in the United States district court in New York, filed their answer to the $4,000 suit brought against them by the Keith Massachusetts Corporation on two alleged promissory notes. The answer set forth that $1,666 was tendered in full payment on November 1st, but that the plaintiff refused to accept it.

Edward Gross with Loew

Edward Gross, formerly associate producer for Sol Lesser on the Bobby Breen pictures, last Thursday signed a contract with David L. Loew Productions.

Allowance Denied in Roxy Theatre Petition

The petition of the Tipton Bondholders' Protective Committee for an allowance of $5,000 as fee in the Roxy theatre reorganization was denied by Judge Francis G. Caffey in the United States district court in New York this week. Judge Caffey ruled that the committee had traded in first mortgage bonds and that he therefore was compelled to disallow their request.

In a written opinion Judge Caffey revealed that several members of the Tipton Committee had purchased and sold Roxy bonds at a profit of $2,160. The committee's request for $361 for disbursements was allowed, however. Judge Caffey cautioned other petitioners that the allowance of disbursements in this case was not to be "regarded as a precedent."

Officer Studying Production

Captain W. W. Jervey, Signal Corps, United States Army, has begun a study of studio motion picture production in Hollywood in continuation of the cooperative training program carried on by the War Department and the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science. Captain Richard T. Schlosberg, who completed the course last year, and Captain Charles S. Stodter, in 1935, are now engaged in training film production at the War Department studios in Washington.

Basil on Holiday

Nicholas J. Basil, general manager and film buyer for Basil Theatres, Buffalo, N. Y., is en route to Hollywood by way of the Grand Canyon. While in Hollywood he plans to visit the studios, Palm Springs and attend the Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day.

Golden a Coordinator

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper has approved the request of George Creel, Commissioner of the United States Golden Gate Exposition Commission, for the services of Nathan D. Golden as coordinator for the federal motion pictures to be exhibited at the Exposition. Mr. Golden is chief of the Motion Picture Section of the Department of Commerce.

Special Film Truck Developed

A new mobile motion picture and photographic power truck, capable of producing 40,000 watts for lighting or projection purposes, has been developed and placed in service by the photographic department of Ford Motor Company. Developed principally for motion picture or other camera work under adverse conditions or for night work, the new unit is said to carry complete power and lighting facilities for taking pictures or for projection work.

Seligman Joins Cinepix

Leo Seligman has joined Cinepix Company, New York, as vice-president, and will handle distribution of full length foreign features as well as short subjects. The company's current list includes 18 Polish films, 14 Italians and four Spanish pictures.

J. H. Hoffberg Company, Inc., has moved to larger quarters on the 5th floor in the same building at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York.

OBITUARIES

Ted Healy Dies In Hollywood

Ted Healy, comedian who rose to fame with his "stooges" act, died unexpectedly in Hollywood Tuesday. Death came a comparatively few hours after preview audiences had acclaimed his work in the Warner Brothers picture "Hollywood Hotel." He is survived by his widow, the former Betty Hickman, whom he married in 1936, and an infant son, John Jacob, born last Friday.

Coroner Frank Nance issued an autopsy order when Mr. Healy's physician, Dr. Wyatt Lemont, declined to sign the death certificate after a first report that the death was caused by a heart attack.

Mr. Healy was born in Houston, Tex., October 1, 1896, and was educated at Holy Innocents School in that city and at De La Salle Institute in New York. Following seven years of successful stage and vaudeville experience he entered films in 1930 and since that time has appeared in many of the leading productions of Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, to whom he was under contract at the time of his death.

Lee Milton Boda

Lee Milton Boda, 78, Columbus, Ohio, who founded and operated the Valentine circuit of legitimate theatres in 1895, died at his home following a three-month illness. Mr. Boda was the first manager of the Hartman theatre in Columbus, which his son, Robert F., now manages.

John E. Ungerfeld

John E. Ungerfeld, 51, formerly operator of the Rheben Theatres, N. Y., including houses in Portchester, Nyack, Ossining and Rahway, N. J., died in New York City. He was a brother-in-law of Sol Edwards of Grand National.

Arthur L. Merritt

Arthur L. Merritt, 57, Oconto, Wis., exhibitor, was killed when struck by an automobile in Cuba City, Ill., where he had gone to open another theatre.

Martens Reelected Union Head

Arthur Martens has been reelected president of Local 650, Westchester County Motion Picture Machine Operators Union, affiliated with the International Association of Theatrical Stage Employees. Other officers are Bernard J. Ritch, first vice-president; Irving A. Weiss, second vice-president; Anthony Dente, third vice-president; Emil Smith, recording secretary; Fred Thombe, financial secretary-treasurer; Richard S. Hayes, business manager; Albert E. Bell and George B. Alley, trustees.

Actress Leaving RKO

Maxine Jennings, actress, by mutual agreement will leave RKO Radio, January 1st. The actress' contract terminated amicably, it was said.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

COWBOY STAR, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Shunn—Many told us this was the best western they had seen. Although we had our pre-Christmas slump, it was thoroughly appreciated by those who saw it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DANGEROUS ADVENTURE, A: Don Terry, Rosalind Keith—Unquestionably the poorest picture we have played in eight years. Whatever ledger profit is shown is more than wiped out in the houses that play it. Played December 3-4.—R. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

DODGE CITY TRAIL: Charles Starrett—A very good western to less than normal business owing to winter weather conditions. Played December 11.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LEGION OF TERROR: Bruce Cabot—Lost heavily on this. Picture only fair.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LET'S GET MARRIED: Ralph Bellamy, Ida Lupino—Don't pass this one up for a dual bill. It's a nice little comedy that we billed with a western to satisfied patrons. Business below par before Christmas.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MURDER IN GREENWICH VILLAGE: Richard Arlen, Fay Wray—Should make Arlen a "he" man again. He doesn't register in anything but action pictures. This was enjoyed by quite a few. Running time, 68 minutes. Played December 3-4.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

First National

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan—A nice little program picture that goes well on a double feature. It in no way compares with "San Quentin," although the producer would have you think otherwise. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EMPTY HOLSTERS: Dick Foran—Western pictures do well at this theatre. So we often use a western on our Sunday and Monday program. Of course, we try to select an extra good western for a Sunday show. "Empty Holsters" is a swell western and it held its own with "Hoosier Schoolboy." We regret to see Dick Foran stop making westerns, but it does seem too bad that after a star is developed and begins to mean something at the box office to withdraw that star. Dick Foran is ideal for westerns. Well, Dick, here's success to you in whatever new roles they decide to star you in.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

EMPTY HOLSTERS: Dick Foran, Patricia Wallthall—Just another Foran western which seems to hold the interest of the kids and some of the grown-ups, but lacking so much in real interest for the average patron. We must admit, though, that there isn't so much of the impossible in westerns today. Played November 19-20.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR: Kenny Baker, Jane Wyman—Good show to fair business. Kenny Baker has a pleasing voice and good personality on the screen. You will make no mistake in giving this preferred playing time.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark.

OVER THE GOAL: William Hopper, June Travis—A very good little feature. Good for family night with plenty of good shorts. The kids liked it and had no walkouts. Seems as if most of the programers were designed for double billing this year. Running time, 65 minutes.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Barton MacLane, Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart—Don't believe we ever played a Pat O'Brien picture which was not good. Some better than others, but always good. This was a dandy action melodrama and that Sheridan girl didn't hurt the cast one little bit. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 26-27.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Gaumont British

TALK OF THE DEVIL: Ricardo Cortez, Sally Eilers—Here is a real surprise. About as clever a mystery picture to figure out as we have had in some time. Business fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Spencer Tracy, Freddie Bartholomew—They do not make them any better than this one for story, cast, production and photography, and not much worse from the box office angle. I think this is the best show I ever ran and the few who came agreed with me. I tried to run a ten-cent school matinee Wednesday afternoon and not enough of the students came to pay the operating expenses, so had to call it off. I think this shows conclusively that the young folks are definitely not interested in this type of picture. It is to be regretted, but I am an exhibitor, not a philanthropist, and it is thumbs down on this type of picture from now on. I have cancelled "The Life of Emile Zola" and tried to cancel "The Good Earth." Personally I enjoyed "Captains Courageous" very much. The shots of the sea are wonderful, but, "Quoth the Raven." Running time, 116 minutes. Played Nov. 24-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—One swell comedy. Myrna is wasted on a straight part but Powell more than carries the load and who ever wrote this script really put some thought into it. Did a nice business and pleased the customers. Played December 5-7.—R. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones—Jeanette MacDonald's best so far. We took a beating on it though, due maybe to extreme cold weather. Picture was much too long though. Could have taken out first three reels and all would have enjoyed it. Would like to start an organization to limit all musicals to 90 minutes or less. What help could I get? Let me know. Running time, 138 minutes. Played December 5-7.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FIREFLY, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Allan Jones—A most lavish production that failed to click. Allan Jones received more favorable comment than Nelson Eddy has ever had in our foyer. Jones is a comer and an artist in all respects. Miss MacDonald still holds the top place in singing stars. Her acting, poise and artistic ability outshines any other. The picture is wonderful but for some reason missed fire here. Running time, 138 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren Williams—Patrons seemed to enjoy this or at least it held their interest. A good old sob picture. Running time, 75 minutes. Played December 1-2.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN OF THE PEOPLE: Florence Rice, Ted Healy, Joseph Calleia—A fair program picture suitable for a double bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Edna May Oliver, Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'Sullivan—Swell little picture with Miss Oliver being as usual the whole show. O'Sullivan's acting as always is forced and not natural. This is the first picture that Loew's have given us that is up to their standard. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan, Walter Pidgeon—Don't think much of this one. The story is very thin and it seemed to lack something because it could not hold the interest. Running time, 73 miinutes. Played December 3-4.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—The age of this picture certainly does not hurt it one bit. We didn't play it when first issued but have played all of the others since and we believe this to be the best of the lot. Running time, 105 minutes. Played December 5-6.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SARATOGA: Jean Harlow, Clark Gable—A fine farewell picture from one of our favorite stars, Jean Harlow. An unusually good cast, Jean, Clark Gable, Lionel Barrymore, Frank Morgan and Una Merkel. I would like to see Una in more and bigger parts for she is plenty good. This is a good story, and pleased nearly one hundred per cent. It is barely noticeable that Jean is not in all the scenes. Running time, 94 minutes. Played Nov. 26-27-28.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

TARZAN ESCAPES: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—This doubled with "Public Cowboy, No. 1" almost gave us Shirley Temple business, which means almost tops. I list both pictures together because both had a specific drawing power and this combination gave above average business. I was a little late playing this Tarzan picture but that did not seem to hurt its drawing and it is one grand action, adventure and thrill drama, as good or better than the other Tarzan pictures.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Monogram

HOOSIER SCHOOLBOY: Mickey Rooney, Anne Nagel—This is a good heart interest story with Mickey Rooney delivering a swell performance, and the rest of the players adequate for the parts they portrayed. We did above average business Sunday and about average Monday. This was doubled with "Empty Holsters," a Warner Bros. western—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RIDERS OF THE DAWN: Jack Randall, Peggy Keys—A pretty good start for this series of westerns. This star gives promise of becoming a welcome addition to the ranks of western stars. As for his singing, with the success of musical westerns some producers believe that all you have to do is to have a cowboy break out in song and you have a singing western, but it is not that easy. First it takes special kind of singing, cowboy songs, songs of the plains, hill billy songs, group singing by a bunch of cowboys, songs while they ride the trail. The music and singing must come as a natural break in the story. In my opinion "Riders of the Dawn" is a good western without the singing and the singing in this does not improve this western but no doubt the music part of these westerns will improve with coming releases. A word about George Cooper who plays the part of "Grizzly" in this. With proper care he could easily develop a role similar to "Windy" which would be a welcome addition to any series of westerns. I am glad to see this trouper of the silent days still with us, taking such swell character parts. This was doubled with "This Is My Affair."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall—A perfectly made picture, interesting story to some, everyone in it doing a good job, but we could not get them to lay their admission money on the line.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind.

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall, Melvyn Douglas—Picture like this one is a punishment that should not be inflicted on the public. It grossed enough to buy the shorts and pay express.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny—Pretty good picture—Somehow seemed to need something it didn't have. Not one of Benny's best.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

BLONDE TROUBLE: Johnny Downs, Eleanore Whitney—My customers said not so hot. Me too.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

CHAMPAGNE WALTZ: Gladys Swarthout, Fred MacMurray. A very satisfactory performance, but our business was disappointing. Played December 1-2.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Randolph Scott, Irene Dunne—Do not try, as I did, to put this picture over in a big way because it will not go over. I displayed 6 panels of 24 sheet posters on it besides the regular newspaper display and did not take in as much money in four days as I should have done in one. To those exhibitors who are yet to play this picture suggest you set it on the weekend and use it as a single feature and it will give fair satisfaction. It positively is not a Sunday opening picture.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind.

LOVE ON TOAST: Stella Ardler, John Payne—There may have been worse pictures than this one made, but in my 30 years as an exhibitor I never saw one. This is one of the short ones that was too long. Running time, 62 minutes.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR TOMORROW: Beulah Bondi, Victor Moore—Liberty gave this one three stars. But it's not the type of picture for small towns. Might go over in an old folks home or an old maids convention. Business poor. In fact I failed to do any business on any Paramount pictures this year. They are far below last year's pictures.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Fred MacMurray, Carole Lombard—A very good picture, although somewhat old, was appreciated by those who saw it. Business poor on account of cold wave.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THUNDER TRAIL: Gilbert Roland, Charles Bickford, Marsha Hunt—As good a western as any one could ask for. When a company puts in the stars that Paramount did on this picture no exhibitor should complain. These do not draw as well as the Hopalongs but to ask that is a little beyond reason. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THUNDER TRAIL: Gilbert Roland, Marsha Hunt, Charles Bickford—Heard no kicks. Guess they all thought it a good outdoor picture and it was. Had enough action and suspense to suit all. Running time, 55 minutes. December 3-4.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

OLD CORRAL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Good western. Not one of Autry's best.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PUBLIC COWBOY, NO. 1: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Ann Rutherford—This doubled with "Tarzan Escapes" almost gave us Shirley Temple business, which means almost tops. I list both pictures together because both had a specific drawing power and this combination gave above average business. As for this new Gene Autry picture, this is tops also. An original story, plenty of doings, good singing, especially the song "The West Ain't What It Used To Be" and lots of comedy. They gave Smiley Burnette more to do which is wise because Smiley is a great asset to this series of westerns, giving it comedy relief, which was greatly needed in westerns.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt—A very interesting picture. Action and comedy that appealed to the patrons, and of course the uniforms of the midshipmen and their drills and their life in the academy made a good impression. Played November 13.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

FIGHT FOR YOUR LADY: Jack Oakie, John Boles, Ida Lupino—OK program picture. Amusing.—Rudolph Covi, Covi's Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town patronage.

FIGHT FOR YOUR LADY: John Boles, Ida Lupino—This is a real comedy that seemed to please our crowd very much. Jack Oakie really goes to town in this one, and is well supported. Of course there is nothing serious about this, but it was intended for laughing purposes and entertainment only. It fulfills the bill to perfection. Sorry to report, however, that its drawing power seemed limited. Business not up to normal.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark.

I am a little bit ashamed of the fact that getting as much as I do out of the "What the Picture Did for Me" department, I have failed to do my share of reporting on the pictures used. Come on you, Independents.—F. L. CLARKE, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark.

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard—This is a swell comedy that pleased a small crowd very much. Exceedingly cold weather probably cut down the gross on this picture, but you can promise your patrons a real comedy when you run it. Good music helps it out.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark.

MUSIC FOR MADAME: Nino Martini, Joan Fontaine—Nice little programer that gets by nicely. Running time, 76 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

NEW FACES OF 1937: Joe Penner, Harriet Hilliard—Like many small towners, our folks are not particular. Not a single kick on this picture and quite a number of compliments. Personally, I would hand out demerits to the camera and the cutting room, the former for shooting too much film, the latter for not cutting enough of it out. However, if the picture proves (and it should) that Harriet Hilliard must have a role with more womanly dignity such as she had in "Follow the Fleet," it will have accomplished something for the common good.—H. Wilson Young, Wahoo Theatre, Dubach, La. Small town and rural patronage.

ON AGAIN—OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—The Wheeler-Woolsey fans seemed to enjoy this type of comedy. Business was fair. Played December 4.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BIG BUSINESS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—An awful waśte of good celluloid. This is in Fox's low bracket but didn't gross film rental. Buy some more shorts instead. Played December 8-9.—R. B. Hipple, Bijou Theatre, Pierre, S. D. General patronage.

45 FATHERS: Jane Withers—A very good picture any way you look at it. Very funny—Rudolph J. Covi, Covi's Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers—Too Ritzy! These birds are OK as support but when you have to look at them most of the time, it sure does get tiresome. And they are so silly. Otherwise it was a very nice program picture. Running time, 94 minutes. Played December 1-2.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LOVE IS NEWS: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—If you missed this picture as I did, you had better go back and get it. It is one of the best shows run here in some time. I was afraid of this, which was my mistake that I did not use it sooner. This show is all to the good.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark.

LOVE UNDER FIRE: Loretta Young, Don Ameche—Very fine action melodrama with something doing all the time. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 24-25.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SECOND HONEYMOON: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—Good comedy well produced. Good for any spot, but not for extended runs. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—A very remarkable production which pleased everyone who saw it. We did some extra advertising and personally guaranteed the show. As result we did better than average business. Played December 8-9.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—An excellent picture. Plenty of action, acting and comedy. This one will go over well anywhere, town or country. Played December 4.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—A honey! If that little gal doesn't have everything, we'd like to have someone tell us what it is she doesn't have. And there was a swell story with an excellent supporting cast. Running time, 78 minutes. Played November 28-29.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THIS IS MY AFFAIR: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Taylor, Victor McLaglen—Chalk up another hit for Fox. It did not prove such a big hit at the box office but at that we did a good average business, but you can classify this as a swell piece of entertainment. The recreation of the period of 1900's was a fine piece of work. The music of the period was delightful, especially to the old timers and the youngsters were entertained also. The story holds interest all the way.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple, Victor McLaglen—Shirley Temple still makes good in a picture hardly suited to her, but you need not be afraid of it as it will please generally. However, it did not get as much money for me as the previous picture with this star. However, I had no complaints and many compliments on the show, and the reduced receipts might have been caused by local conditions. She is still the girl that will lift the mortgage.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Warner Baxter, Loretta Young, Virginia Bruce—A very fine picture that failed to do any business. All characters did fine work. Truly a good family picture. Enjoyed by all who came. Running time, 85 minutes.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce—Ah, here's The Picture! One of those appealing stories with an ending most women will tell you isn't possible, yet just the way you would like to see it end. Loretta Young is always grand, Baxter never lets you down, although he is getting a little old for romantic leads, and Virginia Bruce! Say, why has this honey been playing the menace all these months? She's swell. Running time, 85 minutes. Played November 21-22.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers—Plenty of action and comedy. Of course the Ritz Brothers furnish a great deal of the comedy. Good picture for small towns. Played November 20.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

United Artists

AFFAIRS OF CELLINI: Frederic March—If you haven't played this, it is worth your while. Running time, 79 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—Great in any spot for extended runs. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANOTHER DAWN: Kay Francis—This feature enjoyed by all. Play it in any spot. Running time, eight reels. Played December 2.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Played this one late but pleased my audience. Play it. In Canada will draw extra business. Running time, 10 reels. Played November 25.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

SLIM: Pat O'Brien, Henry Fonda—Very good action picture with an excellent cast. Somewhat marred by the death of Pat O'Brien, but pleased most of the patrons. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Dec. 1-2.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SLIM: Pat O'Brien, Henry Fonda, Margaret Lindsay—Here is a perfect little picture, not pretentious but well cast, well acted, and above all logical and convincing. There are thrills aplenty and a diversity of entertainment for every type of movie fan. To Pat O'Brien goes the top honors for his portrayal of a rough and ready linesman who loves his job more than anything in the world. It's a swell picture, out of the ordinary and worth booking anywhere, any time. Running time, 80 minutes. Played December 11.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

VARSITY SHOW: Dick Powell, Fred Waring—Better than the past few Powell back stage shows. The youngsters stole the show all the way. Very much enjoyed by my patrons. Running time, 10 reels. Played November 18.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

VARSITY SHOW: Dick Powell, Lane Sisters—You can go to the limit on this picture as it is really a swell entertainment, practically doubled the usual patronage on Friday-Saturday. Rosemary Lane is a new star that really has something, a swell personality and a fine singing voice. I believe you will hear plenty from this young lady in the future. Congratulations, Warner! Give us some more as good. Running time, 2 hours.—F. L. Clarke, Cozy Theatre, Hazen, Ark.

VARSITY SHOW: Dick Powell, Lane Sisters, Fred Waring—Not up to the Dick Powell standard. Made the mistake of playing this too close to "Singing Marine." The dance ensembles saved the show for they are fine, but then we expect that from Busby Berkeley. Fairly satisfactory production but does not rate the high film rental. Running time, 120 minutes. Played Dec. 3-4-5.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING: No. 1—Good but songs were not familiar enough to my patrons to have them enjoy it or to attempt to sing them. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

GRAND HOOTER: Broadway Comedies—Charlie Chase really goes to town. Packs a lot of real laughs. Even made us forget our business worries. Columbia has the answers when it comes to comedies.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Special Sport Thrills—Very good bowling reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Educational

MONTAGUE THE MAGNIFICENT: Bert Lahr—Terrible. It might go in the wild and wooly sticks, but for the regular patron it could not be worse. We don't like two-reel comedies anyway and this capped the climax. Running time, 18 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIFE OF THE GANNETS: Treasure Chest—Very fine. Producers should specialize in single reel subjects like this, cartoons and novelties.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SMART WAY, THE: Willie Howard—Very good, I thought. Running time, 19 minutes.—Rudolph Covi, Covi's Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town patronage.

SMART WAY, THE: Willie Howard—Just an ordinary filler with no drawing power whatsoever. Running time, 18 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CHILE, LAND OF CHARM: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Good travel reel. Coloring is very beautiful. Show it. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

HONG KONG, HUB OF CHINA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very good travel talk. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

KING WITHOUT A CROWN, THE: Historical Mysteries—Didn't care for this first subject of the Historical Mysteries series. Hope the rest are better. Too dry.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MAESTRO: Tabloid Musicals—This would have been very good if they had left out the Little Maestro. Some laughs. Running time, 11 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, A: Robert Benchley—A grand subject. Benchley's stuff is somewhat over the heads of some movie goers but generally they liked it very much. He's an artist in his line.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THREE SMART BOYS: Our Gang—The Our Gang bring down the house and this was no exception. Running time, 11 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Paramount

KILLER OF THE TONTO: Paragraphics—A fair short several scenes of which we have seen in other shorts put out by the producers. Enjoyed by all. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NIGHT IN MANHATTAN: Headliners—A very good musical of a New York night club's floor show.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

QUEENS OF HARMONY: Phil Spitalny and His Girl Orchestra—Paramount has made two exceptional shorts in the past two seasons. Last season it was Vincent Lopez's "Knock, Knock" and this season "Queens of Harmony." The tops of anybody's musicals. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHERE SNOW IS KING: Paragraphics—Play this, a perfect picture on the art of skiing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YOU CAME TO MY RESCUE: Screen Songs—A bouncing ball, sing song with Shep Fields accompanying.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

RHYTHM IN A NIGHT COURT: Nu-Atlas Produtcions—A dandy little vaudeville reel with the adagio dancers as the best we have had a privilege to witness. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal

Twentieth Century-Fox

SLAVE SHIP: Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery—This picture failed to do the business we anticipated, although was enjoyed by those who saw it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BRING IN THE GIRLS: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Eddie Bergen and Charlie McCarthy introduce the acts in this fair vaudeville reel. Just a program filler. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

CHOKES ON YOU, THE: Broadway Brevities—Joe Palooka and Knobby put over another good comedy. This time Joe kayoes a wrestler and everyone is satisfied. Some peachy bathing beauties pep it up. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

JAM SESSION, THE: Clyde McCoy and Orchestra.—Fine. I wish Warner Brothers would include Lew Childre and Jack Turner in some of their vaudeville or novelty shorts.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT SUN: Colortour Adventure—The poorest travel talk I ever have run. Scenery good but recording is poor. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kans. Small town patronage.

LOUISIANA KINGS: Melody Masters—A good musical reel although the songs selected could have been better. A brother and sister dance routine to the strains of "Dinah" gives it a "wow" ending. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MAL HALLETT AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—When we got a Melody Band Master we thought we had something, but they are getting poorer and poorer and this one about hits the bottom. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MOVIE MANIA: Broadway Brevities—Excellent entertainment. Don't miss this one. Popular music enjoyed by all and excellent dancing and settings. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural Patronage.

PALM BEACH KNIGHTS: Charles Ahearn—Got some laughs but personally thought it very poor. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PICTORIAL REVIEW: No. 3—A very interesting pictorial, especially the last episode. The rodeo episode is very poor, but as an entire reel it will get by. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RIMAC ORCHESTRA, THE: Melody Masters—Pass this one up. Very poor for rural community—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

ROVER'S RIVAL: Looney Tunes—Not up to the usual standard of Vitagraph. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Wells Signed by Educational

William (Billy) K. Wells, actor and writer, was signed last week by Educational to write stories for its two-reel comedies. His first story will feature Charles Kemper. Later he will contribute stories for Willie Howard and others on the Educational roster.

Imperial Gets Color Film

Curtis Nagel, Imperial Pictures cameraman, has returned to New York with several thousand feet of color film shot in South and Central America. The film is to be used for a new series of short subjects in color.

Frank Donovan is producing "Ain't Love Grand" (tentative title).

A WORD TO EXHIBITORS ABOUT "A New Day"

The producers of "A New Day" offer this short subject, believing it appropriate for a place on your program. It was produced in Hollywood with a cast headed by Gilbert Emery who was featured in "The Magnificent Obsession" and "The Life of Emile Zola." The picture bears the endorsement of leading medical and scientific authorities, but it is in no sense "a medical picture." Although it features new weapons that doctors now have for fighting pneumonia, the film carries a strong and satisfying emotional appeal and ends on a high note of success and conquest. Above all, it is entertaining. The fact that the Radio City Music Hall is showing this picture is proof that "A New Day" is a short subject of unusual merit.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

WE ANNOUNCE

The new editor of the Round Table is Jack Goldstein.

Miss Gertrude Merriam, identified with the department since its beginning, is its associate editor.

The department will continue in the pursuit of its plans and programs of service to showmen and this industry of the exhibition of motion pictures in the pattern which has been so thoroughly established these several years by A-Mike Vogel's constructive application of the policies of Martin Quigley, editor-in-chief and publisher.

Mr. Goldstein comes to the Round Table, to Motion Picture Herald and Quigley Publications, from an abundant experience in showmanship, an extensive acquaintance in the field, and with a record of competency in promotional matters pertaining to exhibition. He started with the Netoco circuit in Boston and grew with it. When in 1929 Publix absorbed Netoco he became advertising manager for their eight Boston theatres, then went presently to the Shubert Theatres, to RKO Theatres in Brooklyn and next in New England, thence to United Artists and more recently with Universal and RKO.

The Round Table advances to an important new year as an organ and instrument of cooperative service to showmen by showmen. The department consists of the interests, activities and works of the showmen whom it serves. Enrolled as members of the Round Table are the showmen through whose hands must pass not less than seventy per cent of the gross revenues of the motion picture industry in the United States and Canada, with an important representation abroad, conspicuously in the British Empire.

As December of 1937 draws to a close it becomes evident that the showmanship of 1938 is likely to find itself facing problems of increasing demands.

Plans, announced, and to be detailed in an early issue, contemplate a program for this department, and the Quigley Awards, calculated to continue to advance the interests and recognitions of the men who sell the product to the ultimate consumer.

While next week Mr. Goldstein will be addressing you himself in behalf of this department, it is now perhaps appropriate for the editor of the Herald to observe that these pages, as elsewhere in this publication, are continuously open to the expressions and communications of showmen readers.

Both Motion Picture Herald and the Round Table have a decided policy and point of view, but it is not a condition of access that everyone shall agree.

It is a point of considerable pride to the editors that the flow of correspondence to these offices is a continuous assurance of the interest of readers and an evidence of the recognition of the service.

It may well be a source of satisfaction, too, to the showmen who cooperate to make the Round Table, that in that certain marginal circulation of the Herald which reaches into far and high places of importance outside the industry, in Wall Street, in Washington and among other persons of estate, this department ever attracts a special attention.

More directly and immediately important is the fact that it is these pages and the periodical competitions for the Awards which sharply focus the attention of the leaders and administrators of affairs in this world of the motion picture.

The Round Table is a success, and the success of you who make it.

Round Table In Pictures

Display standing 12 feet high and manipulated with electric gear shifts showing revolving figure of Adolphe Menjou brought crowds to the lobby of the Keith Memorial, Boston, to gaze at Jack Granara's "Stage Door" display. One turn revealed cast, next opened side door showing figure of Ginger Rogers and third that of Katharine Hepburn.

To sell "Alcatraz" to his patrons, Frank Regan, manager of Warner's, Fresno, Cal., in Lou Halper's Pacific Coast zone, planted fingerprinting apparatus in lobby, with instructor in constant attendance. . . . Created for Spence Pierce by House Artist Earl Davenport, Warner, Memphis, Tenn., was giant wall decoration on "Tovarich" flanked on either side with seasonal greetings, Christmas bells and simulated candles.

Eye-arresting indeed was Manager Tommy Read's "Merry-Go-Round" animated display described elsewhere in this section created by his house artist for date at the Paramount, Atlanta, Ga. Caricatures of the picture's four horsemen of hilarity—Bert Lahr, Jimmy Savo, Billy House and Mischa Auer were mounted on horses which revolved constantly.

Plaque Winners For November

First-time Plaque winner is Lyle Harding, Warner Bros.' Sheridan Square, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, Pa., voted the November Silver on "Emil Zola". Previous winner of a Bronze Plaque, Guy Martin scored again in the competitions for his entry on "The Firefly" at the Colfax Theatre, South Bend, Ind. Details of both winning campaigns reported by the entrants are detailed elsewhere in this section.

Distortion mirror gag for his lobby was attention-getter resorted to by Manager Robert W. Rhodes, Colonial Theatre, Akron, Ohio, for "Damsel in Distress" engagement. Theatreman reports the slant as creating plenty of excitement, most of the "stoppers" being adults.

Listed high in the various exploitation slants evolved by Guy Martin in his winning "Firefly" campaign was use of plane opening day, flying over Notre Dame Stadium during Pitt game before a reported crowd of 65,000 people. Trailing behind plane was enormous banner carrying star name, title and theatre. Seven-foot Neon title light atop building on main street was another outdoor bit of advertising that did much to attract.

Gainfully planted in window of leading downtown florist was orchid display secured by Manager Lyle Harding, for "Emile Zola." Neat tie-in copy in the form of card in center of window proffered orchids to Mr. Paul Muni for his superlative performance in the picture. Rated high in this theatreman's winning campaign was the newspaper coverage secured, including a reported first time by-lined motion picture critic's review.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Plane Plugs "Bride"

Flying over Yale Bowl during recent football game was ship carrying banner advertising Manager R. E. Russell's "Bride Wore Red" at the Poli Theatre, New Haven, Conn. Other outdoor slants included street broadcast in front of theatre opening day, sponsored by local gas station with guest tickets to persons broadcasting.

News agency distributed gratis copies of movie magazines carrying story of Joan Crawford's dramatic rise to stardom and strip across front with playdates, etc. Imprinted menu sheets distributed in selected restaurants, attractive lobby display consisted of large doll dressed in red and neon illuminated in addition to radio plugs ahead and during engagement.

Edits Paper

Local officials of West Memphis, Ark., were among the first to come through with congratulatory messages which were reprinted in special 14 page newspaper conceived and edited by Manager Norval Packwood for the opening of the new Crittenden Theatre. Messages from the stars in Hollywood were also included as were those from numerous manufacturers whose products were used in the theatre construction. Stories on how talking pictures are taken, editorial from publisher of local newspaper together with cuts of the theatre personnel were used.

Binstock Gifted

It's news when merchants get together to honor a theatreman, yet that's the lot that fell to Manager Paul Binstock, Marboro Theatre, Brooklyn. A committee representing the Bay Parkway Board of Trade presented the theatreman on his stage with an elaborate military set as a token of the merchants' appreciation for Binstock's cooperation in recent tieups.

Dreyfus Kin Speaks

Two column story with cut of Capt. Alfred Dreyfus and his cousin Marcel Dreyfus, resident of Youngstown, Ohio, were planted in leading paper by Manager Frank Savage for his "Zola" date at the Warner Theatre. Relatives gave interesting details on the case and praised the authenticity of the picture.

CHRISTMAS TREE HUNT PLANTED BY HARRISON

A hookup that combines the angles of charity, entertainment and commercialism plus a close tiein with churches and a 30-minute broadcast was the 24-day "Christmas Tree Hunt" planted by City Manager J. P. Harrison, Texas Consolidated Theatres, Amarillo, Tex.

Listeners were asked to hunt through their homes for articles of food, clothing, toys, etc. Each day items asked for were brought to designated theatres, donors admitted gratis on presentation of articles. Collection was turned over to churches for distribution.

Distortion Mirror

Promoted from local amusement park for lobby display was distortion mirror used at the Colonial Theatre, Akron, Ohio, by Bob Rhodes for "Damsel in Distress," see photo in Round Table picture section. Newspapers gave the gag fine play, using two pieces of art and story, also reproducing pictures of Akron belles trying on the shoes used by Fred Astaire in the production. These autographed shoes were on display in the lobby two weeks ahead, and were offered to the town's best amateur dancer in a Fred Astaire dancing contest. Radio publicity was assured by having for judges two representatives from broadcasting stations.

Other slants included street bally of boy in tails carrying copy reading "you will be unfair to yourself if you don't see etc., etc."; classified ad contest; counter and window cards and special lighted display on hotel building.

Merry-Go-Round

Advance lobby display for "Merry-Go-Round of 1938" created by Manager Tommy Read, Paramount, Atlanta, was realistic merry-go-round, constructed by house artist from compo-board and animated with small motor. (See photo in Round Table picture section). Caricatures of the picture's four horsemen of hilarity, Bert Lahr, Jimmy Savo, Billy House and Mischa Auer were mounted on horses on giant set piece which revolved constantly. Stills, standees and poster cutouts were also used while loud speaker was hidden in bottom of carousel and hooked up to phonograph in another part of lobby playing hit tunes from picture.

Women vs. Men

Are women equal to men in business was the theme of Jimmy Barnett's newspaper contest planted for the "My Dear Miss Aldrich" date at the Community Theatre, Miami, Fla. Cash and pass prizes went to those submitting most logical letter either pro or con. Contest, which ran five days in advance, netted the theatreman extra publicity with amusing answers also running in paper.

Street bally was two men who picketed office buildings, one bearing sandwich board reading "Girls, strike against male bossism, and the other, "Men, down with women bosses," followed by cast and playdates.

Monkey Business

"Pin-the-head-on-the-monkey" was contest conceived by Manager Charles H. Gibson for his "Borneo" date at the Gibson Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Headless cardboard monkey was mounted on one sheet and blindfolded kids supplied with heads were invited to pin them on the monkey, tickets going to winners. Tiger heads with flashing eyes, palm trees and replica of jungle were used for atmospheric lobby display and entire staff wore imprinted helmets.

Newspaper Contest

Through local merchant tieup, Jack Markle, Coolidge Corner Theatre, Brookline, Mass., for "Lost Horizon" secured a full co-op ad page in which cuts of the various stars in picture were scattered through merchants' ads. Passes were awarded those submitting accurate list of stars' together with names of stores in which photos appeared. Paper carried stories together with art on the Shangri La lamasery.

Special display of stills was planted in high schools and public libraries, Shangri La set model in local power company window and enlargements photos also shown in various stores.

Durbin Double

Promoted to theatre was Harold Janecky's Deanna Durbin double contest for "100 Men and a Girl" date at the Merrick Theatre, Jamaica, L. I. Cooperating shoe store paid for all cash prizes, heralds and cost of local movie taken of the winner, shown at store, high school and throughout town.

B&K Theatres Effect Kid Tiein

by MITCHELL K. LINER
Assistant Manager, Crystal, Chicago

Following the enterprising efforts of its publicity department, Balaban and Katz effected the most extensive tie-up it has ever undertaken in quest of kid business. Parties concerned are eighteen B & K Chicago neighborhood theatres running the serial "Radio Patrol," and the Chicago Herald & Examiner, which publishes a cartoon strip of the same name.

The newspaper promotes in its columns the organization of a "Junior Radio Patrol Club" in each of the houses playing the serial. As an advance plug for the serial (now in its fourth week), the Examiner furnishes each theatre with five thousand heralds exploiting both "Radio Patrol" and the club itself. The eighteen theatres, including the Crystal, Century, Norshore, Nortown, Gateway, Maryland, Regal, Lakeside, Coronet, Belpark, Will Rogers, Terminal, Senate, Central Park, Berwyn, State, Manor and La Grange, have also been supplied with membership cards.

Each theatre keeps a complete file of its club enrollment, containing such data as "name, address, school and birthday," together with apparatus for finger-printing the youngsters upon joining. Every Saturday matinee meetings are held in which the manager addresses the boys and girls from the stage. Safety is discussed, and drawings are held for numerous prizes, the latter for the most part being promoted by the managers and the B & K publicity staff.

Organizers of the club got plenty of civic co-operation. Judge J. M. Braude of the local Safety Court has endorsed the club, permitting his signature to be placed on the membership card. Police Commissioner James P. Allman allows each theatre, once a week, to select a member of its Junior Radio Patrol Club to be escorted through the Central Radio Broadcasting Station at Police Headquarters, where the youngsters learn how police calls emanate, see the teletype go through the "lock-up," etc.

City-wide exploitation tie-ups through Safety Agencies such as the Chicago Motor Club, the Mayor's Safety Council and the Chicago Police Department, are now being formulated.

Also many of the managers have contacted grade schools in their neighborhood, and with the aid of their police and judicial endorsement, have accomplished much in the way of stimulating good-will.

Ship Front

Three weeks ahead of opening of "Souls at Sea" at the Rialto, Morrilton, Ark., Manager Malcolm Gilbert constructed large model replica of ship in picture for marquee display. Height of mast was 20 feet, brilliantly illuminated at night and top sail was changed thrice during display, first week reading "coming soon," second "Starts Sunday" and third "now playing."

This "double feature" cartoon was created by Club Cartoonist Milt Rosenfeld.

MORE CHRISTMAS

Loew's Cleveland publicity head, Milt Harris, effected a tieup with local Postal Authorities leading department stores and merchants along main street. Four-page shopping reminders were distributed at all local branches of post office and inserted in packages leaving stores. Cover carried copy reading "Do your Christmas shopping early and add to your shopping enjoyment by including a matinee performance of," etc., etc. Inside spread was left blank for shopping reminders and back included message from Postmaster Farley.

Plans for a party at which it is anticipated more than 3,000 orphan kids will attend are under way by Manager Ed McBride, Loew's State, Syracuse, N. Y. Cooperating with the theatreman is a committee from the Firemen's Association, Rotary Club and Junior Chamber of Commerce. Members of the sponsoring organizations have all donated their services with Eddie rounding up a good kid show.

Reported as being an excellent pre-Christmas builder is Advertising manager C. E. Carden's football night at the Worth, Ft. Worth, Tex. Tieups were made with the Ft. Worth Press, to handle publicity with local merchants donating prizes. Local sports writer acted as emsee, introducing players on the T.C.U. football team. As each player left the stage he was presented with a gift. College swing band was on hand to supply the music and KTAT broadcast the event, plugging the night.

Tagging the event as "Merchants' Pre-Christmas Exhibit," Julius Lamm, Uptown, Cleveland, contacted some 35 local merchants for gift displays in his lobby. Each store paid a nominal sum according to space and location, the affair itself being sponsored by a recognized organization of business and professional men. All moneys taken in were used for publicity, window cards, handbills, full-page ads in local papers, cash prizes and other prizes given away during exposition which lasted nine days.

Selling his four-week period prior to the holiday as "Christmas Treat Month," C. L. "Holly" Hollister, Babcock Theatre, Wellsville, N. Y., built up the event with institutional trailers, compo-board trees on side of stage, special foyer and lobby treatment. Santa Claus was stationed in theatre with Christmas packages tied in colored ribbons, copy on each being coming attractions. First two weeks, emphasis was placed entirely on screen programs and outside tieups.

Third week "Holly" planned a local teachers' dance recital on stage, final week being marked by stage activities each night including a radio giveaway, promoted merchandise being auctioned to highest bidders, proceeds going into jackpot which was drawn for, winding up with car giveaway and diamond ring presentation on stage.

A "believe-it-or-not" is William Saxton's Christmas party at Loew's Century, Baltimore, Md., for which William Baskerville, publisher of the Baltimore News-Post and Sunday American donated $1,000 for toys. Stories with three-column art appeared in the cooperating papers, child welfare departments of both the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion have been assigned the task of aiding and WBAL will make appeals for general public cooperation.

OUTSTANDING TIEINS FEATURE NOVEMBER PLAQUE CAMPAIGNS

Excellent Exploitations and Effective Contests Arranged by Harding and Martin on Entries Voted Quigley Honors

Concentrating on schools, November Silver Plaque winner Lyle Harding, Warners' Sheridan Square Theatre, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, Pa., for "Life of Emile Zola" tied in with the leading high schools and planted a letter and essay contest for students. English teachers cooperated, plugging the picture and contest, for which prizes were awarded, notices were also tacked on school bulletin boards and discussed in classes.

Newspaper coverage was abundant, front page break with art work was garnered in local weekly having a circulation of $25,000, two-column six-week serialization was planted in the Tribune, latter paper coming through with a reported first time by-lined motion picture critic's review. Free space was also landed on comic pages of the Pittsburgh Press with two-column cut of Muni and picture plug by columnist who lauded the production.

Through tieup effected with Station WWSW, Harding promoted one hundred word spot announcements on special program from Monday to Friday preceding opening at no cost to the theatre, Station WJAS also cooperating by urging the public to attend the engagement.

Scholastic Magazines were distributed to all high and grade schools, booklet numbering some twelve pages were entirely devoted to the life of Zola, abundant scene stills were scattered throughout the pages, as were cuts of Muni as he appeared in previous productions. Also included were study guide suggestions, back cover being devoted to theatre ad, playdates, cast and production credits.

Merchants Aid with Displays

Large framed tinted photos of Muni were planted in choice spots in conservative store windows on main thoroughfare and top window display was arranged through effective tieup with leading florist (see picture in Round Table picture section), large card in center reading "An orchid to Paul Muni for his splendid performance in," etc., etc., numerous other merchants came through with attractive windows. Across building located on one of the main traffic arteries, the enterprising theatreman mounted a 24-sheet with title, cast and playdates.

Outstanding merchant tieup was costless distribution of 5,000 photos and as many albums on an eighteen-week basis. In exchange for merchant's ad on back cover, theatre and store gave patrons and customers scrap books and pictures of various stars were distributed once a week. Other merchant tieups included imprinted cake boxes and paper bags, 200 window cards were posted within a forty mile radius of East Liberty and 10,000 costless heralds promoted by merchant's ad on back. Two weeks in advance of opening trailers were run at local Warner theatres in East Liberty, 20-foot display used at front of stage week ahead and during entire run while for inside his lobby display Lyle constructed a ten-foot display frame containing stills, photos and cover of the "Zola" pressbook. For the outside of his house, Lyle planted an illuminated sign with spotlight focused on giant head of Paul Muni.

Martin Campaign Barrage Starts Two Weeks Ahead

Opening gun of Guy Martin's "Firefly" campaign at the Colfax Theatre, South Bend, Ind., was fired two weeks ahead of opening with special large lobby transparency box illuminated in three colors, flasher used behind the title gave flame effect. Various other displays announced the coming attraction.

Through cooperation of telegraph company, arrangements were made tor the distribution of 3,000 herald-wires bearing message from Jeannette MacDonald to movie patrons and planted in branch windows.

Further telegraph tieup was insertion in all hotel boxes of miniature wires advising folks not to leave South Bend without seeing the picture. Telephone hangers with title copy were also hung on phones in all public pay stations.

Parking lots' officials aided by tying in with theatre and offering a ten cent parking reduction on presentation of ticket stamped at the Colfax boxoffice, lot also used large banners stressing the slant with prominent picture mention. Fourteen sets of highway signs were erected on seven main traffic arteries reading, "Passersby, feast your eyes on Jeanette MacDonald in Firefly," followed by playdates.

Through house-to-house distribution and mailing to rural route homes, Martin started a contest, tickets going to those writing title most times on back of card advertising the picture. Contacting all ladies' bridge clubs, the theatreman sent wires inviting winners to be his guest during engagement of the picture.

Opening day of picture airplane towing large banner (see photo in Round Table picture section) circled Notre Dame stadium five times while the Pitt game was in session, and before an estimated crowd of about 65,000. Still another outdoor bit of advertising was seven and a half foot high by 32 foot long neon title sign erected atop building which when illuminated at night gave the effect of flames and was discernible miles away.

Large frame carrying stills and picture copy was placed in auditorium of South Bend high school where the Philharmonic Orchestra was playing and letters were mailed to selected list of music lovers. Numerous were the window displays planted in leading shops around town, particularly elaborate was window of department store which plugged Hollywood creations featuring the new "firefly" red. Scattered throughout window were enlarged scene still, background showing giant cutout of Jeannette MacDonald and Allan Jones, special lighting playing on the entire display to bring out colors.

Coloring contest was planted in Polish paper, blowups were placed in hotels and leading restaurants and car cards were tacked both inside and out of all trolleys.

LAST CALL FOR 1937 AWARDS

As announced previously, the deadline for the Quigley December Awards has been set for midnight of Saturday, January 8th.

Since this is the last month for the 1937 campaigns, entrants are requested to make sure their material for December judging arrives before deadline so that they will be eligible for the Plaques, and First and Honorable Mentions.

Plans for the Grand Awards judging are now going forward and will be announced in a forthcoming issue.

Store Fashion Show Sells "Stage Door"

In the campaign executed by exploiteer John McGeehan and Manager Andy Saso of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle, Wash., for "Stage Door," was the placement of scene stills with enlarged and abbreviated captions in 50 windows along the shopping district. Leading department store, largest in northwest, also cooperated with daily fashion show of "Stage Door" dresses, a daily broadcast by fashion editor and a leaflet insert in all women's wear departments for a ten-day period helped put over the engagement.

"Tell Us What You Did"

School Board Aids Roy on "Country"

Special screening for all State and City educational departments achieved through the cooperation of English teachers was held by Andy Roy, Warner's Strand, Albany, to sell the two-reeler, "Man Without a Country." Announcements were made in all classes and assemblies in schools. Radio tiein came through donation of several five minute sketches over Station WABY while the Americanization League sent letters to its membership and Boy Scouts made announcements at troop meetings, scout masters urging boys to spread word of the picture's merit.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 96

Bluebook School Question No. 96 was: (A) Does the d.c. formula for Ohm's law apply to a.c.? (B) What is reactance? (C) What is impedance?

The following made acceptable reply: S. Evans and C. Rau; G. E. Doe; H. Edwards; J. R. Prater; W. Limmroth; R. and K. Wells; W. Edmonds; C. Oldham; L. Cimikoski; M. and J. Devoy; J. A. Zachritz; H. B. Smith; G. Thompson; L. F. Hayes; L. H. Kelley; W. Anderson; T. W. Redhouse; D. Coates; A. G. Pitts and W. M. Jones; J. J. Peterson; D. M. Stinson; S. U. Lamont and P. F. Maxwell; E. Exline; M. O'Connell; P. and L. Felt; T. and W. Turk; A. Hewitt; R. S. Welch; B. L. Kent; L. A. Beachwood and M. F. Robinson; A. W. Baxter; W. Winkler and R. R. Robbins; H. Lathrope and M. Dye; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; R. H. Carter; L. E. Dodson and H. T. Todd; F. L. and L. Savlor; W. C. Bant; L. R. Olliver; D. and W. Porter; G. and L. F. Brown; A. D. Lonby; B. L. Hanley; S. L. Maxwell; F. B. Shilshome; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; M. and B. Walker; H. T. Daniels; W. Leeds and D. Dennis; H. Bunker; B. L. Bunt and W. R. Davis; H. B. Coles, R. D. Powell and G. Lodge; D. A. Shea and H. T. Plum; H. T. Randolph; W. V. Henderson; F. W. Brandenburg; H T. Billings; C. Caldwell; R. M. Schnider; L. G. Dillon and W. B. Myers; N. S. Reid and H. T. Watkins; W. L. Brandon and S. H. Billings; A. H. Bradley; M. Samuels and O. L. Goldstein; G. T. Jones and A. Leonard; F. D. Scanlon; M. D. McGuire; G. L. Goss; J. K. Robinson; D. D. Strobey; H. A. Ames and F. E. Dorp.

From a number of excellent answers I have selected that of William Anderson, a Wisconsin man, who explains the matter as follows:

"The d.c. formula for Ohm's law applies to a.c., but other factors must be taken into consideration. The impedance of the circuit must be imposed upon the formula. The impedance (which will be explained in Section C) is substituted for resistance in the formula. Example: the formula for Ohm's law is, $I = \frac{E}{R}$, where $I$ is current, $E$ voltage, and $R$ resistance in ohms. In a formula for alternating current we have $I = \frac{E}{Z}$, where $I$ is again current, $E$ voltage, but Z impedance.

"The other formulas for Ohm's law for alternating current then become $Z = \frac{E}{I}$, $E = IZ$, which are the same as the respective formulas for d.c. resistance, except Z represents impedance in ohms."

James J. Peterson, a Montana man, answers Section A thus:

"Since other factors besides resistance offered to d.c. tend to restrict the flow of a.c., the d.c. formula for Ohm's law cannot be applied to a.c. as in the form it is applied to d.c. Both inductance and condensers more or less tend to oppose a.c. flow, whereas this is not true of d.c. If the intensity or amount of this added resistive effect be taken into consideration in applying Ohm's law to a.c., then and only then, may the law, as expressed for d.c., be applied to a.c. circuits. In other words, the formula must be altered to incorporate the resistances encountered by a.c. that d.c. does not meet."

L. H. Kelley, of Nevada, says, "Although the principle upon which Ohm's law is founded is equally true regardless of whether it be a.c. or d.c., the d.c. formula must be modified to compensate for additional resistance met by a..c. which d.c. does not encounter. With d.c., the only resistance met is that offered by the conducting mediums, hence amperage flow equals voltage divided by ohms of resistance. But in a.c. circuits, which tend to retard current flow, both inductances and condensers resist flow of a.c. and this effect must receive consideration when applying the formula to a.c., as follows: Current flow equals voltage divided by impedance."

Regarding Sections B and C, I feel impelled to accept the answer of William Anderson, of Wisconsin, to both, as being distinctly superior to any others of the great number offered. He says:

"First, let us consider inductance. When a.c. passes through a coil of wire, a magnetic field is created which surrounds the coil, which field continually increases and decreases in strength in exact proportion to the rise and fall of voltage through each cycle of the current. We know this to be true; also, that the direction of the field action is reversed each time the flow of current is reversed. It also is true that when a magnetic field passes through the coil an electromotive force is induced in the coil; that if the applied field varies, the induced voltage also varies; also, if the direction of action of the field be reversed, the direction of the current created by the induced voltage will be reversed. All these are known facts, which provide an explanation of many electrical effects, one of which we will now examine; namely, self-inductance.

"If a.c. be passed through a coil of wire, the magnetic field, as before noted, would increase and decrease, first in one direction, then in the other. This field, in its turn, will induce an e.m.f. in the coil, and the current set up by this e.m.f. will always flow in a direction opposite to that of the initial current passing through the coil, the net result being self-induction.

"The coil tends to prevent any change in current flowing through it, and to limit the amount of a.c. that can pass. The unit of measurement of self-inductance is the Henry. (Henry is the coefficient by which the time rate of change in the current in the circuit must be multiplied in order to ascertain the e.m.f. of self-inductance in the circuit.—F.H.R.). We thus are able to see that as frequency of a.c. increases, the flow of current is decreased in exact proportion for a given inductance. Therefore, the combined effect of frequency and inductance in wire coils is termed reactance, or inductive reactance.

"Examining the foregoing, we discover there is something else that tends to retard flow of a.c. besides actual resistance offered by the circuit as in the case of d.c. There is the reactance set up by any condensers encountered by a.c. They are charged first in one direction and then in the other and have a reactance inversely proportional to the capacitance and frequency of applied voltage. Were the current d.c., the condenser would charge and there would be no further effect.

"The reactance of a condenser is capacitive reactance. Therefore, when Ohm's law is applied to a.c., some unit of resistance is required that will take into consideration both the inductive resistance and capacitive reactance as well as the actual metallic conductor resistance. The term impedance is employed to express combined effect of resistance and reactance. The symbol for impedance is Z, the value of which is equal to the square root of $R^2 + X^2$, in which $R$ is the resistance of the coil, and X is its reactance. $Z$, $R$ and $X$ are all expressed in ohms."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 102

(A) Is current leakage necessarily set up by grounding one wire of a circuit?

(B) Do earth grounds offer variable resistance? Explain.

(C) May both positive and negative of a circuit be thoroughly grounded, yet little or no current leakage occur?

(D) If a test lamp, bell or magneto be connected across a ground, will the lamp light or the bell ring? Explain.

ACTORS EQUITY NAMES MEREDITH NEW LEADER

New Vice-President Assumes President's Duties; Gillmore Continues as Titular Head

In a session marked by partisan feeling, the council of Actors Equity Association met in New York Monday and temporarily sidestepped the naming of a successor to Frank Gillmore, who resigned as president. Instead the council elected Burgess Meredith to serve as first vice-president with the duties of president and voted to have Mr. Gillmore continue as titular president under leave of absence until the annual Equity meeting in June.

Mr. Meredith, serving without pay, will preside at council and other Equity sessions, while the routine duties of the office will be taken over by Paul Dullzell, executive secretary and treasurer, who had been considered as a major candidate for the presidency. After the council session, though, Mr. Dullzell announced he had definitely withdrawn from the race. Because of Mr. Dullzell's additional duties, the council is considering the appointment of a paid assistant.

Augustin Duncan made the proposal that led to Mr. Meredith's election and the move checked various candidacies for the presidency. Walter Hampden, Franklyn Fox and Edward Fielding also were candidates for the vice-presidency but Mr. Hampden and Mr. Fox were eliminated on early ballots. On the final vote, Mr. Meredith was elected over Mr. Fielding by a vote of 14 to 13. The defeated candidate immediately moved successfully to have Mr. Meredith's election declared unanimous.

Mr. Gillmore announced that although his offices will be at the Associated Actors and Artistes of America of which he is executive director and president he will be available for advice if called upon.

In a formal statement issued after the council meeting, which was the largest held in several years, Mr. Gillmore said:

"In a time like this for the Actors Equity Association and the theatre, Mr. Meredith has an opportunity to act as a unifying force which is greatly to be desired. I am confident that the entire membership of the association will rally behind Mr. Meredith in the performance of his onerous and exacting duties."

Writers Guild Elects

In Hollywood, the Screen Writers Guild of the Authors League of America settled differences between various factions by re-electing its officers and board of directors by acclamation.

The officers are: Dudley Nichols, president; Charles Brackett, vice-president; Frances Goodrich, secretary; John Grey, treasurer, and Sheridan Gibney, Albert Hackett, Dashiell Hammett, Lillian Hellman, Brian Marlow, Jane Murfin, Dorothy Parker, Samson Raphaelson, Morrie Ryskind, Donald Ogden Stewart and Edwin Justus Mayer, directors; Philip Dunne, Boris Ingster, Ring Lardner, Jr., Frank Partis, Tristram Tupper and Anthony Veiller, alternates.

From Washington this week came an order from the National Labor Relations Board directing the Los Angeles Regional Labor Relations Board to conduct a hearing on charges of James E. Shaw, studio electrician, that he was discharged from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer last March because of union activities. The Los Angeles board had refused to hold a hearing and had referred the case to Washington. Under the order, the board now must ascertain why Mr. Shaw was discharged and whether he should be reinstated with full back pay.

A report, published in several newspapers, that Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Actors, had issued an edict to non-union singers that they would have to join the federation if they wished to continue working with union bands was corrected by Mr. Weber this week when he explained the order was applicable only to traveling bands, not to the entire entertainment business.

The false report was that Mr. Weber's edict applied to all singers on commercial and sustaining radio programs, singers with jazz bands and all actors who use music as a part of their entertainment medium.

Organizations which held elections this week and the officers chosen included:

Motion Picture Operators' Union, Youngstown: Joseph M. Steadman, president, and Earl Hartman business agent and financial secretary.

Operators' Union, Local 15, Seattle: Charles Crickmore, president; Ernest Clark, finance officer; Edward Booth, recording secretary; Basil L. Grey, business agent; Colin Durie, treasurer, and Earl Gunther, delegate to the Seattle Central Labor Council.

Wilmington State Employes Local 284: James A. Berry, president; Albert Wilson, vice-president; Howard Oster, treasurer; George A. Joseph, financial and corresponding secretary; Joseph E. Cole, recording secretary; Harry Chapman, sergeant-at-arms; Frank Pappa, business agent; John Kelleher, Jack Mackin, William Orr, and John Behringer, executive board, and George Doto and Herman Schechinger, trustees.

Musicians' Union, Local No. 161, Washington: A. C. Hayden, president, for his 31st term.

Film Exchange Employes Local B-5, Cleveland: J. K. Johnson, president; John C. Wein, vice-president; Irwin Sears, financial secretary.

Sam Rosen Wins Drive

Sam Rosen, branch manager of the Philadelphia exchange, won first prize in the recent W. Ray Johnston Playdate Drive. Henri Elman, president and manager of the Chicago branch, won the R. Scott Dunlap trophy and D. J. Selznick, Pittsburgh manager, took the third prize, a trophy donated by Edward A. Golden, general sales manager.

Music Hall Shows Short on Health

An established precedent was broken this week in the Music Hall, New York, with the inclusion on its program of "A New Day," a 12 minute educational film sponsored by the United States Public Health Service, produced by Jam Handy, paid for by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and designed to enlist the aid of the public in a fight on the spread of pneumonia. The film is being offered free to exhibitors through the Motion Picture Bureau of the Metropolitan Life, 1 Madison Avenue, New York.

The subject opens with a closeup of Dr. John L. Rice, Commissioner of Public Health, New York, appealing to the public for cooperation. The brief story starts with a country doctor hastening to the bedside of a woman stricken with the disease. During his treatment of her, details of the symptoms of pneumonia and modern methods of combating it, including laboratory analyses and serum development, are unobtrusively introduced and the necessity for calling a doctor early especially is emphasized. A review appears on page 44

Board of Review Lists 'Best' Films

The National Board of Review of Motion Pictures through its Committee on Exceptional Photoplays, has selected "Night Must Fall" as their choice for the best film of the year from any country. "The River," a government produced documentary film, was considered worthy of special commendation, "for its dramatic presentation of natural resource problems."

The Board's selection of the 10 best American films in order of preference were: "Night Must Fall," "The Life of Emile Zola," "Black Legion," "Camille," "Make Way for Tomorrow," "The Good Earth," "They Won't Forget," "Captains Courageous," "A Star is Born" and "Stage Door."

The 10 best foreign films in order of preference were: "The Eternal Mask," "The Lower Depths," "Baltic Deputy," "Mayerling," "The Spanish Earth," "Golgotha," "Elephant Boy," "Rembrandt," "Janosik" and "The Wedding of Palo."

Chosen on the basis of popular appeal in order of preference: "The Good Earth," "The Life of Emile Zola," "Captains Courageous," "Lost Horizon," "Stage Door," "A Star is Born," "Dead End," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Conquest" and "Camille."

The selections were made from motion pictures released before December 15th.

GN Revives "Wagons"

Grand National has revived plans for "Snow Covered Wagons," announced for the 1937-38 season as a color feature, but which probably will be made in black and white due to the failure of the Keller-Dorian color deal. Charles Logue has been assigned by producer Bud Barsky to write a new treatment and screenplay for the picture.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk() immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.*

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Neligh, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

If the exhibitors want their audiences to become familiarized with prison scenes they should get "Alcatraz Island" and show it. Not that it is an unusual picture of that kind, but for the influence it will have on the public mind. No person who sees this picture will want Alcatraz Island as his permanent residence.

We wouldn't recommend this to those who want entertainment of a more frivolous nature, for there is nothing light or chaffy about it, but for its deterrent effect upon those who might be inclined to commit felonies. In our judgment, pictures like this one will be a great help to the Department of Justice in curbing crime, for in "Alcatraz Island" they can see what their future life is liable to be should they step outside of the law. This picture also gives an inside view of the penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas, and the lives that people lead there. At neither place is there the slightest suggestion of the Waldorf-Astoria or the Ambassador.

We recently received a letter from the Theatre Sign Co. of Council Bluffs, Iowa, asking us to have their subscription to the HERALD renewed for a couple of years. This company evidently appreciates the value of the HERALD to their business, just as to every other branch of the industry, and exhibitors especially, should turn to this journal for correct information regarding any phase of the business, and if they don't have this information that's just their hard luck.

The Film Transport Company of Omaha seems to be serving the exhibitors of western Iowa and eastern Nebraska in pretty good shape, as they deliver the film at the door of the theatres and pick up the used ones without any trouble to the exhibitors and this service is pretty valuable to the exhibitors just as the Film Transport company thinks the HERALD is to their business. That's why they asked that we have it sent to them.

Glen Rogers is the guiding spirit of the company; in fact Glen is a guiding spirit to a lotta things. We saw him guide a golf ball around the Happy Hollow golf course once and he guided the ball into the cups with two less strokes than we could. Then we saw him once as toastmaster at a Variety Club banquet when he guided the proceedings like he had been trained by Chauncey Depew. Not only that, but we saw a glass of icewater at his plate, and who ever heard of icewater at a Variety Club banquet?

We'll betcha we have an alphabetical project out here that has never been heard of back in the eastern states. That's why this country is in advance of the eastern country. Just what the legal title of this project is we don't know, and for want of this infornation we will designate it as the "P.A.E. project," which means the Predatory Animal Exterminators. The members of this project are recruited from the shelter-belt crew and include from fifteen to twenty ablebodied men. Their duty is to exterminate predatory animals and they are furnished with shells and are paid $2.40 per day for this service. The predatory animals out here consists of jackrabbits and gophers, very ferocious animals.

The authorities have allowed us to reside here for nigh onto fifty years and this is the first time the government has come to our aid in exterminating these predatory animals, and next summer we are going to try to enlist their services in shooting grasshoppers around our garden. These predatory animals are just eating us out of house and home, and it's terrible, Cedric, simply terrible. Help! help!

Last night we went and saw Jane Withers in "Wild and Woolly," and this picture proved to be true to its name; it was wild and woolly all right. This picture probably won't receive a four-star rating, but it will receive the approval of a majority of those who like lively entertainment. Jane runs away with a switch engine and you will hold your breath for fear she will run head-on into an oncoming express train. Anyhow, Jane and her helpers put up a pretty good entertainment.

We recently saw another picture wherein the G-men were chasing a bunch of bandits. Both sides did a lot of shooting but none of them seemed to have been hit. This inclined us to believe that they should be members of our P.A.E. project.

We doubt if it would be proper to suggest it, but if we were to make a suggestion we would say that if Joe Hewitt of Robinson, Illinois; W. H. Brenner of Winchester, Indiana; Bert Silver of Greenville, Michigan; that Swede of Shulsberg and Roob of Pt. Washington, Wisconsin; Harry Huffman of Denver, Colorado; Mr. and Mrs. Jung of Glenrock, Wyoming; Andy Anderson of Detroit Lakes, Bonnie Benfield of Morris and H. J. Longacre of Glenwood, Minnesota; Harold Stettmund of Chandler and Charlie Hartman of Carnegie, Olkahoma; George Moore of Plainville and Sam Blair of Belleville, Kansas, and a whole lot more of the boys, would drop us a note it would enliven what otherwise might be a drab Christmas.

If you haven't already played it, and if you want to give your patrons a real treat, we would suggest that you play "A Star Is Born," with Janet Gaynor and Fredric March. This is such an interesting picture that it is likely the most of you have already played it.

It was screened in Omaha recently and we saw it, and last night we went and saw it again; in fact we intend to see it every time we get a chance. There is no use looking for better actors than these two delightful folks for you won't find them, and there is no use looking for a more pleasing and sensible story, for it hasn't come out of Hollywood yet; that is, if we know stories and stars.

Shine Mason of McAllen, Texas, will most likely go ever to Reonosa, Mexico, on Christmas to see another bull fight. Doggone the doggone bull fights anyhow.

Somehow we can't quite understand
Just why this sport has such a pull,
That hundreds cross the Rio Grande
To see the Greasers fight the bull.

But speaking of bull, Ernie says he thinks this will be bull enough for this time.
